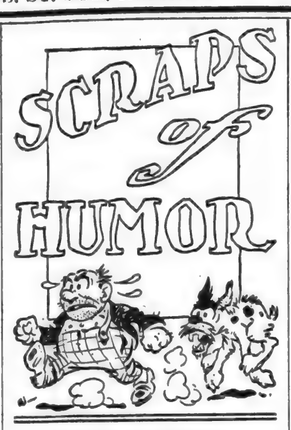
became necessary greatly to curtail highway building because of the difficulty of securing transportation, construction materials, and the requisite services. After the armistice was signed, arrangements promptly were made for the active resumption and vigorous prosecution of road work in all sections of the country, not only with a view to repair the damage wrought by the heavy traffic forced upon our highways during the war, when maintenance operations were seriously interfered with, but also to provide adequate transportation facilities to serve the increased needs of agriculture and industry. Recognizing also that road-building activities would furnish suitable employment for many unemployed men during the period of transition from war to peace, the congress at its last session, accepting the recommendation of the department of agriculture, appropriated $209,000,000, in addition to the $85,000,000 provided by the original act, for the extension of road construction in co-operation with the states, and also made some important amendments to the act. The definition of the kind of roads that can be constructed was greatly broadened and the limitation on the federal contribution for any one road was increased from $10,000 to $20,000 a mile. These amendments have greatly facilitated consideration of and action upon the road projects submitted by the state highway commissions. There is now no special obstacle to the construction, in the different states of the Union, of the roads which serve the greatest economic needs."

GOOD ROADS ADD HAPPINESS

Bring Farmer and Family Within Few Minutes of Neighbors, Schoolhouse and Stores.

The modern farmer and his family are, with good roads, within a few minutes of their neighbors, of the movies and theaters, of the school house and library. Nothing stands in the way of going 25 or even 100 miles from home on a Sunday to visit relatives or friends. In thus moving around he is more contented and happy.

SCRAPS of HUMOR



STRICTLY ORNAMENTAL.

"I hear Giddison has a new stenographer."

"So he has."

"Do you suppose she can spell and punctuate?"

"I don't know, and I don't believe Giddison knows either. When I asked him about her qualifications all he could say was, 'Such eyes, such hair, such a figure!'"

Printers' Fun.

"There never was any variety in this bill of fare," growled the pessimistic patron.

"You forget the typographical errors, sir," replied the facetious waiter.

"What?"

"We have a new lot every day, sir, and, upon my word, some of them are most amusing."

A Merciful Judge.

"Judge, I wish you'd put me on probation."

"How long did I sentence you for?"

"One year. But I want to get married."

"You wish me to substitute for a sentence of one year a sentence for life? That would be unconstitutional."

A Perfect Chesterfield.

"I must say this condemned murderer was polite to the last."

"Well?"

"When he was being strapped into the electric chair he apologized to the doctors, newspaper men and prison officials present for occupying the only chair in the room."

QUALIFIED.

She (romantically)—The man I marry must be willing to go through fire for me.

He—Then I'm your man. The boss has fired me for telephoning you so often.

Sense and Sound.

How oft you find the boisterous boys
Into oblivion sinking!
The brass band makes the biggest noise,
But doesn't do the thinking.

Merely Descriptive.

"Mr. Shadd acknowledges he is impecunious."

"Then he oughtn't to be insulted if any one calls him a poor fish."

The Strain.

"It is a wonder that some of the photographic plates stand the faces put on them."

"Why so?"

"Aren't they sensitive plates?"

Laboring Under a Handicap.

"This author says he has tramped about the country, beaten his way on freight trains and been thrown into jails to get material for his stories."

"That's the way to study life at first hand."

"Quite so. But he wants to lay the scene of his next story in a fashionable hotel. He says he's too old to be a bellhop and too poor to be a guest."

Nothing of the Sort.

"I understood the two men had quite an epistolary argument."

"No pistols about it. They took it out in writing letters."

Not Possible.

"I read an account somewhere of an odorless onion."

"That must be about as interesting as a smokeless pipe."

Many Blushes.

"I enjoy these old-fashioned husking bees."

"Red ears mean kisses, eh?"

"Yes, and kisses mean red ears."

A Losing Venture.

"How'd you make out with your radium mine?"

"Lost money."

"Thought you sold all the stock at 10 cents a share."

"I did. But it cost more than that to print the stuff."

True to Life.

Photographer—Try to look pleasant, please.

Wife of Victim—Don't ask him to do that. This picture is for my mother, and she wouldn't recognize it.

ASPIRIN—A Talk

Take Aspirin only as told by "Bayer"

The name "Bayer" identifies the true, world-famous Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over eighteen years. The name "Bayer" means genuine Aspirin proved safe by millions of people.

In each unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" you are told how to safely take this genuine Aspirin for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Neuritis and for Pain.

Always say "Bayer" when buying Aspirin. Then look for the safety "Bayer Cross" on the package and on the tablets.

Handy tin boxes of twelve tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists also sell larger packages.

Aspirin is trade mark of Bayer Manufacture Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

Hasty Figuring.

"I took Professor Jiggs out for a ride in my car the other day."

"Yes?"

"He's fully as absent-minded as you said he was. He was thinking about something all the time we were riding and never once opened his mouth."

"I think I can explain that. He was probably counting the number of jolts you were giving him and calculating how much energy was wasted every time he was hurled into the air."

YOUNGSTERS!

Need "Cascarets" when Sick, Bilious, Constipated.

When your child is bilious, constipated, sick or full of cold; when the little tongue is coated, breath bad and stomach sour, get a box of Cascarets and straighten the little one right up. Children gladly take this harmless candy cathartic and it cleanses the little liver and bowels without griping. Cascarets contain no calomel or dangerous drugs and can be depended upon to move the sour bile, gases and indigestible waste right out of the bowels. Best family cathartic because it never cramps, sickens or causes inconvenience.—Adv.

Strikes and Strikes.

"Nobody should be permitted to call a strike."

"And yet, Charley, dear," protested young Mrs. Torkins, mildly, "I have seen you almost ready to throw a ginger ale bottle because the umpire didn't."

Infections or inflammations of the Eyes, whether from external or internal causes, are promptly healed by the use of Roman Eye Balsam at night upon retiring. Adv.

Back to the Beginning.

Little Bennies's father was explaining the geography to him, when little Bennie asked: "If the world is round and turns around all the time, why don't we fall off?" His father replied: "The law of gravity controls the earth." Bennie thought a moment and then asked: "But what did the people do before the law was passed?"

Cuticura for Sore Hands.

Soak hands on retiring in the hot suds of Cuticura Soap, dry and rub in Cuticura Ointment. Remove surplus Ointment with tissue paper. This is only one of the things Cuticura will do if Soap, Ointment and Talcum are used for all toilet purposes.—Adv.

Seamless Boats Now Molded.

Seamless boats are now molded out of thin steel. A plate of the metal is run into a huge hydraulic press, which forces or stamps it into the form of a boat, and turns it out virtually ready for the sea.

Constipation, indigestion, sick-headache and bilious conditions are overcome by a course of Garfield Tea.—Adv.

Shuts Off Gas.

Above the frame of a new gas light fixture is a turbine that is whirled by the heated air, stopping and shutting off the flow of gas should the flame be blown out.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

Snoring Around.

"You know my brother?"

"Yes; we sleep in the same pew at church."—Cartoons Magazine.

Edible Prune Pit.

The stoneless prune, a Burbank production, promises to become a popular fruit. The fruit is practically the same as the ordinary breakfast prune, with the exception that the stone in the center is replaced by a soft kernel or seed that can be cooked with the fruit and eaten.

Clean Bill.

"Have you any avuncular relatives?"

"No; haven't a disease of any kind in our family."

BACK GIVEN OUT?

There's surely some reason for that lame, achy back. Likely it's your kidneys. A cold or strain oftimes congests the kidneys and slows them up. That may be the reason for that nagging backache, those sharp pains, that tired, worn-out feeling. You may have headaches and dizzy spells, too, with annoying bladder irregularity. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor!

An Indiana Case

J. C. Koehler, retired R. R. man, 123 S. Main St., Elkhart, Ind., says: "I had severe headaches and pains through my back and loins. The kidney secretions were very scanty, too. The backaches sometimes would extend to the back of my head. I got Doan's Kidney Pills and I hadn't used all of two boxes before I was entirely free from the pain and the cure has been lasting."

Acid-Stomach

Makes 9 Out of 10

People Suffer

Doctors declare that more than 70 nonorganic diseases can be traced to Acid-Stomach. Starting with indigestion, heartburn, belching, food-repeating, bloat, sour, gassy stomach, the entire system eventually becomes affected, every vital organ suffering in some degree or other. You see these victims of Acid-Stomach everywhere—people who are subject to nervousness, headache, insomnia, biliousness—people who suffer from rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica and aches and pains all over the body. It is safe to say that about 9 people out of 10 suffer to some extent from Acid-Stomach.

If you suffer from stomach trouble or, even if you do not feel any stomach distress, yet are weak and ailing, feel tired and dragged out, lack "pep" and enthusiasm and know that something is wrong although you cannot locate the exact cause of your trouble—you naturally want to get back your grip on health as quickly as possible. Then take EATONIC, the wonderful modern remedy that brings quick relief from pains of indigestion, belching, gassy bloat, etc. Keep your stomach strong, clean and sweet. See how your general health improves—how quickly the old-time vim, vigor and vitality comes back!

Get a big 50c box of EATONIC from your druggist today. It is guaranteed to please you. If you are not satisfied your druggist will refund your money.

PISO'S

Hoosier State Happenings

Columbia City.—Contracts were let by the county commissioners for 28 miles of gravel road in Whitley county. The bids totaled $220,000.

Warsaw.—Collection of hundreds of pledges to the Huntington county war chest depends on the outcome of a suit which will be tried in the Kosciusko circuit court here March 1. The action is that of the Huntington county war chest against Samuel Scott, a wealthy Huntington county farmer, who is alleged to have refused to pay his war contribution of $200.

Terre Haute.—Shortage of railroad cars was responsible for the loss of 1,128,430 tons of coal in the state in January, according to the reports of the Indiana coal trade bureau, made public here. This loss is based on the average daily productive capacity of the mines. The labor cost of production averages $1.75 a ton, which made the loss to miners in wages close to $2,000,000.

Fort Wayne.—Indiana Rotarians, in annual conference here, gave Lincoln's birthday a new significance when they took unanimous stand for teaching Americanism in the public schools of the state and nation. A resolution, fathered by Frederick E. Matson, president of the Indianapolis Rotary club, was introduced following an address by Mr. Matson on the subject of "Rotary and Americanism."

Indianapolis.—An allotment of $219,986.26, the first apportionment of federal road funds to the state highway commission, has been received by Ux McMurtrie, treasurer of state. Federal aid is granted on the basis of 50 per cent of the state road work actually completed. As work is completed in Indiana requisition can be made monthly by the state on the federal funds until $7,500,000 is used.

Valparaiso.—The Porter township branch of the Porter County Farmers' association has notified the merchants of Valparaiso that unless they keep their stores open each Wednesday evening and abandon Thursday halfday closing during the summer months, they will trade in other towns and by mail. The clerks in the stores say that they will quit if asked to work more hours a week.

Terre Haute.—The parent-teachers' associations of this city, which have been endeavoring to obtain new contracts for the teachers, with increased pay or a bonus to cover the increased cost of living, have decided to circulate petitions asking the school trustees to grant the teachers' demands. A public demonstration and parade will be given during the week of March 17 in an effort to get the desired results.

Jeffersonville.—Efforts are being made here to arrange for the building of 200 residences, with the purpose of increasing the number to 500 later. The movement was precipitated by conditions at the United States quartermaster's depot. Many officers and civilian employees are unable to obtain quarters in Jeffersonville. Builders, contractors and those of allied trades have organized a building association.

Anderson.—"If you can't get good men, get good women," Philip Zoercher, a member of the state tax board, told Madison county township assessors here. The assessors said they found it difficult to obtain the services of good men for deputies, and that they did not believe they would be able to find competent men to begin work March 1. The assessors are now seeking women who will serve as deputies. It is the first time women were ever called on in Madison county for such service.

Indianapolis.—Members of the live stock committee of the Indiana Federation of Farmers' Associations were advised in letters mailed from headquarters that an important meeting will be held at the federation offices here February 18. The committee is composed of one representative from each of the ten state districts and will be called on to consider several matters of more than usual interest to live stock producers, according to Lewis Taylor, general secretary of the federation.

Indianapolis.—Ele Stansbury, attorney general, in an opinion submitted a few days ago to L. N. Hines, state superintendent of public instruction, held in substance that all private and parochial schools in Indiana must have a course of study "substantially equivalent" to the course prescribed for the public schools. Attendance of children between the ages of seven and sixteen years at a school having a lower standard than the public schools will not be a compliance with the Indiana compulsory education law, the attorney general held.

South Bend.—Local manufacturers and business men are planning one of the largest home building campaigns in the history of Indiana. To provide the homes necessary for the next three years $30,000,000 must be invested. Of this amount $12,000,000 must be spent within the present year. The industrial expansion now in effect is so far in excess of anything ever dreamed of by South Bend that the business interests of the city are almost staggered. The expansion of two plants, the Studebaker corporation and the Oliver Chilled Plow company, calls for an expenditure of $50,000,000.

Warsaw.—Fourteen of the 17 townships of Kosciusko county now have fully organized farmers' associations affiliated with the Kosciusko County Farmers' association. More than 1,500 farmers are members of the county organization.

Evansville.—A suit to enjoin the city school and health authorities of Evansville from excluding children from the public schools for failure to be vaccinated has been filed in the Vanderburg county superior court by Grover C. Mundy.

South Bend.—An aggregate of 276¾ pounds has been gained by 52 children who are assigned to the fresh air school of this city. The largest individual gain was 17¾ pounds, and the average gain 5¾ pounds. Only one pupil lost weight.

Richmond.—The ninth annual students' missionary conference of Indiana, which was scheduled for February 13-19, has been postponed to some time in April because of influensa at Earlham college, where the conference was to have been held.

Jeffersonville.—The delinquent tax sale in Clark county was the smallest in many years. Only 23 pieces of property were sold, for a total of $455.98 delinquency. Approximately $3,700 worth of property was redeemed before the sale, and there remains to be sold about $10,000 worth of delinquent taxes.

South Bend.—Forfeiture of the South Bend franchise of the Chicago, South Bend & Northern Indiana Interurban railway was ordered by the common council. Thomas W. Slick city attorney, was instructed to proceed immediately with action whereby the municipality will take over and operate the lines.

Gary.—According to the estimate of the government census director Gary's population now is between 60,000 and 65,000, as compared with 16,802 ten years ago. Hammond's population is now estimated at 85,000; East Chicago, 40,000; Whiting, 10,000, and Lake county, 175,000. The population of the county is said to have doubled since the 1910 census.

Wabash.—E. H. Clifford, secretary of the local chamber of commerce, was instructed to petition the war department for a survey of the Wabash river from Logansport to Huntington, with a view of having the channel changed so that property in Huntington, Wabash, Peru, Logansport and towns in between those cities would not suffer each spring from high waters.

Kokomo.—More public sales are being held by the farmers of Howard and adjoining counties this winter than ever before, and in many instances record prices have been paid for live stock, grain and implements. At a sale held near here a milch cow and calf sold for $214. A yearling heifer sold for $90. The majority of buyers are paying cash for their purchases.

Lafayette.—An unprecedented number of students have left Purdue university voluntarily or have been dropped from the classes by the professors during the past week, which marked the close of the first semester. Many of the students dropped out of school because of sickness or financial reasons, but more than 100 were dropped because they were down in their studies.

Indianapolis.—Declaring the educational situation in Indiana not only alarming but critical, the leading educators of the state, including college presidents, public school superintendents and instructors, representatives of commercial and civic organizations and ministers, met at the statehouse to devise ways and means of bringing the situation before the public on Education week, set by proclamation of Governor Goodrich for March 7 to 14.

Indianapolis.—Indiana has been placed in the same class with several other western states for grain car distribution following a request by the Indiana Grain Dealers' association, according to a telegram received from the car service section by Charles B Riley, secretary of the Indiana association. The original order did not include this state, but the telegram received said "same instructions relative to car supply for grain loading have now been granted Indiana as other states."

Aurora.—Clarence C. Madison, Dearborn county farm agent, has announced the result of the cows tested in the month of January. His report shows that 189 cows were tested, 29 of which produced more than 40 pounds of butterfat. The Bruce Brothers' herd of 19 cows led the association with an average of 40.4 pounds of butterfat. Hamilton Rees' herd of 11 cows was second, with an average of 36.6 pounds. The year's results of the Dearborn County Cow Testing association show that there were four herds winning gold medals by having ten cows each making more than 300 pounds of butterfat. Edgar Hall's herd averaged 332 pounds; Floyd Jackson's, 347; North & Gurley's, 349; Bruce Brothers 428. Bruce Brothers had the highest individual cow both in milk and butterfat, a grade Jersey producing 12,242 pounds of milk and 707.7 pounds of butterfat during the year.

Kokomo.—The smallest number of items that have appeared on a Howard county delinquent tax list for many years were disposed of here recently, by T. C. Sanders, county treasurer. The sale set a new record for brevity. In most cases the delinquents themselves came and made settlement.

Washington.—The local chapter of the Red Cross has asked permission to use the second floor of the city hall as a temporary hospital for the care of influensa patients, the action being part of an organized effort to prevent the disease from reaching an epidemic stage.

Important to all Women Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Adv.

All Going Smoothly.

The chaplain came plodding along the road coming back from the front lines several hours after the infantry had gone over the top.

"How are things going up there?" inquired an artillery lieutenant.

"Fine, fine," said the chaplain. "We're knocking them for a goal."

"Haven't seen many prisoners," said the lieutenant skeptically.

"No, I guess you won't," replied the chaplain, "our machine guns haven't jammed all morning."—The Home Sector.

Treat Cataract With Radium.

Of the 24 cases of cataract treated with radium by two New York physicians, improved vision is reported in 50 per cent, with some improvement in 87.5 per cent. In the treatment, which was continued from three months to a year, the radium was fixed a little less than an inch in front of the eyelid, which was closed, and harmful soft rays were screened off by a filter of suitable kind. No injurious effects on the eye have been observed.

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils to Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, mucous discharge, headache, dryness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, give you instant relief. Mrs. Is Layman entertained a number of little friends of her daughter Bessie to dinner Sunday. It being her twelfth birthday anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Randall were at Fort Wayne Saturday and called on their sister-in-law at the Lutheran hospital. She was not quite so well.

Salesman wanted to solicit orders for lubricating oils, greases and paints. Salary or Commission. Address The Lennox Oil & Paint Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

Merritt Sechler was able to return home Monday after being confined to the house the past week with lagrippe, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sechler.

Parley Marks of Edon, Ohio, spent Sunday and until Monday morning in the George McCann home. While here he rented his farm to Lawrence Fisher of near Concord.

Roy Koch, Guy Layman and Herbert Curie were given the initiatory degree in the I. O. O. F. lodge last week. This week they were given the first and second degree work.

No heat, no school. Monday forenoon the school children were given a vacation because the janitor was unable to heat the rooms sufficient. School resumed in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Randall received word from their sister-in-law Mrs. Fred Randall, who is at the Lutheran hospital suffering from pneumonia, that mastoid trouble has developed.

The Sunday Schools were some what low Sunday because of the blustery weather, but every school was open ready for business in our little city. Services were disbanded at the Lutheran Church in the evening.

Curtis Watt has purchased the Wm. Pervines farm, located one-half mile south of the Wabash depot. His son Carl and wife will move there as soon as Wm. Long moves to his new location on the Gene White farm.

Ralph Frye lost another one of his horses Monday evening. He had hitched up to the buggy and drove to the house preparing to come to town. The horse slipped on some ice and was unable to get up and in less than a half hour it was dead. This is the third horse lost for Mr. Frye this winter.

Mrs. C. R. Price received word of the death of her niece, Mrs. Harvey Pletcher which occurred at Pierceton Sunday. She leaves a little four year old son and a two weeks old babe, besides the husband. Death was due to blood poisoning. Dr. Price left Monday to remain until after the funeral.

The Rural Housewives Club met with Mrs. Lottie Burley, Thursday afternoon. The affair was a farewell to Mrs. Burley as she is moving out of the neighborhood, and a shower for Baby Burley. She was presented with a set of dishes as a parting gift from the ladies.

Last Saturday was the day set for the selling of the Herrick drain as advertised in The News, but there being only one bid the sale was not made. Marshall Andress was the only bidder present and he would not make the bid according to the surveyors estimates. The sale will be readvertised and sold at a later date.

The Gamble sale Saturday and Roy Wade's sale on Monday were well attended and the goods sold well. Mr. Gamble will move to his farm northwest of Lima, Ohio, next week and Mr. Wade and family will return to St. Joe and live with Martin Engle. He expects to follow the carpenter trade. Mr. Gamble reports his nine months old colt as selling for $120.

A wedding was solemnized at the M. P. Parsonage last Saturday evening, by Rev. C. O. Johnson. John Henry Messenger, aged 34, instructor, born in Croydon, England, and Miss Ada Helen Erwin, aged 27, daughter of James Erwin of west of town, were united in marriage. The young people have both been working in Wayne and will continue their work.

Don Hindman and family were given a real surprise last Monday night, when about 50 of the neighbors gathered at their home and spent the evening with them. Mr. Hindman and family expect to leave the farm and move to St. Joe soon having had his sale last week. The evening was spent in a social way and fudge and pop corn was served.

A number of our people attended the meeting held at Auburn, Friday, in the interest of the Armenian Relief Drive that is now on in the county. Every organization is asked to participate in this worthy cause and lend a hand at this time of distress. M. T. Bishop, Mrs. Ella Patterson, Ima Shordon, Rev. C. O. Johnson and the editor were present. The drive is now on in this township. Spencer township was represented by Miss Bertha Thornburg, Charles Watson and A. K. Mumma, and John Washler from Newville Tp.

BETTER SIRES LEAD TO IMPROVED FEMALES

The Surest Way for the Farmer to Make More Money It to Raise More and Better Live Stock.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That the use of purebred sires is usually a forerunner to ownership of well-bred live stock in the various classes and breeds is shown by data on breeding just made public by the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture. The facts and figures compiled are based on records of the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign, which at the close of 1919 had been in progress just three months. A greater quantity of data will be needed before conclusive deductions may be made, but the following facts are considered of unusual interest to live stock owners:

Ownership of Purebred Females Follows Better Sires.

The use of purebred sires appears to lead automatically to the ownership of a considerable quantity of purebred female stock.

The use of purebred sires apparently results also in the culling out of scrub females, judging from the small proportion of scrub females to grade, crossbred, and purebred female animals owned by purebred-sire users.

Of all female stock owned by persons enrolled in the better-sires campaign at the end of the year, 71 per cent were purebred, 26 per cent were grades and crossbreds, and 3 per cent were scrubs.

The scrub females are believed to be the remnants of former inferior stock before purebred sires were used, since purebred sires tend automatically to either purebred, crossbred, or grade offspring, depending on the blood lines of the females used.

Low Percentage of Scrub Females.

The percentage of purebred females found in herds and flocks owned by purebred-sire users was noticeably similar for the various classes of animals. In cattle the per cent of purebred females was 63.5, in swine 64, in sheep 63.

The per cent of scrub females in the same classes was: Cattle, 3.6, swine, 2.0, sheep, 6.4.

Poultry figures showed the smallest per cent of scrub females in flocks headed by sires of pure breeding, the figure being 1.8.

Poultry showed the highest per cent (78.1) of females of pure breeding, and the smallest per cent (1.8) of scrub females.

Similar figures of horses, asses, and goats are not presented, as the enrollment of these animals is not considered sufficiently large at this time. Those classes, however, were included in the totals.

Comments accompanying blanks of enrollment indicated that many live-stock owners had used purebred sires for a considerable period, which materially reduced the percentage of scrubs. This is likely to be true of a good many who enroll early in the campaign, but is evidence pointing strongly to the influence of purebred sires on improvement in quality of herds and flocks.

Shows Results of State Work for Better Bulls.

The drive which many states have been waging against scrub bulls was reflected in the enrollment figures. More purebred bulls were enrolled than any other class of live stock, except poultry.

At the end of December there were enrolled in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign 6,200 animals, and in addition 8,949 poultry.

Facts Obtained With Special Care.

Knowledge about the breeding of live stock in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign is obtained with special care. First, the owner of the stock lists his animals kept for breeding on the enrollment blank in accordance with the official definitions for the various classes of animals with respect to their parentage. As the better-sires slogan indicates, all males must be purebred and of good quality.

Female stock may be of any breeding and spaces are provided for the listing of purebred, grade, crossbred, and scrub females. Then the classification is approved by the county agent in the county where the live-stock owner lives. In the relatively few cases where there is no county agent, the written indorsement of the blank by two experienced and disinterested live-stock owners is required.

Every person agreeing in writing, on the blank furnished, to use only purebred sires in his breeding operations receives an emblem of recognition issued co-operatively by the United States department of agriculture and the state in which he lives. So-called "red tape" has been reduced to a minimum and the emblems have been issued in most cases the day the blanks were received.

Female Stock Need Not Be Purebred.

Though pointing out the foregoing observations—and especially the tendency for purebred-sire owners to acquire purebred females—the department of agriculture does not urge purebred female stock on the average farm. Whether purebred females should be kept is a matter of individual judgment, depending on circumstances which the live-stock owner is best able to know. The successful breeding of purebred live stock as a business calls for close attention and considerable experience, both in production and marketing. By contrast, the purpose of the better-sires movement is to raise the average quality of all live stock in the United States.

The department therefore goes no further than to urge the use of good purebred sires. It believes that after having taken that step live-stock owners will continue to improve their domestic animals, raising either grades, crossbreds, or purebreds—or some of each—whichever seems best suited to the kind of farming followed and to available markets.

SEED TESTING WITH SIMPLE EQUIPMENT

Sufficient Accuracy Can Be Made by Beginner.

Younger Members of Home Circle Should Find Such Work Easy and Interesting—Apparatus Not at All Expensive.

Seed tests sufficiently accurate to answer all practical purposes can be made by a beginner with very little practice, say specialists of the United States department of agriculture. The younger members of the home circle should find such work not only comparatively easy but very interesting. Testing of locally grown seed is aided by the possession of a correctly named set of the seeds of crops and of weeds prevailing in the vicinity.

Only such apparatus is needed in making practical seed tests as enables one to use weighed quantity of seed from the sample, to separate the pure seed from the foreign seeds and other impurities, to distinguish the character of the foreign seeds, and to make the germination test.

Only by using a weighed quantity of seed can one determine the relative quantites of pure and of impure seeds in the sample. This requires a balance sufficiently sensitive to be moved by a small weight, such as that of a few clover seed. But a balance of this kind, designed to rest on the edge of a knife blade, can be made from two lead pencils, two cardboard disks, two pieces of wire, some rubber bands, a darning needle, a common brass pin, and two bits of board. The only equipment needed consists of a few BB shots, flattened, to be used as weights. With this balance, if the pure seed from a sample balances 9 shots and the impurities balance one shot, the sample is shown to be 90 per cent pure. Some shots may be cut into halves, quarters, eights, and sixteenths for fractional weights.

Such other apparatus as is desirable can be made or bought at small cost. A pair of forceps for picking up the shots and for separating seeds can be made of two thin strips of hickory, or a piece of spring wire bent into U-shape and having the points flattened. A magnifying glass is needed, but the common reading glass to be found in many homes or that can be bought at a cost of $1 or $2 serves the purpose well. Seed can be best examined over white paper and, to prevent loss of seed, a paper tray is desirable.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 29

PETER WRITES ABOUT CHRISTIAN LIVING.

LESSON TEXT—I Peter 2:1-15, 11-25.

GOLDEN TEXT—He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.—I John 2:6.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Doing as Jesus did.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Treat Those Who Wrong Us.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Nobility of Patience.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Ideals for Christian Living.

The purpose of Peter was to establish all who were passing through suffering and testing. See for example 1:7, 3:14, 4:12, 5:10-12.

I. Christian Growth (vv. 1-5).

The Christian obtains his life through the new birth, and the agent of its accomplishment is the Word of God (1:23). The same vitalising and energizing power which makes the believer a child of God is essential to growth and development. In order to have spiritual growth there must be both renunciation and appropriation.

1. Renunciation (v. 1). Certain things injurious to spiritual life must be put away (1) malice—all wickedness, that is, the will to do injury to others without cause; (2) guile—deceit of all kinds; (3) hypocrisies—feigning to be what one is not—assuming a false appearance; (4) envies—hatred of others because they possess excellencies which we do not; (5) evil speaking—all kind of slanderous speaking against others.

2. Appropriation (vv. 2, 3). (1) Spiritual food must be taken (v. 2). The principle of the new life was conveyed through the Word (1:23), and the Word is the means by which that life is to be strengthened and developed. Just as a new born babe loves milk, so men who are born again love the Bible. (2) Spiritual food must be assimilated (v. 3). The Word of God must be received and assimilated by meditation.

3. The grand objective (vv. 4, 5). It is coming to Christ—to grow up and become a part of the glorious church, the spiritual house, which is designed to show forth the glory of God.

II. Seemly Behavior of Christians (vv. 11-25).

1. As pilgrims and sojourners (vv. 11, 12). Christians are merely sojourners on the earth; they are journeying through it on their way to the eternal home in the heavens. Our heavenly citizenship (Phil. 3:20) should constrain us to (1) abstain from fleshly lusts (v. 11). The term "lusts" includes the entire army of unclean forces springing from our carnal natures; they are enumerated in Galatians 5:19-21. These war against the soul. (2) Behavior honest before the heathen (v. 12). Christians should so live that it will be impossible for the world to speak against them as evildoers.

2. As citizens (vv. 13-17). While the Christian's true citizenship is in heaven, he has a responsibility as a citizen on the earth. A Christian man recognizes the necessity of social order, and will not only graciously submit to the authority of rulers regardless of the form of government, but will faithfully perform his obligations as a citizen. This he will not do through cringing fear, but as the Lord's free man. By this free submission as a servant of God he puts to silence the ignorance of foolish men (vv. 15, 16). (1) Honor all men (v. 17). He will see in every man the image of God and therefore give honor to him. (2) Love the brotherhood (v. 17). The Christian has a peculiar love for those who are of the same household. (3) Fear God (v. 17). (4) Honor the king (v. 17). This has peculiar significance, for in all probability the wicked Nero was the king then reigning.

3. As servants (vv. 18-25). While doubtless slaves were meant here, the principle applies to all who have relation to employers. The Christian will be in subjection to his master. He will not only do this when his employer is gentle and reasonable, but even when it means wrongful suffering. It means not only submission, but loyalty. It is the duty of a Christian to consider and further the interests of his employer. Many times to do so means hardship and suffering. The grand example of suffering wrongfully is Jesus Christ. While his suffering is an example to us, it was much more, because he suffered in order to break forever the power of sin so as to do away forever with oppression.

Change Comes With the Morrow.

However vexed you may be overnight, things will often look very different in the morning. If you have written a clever and conclusive, but scathing letter, keep it back till the next day, and it will very often never go at all.—Lord Avebury.

Today.

We often fail to recognise it, but the fact remains that today is trying to live up to the highest standard of yesterday's thought and determination.

SOUNDED ALL RIGHT TO HER

Prisoner's Defense Naturally Had a Lot of Weight With the Fair Prosecutor.

The case looked black against the prisoner, who was charged with loitering suspiciously at the railway station.

Presently the magistrate said sternly:

"This lady says you tried to speak to her at the railway station."

"It was a mistake," pleaded the man in the dock. "I was looking for my wife's young niece, whom I've never seen, but who'd been described to me as a handsome young lady, with golden hair, well-cut features, fine complexion, perfect figure, beautifully dressed, and—"

With a charming blush, the principal witness against him interrupted his flow of eloquence.

"I don't wish to prosecute the gentleman, sir," she said to the magistrate. "Any one might have made the same mistake."

The Retort Courteous.

upstart, Mrs. Allcash, at the refined "I went to call on that newly rich and artistic apartment she has leased, and she had the impertinence to send me word she was not at home."

"What did you do?"

"I sent her word back by the maid that I did not suppose she would be in such surroundings."

Poor reputations are due to the fact that good intentions are seldom credited.

The Reason.

"Press agents rarely go into bankruptcy." "No wonder. Their lie-abilities are also their assets."

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

An hour lost in the morning has to be run after all day.

If you use Red Cross Ball Blue in your laundry, you will not be troubled by those tiny rust spots, often caused by inferior bluing. Try it and see.

TOWN LONG WITHOUT BANK

Colorado Community, In Existence More Than a Century, Is Now to Have Institution.

The little Spanish town of San Luis, the county seat of Costilla county, Colo., in the lower end of the valley, will welcome its first bank when the State Bank of San Luis opens its doors for business. This little town is more than one hundred years old, and was one of the furthest outposts of Spanish settlement that followed the northward push of the Spanish residents of Santa Fe and vicinity.

For nearly fifty years before the first contingent of Americans, under command of Gen. Frank Baldwin, now a resident of Denver, arrived over La Veta pass and established the military post of Fort Garland, San Luis had been a flourishing little settlement surrounded by highly developed farms.

In the last few years the progress and development of the town and community has been more rapid until now the town is considered to be large enough to need a bank. The majority of the residents of the vicinity are Spanish-speaking people of the old school, polished, courteous, energetic and prosperous. Some of the wealthiest men of the valley are to be found in the town and its close environs.

The Reason.

"You look depressed this morning."

"Yes; when I went to look at my private stock this morning I found I was out of spirits."—Baltimore American.

CAME NEAR DYING

Finally Used Doan's and Was Restored to Health. Has Been Strong and Well Since.

"Malaria fever weakened my kidneys when I was a young man," says L. W. Garrison, 23 F St., Anderson, S. C. "Finally, ten years ago, I was in such bad shape that I expected to die. Medicine wouldn't help me any more. My back pained as if it were pierced with a knife. Many times I have fallen in the street and didn't have any strength to move until the awful misery was eased up. I couldn't sleep in bed for two years. The kidney secretions passed every few minutes and scalding hot water couldn't have burned any worse. I thought I was doomed to die, but a friend pleaded with me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I owe my life to his visit. Doan's helped me from the start and eleven boxes made a permanent cure which has lasted eight years. I have not had one sick minute since, nor missed a day from work." Sworn to before me.

INDIANA NEWS

East Chicago.—Because estimates of the census now being taken do not give East Chicago the 35,000 population necessary to place the city in the second class the Chamber of Commerce will take steps immediately to have a special election called under the law enacted by the state legislature in 1915. Under this law citizens may vote to become a city of the second class because of the property valuation. Citizens fear that they will be unable to obtain competent candidates for city offices unless the city enters the second class, which will give an increase of salary for officials. Incumbents are intimating they will resign unless the city passes into the second class.

Jeffersonville.—The report of cow-testing work in Indiana for December shows that the Clark County association stands second out of eight associations, with 288 cows out of 1,800 tested. Clark county also was second for ten high cows, with an average of 61.1 pounds of butterfat, 7.4 pounds above the next competitor. The county had three out of the ten highest cows in the state, but was beaten by Porter county with five. Harold McCulloch of Charlestown township had the highest herd average for the state, his 12 cows averaging 42.5 pounds of butterfat. The highest cow was eighth in the state.

Clinton.—Federal prohibition officers from Illinois and Indiana made wholesale liquor raids in Vermilion county recently. The raids were in charge of Mr. Fineberg, head of the Evansville district; A. L. Melham and Charles J. Orbison, United States prohibition director for Indiana, the latter of Indianapolis. These men were assisted by more than forty federal agents from Indiana and Illinois and several stills were confiscated at Blanford and Jacksonville.

Petersburg.—The cold snap sent the thermometer down below the zero mark and the ground, which had thawed out is now frozen again to a depth of eight inches. It is feared that wheat that was not covered with snow suffered because of the lateness of the planting season last fall. Fruit is not far enough advanced to be much damaged. It is believed that the freeze will add greatly to the run of sugar water.

Gary.—The Panic Proof Products corporation of New York has bought the Gary plant of the Central Metallic Door company and will at once begin construction of additional buildings to cost $1,000,000. The new plant will give employment to 2,000 workmen. The Leonard Tractor company, capitalized at $2,000,000, which shortly will begin the construction of a large plant at Griffith, near Gary, has established headquarters in Gary.

Alexandria.—More than thirty-five sales have been held in Monroe township this month, and almost twenty more have been advertised for the remainder of the month. The highest prices in the history of farming here are paid at the sales. Auctioneers say they are unable to fill engagements because of the great demand to conduct sales. A sale recently southwest of Alexandria was attended by 400 farmers, despite a heavy snowfall.

Rushville.—"Town loafers" and lazy husbands must get to work, or the city will put them to work, according to an order issued by Chief of Police Wilfong. Mayor Irvin has instructed the police force to pick up all vagrants, including the curbstone orators, and place them in jail. Factories here demand labor and all ablebodied men can find work, and no excuse will be taken by the authorities for loafers.

Jasper.—Eight new roads will be built at once in Dubois under the county unit road law, the board of county commissioners and the county council agreeing on the improvement at a meeting. One of the roads will extend from Madison township to the Pike county line. The other roads are in Ferdinand, Jackson, Jefferson, Columbia and Marion townships.

Washington.—Richards & Son of Terre Haute, coal operators, have six drills at work in this county near Sandy Hook, drilling for coal. C. E. Richards, senior member of the firm, has announced that he will open coal mines here this year that will employ more than 1,000 men, provided his drillers find the coal.

Jeffersonville.—The Indiana reformatory, which is said to need from 600 to 800 acres of farm land for the coming season, has at present only a little over 300 acres. This includes 225 acres east of Jeffersonville, which was purchased two or three years ago, and on which corn and other products were raised last year.

Indianapolis.—Forest policies for Indiana were discussed at a recent meeting of the conservation commission. It was declared by members of the commission that the forestry question of the state is entirely one of state-owned forests since it is economically impossible for the private land owner to cultivate forests. The director of the commission was instructed to secure copies of reforestation laws of the various states and draft recommendations for the approval of the commission. It was pointed out that between 600,000 and 700,000 acres of land are in need of reforestation.

Sullivan.—As a part of the statewide campaign to improve rural schools in Indiana and to obtain greater inducements for persons to enter the teaching profession, teachers of one-room district schools in Sullivan county are engaged in filling out comprehensive questionnaires sent out by L. N. Hines, state superintendent of public instruction. In the single district school survey, Richard Park, county superintendent, says Sullivan county will not rank very high. This year there are 67 single district schools in Sullivan county, that is schools with one teacher for the grades, which study and recite in one room. Most of these schools are in the mining communities in the eastern part of the county. Consolidation has been carried on extensively in the western part of the county.

Indianapolis.—The sale of 14-ounce loaves of bread is in violation of the state bakers' law, according to a ruling given Stanley Wyckoff, fair price commissioner for Indiana, by Ele Stansbury, attorney general. Merchants in Washington, Ind., had complained to Mr. Wyckoff that 14-ounce loaves were being sold by a St. Louis firm at a price one cent lower than that charged by Washington bakeries, and that the bread was being advertised at "cut prices" when the loaves in reality were two ounces less in weight than the bread made by the Washington bakers. The state law provides that bread be sold only in fixed weights, and that the weight be stamped plainly on each loaf.

Huntington.—The high cost of labor and materials is causing the postponement of building public improvements in this city. The board of works has abandoned plans for a sewer when it was ready to advertise for bids because the property owners thought the estimated cost was much more than the benefits they would receive. The board also rejected a petition to pave a street because of the high cost. A large number of persons, who planned to build houses, have abandoned the plans because of large increases in building materials and labor. The brickmasons of the city only a short time ago increased their price to $1.25 an hour.

Indianapolis.—Harry B. Smith, adjutant general of Indiana, has received a complete summary of the Indiana casualties in the A. E. F. during the world war from the adjutant general's office of the war department. The list includes casualties among American forces operating in northern Russia. According to the report the total casualties from the state were 5,766 with 1,510 deaths. The total casualty list of 5,766 was distributed among 206 officers and 5,560 enlisted men.

Evansville.—Local factories will cooperate with Evansville college next fall in presenting a special vocational course. Students will spend half their time studying theory and the remainder of their time will be spent in acquiring a practical knowledge of the work in the factories. The practical side of the course will be worked out later by a committee of college faculty members and members of the local Chamber of Commerce.

Indianapolis.—The survey of sewage conditions in 250 cities and towns of Indiana has been completed by John C. Diggs, director of the water and sewage department of the food and drug division of the state board of health. Data for the survey was obtained through questionnaires sent to engineers of the cities. The information will be kept on file in the office for reference in cases involving the question of sanitation.

Rushville.—The county council has acted favorably on the petition for the construction of a cement road on what is known as the Brookville pike, between Indianapolis and Cincinnati, O. The petition calls for paving of the road and the entire distance in Rush county from the city limits here to the Shelby county line, a distance of 12 miles. It is estimated that the road will cost in excess of $200,000.

Indianapolis.—The officers of the Indiana Federation of Farmers' Associations have perfected plans for putting up a spirited fight to bring the national headquarters of the American Farm Bureau Federation to Indianapolis. They have received the assurances of a number of state organizations which are affiliated with the national body that they will support the Hoosier delegation.

Anderson.—Five rural schools in Richland township, north of here have been closed on account of illness in hundreds of families. Schools are closed in all parts of the county. One-fifth of the schoolchildren in Anderson are absent on account of illness. The wave of influenza and grippe appears to be slightly reduced.

Anderson.—Following recommendations in the annual institute of Madison county farmers here, the several township organizations of farmers have united in a movement to require owners or drivers of motor trucks to file an indemnifying bond or insurance against loss by accidents when transporting live stock.

Indianapolis.—Petitions were in circulation in more than a score of Indiana cities to place the name of Vice President Thomas Riley Marshall on the presidential primary election ballot in this state May 4, as a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Vincennes.—In three days 28 children at Bicknell, in the northern part of Knox county, became orphans when their parents died of influenza and pneumonia. All hospitals in Vincennes are full of influenza patients and a shortage of nurses has been reported by physicians.

SCRAPS of HUMOR

SAD CASE.

"I think you'll do," said Mr. Jagsby to the new maid, "but there's one thing I want to impress on you."

"What is that, sir?"

"Whenever you see me retire to my cellar for—ahem—prayer and meditation, no matter who calls you must say I'm out. Do you understand?"

"Perfectly, sir," replied the maid, with a knowing smile. "At the last place I worked sir, the gentleman of the house—ahem—prayed and meditated so much my mistress had half a dozen doctors in to see him, sir, and I was told they had to put him into a kind of jacket."

A Guess.

"I saw Snubb kiss a girl the other night!"

"What! Why, he told me today he'd never kissed one single girl in his whole life."

"It's very probable. I remember thinking at the time that she was too good-looking to be single."

UNDISTURBED POSSESSION.

"Every man is entitled to his opinions."

"Quite true; and in many cases they don't appear to be of the slightest use to anybody but the owner."

Some Weep.

We sometimes pity Argus,
That hundred-eyed old sinner;
Just think if wife made him peel
The onions for his dinner.

Practical Version.

He—I'm trying to think of that famous line about the moth's desire for something. Do you happen to know it?

She (with a recent experience in mind)—Why, yes, dear. "The desire of the moth for the fur," isn't it?

The Remedy.

He—We will have to call another meeting of the club because last night we found we had no quorum.

She—Then why don't you buy one and keep it where you can get at it handy when you need it?

A Haunted House.

"This house is haunted."

"Haunted? Do you really believe that?"

"I do. It is haunted by the thought that the landlord is going to raise the rent."

Not Sure About It.

"You are giving your daughter a musical education, aren't you?"

"Well, I can't say that exactly, but I am paying for one."

HIS DELUSION

"Is your husband a member of any secret society?"

"He thinks he is, but he talks in his sleep."

History.

Oh, history repeats itself!
It is a well-worn text.
But just the same no earthly elf
Knows what it will say next.

What Did He Mean?

First Member—Would you mind if your wife should tell you you couldn't go?

Second Member—I certainly would.—Cartoons.

A Seaside Hotel.

"I hear your new hotel cost $2,000,000."

"Yep, the stockholders are somewhat disappointed."

"As to what?"

"They expected to get it back the first season."

In a Double Sense.

"I thought I knew a lot about managing my salary."

"Well, what of it?"

"But since I married I must say I have to hand it to my wife."

GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER.

Constipation invites other troubles which come speedily unless quickly checked and overcome by Green's August Flower which is a gentle laxative, regulates digestion both in stomach and intestines, cleans and sweetens the stomach and alimentary canal, stimulates the liver to secrete the bile and impurities from the blood. It is a sovereign remedy used in many thousands of households all over the civilized world for more than half a century by those who have suffered with indigestion, nervous dyspepsia, sluggish liver, coming up of food, palpitation, constipation and other intestinal troubles. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. Try a bottle, take no substitute.—Adv.

Happiness is something a fellow has to earn for himself; no one else can hand it to him.

Cuticura Soothes Baby Rashes.
That itch and burn with hot baths of Cuticura Soap followed by gentle anointings of Cuticura Ointment. Nothing better, purer, sweeter, especially if a little of the fragrant Cuticura Talcum is dusted on at the finish. 25c each everywhere.—Adv.

No woman can tell whether her hat is becoming to her until she ascertains the price.

YOUR COLD IS EASED AFTER THE FIRST DOSE

"Pape's Cold Compound" then breaks up a cold in a few hours

Relief comes instantly. A dose taken every two hours until three doses are taken usually breaks up a severe cold and ends all the grippe misery.

The very first dose opens your clogged-up nostrils and the air passages in the head, stops nose running, relieves the headache, dullness, feverishness, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffling! Clear your congested head! Nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as "Pape's Cold Compound," which costs only a few cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance, tastes nice, contains no quinine—Insist upon Pape's!—Adv.

Mr. Carnegie's Advice.

"In considerable fear," said a banker, "I once consulted Mr. Carnegie about a new venture. The business looked as if it ought to be profitable. There seemed to be a public need of it. Still there was some risk involved, and I was afraid.

"But Mr. Carnegie laughed at my fears.

"'If it is a good thing plunge in,' he said. 'Fear is old womanish. Fear is what keeps untold millions from making fortunes. When Benjamin Franklin thought of starting a newspaper in Philadelphia his mother, greatly alarmed, tried to dissuade him. She pointed out that there were already two newspapers in America.'"

Nothing Left.

Ragged little Tom Brown had been committed to juvenile hall, where he was immediately given a bath, clean clothes, had his hair washed and cut short. His old clothes were burned. As his adenoids interfered seriously with his breathing they were removed. When he had recovered from the operation the matron noticed that there was an unusually big and disfiguring wart at the end of his thumb.

"Tom," she said, "I'll see that this wart is removed today."

A look of absolute disgust spread over Tom's face. "Gosh!" he exclaimed. "Don't you let a fellow keep anything here?"—Harper's Magazine.

Poverty is more of a punishment than it is a crime.

END OF EIGHT YEARS MISERY

Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Recovered.

Newark, N. J.—"The doctor said I had an organic trouble and treated me for several weeks. At times I could not walk at all and I suffered with my back and limbs so I often had to stay in bed. I suffered off and on for eight years. Finally I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was a good medicine and tried it with splendid effect. I can now do my housework and my washing. I have recommended your Vegetable Compound and your Blood Medicine and three of my friends are taking them to advantage. You can use my name for a testimonial."—Mrs. THERESA COVENTRY, 75 Burnett St., Newark, N. J.

GETS MONEY FROM RUBBISH

Invention of Englishman Has Proved Its Practical Value in a Number of Towns.

One of the most remarkable machines in the world has just been invented by an Englishman, W. P. Hoyle. It converts dust into cash—or, more correctly speaking, it extracts what is worth saving from rubbish and prepares it for redistribution. Cinders are washed, dust is converted into fertilizer, tins are cleaned, and paper and rags are sorted. Another bit of machinery used in this wonderful "refuse recovery plant" deals with clinkers, turning them into molded concrete blocks for building. It has been proved that every hundred tons of waste produce $100, and since a town of 75,000 inhabitants discards about one hundred tons of rubbish daily one can easily work out the municipal revenue that such a plant would produce. Not a few towns in the United Kingdom have already installed a Hoyle rubbish converting plant. Aberdeen in one day collected $3,000 worth of discarded bottles, a week's jam-jar collection in the city of Sheffield realized $600, while Glasgow estimates that one year's conversion of its rubbish will bring in $20,000.

Ambitious.

"Making money, I see. If you keep on like this you may get into our circle."

"I have no time for circles. I propose to plug straight ahead."

C. P. Hatch died at the Garrett hospital on Wednesday afternoon of last week and burial took place from the Baptist church last Sunday. Mr. Hatch was forty-three years of age and was born at Newville. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orland Hatch, live at Newville, but their son had engaged in the real estate business in Garrett for several years. He leaves besides his parents, his wife, who was formerly Mrs. Lydia Mounts, one brother, Melcon Hatch, of Newville and a sister, Mrs. Rosa Snellbarker, of Swanton, Ohio.

LOW CORN KING

Anybody Can Afford

to have a good Manure Spreader, and nobody can afford to be without one. This year of all years you should own a spreader. The high price of grain makes farm manure far more valuable than ever. Take care of every bit of it. Haul it out daily if you can and put it on the fields where it belongs. Don't let it lie around the barnyard and thus leach away the plant food it contains. "Save and Have". Save the manure, save your time, your labor, and your horses—and have the increased crops and profits you hope for. Own a Low Corn King manure spreader.

Wire Fencing.

Here is a bit of advise and take it for what it is worth to you: We have had notice that all the wire mills have shut down and if you expect to build fence this spring—now is your opportunity. We have some on hands but it will not last long either. You can get yours now if you think you will need some.

SIRUP TIME.

You will open that camp this year, to be sure. Sugar is going up and will continue to do so. Open that camp and save buying sugar. We have Sap Pails—Spiles and Syrup Cans ready for you. You can't buy them any cheaper anywhere either.

Talks on Armenia.

The story of a country where people graze on grass like cattle, where 100,000 are in Turkish harems and little children attempt to eat each other arms, where the graves of the dead are opened for food and people drop quietly to the ground, dead, dead from starvation, was told by Dr. V. K. Beseketoor, a native of Armenia, to a representative group of DeKalb county people at the Auburn Y. M. C. A. Friday noon.

The occasion was the conference of nearly 100 workers for the Near East relief. They heard a story of suffering that words cannot picture, of tortures that no tongue can describe or do justice to an appeal that was told by a man who had seen the actual scenes himself.

The speaker is a native Armenian who spent several months in a Turkish prison and who has seen the actual atrocities.

"More martyrs have been killed in Armenia during the past few years than in all the rest of the time that Christians have been persecuted," he declared. "And all because they would not become Mohammedans."

He told of how the Armenians have been killed and of the cruel practices of the Turks. He stated that the Turks, are according to people who have studied them, the most cruel and inhuman of all people. Their desire to kill is their religion and their prayer to Allah is that they may kill, that their enemies be killed and their wives be given over to the Turkish warriors.

The Armenians are in desperate circumstances because this persecution has been going on so long that their nation has shrunk from twenty millions of people to a little less than one million.

In one instance, 16,000 people were driven out of a city into a desert place eight miles away. Of the number only 200 made the eight mile trip. The rest were either killed or died by the roadside. The result is the Armenians have nothing to eat, no clothing, no arms to fight with and the people are gradually being starved to death by the Turks.

One instance was pointed out of where a man saw four persons silently drop dead from hunger. Little children, unable to eat grass, run to get the broken pieces of horses hoofs so they can get saliva to masticate the grass and roots. Although the weather there is cold they have nothing but a piece of cloth to clothe themselves with and yet this is the oldest and the most Christian nation in the world.

"We are not asking you to feed the old people" the speaker declared. "Experts have shown that 200,000 of them must die, but we ask you to preserve the hopes of the nation, our thousands of dying little orphan chidren. Why one little girl was seen with a bone and when questioned it was found that it was from the grave of a little companion who had died. Another little girl was caught eating the flesh of her little brother's arm. Poor, hungry, dying Armenia is asking America, with all its bounty. 'Won't you save the lives of our little childred.' A little from every one will do it."

If you go to the St. Joe M. P. church Thursday night you will hear from an Armenian direct.

"DANDERINE" STOPS HAIR FALLING OUT

Hurry! A few cents will save your hair and double its beauty.

A little "Danderine" cools, cleanses and makes the feverish, itchy scalp soft and pliable; then this stimulating tonic penetrates to the famished hair roots, revitalizing and invigorating every hair in the head, thus stopping the hair falling out, getting thin, scraggly or fading.

After a few application of "Danderine" you seldom find a fallen hair or a particle of dandruff, besides every hair shows more life, vigor, brightness, color and thickness.

A few cents buys a bottle of delightful "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter.—Adv.

Not a Flirt.

A friend of mine while motoring in the East had an amusing experience which he related to me recently. Driving through New Hampshire he stopped pityingly when he saw a woman beginning the climb of a mile-long upgrade. My friend is considerably under thirty and the woman was sixty or more, sallow, squirrel toothed, crooked and bony. He raised his hat and asked: "May I give you a ride, madam?" She glared and snapped: "No, sir, you can't. I'm none of your city flirts, I'd have you know."

NAME "BAYER" IS ON GENUINE ASPIRIN

Take tablets without fear, if you see the safety "Bayer Cross."

If you want the true, world-famous Aspirin, as prescribed by physicians for over eighteen years, you must ask for "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin."

The "Bayer Cross" is stamped on each tablet and appears on each package for your protection against imitations.

In each package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" are safe and proper directions for Colds, Headache, Neuralgia, Toothache, Earache, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis, and for Pain in general.

Handy tin boxes containing 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.—Adv.

Rare as Radium.

A Guess.

"Where have those dummy directors been?" inquired Mr. Cassius Chex.

"To a board meeting," answered Mr. Dustin Stax.

"What kind of board?"

"Dunno for sure. Judging from several of the actions it must have been some kind of a ouija board."

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How to Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.—Adv.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

GREAT NEED IS PRODUCTION

Men Must Be Given Inducement to Work and Guaranteed Fair Dealing in the Distribution of the Result.

Article VI.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

The world lives by two kinds of work, the work on the soil and the labor spent in making things. In this way we get the things we eat and wear. We have eaten up our surplus. The world's reserve is gone. We are literally living from hand to mouth. To overcome the food shortage we must put every inch of available ground into production. Only by doing this can we live and gradually get back the surplus which stood as a protection against crop failures.

Production is not automatic, it is the work of man. There is not anything complex about it. You can't use magic. To grow things men must plow and gather. The will to work is our greatest need. The land is available. God furnishes the sunshine and the rain. To get the plows, tractors and farm tools we must look to the industrial arm of life. Here again is the call for men. We are short of man power. Men were killed and crippled in the war. The men who survived the war must help do the work that would have been done by those who did not come back. In their present frame of mind they do not will to work, at least under the old conditions obtaining before the war. It is necessary to furnish them with an inducement to work. There was little inducement for men to work before the war. The discontented are not kicking at work. Their objection goes to the unfairness shown in distributing the result. It isn't any secret. They are shouting it from the housetops of Europe, they demand a larger share of the things they produce, or they refuse to work. There is a good deal of human nature in it, too. It is only human nature to think of self. There isn't anything unnatural in the workingman looking for reward. Willingness to work is largely based on the thought of working for oneself.

Five things are necessary to start and keep production going. In other words, to get the clothes, shoes, stockings, coal and comforts of life, to give the farmer the tools he needs for agricultural production, so that we may eat; to provide the transportation necessary to collection and distribution, to bring the city to the country and the country to the market we must do five essential things.

Production's First Need.

First, we must have plants, and I use the word in the most general sense. These plants must be equipped with machinery and tools, they must be ready for work.

Second, a plant is useless and stands idle unless we provide raw material, the thing furnished by nature that man and machine work into the finished product.

Third, we must have coal. Coal runs the machine and keeps warm the home of the man who runs the machine. The helplessness of the world without coal is brought home to me while I am writing these articles. The miners have left the pit. The government, through the courts, has tried to force them back. The effort is a failure. The streets are dark at night. The houses are cold. Business is crying out against necessary restrictions imposed because of the coal shortage. I realize as I never have before how dependent we are on the men who pick and dig the coal. All of the intelligence and culture, the courts, the gold, are but symbols of power. When the coal miners folded their hands and set their teeth things stopped.

Fourth, transportation is necessary to the gathering, collecting and delivering of raw material and the distribution of the finished product.

Fifth, and last, but first in importance, is man power. The purpose of production is man. He is master of it at every stage, in every department. Without him production is impossible. The business men who proceed on the theory that men could not live without their business, its pay roll, forget the first and greater truth that there would be no business without the workers. Man cuts, digs, gathers and hauls the raw material. He hews the wood, builds the plant. He mines the ore, he makes the tools, the machinery. He oils it, sets it in motion. He runs it. He makes the furnace and the boiler. He digs and shovels the coal which makes the power. He defies the heat of the furnace. He builds the locomotive and pulls its throttle. He makes the freight car and stands in the sleet in the dangerous railroad yard with the signal of safety.

Railroads All Worn Out.

Transportation in Europe is partly paralyzed. During the war railroad tracks and roadbeds were allowed to deteriorate. It could not be helped, but the fact that it was unavoidable doesn't alter the situation. Roadbed and rails have fallen to pieces. There is a terrible shortage of cars. Everywhere on the Continent this is felt. They have less than a third of the rolling stock necessary to meet normal requirements. The demand for transportation facilities will necessarily increase during the period of reconstruction. I have seen locomotives sneezing, coughing, expiring every few miles. Old, broken-down engines, the kind one expects to find in a museum. I was on a de luxe train, a diplomatic express. I commented upon the condition of the locomotive, which came to a full stop every once in a while. I commented upon the condition of the coaches. The chief of the train looked at me, smiled and said: "If you think this one is bad you ought to see some of the others."

The war disarranged plants and factories. The demand was for munitions. Peace gave way to war and plant equipment efficient for peace production gave way to plant construction necessary to manufacture the weapons of war. Plants were commandeered. Machinery was torn out, new machinery put in. A complete reconstruction and reorganization was effected. Now that the war is over and the demand for everything is great, it is necessary to change these plants back and fit them for the production needed. It is expensive, it takes time, it retards production.

It is strange that while everyone can see and understand the difficulties and delays incident to reorganizing and rearranging machinery and plants, many people cannot see or understand the problem of rearranging men's lives, who for four years have been living abnormally. The effect of the war upon plants and equipment is conceded by the very man who refused to see any effect of the war on the men who were in it.

Women in Labor World.

During the war women answered the roll call. They left their homes and went to work. There is hardly a kind of work that I can think of that I have not seen women doing in Europe. I have seen them loading boats, shoveling coal, washing windows, driving wagons, cleaning streets, conductors on trams. Many of the women who went into the industries were young women. Now that the war is over and the men have come back there is a demand on the part of the men that the women retire to their homes. This is impossible in many cases, for these women have grown dependent upon their jobs for their living. Then, too, there is a shortage of marriageable men. Some employers of labor have taken advantage of this situation. They pay a woman less money than they pay a man for the same work. This makes both dissatisfied. The woman has the sympathy of the working man. He doesn't want her to compete with him to the extent that his wages will be lowered, neither does he want the boss to discriminate against her.

Women have come into the world of work to stay. If there is any meaning in the phrase "class conscious," they are living examples of it. They are more outspoken about their demands than men. They sense a wrong long before a man can see it. They have brought their intuition into the labor world. They are more radical than men, and they stimulate men to action. They have brought to the labor problem a new and interesting angle.

The key to the future is in the hands of these men and women. Production is the door that must be opened. Men and women must work, or winter and want will make a No Man's Land of Europe before the sun of 1920 thaws the frost from the ground.

Children crying for bread, shivering in the cold these bleak winter nights, are praying that men will work when they pray to God for good and warmth. Their help cries are smothered by a great blanket—unrest. Will men hear them?

So I sought to find the causes of unrest, knowing it would bring me close to the heart of the trouble.

Dickens' Tribute to the Cow.

If civilized peoples were to lapse into the worship of animals, the cow would certainly be their chosen goddess. What a fountain of blessing is the cow! She is the mother of beef, the source of butter, the original cause of cheese, to say nothing of shoehorns, haircombs and upper leathers. A gentle, amiable, ever-yielding creature, who has no joy in her family affairs that she does not share with man. We rob her of her children, that we may rob her thereafter of her milk; and we only care for her when the robbery may be perpetrated.—Charles Dickens.

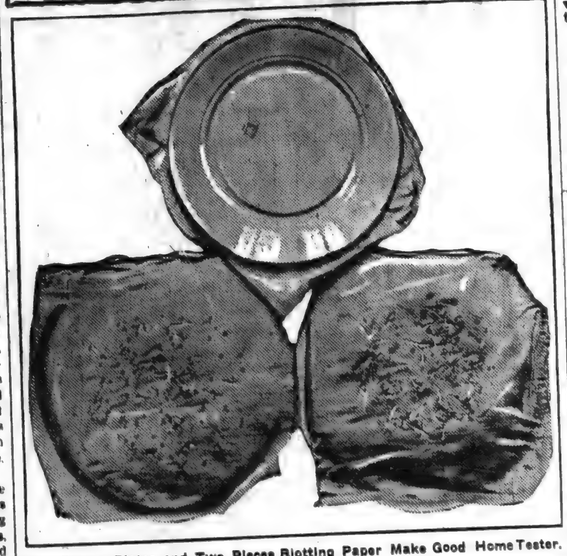
Approaching the End.

Cicero in his dialogue entitled "De Senectute" makes one of his interlocutors say that all men wish to attain old age and yet complain of the fact when they have attained it. He adds that one of the grievances of the old is that age steals over them more rapidly than they expected. It is pointed out that we cannot prevent time from passing, and that even if we lived eight hundred instead of eighty years the past time, however long, cannot when it has flown away be able to "soothe with any consolation for an old age of folly."

A Sister Wilhelm Did Not Like.

Princess Charlotte of Meningen, sister of the ex-kaiser, who died recently, had been a sufferer for years and had undergone many operations. She passed most of her time on the Riviera. Indeed, the princess was a woman you couldn't miss. She wore bobbed hair, when no other woman had ever dreamed of such a thing, and talked dance, race, and smoked all the time. The ex-kaiser was rather alarmed at her vagaries and preferred his other sister. Queen Sophie of Greece, who is more his sort.—London Mail.

FARMER CANNOT AFFORD TO SOW POOR SEED



Two Dinner Plates and Two Pieces Blotting Paper Make Good Home Tester.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Red clover seed is selling at approximately 50 cents a pound. At that price a farmer cannot afford to sow as clover seed anything that is not clover seed. Half a dollar a pound for weed seed, chaff, and dirt is too high a price to pay for the privilege of being careless—particularly as seed testing is comparatively an easy and wholly an inexpensive operation.

There is but one factor in crop production over which the farmer has absolute control. Sunshine and moisture are matters that are wholly beyond his power of influence. Measurably, he can control culture, but too much rain or too long a drought at a critical time may place even that beyond his power. But, no matter what happens, the farmer can be sure that he is planting good seed—the kind of seed that, given a fair chance, will produce a full crop. He cannot afford to handicap himself at the outset by planting adulterated or dead seed—the kind of seed that cannot make a full crop no matter how favorable conditions may be.

Labeling of Seeds Promised.

The sale of seeds, in many states, is regulated by law, the seller being required to make certain statements as to quality, but the law is not applicable to seeds that go into interstate commerce. In order to meet this difficulty so far as possible, the secretary of agriculture, in 1917, asked representatives of the seed trade to meet in Washington and secured the consent of most of them to a suggestion that seed men label all farm seeds sold in lots of 10 pounds or more, the label to show percentage of pure seed, percentage of germination, and date of germination test. In some cases the agreement was not lived up to, but the matter has again been called to the attention of seed men and many of them have again announced that they will label all seed they sell.

Practically all large seed houses now have facilities for testing the quality of all lots of seeds that they buy and sell. They have, therefore, the information that the farmer needs, and he should insist upon being given this information when he buys seeds. Few farmers are willing to buy low-grade seed, containing much chaff, dirt, weed seeds, and dead seeds—if they know how poor it is. The dealer, however, almost invariably makes his largest profit on the lower grade of seed he sells and is not always willing to put on a truthful label. The farmer's protection lies in buying only labeled seeds.

Farmer May Protect Himself.

The farmer, however, may do a great deal toward protecting himself by testing seeds at home. "Testing Seed in the Home and in the Rural School," published by the United States department of agriculture as Farmers' Bulletin 426, discusses the subject in detail. It will be furnished free on request.

All kinds of farm seeds may be subjected to one kind of test or another, but the seeds of the crops in most general use and which it is especially desirable to have tested are the true clovers, such as red, alsike, and crimson; alfalfa; such grasses as timothy, orchard grass, and the millets; cereals, rape, flax, vetch, and corn. Much of the seed of these crops, except cereals and corn, is imported and widely variable grades are on the market. Just now a great deal of clover seed is being imported from Italy, and specialists believe that much of it is poorly adapted to American conditions. The prevalence of foreign-grown seed in the market is probably not generally recognized, but it is one of the important elements in making testing necessary.

GETTING PROFITS IN FEEDING LIVE STOCK

Two Tests Conducted on Private Farms in Florida.

Herd of Native Steers Turned on Field of Velvet Beans Gave Better Results Than Those Fed on More Expensive Feeds.

Less gains in weight but greater profits resulted from feeding a herd of cattle in a velvet bean field, compared with another herd fed in a similar field for only a short time and then given more costly feed, including sorghum silage and cottonseed meal. These two feeding tests were conducted on private farms in Florida in co-operation with the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture.

In one case 220 native steers, three to five years old and averaging 582 pounds per head, were turned into an 80-acre field of velvet beans early in November. After 28 days the animals averaged 590 pounds and the feed was changed to sorghum silage, velvet beans in pod and cottonseed meal. On the fifty-sixth day the weight was 589 pounds. On the eighty-fourth day, when the test ended, it was 644 pounds. The average daily grain per head was approximately three-fourths of a pound. The ration was not the typical fattening ration used heretofore but was one used to secure a comparable degree of finish. Had grain been fed in addition probably a greater gain would have been secured. There was a $2 margin and a profit of $4.02 per head.

In the second experiment 116 native steers similar to the first herd were pastured on an 85-acre field of velvet beans for 72 days, beginning at about the same time of year. They lost considerable in weight for a part of the second month, but there was a daily average gain for the whole period of a little more than one-fourth pound per steer. The pasture charge in this case was $9 per acre, and the profit $6.85 per head. The margin was $2, as in the other case.

BUILD HEN HOUSE IN SPRING

Building Then Will Have Chance to Dry Out During Hot Days—Avoid Danger of Colds.

The best time to build a poultry house is in the spring or early summer, for then it will have time to dry out during the hot days. Lumber is often rather damp and it must be thoroughly dried out before winter or the birds housed in the building will be in danger of contracting colds, says the United States department of agriculture. Cement floors and foundation walls, if made in the spring, will also have an opportunity to dry thoroughly, and most of the dampness often attributed to them will be avoided.

Spring or early summer is the busy time on the farm, so those who foresee the need of new poultry houses next winter will do well to build them during the slack time this winter before spring work starts. Do not put the birds into the new building, however, until it has been dried out.

THE "BLUES" Caused by Acid-Stomach

Millions of people who worry, are despondent, have spells of mental depression, feel blue and are often melancholy, believe that these conditions are due to outside influences over which they have little or no control. Nearly always, however, they can be traced to an internal source—acid-stomach. Nor is it to be wondered at. Acid-stomach, beginning with such well defined symptoms as indigestion, belching, heartburn, bloat, etc., will, if not checked in time affect to some degree or other all the vital organs. The nervous system becomes deranged. Digestion suffers. The blood is impoverished. Health and strength are undermined. The victim of acid-stomach, although he may not know the cause of his ailments, fails his hope, courage, ambition and energy slipping. And truly life is dark—not worth much to the man or woman who has acid-stomach!

Get rid of it! Don't let acid-stomach hold you back, wreck your health, make your days miserable, make you a victim of the "blues" and gloomy thoughts! There is a marvelous modern remedy called EATONIC that brings, oh! such quick relief from your stomach miseries—sets your stomach to rights—makes it strong, cool, sweet and comfortable. Helps you get back your strength, vigor, vitality, enthusiasm and good cheer. So many thousands upon thousands of sufferers have used EATONIC with such marvelously helpful results that we are sure you will feel the same way if you will just give it a trial. CHAPTER XV—Continued.

Billy charged monsieur's confession to a private account that was growing large. Personally I felt I liked the man the better for it—I read it as the effort to shield the girl and minimize her part in the affair. And in that I was right; Billy looked at it differently. "Conceited cuss!" he later confided. "Wanted to take the whole credit to himself."

"Oui, madame," monsieur went on, and all the while I felt him searching my face for a sign of what I had accomplished with Mrs. Delario. "Nossing can be safer—I argue—zan a fancy slipper. It is not worn on ze steamer in ze cold of winter, and madame have so assure me zat her baggage, because of her so good cousin, is pass wisout difficulty. And who would accuse madame of"—he gave me a knowing look and finished ambiguously—"of to smuggle sone valuable papers zat do not concern her? Ah, no—it would be incredible wisout to see zem—and we have take care sat zey are not seen! And to accomplish zis we have put zem where zey are almost but not quite seen. I have explain all zis to Claire and she have understand parfaitement. Oui."

The smugness with which he delivered himself of this was really amusing, and I couldn't help a smile, which encouraged him to add—at the same time looking piercingly at me—with a deprecating shrug:

"And just at se moment of beautiful completion madame carries off one of sose slippers—we know not which."

All of us laughed and the tension that had been quite plainly felt in our little company broke.

Claire went on to tell us how, in Antwerp, she had occupied a room communicating with Mrs. Delario's the day before they sailed, and how papa had taken Mrs. Delario out to see the great Rubens in the cathedral and she—Claire—pleading a headache, had remained behind and had gone through Mrs. Delario's things so she could tell her father what there was they could use; had discovered the slippers and had taken them to her room and shown them to her father that night and he said they "would do admirably," and she had got them back while Mrs. Delario was asleep.

But it wasn't easy to put the box into the slipper when it came to the point. Mrs. Delario keenly felt the obligations of her charge and proved a far too devoted chaperon. At last the chance arrived and the box was stowed. What, then, was the poor child's consternation to hear me twitting Mrs. Delario into wearing the slippers!

"She nearly had me then!" Claire confided with noticeable glee at her own ability to cope with the situation. "I got the box out just one minute before she came into our stateroom. But this fright made me so ill I couldn't stay at table that night."

"I should think so," said Billy, and gave a sly glance in my direction that said, "I take back all I said about her last night—she wasn't really in it at all. It was all the old scoundrel of a 'mossoo.'"

Claire seemed ready to end here, but I wasn't ready to have her. What was I to tell monsieur? My turn was coming in a minute, and what was I to say? I kept on with Claire. "Then so far as you know, the box came through the customs house in one of those slippers? And what were you to do after that?"

The words were hardly out of my mouth when the front bell rang and George handed in a telegram addressed to monsieur.

Monsieur tore open the yellow envelop and rapidly scanned the message; frowned; hesitated; started to speak and stopped; looked at me inquiringly; asked if there was a telegraph office near and when I told him where it was excused himself from our company to "send an immediate and urgent reply" and instructed Claire to answer every question I might care to put and with that he hurried off with the curt ceremony of one who expects to be back on the quarter-hour stroke.

There was, however, but little more I needed to discover from Claire; still there was one thing, and I asked her bluntly, "Your father came over ahead of us on a faster steamer? He was on the wharf in disguise when we arrived?"

She blushed furiously and stammered, "Y—yes—he was there," and added hastily: "But I didn't know he was there. He told me there would be someone—to take charge—when I gave the signal that everything was all right—"

"Oh, there was a signal?"

"Of course. I had to let the other one know who had the box—"

"You mean you had to let your father know?"

"It was papa—but I didn't see him."

"What did you have to let him know?"

"Whether it was you or Mrs. Delario."

"How did you manage that?"

"I set my little handbag on top of the suitcase—that said the box was there. Then I drew off my glove—that said, 'in a slipper.' It wasn't very hard to remember."

"And you had given the signal when I picked up the slipper?"

"Yes—and I was so frightened. I didn't know but papa would be killed."

"And you went home with Mrs. Delario and tried to see if she had the right slipper?"

"Yes—but I never found out—"

She looked as if she were dying to ask, "Have you found out?"

I was so afraid she would that I ended the cross-examination hastily by asking her what she heard from her mother and signaled Billy to chip into the conversation and make talk as fast as he could; and after she'd replied about her mother—that her grandfather was still dying and her mother dared not leave—she turned to Billy as though she had really only just then become aware of his presence, and they soon were chattering away like magpies and the blushes were mostly on Billy's cheeks. For which he might be forgiven. He was just twenty-two and she was just sixteen; but in three years—dear me, what a beauty she was going to be—what a man-killer!

I left them to themselves, going to my bedroom on some pretext or another while one quarter of an hour followed another, and still monsieur did not return. At nine Claire began to be restless; at quarter after she blurted out, "Do you suppose anything has happened to papa?"

I had been supposing it for half an hour—he'd had time to make twenty trips to the telegraph office and back—but I managed to say reassuringly, "Why, what could happen?" and Billy supported me with a fine courageous, "Nothing could have happened—he's a man—he knows how to take care of himself," and was rewarded with a look. Even at sixteen Claire's looks were valuable—Billy wouldn't have sold that to another fellow for a ten-dollar bill.

The elevator rumbled up, and I cried, "There he is—I think."

George presented me with two notes and the information that an automobile was downstairs waiting.

I handed one note to Claire, tore open the one addressed to me, and read:

> I'm sending a car for my daughter. Will you ask Mr. Rivers to escort her to the hotel? It is necessary that I say some few words to you alone. I beg you to await me.
> It was signed, "H. de Ravenol."

I had barely finished this when I heard Claire give a cry, "Mamma is dead!" and I looked up just in time to see her throw out her arms and swoon away at my feet.

People faint away in this story like the heroines of a mid-Victorian romance, but I can't help it. Anyway, I warned you there was another faint coming, which faint was, under the circumstances, natural enough.

To be exact, Claire swooned at my feet via Billy's arms. The intention was all on his side, however—he caught her as she was regardlessly going and let her down. A light burden.

"Got any smelling salts? Quick if you have. Some water, if you haven't," he ordered.

I couldn't help an inward snort at the cool way in which he took the proprietorship of the situation in my house—a snort tempered with good-natured elderly amusement at his impetuosity and its justifiable cause. He was nearly as pale as Claire and dreadfully agitated. But I was already running to the bathroom for the water to revive her, as twenty-four hours previous I'd run for water to assuage the ammoniacal agonies of her dear papa.

Billy was on his knees. From under one protruded the note that had caused the damage. I went down on my knees and applied the wet towel. Billy fished forth the note and without compunction read it aloud.

> My child: (It was in French) Return to the hotel immediately. Ask Mr. Rivers to escort you. VOTRE PERE.

Nothing very nerve-shattering and not a word about her mother; so evidently she'd been expecting something and this had keeled her over on general principles.

"What was in yours?" demanded Billy.

I reached out and got it off the table where I'd thrown it and gave it to him. "Nothing about her mother," said I. "This getting her away is just a dodge to see me alone."

"You're not going to!" Billy exclaimed, with some dismay.

I sopped at Claire's face and answered: "I don't know—it depends on how soon he comes."

"I wouldn't—it isn't safe for you."

"You come here the very first thing in the morning, and if I don't answer your ring—"

Claire just then stirred, and we thought she was coming to, but she relapsed again, and Billy doubled up his fists and made a motion toward the front door, indicating that if I didn't answer he would break it in.

"That's it—and the very first thing in the morning. I don't know what else to do—and—" I leaned over Claire anxiously, and whispered to myself rather than Billy: "This is pretty bad."

"Where's that ammonia?" he demanded, making a wry face and adding in a whisper: "Do you suppose she knows?"

"Of course not," I retorted. "You don't suppose he was such a fool as to tell his own child how we 'done him' last night! It's in the kitchen, where we left it."

"Well, she'll never know from me—and I hope she'll never know from you," admonished Billy, rising from his knees and searching my face for the assurance.

I responded with something very like a glare—Billy was really taking quite a bit on himself just then—I hope I knew without being told by a boy who went to school to me what the common decencies of the case were! But all I said was: "Please get it."

A few drops of ammonia on the towel and she gasped. Then she murmured: "Oh, mamma," in tragic accents, and relapsed again. I was about to send Billy to the nearest doctor he could get in captivity, when the bell rang—George wanted to know when the young lady would be ready—"the shuffer's waitin' an' he's in a hurry."

Billy—who answered the ring—snapped out: "Let him wait—it's what he's paid for. Go down and tell him we're coming."

He slammed the door, for a moment forgetting Claire, and she started up at the noise with her cry: "Oh, mamma!" and then seeing me: "Oh, you!"

"Yes—I'm here," I soothed, and thought she was going off again and gave her a good smart swat with the towel and a good sharp, "Claire!"

In spite of our assurances, it was a good half-hour before she was anything like all right and we got a coherent account from her and found she only thought something had happened to her mother. It was a full three-quarters of an hour before she was ready to leave.

Claire Swooned at My Feet.

I was more than half-minded to go with her, and but for monsieur's explicit note—which I read again after Claire came to her senses—I should not have let her go off that way, even with Billy, though I knew that so far as devoted perfect care went, he'd give it to her as well as I. More acceptably, mayhap!

I had a growing uneasiness that monsieur's surreptitious return for words alone with me marked a change in the current of events. Had he already discovered without my help that Mrs. Delario had the diamonds? Had he seen her since I left the house? And was he prepared to drop on her with the law? Certainly I had already noticed he had about him the air of something he hadn't the night before when he threw himself on my mercy and implored me to help him.

He'd shed his pleading attitude—that was how I summed him up in my new impression; and when a person does that it's either because he doesn't care or holds the whip! I was bound to see him and find out; and Claire and Billy went away together, Billy wearing a grim do-or-die, trust-me-absolutely expression on his round young face connoting appreciation of his grave responsibility.

When I'd seen them off in the elevator and closed my door I smiled. I wasn't sorry that Billy was getting a wholesome nearness to the real thing in women, albeit a very young one—but time would rapidly remedy that difficulty; and as for Claire—well, Billy was her first young man and I knew her ideals wouldn't suffer any through him. He might be a trifle rough and unpolished on the outside, but he was true blue.

There were three low raps at my door. Or was it my door?

I listened—I must have been mistaken—though I'd only barely closed it and was turning out the hall electric. The elevator that was taking Claire and Billy down was still on its way. Could monsieur have walked up?

The raps were repeated—unquestionably on my door. Without waiting—or even thinking to call through and ask who was there—I threw the door open.

Mrs. Delario whipped in and closed it behind her.

Her face was almost concealed by a heavy black veil, but I recognized her and cried out, "Why, Mrs. Delario!" in utter amazement. What under the heavens had brought her there?

She laid a black-gloved finger on her lips to signify silence; she thrust something in my hand; she opened the door and whipped out as she came, shutting it in my face.

She hadn't uttered a word—she had barely caused a sound; even the door closed behind her noiselessly. I tore it open as my first impulse—when I got my breath—thinking she'd be waiting for the elevator. In the few seconds of my astonishment she had gone.

I checked a call to her—"Mrs. Delario"—and listened for descending footsteps on the stairs but heard nothing.

I sank into a hall chair, quite unnerved—coming on top of what I'd been through that day, I feel I'd have had a justifiable cause for a faint on my own account; only I didn't swoon. I kept asking myself: If it weren't an apparition how did she know which door to knock at? I have no door-plate and she'd evidently not asked George—he was taking the car down with Claire and Billy at the moment Mrs. Delario popped in. It didn't occur to me at first that she'd probably seen me, from the corner of the stairway, close that door after saying goodby to the others. There had been three raps—classic apparitions always, I believe, rap thrice when they wish to enter your abode—they do not condescend to push a button; and then she'd noiselessly whipped in and put something in my hand—

I became conscious of a hard object in my fist; opened the fist and beheld—the fatal box.

You could have knocked me over with a feather! Impossible that she'd brought it back! I dashed for the dining room where the light was and pulled off the cover of the box. There lay the diamonds!

With a sweeping gesture I flung them on the table—in one fell swoop I'd been tumbled off my lofty perch and had become a victim once more—just a disconcerted, worried victim, responsible for the fate of nations!

And having thrown them down—one of them fell off the table—I snatched them up—monsieur would return at any minute for that private interview with me, and now what was I to tell him? I no longer had the gem-free conscience of an hour ago—I had the diamonds!

But I might have saved my agonies—monsieur did not return that night—he had other fish to fry.

The canny cleverness of monsieur's next move gave me when I knew it such keen intellectual joy that I forgave him everything.

He had argued it out thus: Either I should succeed or I should fail with Mrs. Delario. If I failed it would be for one of two reasons: either she denied all knowledge of the diamonds or she had confessed to me yet had been able to bind me to secrecy. But in either case he would read my success or failure in my face the moment he greeted me.

My face was a blank. He hadn't expected to find it that way, but so it was—not a hint did I give him, first when I opened the door, or later while I talked with Claire. In fact, inside of fifteen minutes he became convinced that so far as I was concerned my mission was a failure and I was hedging for time and unwilling to confess it.

He was prepared for my failure—his chance of trapping her lay in his seeing her before I could communicate with her after seeing him. With a fake telegram, delivered by George at a preconcerted moment to serve as monsieur's excuse to leave the house, and also as a pretext to leave Claire in the house, keeping guard over Billy and my self—none of the three of us suspecting it—monsieur had taken his waiting automobile and swooped down on Mrs. Delario!

Famous Woman.

The first hand that touched our American Rock of Ages, the bowlder that we call Plymouth Rock—was the hand of a woman on December 25, 1620. Well-grounded tradition has it that upon the little Mayflower, nearing the shores of Plymouth, after its fearful voyage, the first of its storm-wrecked company to leap ashore were Miles Standish and Priscilla Mullins, the Puritan maiden. During the appalling hardships of the transit a maiden's love and faith had burned, undimmed, cheering others in despair. Significant indeed that her trembling hand grasped first the rock of America's great future. She has been further immortalized by Longfellow in his "Courtship of Miles Standish."

The Bread of Persia.

Native bread today in Persia is very little different from that of a thousand years ago. The oven is built of smooth masonry in the ground, and many of them have been used for a century. The dough is formed into thin sheets about a foot long and two feet wide and pressed quickly against the side of the oven. It bakes in a few minutes.

PUBLIC ROADS

GRANITE BLOCK FOR PAVING

Material Regarded as Particularly Suitable for Trunk Lines Entering Large Cities.

Study of various paving materials suitable for much-traveled highways has disclosed interesting data on granite blocks to the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture. Many road builders are coming to regard this material as particularly suitable for trunk lines entering large towns and cities where there is an increasing amount of heavy traffic.

Though the initial cost of granite block construction is high, the maintenance of the pavement, if properly laid and grouted, is less than that of almost any other type of pavement. In Worcester, Mass., over a period of 10 years the average maintenance cost per yard was less than a half cent. This also is true in other cities, regardless of the fact that in general the streets covered with granite block paving are those carrying the most severe traffic.

The Maintenance Cost of This Kind of Pavement, If Properly Laid, Is Less Than That of Almost Any Other Kind of Pavement.

ROAD TESTS IN CALIFORNIA

Over Adobe Land Concrete Is Laid on Sides With Macadam in Middle —Surface Topped.

An experiment in road construction over adobe land is being made in a section of the county highway between Bay Point and Pittsburg, in California.

Experience has shown that concrete roads built over adobe land results in the cracking and disintegrating of the road in a few seasons and in an effort to overcome this trouble County Surveyor Arnold is having the link of the county highway constructed in a manner tried in several eastern states and proved successful.

The concrete is laid in two separate sections, each eight feet wide with a two-foot strip through the center. In this strip is placed oil macadam which is rolled level to the surface of the concrete and the entire surface is faced with a topping.

GOOD ROADS ARE ESSENTIAL

Success of Motor Truck Express Lines Depends Greatly on Character of Highways.

The success of the motor truck express depends to a very large degree on the character of the roads over which the routes run. Bad roads increase the operating costs, and consequently the rates to patrons, beyond the point of economy. Trucks are destructive to roads unless the roads are permanently built. Therefore, the problem of improving and developing the marketing facilities for farmers through the establishment of rural motor express lines is directly connected with the problem of permanent improvement of the highways.

TRUCK IS QUITE EFFICIENT

Cost of Construction and Maintenance Is Lowered One-Half by Use of Equipment.

In the construction and maintenance of the earth roads in the rural sections, the most efficient equipment yet found consists of a road grader drawn by a five-ton truck. This equipment will do the common grading such as is usually done on this type of road for about one-half the cost of doing the same work with teams in the old way.

MANURE CARRIER IS USEFUL

Cost of Handling Fertilizer Is Materially Reduced—Hauled to Fields Immediately.

The cost of handling manure may be reduced by the use of a carrier and an overhead track. The usual plan is to throw the manure into the carrier; this requires but one handling. The carrier is then dumped into the spreader, which is hauled to the fields and unloaded by the horses. Manure is thus handled but once.

EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Take a Glass of Salts If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Adv.

Not Nutty.

We were riding in the country last fall when some distance down the road we saw a girl standing watching her companion in a car. We, too, watched as he backed the car up several times and drove headlong into a tree at the side of the road. Being curious, we drove up and asked the girl what the man was doing. "Why, he's shaking nuts out of the tree, of course," she replied. Of course!—Exchange.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realised. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Washington's birthday was celebrated last Wednesday evening by the L. L. C. in connection with the husbands meeting that is an annual affair in this organization, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Barney. An interesting program was rendered. Mrs. E. W. Hart directed the Orchestra and they played several selections as the result of the hearty applause from the gentlemen.

Following the program the guests were taken up stairs and were entertained by the committee until the ladies had the banquet tables arranged. They were then invited to come and partake of the good things to eat and were given a welcome by Mrs. Hart with a response by J. P. Buckingham. A two course supper was served in good style by the Misses Pauline Barney Kathryn Curie, Alice Tustison, Portia Hadsell, Lileth Yeiser and Dorothy Bowman. Other toasts were given by a number of the guests.

The home was tastefully decorated with hearts, hatchets, cupids, cherries and flags.

Final Notice

To all who took part on land of sea in military part of the World War, we the undersigned make a final appeal to see that you have not been missed in the coming World War History to be published by the State Historical Commission. The undersigned has the service records to be filled out. If there are any soldier or sailor boys who have not signed a record for this history, write or call on J. Y. W. McClellan for a record. He will mail you one to be filled out. We don't want a soldier or sailor to be missed. We want everyone. It is up to you to help make the list full from DeKalb county. If you have not already signed up, get busy, do not delay. This is our final appeal.

Letter From Pennsylvania.

South Connellsville, Pa.
Feb. 20, 1920

Dear Fred:

To me it has been a long time since I wrote you. It seems a year and I will not attempt to write much now, as it tires me too much to sit up yet, while there are many things here that are out of the ordinary with the people there, and one could write very interesting letters, yet many of them will have to be passed up for the present. Had I not been sick so long, you would have had a letter each week, and perhaps after we get home many of the different subjects will be written about while there. Just now there is nothing talked of here but gas. While I have not been able to be out and mingle with the people, and hear and see all that is going on, yet so many come to the house here where our son Beeson has the Layton stock for sale, that I get much information. Say Fred, I could name quite a number of our St. Joe people that if they were here, would grab at the opportunity to take stock, especially in the Layton three well proposition, at $50 a share. In McKeesport, shares that were bought at $50 and $100.00, are now selling on the market as high as $800 to $3,000 a share. They are the ones that got in first and the Layton without doubt, will run the same when drilling starts. Should anyone not wish to sell their stock after the drilling starts, but wish to keep it, see what a nice little monthly income they are getting from the dividends. We expect not less than $1 00 a day from each well, enough to keep ma and I all our days, and only a $50 share.

Well, Fred, I suppose you have had a pretty cold winter out there We have had the same here, and lots of snow, especially up on the mountains. I can look out of my window and see long ridges of snow on the mountains. I have looked in The News many times to find some mention of any snow out there, but failed to find any. I saw where William Curie had sold some bob sleds, so I drew the conclusion that there must be some snow out there also. I see in this week's News that Sunday was a cold day out there, with a small attendance at the Sunday Schools. Well it was a little blustering out here, but not so cold. I also note there are very many sick out there. The same here and many deaths. Whole families being down at once.

Well, Fred, as this is my first for a long time, and a rather garbled affair at that, I will stop for this time, with kindest regards to all.

W. E. Peterson.

To Increase Rates.

Spencerville, Indiana.
January 29, 1920.

Public Service Commission of Indiana, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Gentlemen:—

The Spencerville Telephone Co., operating in DeKalb County, State of Indiana, do hereby ask permission to increase its rates, to meet the approval of the Public Service Commission, and to provide revenue sufficient to keep said plant in good condition, provide for depreciation, to pay the allowed per cent on valuation and to increase operators wages to a fair scale. The Spencerville Telephone Company petitions The Public Service Commission of Indiana for authority to increase the rates in effect from October 15, 1915 to January 1, 1920 of $1.00 per month per station, to $1.40 per month per station, with a discount of 15 cents per month per station, if each quarter be paid on or before the 15th. of each month succeeding each quarter. These increase rates to take effect April 1, 1920.

Condition of Plant January 1, 1920

Service good, about half full metallic and half grounded service, most lines very old and rusted, need new soon, pole lines in fairly good condition probably fifteen years old.

Valuation of plant $7,000 00
Number of stations 210.
Gross income for 1919, $2629.08.
Gross operating expenses for 1919 $2,516.52.
Not allowing anything for depreciation.

Signed,
Spencerville Telephone Co.

Appreciation.

Joe Bice desires through this paper to express his most sincere thanks to the neighbors and friends for their liberal donation in the way of equipping four beds for his family and for the most generous contribution of eatables. We have come to know and more fully appreciate what friends really mean since our disaster in the burning of our household goods. We are unable to repay those who have given us and can only wish that you may not be visited by a calamity of this character. We thank you all from the depth of hearts.

Joe Bice and family.

If the farmers were to go on a strike and refuse to raise any more food than they themselves need they would be bitterly condemned. Yet they would be as fully justified as are the members of certain other essential industries who engage in such activities. Think it over, for during the coming season we're going to witness something closely akin to a farmers' strike. We're going to see farmers reducing their production very greatly—all the way from twenty-five to fifty per cent. They will be doing this, not because they wish to control production, but for the reason that their help has been taken away from them by the city which offers short hours and higher pay. If the nation goes hungry next winter don't blame the farmer.

Obituary

Samantha Ann Bets-Horn, the tenth child of Samuel and Rebecca Bets, was born October 6, 1868, in Springfield Township, Allen County, Indiana, and departed this life February 21, 1920 at the age of 51 years, 4 months and 15 days.

She was united in marriage to George A. Horn, November 30, 1892. To them was born one daughter Mary V. McNabb of A burn and two sons Jennings B. Horn of Spencerville and Walter F. Horn.

Mastoiditis was the ultimate cause of her death, being preceded by various attacks of pneumonia and tonsilitis. The last three weeks of her illness her suffering was intense.

She leaves a husband, two sons, one daughter, and two grandsons Virgil McNabb and Richard J. Horn, two sisters, Sarah D. Reichelderfer of Payne, Ohio, Nettie M. Helf of Edgerton, Ohio and five brothers, Joel W. Bets of Spencerville, J. Franklin Bets Fort Wayne, Samuel W. Bets of Spencerville, George V. Bets of Grabill and John T. Bets of St. Joe, to mourn her departure. Three sisters Mrs. Alice Boger, Mrs. Elizabeth Bosserman and Mary Katherine Bets, an infant and Jonas Bets preceded her in death.

The deceased was well known having a host of friends and always known as the one who was ever ready to help in time of need Her generous hosp tality will be missed by many relatives, friends and neighbors.

The funeral services were conducted at the home by the Rev. A. K. Mumma and burial in White City Cemetery.

Mrs. Adeline Widney, mother of Adolphus Widney, living north of St. Joe, fell out of bed Saturday afternoon while Adolphus was at St. Joe after medicine for her, and when he returned home he learned what had happened and on Sunday morning Dr. Shook was called and discovered that she had broken her hip. Mrs. Widney is 84 years old and has been poorly all winter.

Late Monday afternoon she was taken to the Sauder hospital, Auburn and died Tuesday. Remains were cared for by Elsa Kinsey and taken to the Carpenter home. Funeral Thursday afternoon from house

A meeting of the high school alumni was held Monday evening at the home of Lena Meek and the following officers were elected: President, Harry Kinsey; vice president, Gladys Kain; secretary, Lena Meek; treasurer, Ray Herrick. They will meet in two weeks at the home of Merritt Sechler to make arrangements for the coming commencement season.

Amos Gamble and family were given two surprises last week. On Tuesday evening about fifty-two young people spent the evening with them and on Friday evening the neighbors came in and brought their suppers with them. The evening was spent in a social way. We are losing some mighty fine folks and the community in which they are moving is fortunate in their coming.

Don Hindman will move to St. Joe and occupy the Mrs. Thomas Rickett residence in the west end of town. Wm. Keeler has purchased the Hindman farm.

H. M. Widney made a business trip to Davenport, Iowa, the first of the week and on Wednesday he was in attendance at the National Federation of Farmers meeting in session at Chicago. Mr Widney represented Indiana on the program

A baptismal service was held Monday night, March 1st., at the St. Joe Christian Church, when three young people were buried with their Lord in baptism. Five have united with the church in the last two weeks.

Mrs. Alice Copp returned to Albion Monday on account of the illness of her daughter, Mrs. Dale Widney. She had expected to bring her to St. Joe and care for her but she became worse and is not in a condition to be brought home.

The J. Y. Davis property consisting of twenty acres, laying just outside the corporate limits of St. Joe, was sold last week to Harvey Kimes, sr., of east of Spencerville, at a fancy price, $5,500 being the purchase. This is an ideal home for old folks with the best of building and land sufficient to occupy one's spare time.

Alex Kinmont, a former resident of Hicksville well known here, died at the home of his son, B F. Kinmont at Albion, Mich., on Feb. 19. He was 93 years old and for some years he made his home in Auburn, his wife dying in Auburn in 1917. Mr. Kinmont was an early pioneer of Hicksville, Ohio. He served as a commissioned officer of the 44th. Indiana volunteer infantry during the Civil war.

In a letter received here by friends from Mrs. Gathel Connelly at Akron, Ohio, she told of the death of her eldest sister, Eunice Leonard, which occurred at the home of her parents there of diphtheria on Feb 7th. She was their eldest child and leaves besides her parents eight brothers and sisters. The letter also stated that in January Mrs. Leonard had submitted to an operation for the removal of three tumors. The family are well known here having been former residents of this place.

Your last chance to hear Russell H. Conwell in his celebrated lecture "Acres of Diamonds" will be Friday evening, March 5 at Huber Opera House, Hicksville. Mr. Conwell is now nearly eighty-one years old and this is positively his final tour on the platform. Seats may be reserved by mail or phone on March 4 or 5th. Tickets will be held until 8 o'clock. Admission 75c. No tax. Address or phone Murphey's Jewelry Store for tickets.

An interesting meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ella Patterson. After the program was given a business session was held at which time Mrs. Ota George, president tendered her resignation because she expected to move away. Mrs. Ada Bassett, vice president was appointed to fill her place and Mrs. Lora Leighty was elected vice president. Mrs. Hazel Herrick also resigned as secretary and Mrs. Lillian Buckingham was appointed in her place. Mrs. Bessie Henley will be hostess for the March meeting.

Well Known Women

Cleveland, Ohio.—"I can highly recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to women of middle age. I was in a miserable condition a year or so before I reached the climacteric. My bladder gave me so much distress, and I also suffered with inflammation and displacement. I don't believe any woman could be more uncomfortable than I was when I started to take the 'Favorite Prescription.' My improvement was so slow at first that I became impatient and wrote to the Invalids' Hotel for advice, which was given me freely, and very kindly. By following this advice I was eventually restored to a healthy condition. I am now safely through this trying time and have 'Favorite Prescription' to thank for my present good health, so do not think that I am making any mistake in advising other women who are distressed at this time to give Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription a trial."—Mrs. J. W. Kesler, 2344 E. 76th St.

Conneaut, Ohio.—"In my young womanhood I used to suffer severely at certain times until I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine not only cured me of this condition, but it laid the foundation for a healthy womanhood. I highly recommend the 'Prescription' to all young girls who suffer with inward trouble or periodical pains, and I would never hesitate in giving 'Favorite Prescription' to my own daughters if they were in need of such medicine."—Mrs. Sarah Hilderbrand, 339 Harbor St.

Ashtabula, Ohio.—"I have heard my daughters praise Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription so highly that I do not hesitate to recommend it to other women."—Mrs. Carrie Whelpley, 607 Lake St.

Bad Sickness Caused by Acid-Stomach

If people only realized the health-destroying power of an acid-stomach—of the many kinds of sickness and misery it causes—of the lives it literally wrecks—they would guard against it as carefully as they do against a deadly plague. You know in an instant the first symptoms of acid-stomach—pains of indigestion; distressing, painful bloat; sour, gassy stomach; belching; food repeating; heartburn, etc. Whenever your stomach feels this way you should lose no time in putting it to rights. If you don't, serious consequences are almost sure to follow, such as intestinal fermentation, auto-intoxication, impairment of the entire nervous system, headache, biliousness, cirrhosis of the liver; sometimes even catarrh of the stomach and intestinal ulcers and cancer.

If you are not feeling right, see if it isn't acid-stomach that is the cause of your ill health. Take EATONIC, the wonderful modern stomach remedy. EATONIC Tablets quickly and surely relieve the pain, bloat, belching, and heartburn that indicate acid-stomach. Make the stomach strong, clean and sweet. By keeping the stomach in healthy condition so that you can get full strength from your food, your general health steadily improves. Results are marvelously quick. Just try EATONIC and you will be as enthusiastic as the thousands who have used it and who say they never dreamed anything could bring such marvelous relief.

So get a big 50-cent box of EATONIC from your druggist today. If not satisfactory return it and he will refund your money

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

DANGER IN GENERAL UNREST

Practically Universal Feeling of Discontent Will Grow Unless the Causes Which Gave It Birth Are Removed.

Article VII.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

A specter haunts Europe. It is the ghost of unrest. When I started out to interview unrest in Europe I did not give my ear to the idle theorist who always knows all about everything, but never from direct experience with it, nor did I go to the agitator who preaches unrest in red words. Neither did I seek out the type of fanatical labor leader, who is eager for trouble, who is trying to mobilize unrest and marshal it under the banner of Revolution. I passed by the place-hunting, time-serving politician. I was not interested in platitudes and promises.

I sought knowledge of unrest from those who knew it from contact with it, those who were part and parcel of it. I went to the man in the street, the average man. I talked with the sweaty, dirty coal miner at the mouth of the shaft. He had just come from his day in the darkness deep in the ground. I visited the man who works in the mills. I listened to the rough speech of the teamster. I went to factories and talked with men between the two whistles which mark the time of the noon meal. They munched at black bread, ate cheese or sausage, gulped tea, coffee or cheap, diluted red wine. I spent time with the idle, the idle by choice as well as those without work through no fault of their own. Only yesterday many, yes, most of these men were in khaki; now, back on the job in overalls, they were thinking. Their speech was troubled. Discontent looked out from their eyes. I could feel it. They talked it, but never as unrest, always protest.

Unrest Must Be Quieted.

Their state of mind is the problem. Unrest is epidemic; it is militant. There is little of pacifism in it. It is real, it is not without cause. To get close to the cause of this disease which threatens revolution, one must know and understand what is going on in the minds of the men we are looking to and depending upon to do the world's work. It doesn't take a prophet to understand that if heed is not given to the things irritating them and a remedy is not found for the irritation, serious trouble will follow. While war is hell, it has at least the restraint of discipline. A revolution growing out of unrest would mean mob madness, terrorism, fanatical, brutal, cruel and merciless. Once started, it would spread like wildfire. The world would be swept from its senses. The fire would run its course until stopped because there was nothing left to burn. Who dares picture the state in which it would leave the world? In this day, when the nerves of the world are on edge, when cold and hunger irritate, one shudders when he thinks of the fate of civilization if unrest is not checked before it explodes in passion and wrath.

Unrest existed before the war. It was an acorn then, it is an oak now. Before the war men were complaining, and justly complaining, about their lot. The difference now is that four years in the trenches have caused them to stop complaining and act. Soldiering taught them much. They learned of the greatness of force.

Back of their present tendency to act is the grown grievance and the war lesson. Before the war they complained; today they demand. It is interesting to examine unrest in the complaint stage, as these men knew it before 1914.

These plain, ordinary average men have always been intensely human. They loved their wives and children, they lived for their homes, they felt keenly their responsibility for the happiness of their loved ones. They have but one thing to give. Before the war they gave it unsparingly—it was their labor. Their one source of income was the pay envelope. With their wages they had to buy shoes, clothes, food, and provide shelter for the lives they brought into the world, and for the women they had chosen to be the mothers of those children.

"Home" Before All.

"Home, Sweet Home" is the international anthem. It is the heart song of the average man. The club plays no part in his life. From his home he goes to work, and from work he goes home. Shanties and tenements are not homes. These men have always protested against the ugly shacks in which they were compelled to house their loved ones. They bit their lips in jobless days when their children went to bed hungry. Resentment grew in their hearts when they saw how poorly dressed their wives and children were. They muttered curses when their children were forced to go to work. They wanted to give their children a better education than they had had, a better chance in life, and they laughed at laws prohibiting child labor, while conditions compelled children to work or starve. As these men grew older their families grew in size and demand, while their ability to earn decreased. The tragedy registered in their pay envelopes. They were being ground between growing needs and diminishing wages. The grinding not only hurt their bodies, it furrowed their brain.

They lived in dread of poverty. It had been their nurse, they feared it would be their pallbearer. Poverty had taken its revenge upon them. They were resolving that if they could help it it would not put its lash upon their children. They knew poverty intimately. It wasn't a word, a name, it was a living hateful, cruel companion. It was the devil that recruited the Marys of Scarlet Hall, the Magdalens of the slums, and always the army was mobilized from the shantles of the poor. Children who had been robbed of their youth, who had never owned a flower, poorly fed and miserably clad, dragged out of bed by alarm clocks, sounding the call to toil, when they should have been answering the school bell, children physically unfit for the breadwinner's struggle, children without the moral endurance necessary for the fight, were driven into No Woman's land, the rotten scum under the world.

Light in Education.

Before the war men were brooding on these things, papers, books, magazines mirroring life, pictured these horrors. They were the subject of public discussion and debate. Men returning from a hard day's work talked these things over with their wives after the children had gone to bed, and many a man left his supper table to peek through the half-closed door into the room where his kiddies were sleeping, tiptoeing back, only to look into the eyes of a mother, and see reflected there the fears he felt.

The invention of the typesetting machine, the cheap manufacture of paper, the growth of public school systems, and public libraries, brought light to the dark minds of the workmen. In that light they saw more clearly their needs and more completely realized their rights. It is the natural ambition of man to climb. He wants to get on and up. Ignorance had kept him from climbing. Ignorance is darkness. Men stumble when they try to go forward in the dark. Education is the light in the road. They sought to make haste, to make up for the lost time. Education taught them to want things for themselves and their families that their fathers and mothers never thought of wanting. The homes which satisfied their parents depressed and irritated them. The bathtub and tooth brush are acquired habits. The desire to straighten the back that has been bent in toil too long, is put there by education.

One thing stood in the way—it obstructed the path upward to decent living. They saw the barrier clearly and distinctly—poverty. They saw this impassable obstacle was made out of poor wages. They saw more. They saw that poor wages built the poorhouses and filled them, organized the bread lines, introduced the soup house. Out of their thoughts, in their experience, they carved a truth, "As long as some people have more than they can possibly use, while others through no fault of their own have less than they absolutely need, something is wrong," and when the call to arms came these thoughts were living in the mass mind of the world. Many not concerned with the problem of the other seven-eighths, knowing nothing of what was happening in the minds of the men and women of toil, and caring less, they did not know that these men were uniting and planning to tear down the wall of poverty.

Contradiction in Berlin.

Fats, oils, clothes, milk for babies and other necessities are scarce in Berlin, and so high-priced that the poorer people can hardly afford them at all; yet the shop windows along Unter den Linden are full of beautiful goods.

Housing conditions pinch despite the fact that Berlin and other cities have less population than before the war.

Every candy store window in Berlin has a crowd before it all day long. Adults, as well as children, stand and stare at the displays of sweets.

Movies—most of them immoral—are always crowded. Twelve new moving picture houses are to be erected. The most popular firms are those "on the ragged edge."

Theaters are crowded, and so is the opera, as a rule.

"Old Timers" on Rhine Again.

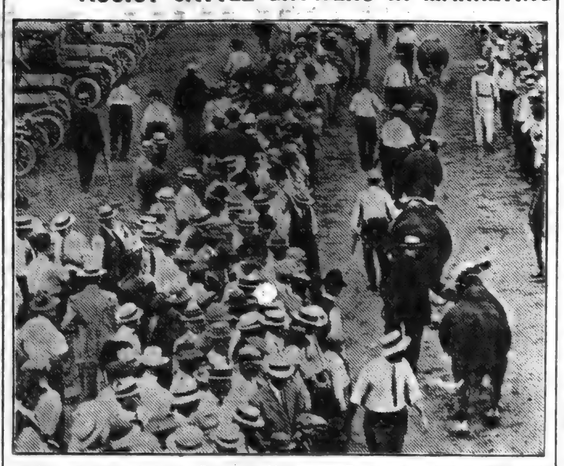
Quite a number of regular "old timers" who marched to the Rhine with the American army of occupation in December, 1918, and who have been to the United States and discharged and enlisted again, go to make up the Fifth and Fiftieth infantry regiments which arrived recently in the vicinity of Coblenz to await possible dispatch in the near future to Upper Silesia to supervise the plebiscite.

Some of them saw ten and twelve months' service in France and Belgium before the armistice.

Russ Losses 35,000,000.

The Polish professor, A. A. Ossendofsky, chief of the intelligence department of the all-Russian government, estimates that the world war, bolshevism, Civil war, starvation and disease has cost Russia a total of 35,000 lives. He places the cost of bolshevism at 12,280,000 lives. Professor Ossendofsky says that formerly the Russian population increased at the rate of four persons a minute. Today it is decreasing at the rate of twelve to thirteen a minute.

FEDERAL, STATE AND COUNTY AGENCIES ASSIST CATTLE GROWERS IN MARKETING



Selling Surplus Animals From a Herd of Purebreds Under Favorable Circumstances—Listing Purebred Stock With County Agents Puts the Owner in Touch With Many Buyers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Yes, raising of purebreds is all right for the fellow who has lots of them, but how are the chaps who have only a few animals to sell going to get rid of them? The big fellows have reputations, and know the big buyers personally, but "farmers like me who have a small surplus of purebreds for sale are often up against it."

This is substantially what William Brown told his county agent one afternoon while discussing difficulties he experienced in getting a fair price for a few of his fine Herefords. Fortunately the county agent was able to tell him of a marketing service designed to make the selling of purebred animals easier for the large and small breeders alike. The agent showed Brown that the United States department of agriculture, in co-operation with the state agricultural colleges, county agents, and local co-operative associations, has undertaken the task of introducing breeders—buyers and sellers—to each other. And the introductions are not confined to stockmen in the same county or state.

Listing Purebreds in Counties.

Already in a number of counties the location, age, number and breed of purebreds is tabulated and placed on file in the office of the county agent. In some cases monthly reports are prepared, showing the number of animals for sale and these are published by the state agents in marketing. An essential to the plan is the co-operation of breeders within the county. Usually the farm bureau or county agent's office is the headquarters for the local co-operative association and the county agent acts as its secretary. Thus a working unit is formed which can be readily fitted into the state and national system of listing all purebred animals. Many a farmer living in a community where such information has not been collected is unaware of persons within a comparatively short radius of his farm who are engaged in raising purebred stock.

The state field agents of the bureau of markets, co-operating with the animal husbandman of the state college, are a second important factor in the general plan. They aim to assist buyers either inside or outside the state. They also aid county agents in finding animals for club members and arrange trips for out-of-town buyers, that they may examine a large number of animals at the least expense. The benefit of this system is enjoyed by breeders, large and small, and will increase as a larger number of county and community organizations ally themselves with it.

A Near-By Market Overlooked.

A Florida stockman desiring to purchase some Herefords, after making what he considered an adequate inquiry indicated his desire to buy a carload of these cattle in central Montana, 2,300 miles away! Later he found from information supplied by the bureau of markets he could secure cattle sired by an international grand champion bull within 150 miles of his home. Purchase of animals from the latter herd would have meant not only a great saving in freight, but acquiring cattle more acclimated to the South. Furthermore, the risk involved in transportation would have been considerably less.

With the aid of the data regarding purebreds—and it is being added to continually—the bureau of markets is able to give valuable assistance to prospective foreign, as well as domestic buyers, of purebred animals. This branch of the United States department of agriculture recently demonstrated the value of its information by aiding a group of South Americans in locating herds in various parts of the country, and also in arranging for the exportation of the cattle purchased. Not the least valuable feature of their assistance was due to the fact that the bureau representatives understood the methods of South American marketing as well as those of this country.

More Associations Should Help.

While in many counties co-operative breeders' associations are already actively sharing in compiling data regarding the location of purebred animals, much remains to be done. County live stock associations are urged to keep definite, up-to-date information on file and to inform the state field agents in marketing and, through them, the Washington office of the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, of this fact. In this way they will render a much-needed service to their members, to the live stock industry as a whole, and to foreign buyers who come to this country for purebreds to improve their herds.

ESSENTIALS LISTED FOR STOCK RAISERS

Means Outlined for Bringing Down High Cost of Meat.

Specialists of United States Department of Agriculture Give Some of Most Essential Items in Raising Cattle.

General improvement in the type and quality of beef animals the country over is one of the means urged by the United States department of agriculture for bringing down the high cost of meat to the consumer and, at the same time, increasing the profit of the producer. Some of the most essential items in growing beef on the farm, specialists of the department say, are:

Plenty of pasture and feed.

The right kind of cows—those that will produce good calves regularly.

A good, purebred registered bull—one that will sire good calves persistently.

A large calf crop. This means that all cows shall drop calves, and that the calves shall be properly cared for at birth.

Proper care of the breeding herd and the calves.

Selection of good heifer calves to replace old or inferior cows.

Prevention of disease among the breeding herd and the younger stock.

Shelter sufficient to protect the cattle from both severe cold and extremely hot weather.

A practical knowledge of fattening cattle for market.

Marketing to advantage.

There is a Farmers' Bulletin, No. 1073, on growing beef, on the farm that may be had free on application to the division of publications, United States department of agriculture.

WEANING FALL-BORN CALVES

Young Animals Should Be Taken From the Mothers After Being Placed on Pasture in Spring.

Fall-born calves should be weaned after they have been placed on pasture in the spring, and then a gradually increasing allowance of grain should be given them, with hay and silage added later in the summer, according to the United States department of agriculture. For baby beef they should go into dry lot for finishing at the end of the pasture season, and be ready to market in December or January.

CROWS ARE SERIOUS MENACE

Green, Poisoned Almonds Found to Be Satisfactory Bait for Extermination of Birds.

In Klickitat county, Wash., where crows have been a serious menace to the almond crop, green almonds poisoned with strychnine were found to be a most satisfactory bait in exterminating the birds, by a representative of the biological survey in that section.

FRECKLES

MARCH

SUFFERED TEN YEARS FROM INDIGESTION

Trouble Gone, Appetite Strong, and Eats Anything Without Distress.

"I had a case of catarrh and indigestion, of ten years' standing. I had been treated by the best medical men in Michigan. When I commenced taking Milks Emulsion, I was in bed. I improved so fast that I kept the neighbors wondering. I am now up and working every day. My cough is gone. My appetite is great, and I can eat anything without hurting me." —H. D. Lovelee, Rockford, Mich.

Indigestion is seldom cured by "helping" the stomach digest food. Digestives, like physic pills, usually make slaves of the stomach and bowels.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength, Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whom sickness has weakened, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day. It produces remarkable results in colds, coughs and bronchial asthma.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream. Truly wonderful for weak, sickly children.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions and if not satisfied with the results, your money will be promptly refunded. Price 50c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Use American Can Machines.

An American government official recently visited the can-making plant of a large Japanese cannery, and found that most of the machines were of American make. They were operated by men who received a daily wage of about 80 cents. Women and girls also are employed in some of the branches of the industry and receive approximately 28 cents a day. The boxes in which the cans are packed are 20 inches long and 14 inches in height, and cost 30 cents each. The manager of this factory stated that the American tin plate which they are using is much superior to any other for this purpose.—New York Times.

And she was expecting him! She had had an "impression" that he would come to her as soon as his interview with me was over, and she was not taken unawares.

The wild-eyed Swedish maid admitted him, showing him into the reception room and asking him to wait, as her mistress was "giving a reading." A moment later Mrs. Delario came in coolly and asked to be excused—she had a sitter and could not possibly see monsieur this evening. Of course there was no sitter in the seance room, but a muff and a boa on the chair beside him conveyed the impression that there was a caller.

Monsieur played his surprise card instantly. Saying he would detain her but a moment he sprung it on her that I had told him she had the diamonds and he had come to apologize for the "unfortunate mistake" that had been made, and to arrange to get the stones "as soon as convenient."

It was a bold move; but Billy and I had taught him one thing—everything now depended on diplomacy, and if she denied having the stones he could do nothing.

It was also a bold lie—telling her I had said she had told me; but he failed to trip her even there; she says she "knew before the words were out of his mouth that it was a lie—that 'lie' appeared in large white letters over his head."

"You must excuse me this evening—I have a sitter in the next room," she said quietly, and showed him she would not talk.

"But, madame, it is necessary sat we make some arrangement—"

"But, monsieur," she returned, "I cannot discuss the matter with you now."

"If you will so kindly permit me to wait—" he began, using all his diplomacy—and feeling he needed it, I imagine!

She made a move on her own account—drawing herself up, she told him, "After the way you treated me last Monday—the accusations you brought against me of robbing your daughter—I positively will not talk with you for a single minute, unless you bring her with you."

He had not expected this demand, but he met it with a smile.

"It is well!" he cried, determined to humor her to the last degree. "I return to se hotel and bring my daughter back wis me immediately. We will zen await your convenience for an interview."

"I shall not be through here for an hour."

"Certainly, madame—at your convenience."

She saw him jump into a waiting automobile and dash away in the direction of his hotel. It was from there he dispatched the notes to Claire and me. Hardly was he out of sight before she had on her wraps and whisked out of the house and up to me with the diamonds. Not to let the elevator boy see her she had walked up and flown on the opposite side of the street until she saw someone enter and go in the car; then she followed and crept softly to the top, where she remembered I had my flat. She had listened outside the door and had recognized both my voice and Claire's and hid herself on the dark stairway until she heard Claire and Billy leaving. With that she had slipped in, but had not dared to waste a minute in explanations; and she was back again in her own house and her Swedish maid didn't even know that her mistress had been out.

He Had Come to Apologize.

A crafty plan on monsieur's part! He had, by getting Billy to escort Claire back, bottled up our activities as completely as if he had us gagged and handcuffed! And it all fell down because Claire fainted and went into hysterics when she reached the hotel! He did not see Mrs. Delario that night.

Neither did he see me—but then—he didn't intend to! I waited for the mysterious visit until half past ten, every minute feeling it more unwise of me to see him. At that hour, using its lateness as my excuse, I locked up, determined I'd not speak to him at all until I had had a chance to talk things over with Billy. I went to bed but not to sleep. I knew something unforeseen had happened—something Mrs. Delario must know or "sense," or she wouldn't have brought back the diamonds after the positive way I'd refused them in the morning.

I kept telling myself, "Oh, well—I'll know in the morning and I'll find some way to meet it when it comes. Things can't be any worse," and thus I fell asleep without an inkling of the muddle I'd be in before the sun set on another day.

I had gone to bed with quite a bit of a grouch on Mrs. Delario—I think anybody would have felt the same in my place. I was perfectly willing that she should keep her faith in Tibetan masters or mahatmas along with the emperor's diamonds, and I stood prepared to help her do both; but if I were willing to make such concessions to her it did seem as if she oughtn't to go throwing off her responsibilities and her diamonds on me all the time! She didn't seem to feel she owed me any consideration. Very complimentary, of course, that I was the only person in the world she dared to trust; but I've found from experience there isn't much in that sort of compliment—for the recipient. And she hadn't even troubled herself to explain why she'd brought them back—to warn me of what threatened! That was what rankled more than anything.

I waked up grouchier than ever—if she'd been there I'd have told her what I thought about her! How was I to hide her diamonds now? I had exhausted all my ingenuity with the hyacinths, so what between racking my brains and nursing my grouch, I decided I wouldn't hide them at all, and what I did was to turn them bottom side up under the cotton and fill the rest of the box with pens and drop it careleesly on the tray where it had been. And when I'd done that I was, to all intents and purposes, back in the same hole again!—if I went out and left them in the house they might be stolen; if I took them out with me I might be robbed.

From being grouchy I got mad at her; and from being mad it was but a step to the idea that I was fate's instrument to save the nation, and by the time I'd finished breakfast I had decided to go to Washington immediately and lay the matter before the president and let him attend to Germany.

I had just settled the laudable intention with myself when Billy breezed in. He was rosy; he was cordial—oh, very! I'm free to say I've never seen Billy quite so cordial since the day I rescued him from maternal spanks and curled his hair and pressed his Fauntleroy suit—the day the boys threw him in the swimming hole. But his young face was also clouded with anxiety and he was puzzled still at the stand I'd taken the night before—that Mrs. Delario was to keep the diamonds—and that I'd had no chance to explain to him.

He said "Hello" four times and pumped my hand off.

"You're still alive, I see," he observed with a sweet smile.

Without waiting to hear what I had to say he threw his hat on the table and rattled off, "Well, I got her back to the hotel all right—she was as—as gay as anything all the way down. Her father was standing in the door looking for us—I guess he was scared stiff that she hadn't come—and the minute she saw him she threw herself in his arms and went into hysterics!"

Billy's face puckered up with his anxiety and his sympathy as I exclaimed, "Poor child!"

"I couldn't do anything more so I—evaporated," he continued. "Didn't even try to say goodby to her. Do you think she'll think that was queer of me?—go off without saying goodby?" He was anxious on this point.

"No. She's enough the lady to regard it as great delicacy on your part."

"I hope she will," he said fervently. "But do you think the shock—last night and all—was too much for her? Say—I'm worried—" he looked at me in an appealing way.

I answered, amused, "I suppose that means you want me to go right down to the hotel with you and find out all about her. I suppose a maiden aunt has nothing to do but go racing off with jelly and make one big dramatic fuss—just as if fainting heroines weren't the most ordinary occurrences known to fiction."

"Ordinary!" gasped Billy. "A faint like that ordinary? I never saw anything like it—and I've seen a good deal—of life."

He jumped up and took a turn about the room. He was annoyed. I was amused—so much amused that I had forgotten my grouch on Mrs. Delario and that I had the diamonds and meant to take them to the president.

"Well—are you going down to see how she is?" demanded Billy, wheeling and planking himself in front of me.

"Dear auntie—sweet auntie," I jibed. "Please put on your camel's hair shawl and bunnit and haste away to Beauty-in-Distress that I may instantly know how she bore up under the strain of meeting the hero and how she liked his pink, round cheeks."

Billy gave me a vicious grunt and strode across the room—he wanted to say something ugly to me but he didn't dare, seeing how I held his fate in my hands.

"Oh, Billy!" I cried, suddenly remembering the latest news, "she brought back the diamonds last night!"

"Claire came back? Good heavens!" he sank into the chair.

"Claire? Of course not. Mrs. Delario." And I told him how she'd whipped in and out like a spook while he and Claire were going down in the elevator. Then for the first time I showed him the diamonds.

"Love and pumpkins!" he ejaculated, overcome by the sight. "Well, if this doesn't beat the 'Arabian Nights!' Are they real—real? Not paste? Why, if they're real they're worth about a million dollars!"

"And haven't I been telling you that all along?" I asked testily. Billy's words and tone gave it pretty well away that he hadn't believed it all along, no matter what I'd said and he'd pretended.

"Y-yes, I think you have," he admitted, rather stammeringly. "But of course—you realise that a million dollars is a—er—a pretty big order for a chap in New York to eat at a sitting." He spread them out on his hand, muttering to himself. Finally he brought out: "And you've got these—here!—all alone in the flat with you! Well, save my shoestrings! I don't wonder your nerves are on edge!"

I let this pass about my nerves and gave him the story she'd told me Sunday morning—about the mahatma sending her these diamonds through the air and putting them in her slipper; and how she claimed them, absolutely, religiously, as hers.

"The woman's crazy," was the curt way he disposed of her, and added, to mitigate this harsh judgment, "Or else she's a thief."

"She's neither one thing nor the other," I defended sharply. "She's merely deluded—the same as tens of thousands of other people have been deluded about things they believed in."

"Crazy," he repeated with conviction.

I could only shrug—all I've ever been able to do; that was her incorrigible belief! I wasted no more time on it then, for our question was what to do next, and I went on to tell him how I'd decided to take his advice and lay the matter before the president.

To my astonishment, instead of the warm commendation I'd expected from Billy at taking the advice he'd urged on both my duty and my common sense not forty-eight hours before—and remember, I'd barely restrained him from rushing off on the midnight train—he popped out of his chair and began excitedly pacing the floor. His first words were, "Why, you can't do that!"

"Oh, I see all the risks I'm running of getting there alive."

"Risks?" he echoed, as if he hadn't given them a thought. "But how much are you going to tell about this affair?"

"Everything, of course—I mean everything I know. The government will have to undertake to find out the rest."

He plunked himself in front of me and demanded, "You aren't going to let Miss de Ravenol get dragged into a mess like this, are you?"

I didn't answer immediately, and he ramped on, "I ask you—are you going to do it? Are you going to be party to such a—such an outrage?"

"If I don't put the case to the president what am I to do? Here I am saddled with the diamonds—"

"Well, just keep them yourself," he bluntly offered, as his solution of the difficulty. "Keep them—put them in the safe deposit—and let things take their course."

For a minute I was really angry, and rapped out, "If I thought you were serious, Billy, I'd ask you to leave the house. Your suggestion is that I frankly become a thief, and your solution is not only criminal but—idiotic. What would it accomplish? —with so many people knowing?"

"Well—say—promise me one thing," he pleaded. "You'll wait—you won't try to see the president today—you won't rush off without telling me you're going."

I was willing to grant this and suggested that he go down to the hotel at once and see how Claire was.

"You'll not come?" he asked, taking his hat, and I detected very mixed feelings in his question: there was a good chance he might not see her at all unless I went with him.

"How can I go off and leave these things alone in the house?" I pointed to the blue box.

At that moment the front bell rang and I found George glued to the button to tell me, "Why, thes a gen'le-m'n downstairs say he like to see you, but he don't give no name, an' I tell him I can't say if you's home er out, but I'll go up an' see."

He Plunked Himself in Front of Me.

"Has he ever been here before?"

These are the times when I appreciate George's virtues!

"No'm—he ain't never called here before—fer you ner nobody. He tried to crowd into the car an' come along up with me, an' I tell him if he don't stay where he is till I find out is you home he don't find out at all," and George grinned as if he saw a quarter dangling over my left shoulder.

"That's right, George," I was warmly encouraging. "Tell him I'm not at home. That's positive—don't come up again to see if maybe I've come home," and while I gave all these instructions Billy came ramping along the hall. "Hello, George—wait—I'm going down," and with a quick, "See you later," he was out of sight.

I don't know what instinct prompted me to it, but after I'd closed the door and gone back to my study I retraced my steps and put on the chain-bolt.

CHAPTER XVI.

A New Visitor.

A pretty kettle of fish! I had made up my mind to lay the case before the president, but then—as Billy said—ruin a young girl's life! If I told anything I'd have to tell all.

George rang. He was apologetic, but had the offish air of having received compensation for my scolding.

"Why, that gen'lem'n downstairs, he says—soon as I tell him you ain't home—he says ain't you in, or is you out—"

"I told you positively that I was not at home."

"Well, I tole him that—that's why he ask me is you not at home or is you out? An' he says fer me to go up again with this here—" and he thrust a sealed envelope into my hand through the crack of the door, which was still on the chain-bolt.

Mechanically—as people will do those things without thinking of the possible consequences—I tore open the flap and read:

"Mademoiselle de Ravenol has disappeared."

That was all—no signature or anything—and the paper looked like a leaf torn from a notebook and hastily scribbled in pencil.

I made an exclamation and was in the very act of telling George to bring the man up at once, when the queerest feeling came over me—intuition, warning, whatever you choose to name it—a feeling of danger, and that this was what the detectives call a plant for me. It was George who recalled me to my senses by asking, "Shall I fetch him up?"

"No—certainly not. You've already told him I'm not at home."

"But he says—if you's out I'm to fetch back the letter to him, an' when I don't fetch it back he asks me, ain't you in, an' if you ain't in where's the letter?"

True—and aptly argued!

"Why didn't you tell me that in the first place?" I demanded, wondering at my own stupidity that I hadn't seen it myself in the first place.

"I ain't think of it," said George sullenly.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Adv.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! How good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.—Adv.

No woman has entered the convent of St. Catherine, on Mt. Sinai, for more than 1,400 years.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ½ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

Every man is valued in this world, as he shows by his conduct that he wishes to be valued.—Le Bruyere.

OUCH! MY BACK! RUB LUMBAGO PAIN AWAY

Rub Backache Away With Small Trial Bottle of Old "St. Jacobs Oil."

When your back is sore and lame or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right on your aching back, and by the time you count fifty, the soreness and lameness is gone.

Don't stay crippled! This soothing, penetrating oil needs to be used only once. It takes the pain right out and ends the misery. It is magical, yet absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

Nothing else stops lumbago, sciatica, backache or rheumatism so promptly. It never disappoints!—Adv.

Use a penny for rubbing mud from clothing. It provides an edge that is not too sharp.

The program will begin at 9:30 a. m. with the adult class meeting at the Christian Church, the children at the M. P. Church and the young people at the Lutheran Church. Each of the three morning sessions will be in charge of the County and Township department officers. Following the session of the adults Dr. W. H. Guyer, President of the Findlay College, will address the meeting and following this talk the schools assembled at the other churches will come in and prepare for the dinner to be served in the basement. The complete program will appear next issue, giving every detail of the day. Let everyone in the township prepare to go and stay for the entire day.

Change of Ownership

March 1st., the change in the ownership of the Steward & Beams garage at Spencerville was made and F. W. Silberg now owns it. The new building erected by Mr. Silberg does not afford sufficient room for his growing business. The new addition will be used exclusively for the Tractor department. With his stock of tractors and besides the line of supplies and parts needed to be carried in order to meet the demands of his customers, this room will be well filled. Frank is hustling every department of his business and if it continues to grow he will need another building.

LOW CORN KING

to have a good Manure Spreader, and nobody can afford to be without one. This year of all years you should own a spreader. The high price of grain makes farm manure far more valuable than ever. Take care of every bit of it. Haul it out daily if you can and put it on the fields where it belongs. Don't let it lie around the barnyard and thus leach away the plant food it contains. "Save and Have". Save the manure, save your time, your labor, and your horses—and have the increased crops and profits you hope for. Own a Low Corn King manure spreader.

Wire Fencing.

Here is a bit of advise and take it for what it is worth to you: We have had notice that all the wire mills have shut down and if you expect to build fence this spring—now is your opportunity. We have some on hands, but it will not last long either. You can get yours now if you think you will need some.

SILUP TIME.

You will open that camp this year, to be sure. Sugar is going up and will continue to do so. Open that camp and save buying sugar. We have Sap Pails—Spiles and Syrup Cans ready for you. You can't buy them any cheaper anywhere either.

The funeral of Mrs. Clyde Boger was held Thursday morning at Grabill. John McNabb and Mrs. John Goldsmith were a brother and sister of the deceased.

Mrs. Ethel Vinlan and babe of Edgerton were over Sunday guests of her mother Mrs. Gust Cupp.

Mrs. John Bachmann and Mrs. Isabelle Baltsi, who have been visiting relatives at Geneva, returned home Saturday.

Junior Mission Band met Friday night at the church with a special program. The subject "Follow the Gleam". Their self denial offering amounted to $1.50.

Lynn Askey, the new night operator on the Wabash, returned to his work Friday, after being called to Pennsylvania by the death of his mother.

Mrs. Eva Strebe, of Pontiac, Mich., and Scott White and wife, of Three Rivers, Mich., came Monday night to assist in caring for the former's father, Frank House, who is very ill. Mrs. White is a sister.

John House and wife who have been here several weeks taking care of the former's parents have returned to their home at Pontiac, Mich. Mrs. House is able to be up and around bus Mr. House suffered another sinking spell Sunday afternoon and is quite sick.

The Lot Owners of the White City Cemetery met Monday afternoon at the Lutheran Church. The following were elected as directors for the next two years-R. B. Renn, J. F. Baltz, Charles W. Watson, George Beams and Wm. Erick. It will be necessary for the directors to meet and elect their officers before April 18, 1920. The following sum was in the treasury $932.96.

Harold Miller, twenty-year old son of Adrain Miller, of east of town, while working on the section on the Wabash R. R., using a large cold chisel, had a piece of steel fly in his eye. He was rushed at once to the company's hospital at Peru, where it was found he would have to be taken to the hospital at Decatur, Ill., where it was removed. He will remain five or six weeks for spesial treatment. His father left Saturday to be with him.

William H. Miller died on Saturday afternoon at his home in Spencerville, of paralysis, at the age of 59 years, 6 months and 22 days. Mr. Miller has resided at this place about two years moving here from his farm three miles east of town. He leaves besides the widow three children, one daughter Mrs. Frank Silberg and two sons Kenneth and Vinton, all of this place, three grandchildren, two brothers, Abe and Wallace of east of town, five sisters Mrs. Clara Zeis north of town, Mrs. Alice Moor and Mrs. Hattie Baker of Hicksville Mrs. Ida Gruber of Borland, Mich., and Mrs. Maggie Zeis of Harlan. The funeral was held on Tuesday morning at the Lutheran Church, Rev. Wright of the M. E. Church officiating. Interment at Scipio cemetery.

The C C Club was very pleasantly entertained by Mrs. Anna Henderson and daughter, Miss Ruth, last Friday afternoon. A number of the guests came dressed to represent some well known personage. The decorations and contests were in honor of St. Valentine and Washington birthday. The dining table held a wonderful center-piece: a miniature log cabin, perfectly and completely constroted, with the ash hops, open well and trough, rail pile, wood pile, broad ax and mall were in their proper places; this was to represent Washington's early home. It was a fine piece of art and was the work of J. W. Henderson. The guests who came costumed were given favors tied with the club colors, pink and green. A delicious two-course lunch was served.

MARCH

A GRANDFATHER'S STORY

From $143 to a Competence in Three Years.

F. J. Chamberlain tells a story of his efforts before moving to Canada in 1916 to make a living. It was hard work. He had so many "ups and downs" that he became dispirited before he learned of the success of former neighbors of his who were doing well up in Canada. He sold his holdings for a song, and had a sale of what effects he had. When he straightened up with his storekeeper and paid a few debts he found that he had $143 in cash, a good constitution, a wife and five children. He had saved some few things from the sale. These he put into a car with the effects of a couple of others, who like him were going to Canada. He went into the Gem Colony in Alberta in 1916, bought a piece of land and commenced operations. The money he placed in the bank, and started one of his boys out to earn enough money to supply the table. The older boy used his wages to break up the sod on the 160 acres. But let Mr. Chamberlain tell the rest of the story, which he has signed over his own signature. He says: "I rented 70 acres and hired it put into wheat, thrashed 23 wagon loads for my share. We lived in the granary two years.

"The first of December, 1918, I laid the concrete foundation for a twenty-five hundred dollar house and completed it the last of January. I have nine head of horses and mules, five head of cattle, fifteen pieces of machinery, seven outbuildings paid for and half interest in a thrashing machine. This is an old grandfather's story, as my son-in-law came with four children from Idaho last March and bought 320 acres C. P. R. irrigated land and we helped him develop 200 acres of it. They can't say around here, 'everybody works but father.'"

Increased His Wealth Six Hundred Fold.

There are more stories of success in Western Canada. There's that of Allan Nicholson of Hazelbridge, Manitoba. In speaking of it he says: "I shall never regret coming to Manitoba. I came here seventeen years ago. I think it was in the spring of 1903. My old home was at Le Mars, Plymouth county, Washington township, Iowa, where I had been farming for a good many years. I had a farm of 248 acres, of which I owned 80 acres and rented 160. When I left in 1903 I sold my equity in the farm for $75.00 per acre. The nearest station to my place was Dalton, and my old neighbors there will remember me very well.

"When I came to Canada I rented three-quarters of a section at South Plympton, near Springfield, Manitoba. After a year or two's experience at renting I bought my present farm of 320 acres, and am now engaged in mixed farming. I have always had good crops since I came here, and some of them have been bumper crops.

"If I went back to the United States today I could take back $5.00 or $6.00 to every $1.00 that I brought into the country. My land today is worth from $75.00 to $85.00 an acre, and in addition to my grain growing I have made a specialty of high-grade Percheron horses, purebred Shorthorn cattle and purebred Berkshire hogs. I have had uniform good luck in connection with my stock, and today I would not sell my farm for a cent less than $30,000.

"The older settlers of Le Mar, Iowa, will remember me very well. I was greatly impressed with the country when I made my first visit here in 1908, and that impression has been strengthened all the time I have been here.

"The climate agrees with us all. Before I came here my doctor's bills were something awful. I had no sooner got one paid than I was due for another one. Since we have been in Manitoba $50.00 would pay all our doctor's bills for the last seventeen years.

"I think I am doing my old friends a kindness in letting them know how well I have done since I came here. This is certainly a country of opportunities. I have had no more good luck than falls to the fortune of any ordinary person, and I am satisfied I could never have done as well had I remained in the old home. I shall be pleased at any time to give information to old friends who care to write me about my experiences in this country."

UNFAIR RATING ELIMINATED

Food Products Inspection Service Maintains Offices in 30 of Larger Cities—Wholesome Effect on Marketing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The time was—and not so long ago—when many a farmer who shipped his fruit or vegetables to market in his own name, or through a shipper, felt that he was taking a leap in the dark. Returns seemed very uncertain. Having heard of instances in which friends or neighbors were treated unfairly by buyers or transportation companies, he was often fearful lest he would be the victim of dishonesty. No doubt the number of dishonest dealers handling produce was far less than imagined, but in any event, buyers in general suffered from the fraudulent practices of the few.

These days of uncertainty for the shipper and grower, so far as interstate commerce is concerned, are gone. The food products inspection service maintained by the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture practically eliminates the possibility of unfair rating of produce. Its inspection offices are located in 30 of the larger cities and from these centers inspections are made in approximately 140 additional cities.

Benefits Seller and Buyer.

This service is open to shippers, receivers, railroads, and any other persons interested financially or otherwise. It is recognized to be of as great benefit to buyers of produce as to shippers. In case of dispute over a shipment any party concerned can call on the inspector at the market in which the car is located to make a thorough examination and issue a certificate stating all the facts regarding the quality and condition of the goods. This certificate will be received as prima facie evidence in all United States courts.

The service has been in operation since November, 1917. It is in no sense a regulatory or police organization. The inspector examines a shipment and makes a report on it only when requested to do so by some one having financial interest in the transaction. He has no authority to do anything more than to issue a certificate showing the exact condition of the shipment at the time of inspection. He has no authority to act as a mediator in making adjustments.

Request Inspections by Wire or Letter.

Those in charge of the work aim to give immediate, effective service. Anyone interested can secure from the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., a list of the 26 cities in which inspection offices are maintained and from which neighboring cities are served. Requests for inspection may be made to any of these 26 points by wire or letter and should be addressed to "Food Products Inspector," stating the kind of products, the car number, the receiver, and the delivering carrier, as well as any particular feature regarding which special information is desired. At present butter inspections are made in only five markets.

A fee of $2.50 for any quantity from half a carload up to a full carload, and $1.50 for less than half an ordinary carload, is charged for each inspection. For inspections made in the smaller markets the applicant also pays the expenses of the inspector in making the trip. Only shipments that have moved in interstate commerce are eligible for inspection.

Since the food products inspection service was established more than 30,000 inspections have been made. Large as this number is, it does not measure the full effectiveness of the service. The very fact that some 45 federal inspectors are available at any time has had a wholesome effect upon the entire business of marketing fruit, vegetables, and butter. The dishonest few now know that they are taking big chances if they make fraudulent claims regarding shipments. The honest differences which inevitably arise between buyers and sellers at times are settled more speedily and with less friction and misunderstanding.

Special Advice for Farmers.

The service employs five plant pathologists who specialize in diseases that affect fruits and vegetables in transit. From their reports more than one farmer has learned of some disease that has been injuring his crops, and has been able to remedy the condition.

The inspectors are particularly in demand when the market condition is bad. When buyers are reluctant to accept shipments that are doubtful, they are only too glad of a government certificate which shows conclusively the exact condition in which the goods were received. Likewise, the service enables shippers to procure conclusive evidence of the soundness of products which otherwise might be subject to underrating because of an unfavorable market.

STANDING OF DEALER OF MUCH IMPORTANCE

Rating of Any Dealer Is Not Difficult to Obtain.

Chambers of Commerce and Similar Bodies Are Often of Much Assistance in Giving Information —Bankers Also Help.

When much produce is to be shipped, it will pay the shipper to look up a dealer's commercial standing very carefully before consigning in his care. Marketing experts of the United States department of agriculture call attention to the fact that the rating of any dealer may be secured through firms which make a business of rating the financial and general credit standing of men in different kinds of business. They publish regular reports which give a general idea as to a dealer's standing, though, as is perhaps inevitable, in many specific instances they have been found to be inaccurate. This general credit standing is of prime importance, as a man with a rather low financial rating may be one of the most reliable. Firm letterheads, giving trade references, should not be accepted at their face value without verification.

The chambers of commerce, boards of trade, and similar bodies are often of assistance in giving information as to dealers specializing in different commodities. Local bankers may also help in determining the responsibility of a particular firm. Limited lists of dealers in various commodities are sometimes supplied by the Bureau of Markets, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., in response to inquiries.

Once a satisfactory representative or customer is found, it should be the aim of the shipper to maintain his connection with this one firm, as by so doing mutual confidence will be fostered and better results secured than where the shipper jumps from one connection to another in quest of slightly higher prices.

ICE HOUSE LOCATION VITAL

Of Much Importance on Dairy Farm That Site Should Be Placed Close to the Milk House.

Selection for a site for an ice house is very important. Other conditions being suitable, the ice house on a dairy farm should be placed as near as possible to the milk house, in order to reduce the labor of handling the ice, according to the United States department of agriculture. On a general farm the ice house should be located near the residence. To facilitate drainage the ground on which the ice house stands should be porous and slope from the building. Advantage also may be taken of the nearness of hills, trees, or buildings, which often afford protection from hot winds, thus saving ice.

BEET-TOP SILAGE OF VALUE

Comes Out of Silo Warm in Winter and Is Appetizing—Stimulates Assimilation of Food.

Beet-top silage comes out of the silo warm in the winter, and it is appetizing, according to the United States department of agriculture. It seems to stimulate the assimilation of food and to aid the animal to appropriate the maximum values from all the feeds consumed.

LESSON FOR MARCH 7

JOHN WRITES ABOUT CHRISTIAN LOVE.

LESSON TEXT—I John 4:7-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.—I John 4:11.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—I John, II John, III John.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Loving One Another.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Loving God and Our Neighbors.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Show Love for God and His People.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christian Love Upon Society.

I. The Origin of Love (vv. 7, 8).

Love is of God, for God is love. God not merely loves, but he is the fountainhead of love. Love of country, love of humanity, filial and parental love, every particle of love everywhere has been derived from God; his love is infinite, eternal and unchangeable. Since love is of God, everyone who loves is born of God and knoweth God. The Christian, by his life of love, interprets God to the world. It is not enough that the world should be told that God is good and kind, it should see his nature expressed in the life and love of the disciple. The Christian's life is the world's Bible. Where love is wanting, knowledge of God is wanting.

II. God's Manifestation of Love (vv. 9, 10).

God's method of making known his love is through the incarnation—the sending of his only begotten Son into the world to be the propitiation for our sins (John 3:16). The coming of Jesus Christ into the world and his taking on human nature makes possible life for those who receive him. If we would know God's love, let us look at Jesus Christ. Those who gaze upon him in reverent contemplation cannot doubt God's love.

III. The Supreme Motive of Love (v. 11).

God's love is the grand incentive prompting his children to love.

IV. Love the Proof That God Dwells With Us (vv. 12-16).

1. No man hath seen God at any time (v. 12), but there is abundant proof of his being. The one unmistakable proof of his being is love in the heart of man. Love is not native to the human heart, for the heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked (Jer. 17:9). Out of the heart proceeds murder (Matt. 15:19). Love in the heart is proof that God dwells within.

2. Love proves that God's Spirit is within us (vv. 13-16). The fruit of the Spirit is love (Gal. 5:22). God's Spirit dwells within his children. The indwelling Spirit shows us Christ and makes us believe in him as God's Son, the Savior of the world. Those in whom God dwells will always make this confession. Those who deny the Deity of Christ have no fellowship with God, and those who have fellowship with God will confess Christ as his Divine Son.

V. Love's Relation to the Judgment. (vv. 17, 18).

It casts out fear. A judgment day is coming, for God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained (Acts 17:31). It will be a terrible thing for those unprepared to meet God at that time, but for those who are indwelt by the living God there will be a joyful meeting. He that dwelleth in God and God in him will realize the perfection of love in boldness in the day of judgment, because as he is so are we in this world (vv. 16, 17). The way to get rid of the fear of meeting God in the judgment is to be living with God now.

VI. God's Love the Ground of All Love (v. 19).

The reason we love is that our lives have come into touch with the great fountainhead of love. The incoming of God's being and nature becomes the animating and controlling principle of our lives. The one in whom love is not the master principle does not know God.

VII. The Child of God Possesses Dual Love (v. 20).

The proof that one loves the unseen God is that he loves the person visible who bears the likeness and image of God, and has become a member of the same family through the redemption in Christ Jesus. Love to God and man is united in the one breast of the Christian. The one who hates his brother while pretending to love God is a liar.

VIII. The Solemn Command From God (v. 21).

God commands that those who love him should love their brethren. Obedience to this command will eliminate all war and contentions.

Life.

Life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, in which smiles and kindness, the small obligations given habitually, are what preserve the heart and secure comfort.—Sir H. Davy.

Our Great Blessing.

There is nothing that makes more for human happiness than the simple fact that some one needs us, that some task is holding us fast. We may ignorantly think of it as a burden, but it is our great blessing.

ROAD BUILDING

DIRT ROADS CARE IN SPRING

Proper Drainage Is Chief Essential in Maintenance—Road Drag Is Especially Useful.

The cardinal essential in spring maintenance of earth roads, especially those on heavy soils, is good drainage. So long as the water can be kept from penetrating deeply into these roads they will remain at least fairly passable. To accomplish this on average earth roads, however, is far from easy. During the early part of this season of the year rains are often of long duration and tend to saturate the soil. Water from melting snows is perhaps even more penetrating than long-continued rains, while alternate freezing and thawing of the wet surface tends to increase the porosity of the soil and permit even more ready access of water into the foundation.

The chief attention of the road man must therefore be directed toward getting and keeping the water away from the road. So long as the foundation can be kept dry, even a heavy freeze followed by a rapid thaw will do little or no real damage to the road surface. A dry soil does not heave. The foundation will therefore still be solid, and the road will be able to sustain the traffic without serious rutting. On the other hand a saturated soil expands greatly on freezing, and when it thaws out, has not only lost practically all power of sustaining the weight of traffic, but also is in an ideal condition for taking up or absorbing still more water, and thus forming still more mud.

During the early part of the season, as long as the weather is very rainy or there is melting snow on the ground it will pay to have the road man go over the road daily to see that the drains and side ditches do not become clogged and to note the need of any necessary repairs. A few minutes' work with a shovel may prevent a serious washout or damages, which, if not promptly checked, might make the road practically impassable.

The road drag or some other similar device finds its greatest usefulness during this season. It may be used to good advantage to clear the roadway of slush and melting snow and so prevent this water from soaking into and softening the subgrade. To fill ruts, smooth the surface and maintain the crown of the road, the drag is unexcelled when in the hands of a skilled operator. An unskilled man may do more harm than good. Furthermore, the actual condition of the road during this period will depend very largely on the knowledge of the road man as to just when to drag, as well as his skill in the operation of the implement.

In addition to the maintenance, provision should be made for doing all necessary grading or earth work as early in the spring as possible, in order that it may become thoroughly consolidated before the dry weather of summer. If the work is done too late the road will not only probably become very dusty in dry weather but will need additional attention later in the fall. Where the soil is a heavy clay or gumbo the condition of the road may be very materially improved by adding sand from time to time as that already on the road is worked in by the passing traffic and the drag.

PROVIDE RUNWAY FOR WATER

Plenty of Space Should Be Allowed in Rebuilding Bridge or Culvert —Repair Costs Cease.

Whenever a bridge or culvert is rebuilt use some form of permanent construction, seeing to it that plenty of runway is allowed for the water. Then repair costs will virtually cease, and the money now wasted will begin to show in roads that are good 12 months in the year.

KEEP UP FARM APPEARANCE

Unsightly Features May Be Unseen by Farmers, But Passerby Is Keen to Discern Signs.

BOSCHEE'S SYRUP.

A cold is probably the most common of all disorders and when neglected is apt to be most dangerous. Statistics show that more than three times as many people died from influenza last year, as were killed in the greatest war the world has ever known. For the last fifty-three years Boschee's Syrup has been used for coughs, bronchitis, colds, throat irritation and especially lung troubles. It gives the patient a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectoration in the morning. Made in America and used in the homes of thousands of families all over the civilized world. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

WATCH THAT COLD!

Colds and chills leave thousands with weak kidneys and aching backs. The kidneys have to do most of the work of fighting off a cold and they weaken—slow up. You feel dull and irritable and have headaches, dizziness, backache, and irregular kidney action. Give the kidneys quick help with Doan's Kidney Pills! Doan's are used and recommended the world over for weak kidneys and bad backs. Ask your neighbor!

An Indiana Case

Mrs. G. W. Krouts, 222 Cherry St., Butler, Ind., says: "I was subject to kidney trouble off and on for five years. At times my back ached and I felt tired. My head ached by spells, too. I was nervous and my feet swelled. Whenever I caught cold the trouble was worse. After using Doan's Kidney Pills my trouble left entirely. I gladly recommend Doan's to anyone suffering from kidney complaint."

ADAM EVIDENTLY A GENIUS

Had Assuredly Done Wonders With the Primitive Tools He Had to Work With.

It was just before Christmas and the prepossessing young woman was investigating the furniture in one of the big stores. She wanted something new, and the clerk assured her the newest furniture was that which embodied the early period styles.

So she was initiated into the mysteries of Sheraton, Jacobean, Louis XIV, and other styles and had about picked out the piece which suited her fancy when they came upon another group.

"And this, madam, is of the Adam period," explained the clerk.

"Good gracious," exclaimed the woman, "how did he ever manage, without hammers and saws?"

Wanted Help.

Little Bobby had been learning his Sunday school lesson and was very much impressed with the idea of the omnipresence of God. A few nights later his mother asked him to bring her a bottle of milk from the back porch.

"Me can't," Bobby demurred. "All dark out there."

"But you're not afraid to go anywhere, Bobby," she reasoned. "You know God won't let anything hurt you."

"Is God out there on the porch in the dark?" queried Bobby.

"Certainly he is. Didn't you learn that God was everywhere?"

Cautiously Bobby opened the door a few inches and peering out, called: "God, will you please hand me that milk bottle out there?"—Everybody's Magazine.

Unnecessary Exposure.

It happened at an inspection in France in the days before delousers became widely patronized social centers. The eagle-eyed top had discovered a large, healthy cootie parading up a private's blouse.

"What the ding-dang-dong do you mean by letting that thing stay there?" he exploded.

The doughboy carefully picked the animal off and tucked it inside.

"Get in there, you little fool!" he scolded. "Want to catch pneumonia?"—The Home Sector.

STATE NEWS

Evansville.—A two-inch snow fell in southern Indiana and northern Kentucky the past week. It was the heaviest of the season and will help the wheat which, farmers say, has been growing too rapidly.

Muncie.—The Home Builders' company has let contracts for the immediate construction of 50 houses at a cost of $3,000 to $5,000 each. A survey of the city indicates that 1,000 houses should be built here at once if the several thousand men who are coming here in the course of the next year to work for the General Motors company are to be accommodated.

Hammond.—Big variations in the opinions of expert realty operators were brought out in superior court here in the trial of a suit in which the Gary park commissioners seek to condemn marsh lands owned by the Tolleston Gun club of Chicago, for park purposes. Values all the way from $300 to $1,500 were put on the land. The park commission contends that the value of the land should not be based on possible future uses, as it is covered with water several months of the year.

Newcastle.—Township assessors in Henry county have worked out a schedule to be followed in assessing farm products this year. Wheat will be listed at $2.20 a bushel and corn at $1.30 a buahel. Hogs will be taken at $13 and cattle at from 9 to 13 cents a pound. The schedule calls for the listing of potatoes at $2.50 a bushel, clover seed at $30 a bushel, hay at $30 a ton and pork, lard and bacon at 25 cents a pound. The assessors will be permitted to use thier own judgment in assessing automobiles.

Richmond.—According to Lewis King of this city, division safety agent for the Pennsylvanin railroad lines, 59 persons were killed and 125 injured in grade crossing accidents on the railroad lines west of Pittsburgh during 1919. Automobiles figured in 476 of the accidents, 247 being struck by trains. The railroad company, according to the statistics, was responsible for 29 of the accidents. A total of 95 other vehicles figured in accidents, and the company accepts the blame in two of the mishaps.

Indianapolis.—The plans of organization for the construction and maintenance divisions of the state highway commission have been announced by the commission. The construction division will have supervision of the work of construction of 135 miles of state and federal aid roads and bridges, the contracts for which were let last summer and fall, and in addition will supervise county projects, which up to the present time amount to about $2,000,000. The maintenance division will care for more than 3,000 miles of state roads, for which a minimum of about $1,500,000 is to be spent in 1920.

Crawfordsville.—C. O. Yost, state apiary inspector of the division of entomology of the state conservation department, and Frank N. Wallace, state entomologist, will attend the annual session of the beekeepers of Montgomery county, to be held here March 4. The beekeepers will decide on a date for a tour of inspection of all bee colonies of the county under the direction of Mr. Yost. Ten beekeepers in any county may form a county association and affiliate with the State Beekeepers' association. There are approximately 20,000 beekeepers in Indiana who own about 200,000 colonies of bees.

Columbus.—Owners of three maple sugar camps in German township, Bartholomew county, predict a short crop of maple sirup for the present season. Trees numbering 1,200 have been tapped in the three camps and there is a small yield of sugar water, some of the trees giving none. Weather conditions have not been favorable. Last year the camps produced 100 to 150 gallons each of sirup. The price last year ranged from $2 to $2.50 a gallon, while this year it is $2.50 to $3.

Warsaw.—Construction of roads to cost $300,000 in Kosciusko county has been held up because of failure to sell the bonds. Nine roads are affected. Some of the contractors are trying to market the bonds.

Muncie.—Demand for the removal from office of Thomas Hiatt, county sheriff; Clarence E. Benadum, prosecuting attorney, and Timothy B. Owen, "a pretended justice of the peace," is made in a complaint for injunctive relief filed in the Delaware circuit court by Benjamin McBride, Charles Jones, Faye Warner, Michael Lyons, Anna Bourning, Marie Fisher and George Dreiman, who were arrested in a raid conducted by constables from the court of Justice Owen. It is also asked that the grand jury now in session be discharged and that a new jury be drawn and placed in charge of a special prosecuting attorney "on account of the disqualification of Benadum to act as prosecuting attorney."

Greenwood.—With the dedication of the Polk community house here recently, announcement was made that it was to be the home of the annual national convention and contest of song composers, the first of which will be held here next June. The contestants will be selected each year in annual state contests, when the composers will compete for the best American art song. Prizes will be offered from a fund provided by Grace Porterfield Polk, an Indiana song writer. The first state competition takes place in Florida this month. The Indiana contest will be held here in March.

Shelbyville.—Farmers attending a district institute here went on record as favoring the erection of a community house by the county as a memorial to the world war service men of the county.

Brazil.—Because of the car shortage the past week the pay received by coal miners here was the lowest since the armistice, with the exception of that received during the strike period. The mines served by the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad had good work, but the Pennsylvania was unsuccessful in keeping the mines in cars, with the result that six or eight days in the two weeks' period was the average for the miners.

Lebanon.—Bonds for the construction of seven gravel and cement roads in Boone county, aggregating $166,600, offered for sale by the county treasurer a few days ago, did not bring out a bid and contractors will stop work on the roads. No bids have been received on 12 other roads which have been advertised four different times. Contractors say that the estimates of the engineer are too low and the engineer contends that the estimates are sufficient.

Anderson.—L. F. Pence, judge in the Madison county circuit court, sustained the city council in its answer to a suit by the police force to require the council to make an additional appropriation to pay increased salaries to members of the police force. The answer of the council was that salaries and other expenses had been fixed in the annual budget and that changes in salaries cannot be made until the next budget is made and the tax levy fixed accordingly.

Indianapolis.—Directors of the Indiana Federation of Farmers' Associations went on record as favoring a law permitting electric railway lines to haul carload freight, and also a law for transportation in the state whereby freight shipments would be interchanged and the cost prorated. The directors further voiced opposition to any daylight-saving law, expressing the belief that the farmers' interests would best be served by letting the clock alone at all times in the year.

Indianapolis.—No interpretation of existing laws can give Indiana women the right to vote for presidential candidates in the May primaries, according to an opinion given by two Indianapolis attorneys in conference with Frederick Schortemeier, secretary of the Republican state committee. The opinion coincides with that given recently by W. W. Spencer, Democratic state election commissioner. The Woman's Franchise league has been planning to participate in the primary as well as the November election.

Evansville.—The annual meeting of the rural mail carriers of the First district, held here, brought carriers from all the counties of the district. Resolutions were adopted at the meeting indorsing the action of the committee on reorganization at Dayton, O., and pledging hearty support to the National Federation of Rural Carriers. The resolutions also indorsed the good roads movement and urged better equipment for the carriers. The First district carriers will in the future affiliate with the American Federation of Labor.

Connersville.—Although the influenza epidemic in this county passed its apex several days ago, and the daily releases from quarantine exceed greatly the number of new cases, the influenza commission announces that the need for more nurses is as acute as ever, because of the fact that many entire families are stricken. In one house in Harrison township, 13 persons, members of two families, were ill at one time, and nine are still ill. In this city, half a dozen families, every member of which is ill, are unattended. A call for volunteer nurses has been reissued.

Portland.—The Jay county board of children's guardians has been notified that children from this county will be permitted to remain at the Delaware county children's home despite the crowded conditions there. Congestion at the home recently has caused the Muncie guardian board to notify several surrounding counties that the Delaware county home cannot accomodate their children any longer. Counties that have been notified that their children will be returned shortly are Posey, Carroll, Adams and Blackford. Henry and Jay counties will be permitted to keep their children at the home.

Indianapolis.—The public service commission in orders issued continued in effect the telephone exchange rates established June 11, 1919, by the postmaster general, in six cities and towns in the Central Union system; in twenty-four exchanges of the Southern Indiana Telephone company, and in the eight Indiana exchanges of the Chicago Telephone company. Decreases in the Burleson rates were ordered in eight cities served by the Central Union, and increases over the federal rates weer authorised in twenty-one Central Union exchanges. The commission also authorized increases in five of the smaller exchanges in the Southern Indiana systetm.

Alexandria.—Due to sickness among the pupils and teachers the Moonsville schools, southeast of Alexandria, have been closed indefinitely.

Indianapolis.—Charges against 18 public officials or former officials aggregating $15,074.54 were certified to Governor Goodrich by Jesse E. Eschbach, state examiner of the board of accounts, for collection by the attorney general's department. The largest amounts are demanded from the coroners of Lake and St. Joseph counties for fees collected by them for alleged illegal inquests made prior to 1919.

Another Is Insane

From Auburn Evening Star.

A statement alleging the insanity of Charles Wayne Trostel, of Garrett, has been filed in the office of County Clerk W. W. Mounts.

Charles is seventeen years of age. His father, Abner W. Trostel, testified at the inquest conducted by Justice of the Peace D. C. Beehler, that the youth first manifested insanity February 23, 1920, when he became stubborn, argumentative, and he threatened to kill his mother. He imagines there are snakes in his bed, that buttons are precious stones and that he hears birds. He shows an unusual aversion to his mother, diametrically opposite to his usual feeling for her. He has to be watched that he does not leave his room, but he is not violent. He is talkative, restless and does not sleep well.

While Charles was teaching a class in church Sunday, February 22, he lost his ability to continue his talk. He thought someone was trying to hypnotise him. Dr. F. A. King testified the youth threatened to destroy himself and his family and imagines everyone is plotting against him. Dr. J. A. Clevenger and Dr. Ernest A. Hershey also examined the youth and declared him insane.

Charles is being kept at his home while his admission to the asylum at Richmond is awaited. It is understood his mental collapse followed too close application to his studies as a member of the junior class in the Garrett high school.

Two Funerals Thursday

P. A. Shurts, a former resident of Concord township, died at his home at Gallion, Ohio, Monday evening of pneumonia after a short illness. The remains will be sent here for burial and funeral will be held at the M. P. Church Thursday morning. We are unable to give any of the particulars of his illness.

Mrs. Samantha Hull died Tuesday night about 11:30 o'clock at at the home of her son, J. C. Hull at this place, after an illness of several weeks. She came to St. Joe about a week and a half ago from the home of her son Will at Garrett, where she had been bedfast for several weeks. After arriving at this place she seemed some better for a few days but the last two days she was unable to sit up and feed herself. The funeral will be held from the Hull residence on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock with burial in Riverside. Having been born near St. Joe and lived near here practically all her life she has a wide circle of friends. She was 82 years old and her death came as a result of old age and heart trouble.

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a Glass of Salts If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

Whippets Beat Mules.

The whippet tank, which roared and banked and clanked its way to victory in the war against Germany, is putting horses and mules out of business in the great pine forests of northern Arizona. One big lumber concern at Flagstaff has just put two tanks to work, having bought them from the war department. Each tank has displaced thirty horses and fourteen men, according to company officials. Using horses it was impossible for the company to haul during the winter months. The tanks, however, take no account of weather conditions.

DON'T FEAR ASPIRIN IF IT IS GENUINE

Look for name "Bayer" on tablets, then you need never worry.

To get genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" you must look for the safety "Bayer Cross" on each package and on each tablet.

The "Bayer Cross" means true, world-famous Aspirin, prescribed by physicians for over eighteen years, and proved safe by millions for Colds, Headache, Earache, Toothache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Neuritis, and for Pain in general. Proper and safe directions are in each unbroken "Bayer" package.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.—Adv.

MANY FARMERS OVERLOOK OPPORTUNITY TO SECURE SWEET MAPLE SUGAR AND SIRUP

Collecting Sap in Forest Near Burlington, Vt.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many thousands of American farmers throughout a region comprising more than a score of states are overlooking opportunities to secure delicious maple sugar and sirup for home use, as well as for sale, at very little cost. This statement, of peculiar interest because of the present sugar shortage, is based on data compiled by experts of the United States department of agriculture who have made a special study of the maple sugar industry. While Americans commonly think of this industry as being confined largely to circumscribed areas in New England and New York, there are, as a matter of fact, many potential "sugar bushes" throughout eastern and northeastern United States; in other words, throughout a region extending south to include North Carolina and Tennessee and west to include northern Missouri, Iowa and Minnesota. There are also a considerable number of maple trees of a sugar-yielding species in Washington and Oregon.

Some Experience Necessary.

While some experience is necessary to boil the sap down to sirup and sugar properly, the process is not complicated and may be learned readily. A United States department of agriculture bulletin, "Production of Maple Sirup and Sugar," gives the necessary information, and will be sent free to any person addressing the department at Washington.

A clump of 10 to 15 trees usually will yield enough sirup for family use to make the tapping worth while, and in many cases will afford a surplus which can be sold at a remunerative price. The flow of sap depends upon the age, condition and habit of growth of the tree, also upon the character of the weather and condition of the soil during the sap-flowing season. In a good season a tree 15 inches in diameter will yield sufficient sap to make from one to six quarts of sirup, which in turn can be concentrated into two to ten pounds of sugar. Larger trees under the same conditions will produce correspondingly larger yields of the sirup and sugar. All hard maple trees, eight inches or more in diameter, may be safely and profitably tapped for sirup and sugar production.

Cutting Sugar Trees for Lumber.

Recently an investigator of the United States department of agriculture in North Carolina discovered many groves of sugar maples that were not being utilized for sirup and sugar production. One of these groves is probably larger than any now to be found in New England. The owners, not being aware of the value of these trees from the maple-sugar standpoint, had begun cutting them down for lumber on an average return of less than one dollar a tree. At the suggestion of the federal representative the groves were spared further cutting in many instances and the owners last year began tapping the trees and making sirup that sold for four dollars a gallon. This revelation of the potential value of these groves has induced the owners to plan more extensive operations for this coming spring, so that instead of destroying the groves they will become a source of permanent and larger income. It is expected that the flow of sap will be even more satisfactory than last year, since the warm weather of last winter was not favorable to producing the best grade nor the highest yield of sugar and sirup.

The maple sirup and sugar industry is distinctively American and offers good commercial opportunities for those who engage in it systematically. No countries besides the United States and Canada produce this much-prized product on a commercial scale, which is at once a delicacy and a highly nutritious article of diet. The demand for both sirup and sugar is far beyond the supply.

Because the sugar content of the sap varies from time to time, uniformity of quality cannot be secured throughout a season. Warm days and cool nights are essential to a satisfactory flow, and the sugar content may vary considerably from day to day. However, this is not a feature that materially affects the success of one's operations.

Does Not Injure Tree.

Tapping of sugar trees, if done properly in no way injures the tree. Trees have been tapped for more than 100 years, and are still in good condition.

It is a good policy to tap early in the season to obtain the earlier runs, which are generally the sweetest, and therefore the best producers. Makers have lost half and even more of their crops by not being prepared for the first run. In general, it may be said that the season is ready to open during the first or middle of February in the southern section, and later in the northern regions when days are becoming warm (when the temperature goes above freezing during the day and at night below freezing). If the days are very bright, warm and sunny, the sap will start with a rush, but soon slacken, or if wind starts the flow is checked. Protracted warm weather or a heavy freeze with nights and days of even temperature stops the flow altogether, to start again when weather conditions are right.

Methods of Tapping.

Considerable difference of opinion exists as to the best method of tapping a tree. A thirteen thirty-seconths of an inch (13-32) bit is often used. Its direction should be slightly upward into the tree, the slant allowing the hole to drain readily. With an ordinary tree the hole should not be over one and one-half to two inches deep at best.

The equipment required for sirup and sugar-making does not necessarily represent a large outlay. A number of sap spouts, either wooden or metal, are needed. The sirup is usually gathered in buckets, and if the grove covers a considerable area a wagon or sled is used to carry barrels into which the buckets are emptied. For a small grove a big iron kettle, such as most farmers possess, is ample for boiling the sap over an outdoor fire. For large production a more elaborate equipment, such as a pair of pans set over a brick framework of various patent evaporators, may be employed. When sirup is made as a side issue or in small quantities, it is customary to make the extra concentration, essential to producing sugar, in pots over the kitchen stove, but where made on a large scale homemade or factory-made apparatus can be employed.

Commercial Possibilities.

While the possibilities of immediate returns from maple trees now standing are of chief interest at this time, the United States department of agriculture experts call attention to the large commercial possibilities in maple sirup production which could be developed in a comparatively few years by extensive planting. There are large numbers of tracts now unfruitful and considered almost worthless, but well suited to growing maple trees. These tracts are to be found throughout the regions referred to above, and could be planted to sugar maple at small cost.

CHEAP SEED MAY BE COSTLY

Special Stress Placed on Necessity for Testing Because of Low Germination of Clover.

With all kinds of seed as high as they are, the use of inferior seed is a most expensive form of carelessness. Careful testing of practically all kinds of seed has long been urged by the United States department of agriculture, and special stress is being placed on it, now that prices are so unusually high. In the matter of clover seed, for instance, attention is called to the fact that comparatively cheap seed may be actually higher than that which costs more money, because of low germination. The department, at various times, has issued advice in bulletins and other forms of the best methods of testing seeds. This information may be had free on application.

PRIMARY CAUSE OF UNREST

With the Passing of "Small Business" Went the Feeling of Community Interest, Which Meant So Much.

Article VIII.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Not many years ago something happened which changed the relations between employer and employee. That happening has had a marked effect upon industrial discontent. Something was lost out of the relation between the owner and the men who worked for him. The human element, the personal touch, between the boss and the workers stopped. With its passing unrest grew with great vigor. It was a new kind of unrest, too. It was a lasting, determined, resolute discontent. This came to pass in the day that small business entered the twilight.

In the day of the small plant, business was owned and run by a man, or a number of men, doing business as a partnership. These men lived in the community in which their men lived. They worked with their men. In the front of the plant was the office of the Boss. He was on the job. He wasn't a hired boss, either—he was the real boss—the owner. The sign under which the business was run bore his name. It identified him with the business. The Boss had his home in the city in which the plant was located. His children went to the public school, frequently to the same school to which the children of his workmen went. If he was a church-going man—and generally he was—he and his family went to religious services on Sunday to the same church that many of his men and their families attended. The men who worked for him knew him, at least to the extent of recognizing him when they saw him. He knew many of them, and recognized them with a nod or "Good morning," when he saw them on the street. Few people realized how much this meant to harmonious relations in the industrial world. When working men had a grievance, or thought they had, they took it directly to the Boss. He talked it over with them. He was reasonable and fair. If the complaint was well founded it was given consideration, a remedy was found. The working man was satisfied. He had had his say. He was treated as a human being by a human being. He felt he was part of the business—so did the Boss.

Regulated by Public Opinion.

In the day of small business, the owner of a factory or plant who paid his men an unliving wage was a marked man in the community. Public opinion chastised him for his selfishness and inhumanity. The people said he was a sweater, a slave driver, and held him in contempt. They contrasted his good clothes, the style of his family and his fine mansion, with the rags his working men wore, the hovels in which they lived. He was pointed out, hated, despised. The thought of the community was that it would be better for him and his to give up some of their excess luxury and give the men living wages. The disgrace fell not only upon his head, but it followed his wife and children. When they went to church they were looked upon as hypocrites, for all the people knew that every day in the week he was insulting the Christ he pretended to worship on the Sabbath. Few men are so thick-skinned as not to feel the lash of public opinion. It isn't easy to bear the hate of one's neighbors. It is natural for men to want the good opinion of their fellows. In the day of small business, public opinion held a lash over the inhuman and greedy, kept hirers of men human, but in the progress of the world the small employer was doomed to go.

The partnership passed off the stage, and with it the personal touch between employer and employees. The corporation, a soulless body, was born of the law. It absorbed small plants and small businesses. It collected under a single roof thousands of men. The corporation, the combination, the trust, had come. This new order of doing business on a large scale was efficient—economical. It eliminated waste and duplication. It was a great, smooth-running machine. It represented progress in doing the world's work.

The corporation name did not disclose the owner of Big Business. It was an impersonal, inhuman thing. Frequently the stockholders did not live in the cities where the plants were located. The real owners were unknown to employees and public. Many of the large shareholders had never seen the plant. The men who worked in the plants had never seen the men for whom they worked. The man actually running the business was only an employee. He was paid a large salary and it was made plain to him when he was hired that his salary and his job depended on his ability to make profits. The corporation was organized for millions of dollars. The manager was expected to make dividends. The larger the dividend checks, the higher he was rated. His tenure of job and salary were measured by this definition of success. To make profits it is necessary to keep down the cost of production. The principal item in the cost of production is the labor charge, the wages of the men. The employee manager set himself to his task. One object, one thought, was always before him—keep down wages. He drilled this idea into his staff, his superintendents, his foremen. The first commandment of Big Business to him was "make dividends or quit."

Evil in Over-Capitalization.

Frequently these large industrial corporations were greatly overcapitalized. A corporation representing an actual investment of $100,000,000 was organized for $500,000,000. It didn't take a financier to see that $400,000,000 of its capitalization was wind, water, fake—a lie. The law that gave the corporation a right to exist forgot to keep it under control. The stock was sold, shares representing fiction as well as those representing value. The Captain of Industry spoke of the $400,000,000 of overcapitalization as a "melon." The law should have written it down larceny. The selling of this stock was nothing more or less than obtaining money under false pretenses. When a working man obtained bread under false pretenses he was sent to jail. When honest men cried out against this grand larceny they were called muckrakers, agitators, and charged with provoking unrest, disturbing business. If this did not silence them, paid publicity told the world that the stock was held by widows and orphans; that the attacks upon it were efforts to rob them.

The state, the law, the government, had given dollars the right to organize. A corporation is a union of dollars, exactly as a labor union is an organization of men. The men organized as a matter of self-defense. They knew the individual no longer had a chance to register his complaint with the owner and that as an individual the worker was utterly meaningless in such a large scheme. When he complained he was told, "Take things as they are, stop whining; if you don't like your jobs, quit. There are thousands of men waiting to step into your shoes."

One of the first things the corporation did was to deny to men the right the law gave it—the right to organize. In defiance of their attitude the men did organize and forged the strike as a weapon with which to fight for their rights. The law had not kept pace with the times. It failed to furnish protection. It failed to provide a reasonable control over these powerful big combinations. The men asked for the privilege of collective bargaining. It was a simple request, a just one; its meaning is clear. The men wanted the right to appoint a committee to represent them and discuss with the men who hired them the terms of employment. The directors, generally men who never saw the plant, telegraphed the employee boss, the manager, a direction to refuse the demand for collective bargaining. There was only one reply the men could make. They made it. It was force—the strike. The last twenty-five years have been filled with strikes, which created waste and caused hate, which grew out of the refusal of Big Business to concede to men a right the law conferred on it, the right to organize.

Capitalistic Duplicity.

When the cost of living forced men to ask for an increase in wages they were often met with the answer, "We can't afford it." The men could not afford to work longer for the wages they were getting, because they were unable to make both ends meet. The pay envelope was not large enough. The men pointed to the fact that the answer given by capital was not true. To show their good-faith the capitalists told the general public, "We are only making 3 per cent on our capital; men who loan money get 5 per cent." They did not tell the people they were receiving 3 per cent on $500,000,000, while the real capital invested was only $100,000,000. The sweat of men was being used to pay dividends on $400,000,000. If the dividends earned were distributed over the capital actually invested, $100,000,000, the profits would have been shown in their true light. The reasonableness of the demand of the men would have been disclosed. It was a case of crooked capitalization, lying to protect its ill-gotten gains. Big Business needs ethics—Captains of Industry need ideals.

Let me repeat, the law left the men helpless. They had only one course—Fight. Strike! Strikes cause great public inconvenience. The people smarting under hardships condemn and blame the strikers. Strikes have another effect that is even worse. They harden hate into a concrete class feeling. Strikes are responsible for the attitude of mind of many working men today who say, "I will do as little work as possible for the money I get." It is a vicious circle of hate. Co-operation is made impossible, confidence is destroyed, trust killed; the chasm between employer and employee is widened and deepened. A final consequence of these physical and psychological effects is the tendency towards riot. The strike is a training school. It develops hate. It creates lawlessness, idleness, hunger, hate, irritation, disregard of law which, when combined and concentrated, make Revolutions.

The seed of unrest is planted.

HAD LOST HOPE

But Doan's Effected a Complete Recovery After Other Remedies Failed. Now in Good Health.

Mrs. Stitsworth

Mrs. J. A. Stitsworth, E. Bell Ave., Red Key, Ind., says: "Kidney trouble came on me suddenly and before I realized it I was in a critical condition. My body bloated and my feet and ankles swelled like toy balloons. The kidney secretions burned terribly in passage. My face puffed up and the flesh under my eyes and on my cheeks hung down in folds. I had smothering spells, when I thought I would die. So much water had collected under my skin, I weighed 176 pounds, a gain of 45 pounds. My sight failed and little black specks passed before my eyes. I felt drowsy and was so nervous, I couldn't stand the least noise. Rheumatic pains darted all through me and it felt as if every nerve in my body was affected. Medicine didn't help me and I had little hope or strength left. Finally I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they restored me to health. I am now well and strong."

BILIOUSNESS Caused by Acid-Stomach

If people who are bilious are treated according to local symptoms they seldom get very much better. Whatever relief is obtained is usually temporary. Trace biliousness to its source and remove the cause and the chances are that the patient will remain strong and healthy.

Doctors say that more than 70 non-organic diseases can be traced to an Acid-Stomach. Biliousness is one of them. Indigestion, heartburn, belching, sour stomach, bloat and gas are other signs of acid-stomach. EATONIC, the marvelous modern stomach remedy, brings quick relief from these stomach miseries which lead to a long train of ailments that make life miserable if not corrected.

EATONIC literally absorbs and carries away the excess acid. Makes the stomach strong, cool and comfortable. Helps digestion; improves the appetite and you then get full strength from your food. Thousands say that EATONIC is the most effective stomach remedy in the world. It is the help YOU need. Try it on our money-back-if-not-satisfied guarantee. At all druggists. Putting It Over.

The servant girl had demanded more money.

"I shan't pay it," replied the mistress.

"Very well," replied the servant girl, "I shall leave, and shall tell the next people I work for that I left you because you couldn't afford to keep me any longer."

And fearing that, the mistress decided to do without a few things herself rather than have her neighbors think she couldn't pay as much money

"Oh, well—it doesn't matter anyway," I soothed. "Just tell him again I'm not at home, and if he says anything more repeat it—and keep on repeating it till he goes, for I won't see him. But, George"—this I said sternly—"if you bring that man up—after what I've said to you—you needn't say good morning to me next Sunday."

George understood the allusion—I always give him a quarter on Sunday morning when he brings the paper up. He grinned and departed.

"Now, what new dodge is this?" I cogitated, carrying the paper to my study and examining it in the light. The writing was distinctly foreign—French or German in the "r's." The "mademoiselle" also suggested a foreigner.

The bell rang. I sat down. The bell rang again. I put my feet on a hassock, turned up my nose slightly, smiled and sat still. The door was pounded—not furiously, but with evident determination—and the bell rang again.

At this I thought I'd better show a sign of life, so I went and called through without opening.

"Stop that noise!" I commanded angrily. Noise stopped.

Both persons waited for the other to say something. As the opposite side didn't I called through again, "Who is it?"

"Police detective."

The words were hissed through in a stage whisper, and I noticed a foreign accent on "police." I thought I might as well look at him, anyway—which I did through the crack without removing the chain-bolt. I saw a rather short, very slight man—pongee colored, to be accurate—with an intelligent, honest-looking face, but very common clothes—cheap ready-made overcoat and hat. Yet the man had very much of an air about him.

"Well?" said I in as unwelcoming a tone as I could.

"I wished to see you about Mademoiselle de Ravenol—the young lady who crossed in the steamer with you."

"Well?" said I.

"She has disappeared."

"Well?" And this last from me left him quite in the air, as I saw by his frown. However, he made a fresh start:

"Mademoiselle de Ravenol crossed in the same steamer with you about two weeks ago, did she not?"

"She may have."

"Her name is on the passenger list with yours—I have the list here"—he produced some papers, but apparently did not find that he had the list, and with a gesture of impatience appealed to me—"I am correct, am I not—she crossed with you on the same steamer?"

"What have I to do with that?" I asked curtly, wondering what he was driving at; for of course I knew Claire hadn't disappeared since last night, and if she had he wouldn't be asking me about the steamer. "Dozens of people crossed on the same steamer with me."

"Naturally," he admitted, trying to be pleasant. "But this Mademoiselle de Ravenol—she crossed in your care, did she not?"

"She did not."

"She did not?" he asked in a surprised sort of way, as if he thought I was lying. "In whose, then, may I ask?"

I merely shrugged, as though to tell him, "Find out for yourself." Seeing it he did not pursue that line but tried this: "You saw a good deal of her on the steamer, did you not—talked with her frequently?"

I ignored this last and told him, "But I have no information to give you! Nothing at all. She did not come over with me—I had no charge of her—no responsibility for her actions on board the steamer, or for her being met or not met or anything else."

"Certainly, I understand." He gave the door a little push as a hint to me. "But do you not see that you might furnish me with a valuable clue?" He gave the door a harder push, and as it clicked on the chain-bolt he repeated, "If you allow me to enter that we may discuss this in private—"

I thought I saw myself letting a strange man enter with all those diamonds loose in a box with pens! And at the thought of them I saw that this might be only another plot of monsieur's!

I looked at him in a way that made him think I was considering my responsibilities, and then I asked as casually as I could, "But at what time did she disappear?"

"Ah, that is the question—when?" he cried, giving a tragic—or what he meant to be tragic—gesture to show how utterly the girl had vanished.

And he stopped to consider what he should tell me next, and I, seeing no chance to catch a clue for myself, added, "If you are simply free-lancing in the case I should not feel justified in discussing her with you—but if her father is employing you—if it is he who has put the case in your hands—that is a different matter, and I see no objection to telling you all I know."

He took the bait, hook and sinker!

"It is her father who has placed the matter in my hands," he replied convincingly; and at the same time he gave the door a shove as if to say, "Now you must let me in!" and dropping his voice to a whisper: "You will understand also why the greatest secrecy must be maintained!"

"Oh, of course. Now, when did she disappear?"

I got this off in a tone to indicate that I was thawing out. Not lost on him! He answered with a quick but vague, "Shortly after landing."

"You don't say!" I exclaimed, wishing to seem shocked and trying to keep back a laugh at the way he'd given himself away. But the next moment I realized that the fellow could have no possible connection with monsieur.

It came over me with a rush that this was a plot against Claire herself! Was it to kidnap her and hold her for ransom? Her California grandfather, now dying, was reputed many times the millionaire. Or was this the counterplot of some other nation against Germany for the possession of Mexico?—an effort to strike at De Ravenol, the emperor's messenger, through his daughter and put a spoke in the treaty?

I experienced a positive shock as this situation burst on me. I must get rid of this detective immediately, yet not let him guess what I was now fairly certain of, so I told him with affected cordiality, "I see just how it is—and that you wish to keep this secret as long as possible. I'm sorry—but it isn't convenient for me to receive you at this moment."

"Can you make it this afternoon?" he asked.

"Not very well—unless you wish to meet a reporter from one of the big dailies." I gave him a look that said, "That's what I'm trying to avoid for you."

He started slightly and hastily begged me, "Do not let the press get hold of this! I have spoken to you in confidence—I felt I might trust you."

"Certainly. Tomorrow at nine will be safe I think. Shall I expect you?"

I saw he was about to demur at this, but the rumbling of the elevator, coming nearer and nearer, had attracted his attention. The top of the car showed up at our door.

"Nine," he whispered, giving me a signal to be silent; and with that he slipped noiselessly to the stairs—the way he had come up—and disappeared.

The car door opened and Billy jumped out. I hastily undid the chain-bolt and he bounded in with a "What do you think?" and dragged me along the hall, out of earshot of the door, and then cried in an excited whisper, "Your 'mossoo' has flew the coop!"

Billy flung his hat on the table and repeated his words—"Your 'mossoo' has flew the coop—do you hear?" for I had been too astonished to say anything when I heard them the first time.

"Gone—bag and baggage! Evaporated! Took a carriage and told the driver the Waldorf."

"Then he's not gone very far," I remarked, without thinking, only to have Billy ask scornfully:

"Do you suppose I haven't been there already? I tell you he's lit out for parts unknown—that's the size of it, and I want to know what for! He left the hotel at seven in the morning—seven, mind you, before anybody was out of bed. He hadn't registered at the Waldorf by eleven—and he hasn't registered at any of the other big hotels. I got a hunch he's got some new scheme on and there's no use looking for him in New York. Do you imagine he would go to Washington on his own hook—with his daughter and all—and lay the case before the president? I mean to lay a case before the president—trust little old 'mossoo' to tell only what he wants known!"

"Suppose he has!" I cried, and then I added, "That would be almost too good to be true."

"Yes—I feel that way—I kind-a don't seem to feel that he did—my hunch doesn't say he did. But say—I've been figuring it out coming up on the sub—your 'mossoo' is laying a new trap for you and Mrs. Delario. He knows one of you two women has got the diamonds—he knows it in his boots, no matter what you say—and anyway you have. He knows you've got 'em—that you're bound to keep 'em—and wouldn't dare sell or tell. See? That's where he's got you; and he knows you're both of you shaking in your boots."

"I'm shaking, all right—I've had my fill of diamonds!" I admitted bitterly.

"And that's how he argues. He's only got to give you a new scare of some sort—and wait. And I bet you, too, you get your scare inside an hour!"

"Perhaps I've had it already!" I cried, suddenly recollecting my mysterious detective, whom I had forgotten in this new development of affairs, and I told Billy the story. But when I came to my suspicions that it was Claire the man was after Billy flopped down all in a heap on the divan.

"Good Lord!" he gasped. "It might be!" and for some minutes he sat there, squeezing his hands and glaring at the floor. Suddenly Mrs. Thing-down-stairs began rendering her Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" of a pig on ice, and Billy jumped up in irritation and paced the floor. I was glad of her performance—it was a gratuitous contribution to the safety of conversation in my own flat.

"Tell me again everything your detective man said," commanded Billy. "And you're sure he's a tec.?"

"I'm not sure of anything," I returned. "I had nothing to go on but what he said and what I guessed. He may have been a fancy burglar—a literary burglar, after my last novel; such things have happened." I saw Billy's lip curl at this frivolous suggestion, but I ran on. "He may be a gentleman crook—someone on the steamer whom I didn't know but who noticed I had an interest in the girl and is using it now to get in here and map the grounds so he can come back and rob and murder me."

"Oh, don't joke," he begged disconsolately. "This is awfully serious. Why couldn't this man—you say you think he's a foreigner—why couldn't he be the emperor's follow-up? Now why?"

"Your 'Mossoo' Has Flew the Coop."

"He could."

"Say—that's what he is! And 'mossoo' got wind of him last night and scooted for the tall timbers! The emperor wouldn't just hand 'mossoo' a box of diamonds like that and tell him just to take 'em and present 'em with his compliments—they don't do things that way over here. He'd send a second man to see that the first man did his job according to contract. And why isn't this the man?"

It did look possible—though I couldn't still see why he had begun his acquaintance with me—telling me a lie about Claire. While I was wondering over it, Billy remarked, "Poor De Ravenol has got his troubles all right. He knows the old man's after him and he's lost the goods. Say, you can afford to pity him now."

A wave of utter despair swept over me. I know of nothing more unhinging than the facetious nonchalance of the young male in face of a serious situation. I was ready to weep. I was saved from it by the ringing of the front bell.

I put up the chain-bolt before I opened it—I had sense enough for that—and then I cried: "You!" and received a sharp, "Sah! Let me in, quick."

It was Mrs. Delario. When I saw her, you could have knocked me down with a feather. I let her in and whisked her into my bedroom and shut the door on us. My first thought was Billy—he had naturally looked down the hall when I went to the door—and I knew he'd guess immediately who it was; but though I had told her the part he had already played in our adventure she hadn't met him and I had the presence of mind not to spring him on her till I'd found out what she came for. She had caught sight of him and now spoke in a whisper.

"You can't guess what's happened!"

"What next!" I gasped, almost in a whisper.

"Monsieur has simply dumped Claire back on my hands and decamped—without a word of real explanation!"

"Oh, never!"

"It's what he's done! And I'm in the worst pickle! What does it all mean? He came last evening and told me he'd just seen you and you told him I had the diamonds—"

"What a lie!" I burst out involuntarily.

"And then this morning—before I'm even out of bed—this comes by a messenger." She had drawn out a letter from her bag; she took it out of the envelope and handed it to me, remarking at the same time, "There was fifty dollars in it." The letter read:

"Dear Madame Delario:

"I was unable to return according to promise because of telegraphic communication notifying me that my wife—Claire's mother—is probably ill with a fatal illness and I am leaving for California immediately. My child knows nothing of her mother's illness and the reason of my so sudden departure. I am concealing it from her by saying that it is diplomatic business which calls me away. It would be cruelty to subject her so sensitive nature to anxiety and shock of long journey when she could not hope to see her mother alive.

"I implore you in human kindness take pity on her once more and shelter her for a few days, keeping from her the knowledge of this calamity that threatens her. I shall communicate with you in a few days. My gratitude," etc.

"And Claire followed it in an hour!" Mrs. Delario whispered.

"Did he bring her?"

"No—he sent her in a carriage. Of course he didn't bring her! He didn't take any chances of my refusing to keep her for him."

"Poor child!" I exclaimed. "She was devoted to her mother—it will be a terrible blow to her."

Mrs. Delario sniffed at me—taking the letter from my hand and glancing at it before she answered: "You don't think for a minute there's anything the matter with Claire's mother, do you?"

"There isn't?"

"Why, of course not! . . . Oh, I know," she answered the question she must have read in my face. "I psychometrized this note as soon as I got it. That man can't deceive me—I feel 'scheme' and 'plot' all over it."

She held it a moment in a testing sort of way, running her fingers back and forth over it, then placed it in my hand, asking: "Can't you feel the occult influences?" and looked as if she expected me to reply that I could feel the occult influences, plain as anything. Which I couldn't. She seemed disappointed and put the letter into its envelope and that into her handbag, remarking: "It's part of a scheme he's working. I haven't made out the rest of it—I'm not clear on it yet though I know it's something—tricky."

"And you think he didn't go to California?"

"I'm sure he didn't—I can't see a journey for him—I mean an immediate journey. There are journeys all around him—he travels a great deal—but I don't see anything for today—for tomorrow; there's nothing like that near. But I do get the word—clairaudiently—'Hiding.' That doesn't help things very much for us, if he is!"

"Or for Claire!"

"No. But please don't think I'm not willing to do all I can for the child for her own sake. But having her thrust on me in this mysterious way—"

She broke off and looked at me helplessly and I finished for her: "Has upset you."

"Terribly! I'm nearly distracted! And that isn't all—I mean Claire's being thrust on me; there's a new man come on the scene—I'm more troubled about him than almost anything else."

"A new man? When did he appear?"

"Last night—just after I got back from here and was waiting for monsieur; so I let him in—" and she described the very man who had just been to see me, and who was either a thief or Baron von Follow-up for the Emperor William, as Billy had called him. He had reached Mrs. Delario as he had me, through Claire, saying she had disappeared.

"And what's your impression of this new man?" I asked. I was beginning to take some little stock in her impressions, partly because they coincided with my own; partly because I was clutching at anything that might help.

"Trouble—trouble for monsieur. I get the word clairaudiently. You see, I'm so upset—why, my dear, it isn't any more possible for me to do my work—get my readings right—in an atmosphere of confusion—and fear and anxiety—than it is for you to do your work—write, and compose beautiful things. You couldn't, could you? You couldn't write, if you were all upset?"

I admitted I shouldn't expect to produce much of my own line of goods under like circumstances; and having won this from me, she laid her hand on my arm in an appealing way and said: "It's why I came to you—I didn't know what else to do or where to turn for advice. What am I to do about Claire?"

I was sure I didn't know, but I asked some trite question about how she seemed to be taking it.

"The poor child went into hysterics the minute she got in the house! I had to put her to bed. I'm afraid she's in for a sickness—a nervous breakdown."

Taking Things for Granted.

Life has many disappointments because too many people take things for granted. History is still busy recording episodes that grow out of human presumption. The whole thing grows out of a mixture of ignorance and undue familiarity with other people's rights. No matter how well you may know another you have no right to presume upon his attitude toward you. The best of men cannot always carry other people's burdens unless they know when to take them on. Even big financial interests have times that they cannot lead up with extra burdens. The fellow who thinks he can work others at will simply takes things for granted.—Exchange.

In a certain Los Angeles county court recently a case for divorce came up, only to be dismissed by agreement of the opposing counsels. It seems that the man instituted the suit, had a row with his first lawyer, and then went to Lou Guernsey. "What are your grounds for bringing this action against your wife?" asked Lou. "Well," said the man, "I came home early the other afternoon and as I stepped into the door I heard my wife talking to an insurance man. I was just in time to hear her say: 'I won't pay another cent. I've been paying this policy on my husband for eight years and I've had no luck yet.'"

A Feeling of Security

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs.

It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses.

It is not recommended for everything.

It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best. On sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to try this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

OUT O' LUCK

Never mind! Just take Cascarets if Bilious, Constipated

Everyone must occasionally give to the bowels some regular help or else suffer from constipation, bilious attacks, stomach disorders and sick headache. But do not whip the bowels into activity with harsh cathartics.

What the liver and bowels need is a gentle and natural tonic, one that can constantly be used without harm. The gentlest liver and bowel tonic is "Cascarets." They put the liver to work and cleanse the colon and bowels of all waste, toxins and poisons without griping—they never sicken or inconvenience you like Calomel, Salts, Oil or Purgatives.

Twenty-five million boxes of Cascarets are sold each year. They work while you sleep. Cascarets cost so little too.—Adv.

Much Appreciated.

"They say an hour early in the morning is worth two in the afternoon." "So it is, if you can have it in bed."

No harmful drugs in Garfield Tea. It is composed wholly of simple, health-giving herbs.—Adv.

Earn a Bigger Cream Check

YOU may not class yourself as a dairy farmer, but if you keep a few cows and sell all or a part of your cream you need a cream separator. The exclusive grain farmer has one harvest a year, but you 730 harvests. Twice every day in the year you may be said to harvest your crop of milk. Separating it to get the butter fat might be compared to threshing the grain on the grain farm. If a grain thresher is badly adjusted or worn out, it often wastes many bushels of grain. Because a grain farmer threshes only once a year, his loss of grain for the foregaing reasons comes in one lump and he feels it keenly. An unreliable or worn out cream separator can easily lose 3 to 5 cents a day on each of your cows. Because it comes a little at a time this loss is unnoticed.

Butter fact is worth many times more than wheat, hence you see the situation. If you trying to get along without a separator you are loosing more than enough to buy a good separator each year.

THE PRIMROSE is not the highest priced cream separator made, neither is it the lowest, but when you consider the cream saving qualities, and also that it is built to give the service you want, as long, if not longer, than any other separator made. Let us demonstrate the Primrose to your satisfaction. We have them on hand and can make delivery at any time.

Life of P. A. Shurts.

The funeral of P. A Shurts, a former Concord township resident was held here last Thursday. Mr. Shurts was well known here and had a wide circle of friends who were sad at the report of his sudden death. He had not been well for some time and pneumonia caused his death. He had lived in this neighborhood for years and was highly respected as a citizen and neighbor. The body was brought to St. Joe Wednesday afternoon and laid in state at his home.

Phyletus A. Shurts, fifth child of George and Elizabeth Shurts, was born in Spencerville, DeKalb County, Indiana, April 6, 1849, and departed this life at Gallion, Crawford County, Ohio, March 1, 1920, aged 70 years, 10 months and 25 days.

Being converted to Christ in his youth, he united with the Concord M. P. Church, where he had been an active member. Having retained his membership to the time of his death. June 8, 1872 he was united in marriage to Miss Margaret M. Bovle. To this union was born two daughters, Ella Myrtle and Hattie Pearl, the former having preceded her parents in death.

Having fitted himself for teaching he taught in the public schools for ten years. Almost all of his life was spent in Concord Township, DeKalb County, where he was well known. The last three years he spent in Gallion, Ohio. An honest conscientious neighbor always willing and ready to lend a helping hand to any one in need, he has been missed from the neighborhood where he will always be kindly remembered. When told that the end was near he said, "I am not afraid to die. I am perfectly resigned."

He leaves to mourn his departure his daughter Hattie Pearl, one brother John Shurts of Chicago, two sisters Mrs. Emma Woodcox of Waterloo and Mrs. Hattie Culberson of Auburn, and a host of friends.

Funeral service was held Thursday mornidg from the M. P. church Rev. C. O. Johnson, officiating. E. R. Kinsey director. Burial at Riverside.

CARD OF THANKS.

I desire to expres to those who administered to me in my sadness, in the death of my father, and the many kind expressions of sympathy from friends, my sincere thanks. I shall always cherish them.

Hattie Pearl Shurts.

The high school basket ball team attended the tournament at Auburn and played on Friday morning with Angola but were defeated by a score of 43-2.

Wm. Brannaman, who recently had a public sale east of town shipped his goods to his new home at Danville, Ill, on Saturday and the family left on Sunday.

A call was sent here on Sunday afternoon for assistance as the Jas. Boots house was on fire, caused from an overheated chimney that had burned out. Not much damage however was done.

The County Line club gave a farewell party on Wednesday evening for Albert Souders and wife, who will move to their new home near Huntertown. The evening was spent in a social way after which sandwiches and coffee were served.

Chicken pie supper, Community hall, Wednesday March 17.

Mrs Fannie Beams who sold her farm last fall moved last week to the home of her son Robert Beams and wife. Bert Fisher who purchased the Beams farm moved on Saturday and James Vallieu who bought the Beams & Steward tenant house moved on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Price, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Haller and Mr. and Mrs. Sellmore Price were very pleasantly surprised at the home of Mr. Price sr., when a number of their new friends and neighbors gathered to give them a hearty welcome. Games and a luncheon were the main features of the evening.

The Harlan high school basket ball team motored to this place on Tuesday evening and played the local "Hi." Score 22-14 in favor of the locals. The St. Joe high school seconds played the Spencerville high school seconds the same evening, the game resulting again in favor of the home team by a score of 24-8.

The local basket ball beavers received a severe jolt to their winning aspirations here Saturday night when they stacked up against the speedy quintette that is defending the Tri State College honors this season. The battle was hard fought throughout, the first half being a neck to neck race, neither team ever being over one point ahead, the score at the halfway mark being 10-9 in favor of the locals. However the visitors came back strong in the second period, uncovering a brand new system of attack accompanied with some dazzling speed which the locals were unable to check until after Moore had connected with the mysterious hoop for three consecutive times, salting down the victory for the comrades.

CONCORD

Arden Morr was home over Sunday.

Goldie Hughes, who has been quite sick is much improved.

GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER.

Constipation invites other troubles which come speedily unless quickly checked and overcome by Green's August Flower which is a gentle laxative, regulates digestion both in stomach and intestines, cleans and sweetens the stomach and alimentary canal, stimulates the liver to secrete the bile and impurities from the blood. It is a sovereign remedy used in many thousands of households all over the civilized world for more than half a century by those who have suffered with indigestion, nervous dyspepsia, sluggish liver, coming up of food, palpitation, constipation and other intestinal troubles. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. Try a bottle, take no substitute.—Adv.

Nothing in a Name.

A little boy on the North side who passed recently into a new room at school was told by the teacher that her name was Miss Crane. The other day his mother thought she would send a note to the teacher, inquiring about the lad's progress in his studies. She asked John the name of his teacher, and he puzzled and stuttered a minute, and then replied: "Why, it is Miss Chalk, mother."—Indianapolis News.

RUB RHEUMATIC PAIN FROM ACHING JOINTS

Stop "dosing" Rheumatism.

It's pain only; not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" right on the "tender spot," and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain and distress. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappoints and doesn't burn the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache and neuralgia.

Limber up! Get a small trial bottle of old-time, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and in a moment, you'll be free from pains, aches and stiffness. Don't suffer! Rub rheumatism away.—Adv.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

LESSON FOR MARCH 14

THE UNVEILING OF JESUS CHRIST TO JOHN ON THE ISLE OF PATMOS.

LESSON TEXT—Rev. 1.

GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and forever.—Heb. 13:8.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—John 21:25; Rev. 2:1-3: 22.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Appears to John on a Lonely Island.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What John Saw and Heard on Patmos.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC A Vision of the Glorified Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC —The Glorified Christ the Center of the Book.

The next two lessons are from the Revelation, the book which contains Christ's last message to man. The author is John the Apostle, the son of Zebedee. The book was written from Patmos, a small rocky island in the Aegean sea, about 96 A. D.

I. The Introduction (vv. 1-3).

1. The title of the book (v. 1)—"The Revelation (Unveiling) of Jesus Christ." This does not mean the making known to Jesus Christ some secret, but the unveiling of his person. The revelation of Jesus Christ, then, refers to his personal appearing in glory to judge the world and establish his kingdom. The word Apocalypse, translated Revelation, signifies, according to New Testament usage, the unveiling of a person (II Thess. 1:6-10; I Peter 1:7). The theme of the book is Christ's second coming, his personal, visible appearance in glory (vv. 1, 7, 10).

2. To whom made known (vv. 1, 2). To his servant, John, to show unto Jesus' servants things which must shortly come to pass.

3. Benediction for those who read, hear, and keep the sayings of the book (v. 3).

II. The Salutation (vv. 4-8). Grace and Peace.

1. To whom (v. 4). The seven churches in Asia. These were historical churches then existing in Asia Minor.

2. From whom (v. 4). (1) From him which was, is, and is to come; (2) from the seven spirits which are before the throne (v. 4). By the seven spirits is meant the Holy Spirit in his sevenfold plenitude.

III. The Vision of Glory (vv. 9-18).

1. The sevenfold lamp-stands (v. 12). These lamp-stands, or candlesticks, are the seven churches (v. 20). The churches are presented under this figure because they are the light-holders in this time of the world's darkness.

2. The Son of Man in the midst of the lamp-stands (vv. 13-18). The vision shows us Christ in the midst of the churches, indicating that the church only gives forth light when Christ is made the central figure.

(1) Clothed with a garment down to the foot (v. 13). This is a robe of royalty as well as of the priest (see Isa. 22:21), and signifies his right to judge and to rule, as well as to offer sacrifice.

(2) Head and hair white as wool (v. 14; cf. Dan. 7:19, 20). This has a twofold significance, purity and eternity.

(3) Eyes a flame of fire (v. 14). This suggests his infallible knowledge; he is able to see through and through, even detecting hidden thoughts.

(4) Feet like burnished brass (v. 15), indicating that as Judge and King he comes with irresistible power.

(5) His voice as the sound of many waters (v. 15). This suggests that all excuses of man will be swept aside by his resistless Word.

(6) Seven stars in his right hand (v. 16). According to verse 20, stars means the angels or messengers of the churches to comfort John in his lonely exile. The stars are in his right hand, indicating the high honor given to the minister; he lies in the right hand of Jesus Christ, bears his message and then speaks it out.

(7) Out of his mouth went a sharp two-edged sword (v. 16). Observe that this is not a hand sword, but a mouth sword—"The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him" (John 12:48); "The word of God is sharper than a two-edged sword" (Heb. 4:12). The sword has two edges, condemning the evil and approving the good.

(8) His countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength (v. 16). The effect of sunshine is healthful and joyous to some things, while it is death and hardening to others. The Gospel message converts some and hardens others.

IV. The Command to Write and the Interpretation of the Vision (vv. 19, 20).

In this command are indicated the divisions of the book.

Giving Comfort.

Giving comfort under affliction requires that penetration into the human mind, joined to that experience which knows how to soothe, how to reason, and how to ridicule, taking the utmost care not to apply those arts improperly.—Fielding.

Good Weather.

Sunshine is delicious, rain is refreshing, wind braces up, snow is exhilarating; there is really no such thing as bad weather—only different kinds of good weather.—John Ruskin.

ROAD BUILDING

RAILROADS AND GOOD ROADS

Solution of Future Transportation Problems Seen in Hard-Surfaced Highways of Country.

Any student of the railroad situation must reach the conclusion that railroad operation in America has reached the height of its efficiency and hereafter it will remain stationary or decrease.

It is always possible that some revolutionary process will be discovered, but the long years without marked improvement of process indicate that railroad mechanics have about reached their maximum while bureaucratic and political control now assured will be an deadening to all mechanical improvement as they will be to effective management.

Progress in transportation, therefore, must be in other lines. Navigation has been heralded for some years as a solution, but in spite of heavy government assistance, water traffic, even on the Great Lakes, has steadily declined. The remedy does not appear to rest there, at least for the present.

There remain the highroads. In them salvation lies, says Chicago Tribune. The war, which proved the utter incapacity of the French government-owned railways to rise to the emergency, established the motor truck in its full majesty. What the French railroads could not do the motor trucks on fine French highways did. What the highroads are in France they must be made in America.

Fortunately, we have an excellent little beginning in the middle West. The principle of hard roads has been accepted and timid beginnings have been made in a number of states, chief among them Illinois. Let us understand, and immediately, that what has been done and what has been legislated for is merely the thin entering wedge of our highroad program. The narrow ribbons of concrete roads laid out by legislation will no more carry the forthcoming auto truck traffic than the old narrow gauge single track railroads were able to carry the railroad traffic which they caused to develop.

It is fortunate that we have many agencies building roads. The nation will do something for the most backward. The states, however, should treble or quadruple all national allowances. In the beginning, and until the principles of highroad traffic are generally understood, it will probably be necessary for counties and even cities to provide the wide thoroughfares necessary at the points where traffic centers.

To illustrate, the 18-foot roads which are perhaps adequate a hundred miles in the country are even now more congested ten miles out from the city limits than are our most crowded city streets.

BILLION DOLLARS FOR ROADS

Immense Amount to Be Spent in 1920 for Construction and Proper Maintenance.

More than $1,000,000,000 will be spent this year in construction and maintenance of roads and streets throughout the United States, F. L. Powers, secretary of the American Road Builders' association, estimated.

HINDER SOCIAL INTERCOURSE

Suspension of Travel Caused by Poor Condition of Highways in Rural Communities.

Bad roads are often a handicap to social intercourse. Under the worst road conditions all travel may be completely suspended. It is not difficult to see such conditions, but what is more difficult is to comprehend the general improved social atmosphere which adequately improved road conditions cause in rural communities.

PNEUMONIA LEFT BOY WEAK AND SICKLY

Parents Were Almost Hopeless, But He Is Now Well and Strong.

"Our little boy's health was so poor we were afraid we were going to lose him. He is ten years old, and has had weak lungs ever since he was eight months old, caused by pneumonia. We have been very careful with him and doctored him continually, but we had almost despaired of ever having a strong, well boy.

"But since giving him Milks Emulsion all his trouble is gone, and he is in perfect health."—Mrs. G. W. Smiley, 20 Maple St., Dayton, O.

For restoring appetite, health and strength in sickly children, mothers will find Milks Emulsion the thing they have always sought. Most children like to take it, because unlike many emulsions and tonics, it really tastes good.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It retores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whom sickness has weakened, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. Price 60c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

One Box of Dodd's Kidney Pills Relieves Mrs. Frey's Rheumatism

Mrs. Ira Frey, of Le Mars, Ia., suffered for six long months with the agonies of rheumatism. Then she heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and bought a box. Here is what she writes:

"For six months I had rheumatism. I had swelling of the limbs, stiffness in the joints and cramps in the muscles. I suffered greatly from backache. My limbs felt heavy, and I had a dragging sensation across my loins. I had a great deal of pain in the top of my head, was often dizzy and had flashes of light and floating specks before my eyes. I had heart flutterings and could not sleep well. My appetite was fitful and I felt heavy and sleepy after meals. I suffered from shortness of breath. After taking one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills I was much improved."

Mighty few people realize in time that Kidney Trouble is making its advances upon their health. They put off treatment—they say, "Oh, I'll be all right in a day or two." And the malady tightens its grip. Result: Bright's Disease, hospital treatment, doctor's bills—often death.

If your druggist does not carry Dodd's, order direct, sending us 60c in stamps and mentioning your druggist's name.

BELIEF IN "LUCKY PIECES"

Superstition That Seems More General Now Than in the Days Before the Great War.

"That is my luck piece," a veteran said, as he pulled a shapeless little bit of metal out of his pocket with his regular small change. "That's a bullet that just grazed my ear and burrowed into a wall right behind me." "What sort of luck has it brought you?" He laughed. "Six months in hospital from another bullet the very next day. . . . But I married the nurse, and she's a bit of good luck, you bet! I got into the habit of carrying this about; most all the boys carry a pocket piece of some kind for luck whether they believe in luck or not." One man always carries a half-dollar in an inside pocket by itself, so that if his spending pocket happens to get empty he would not be altogether destitute. There is another who sews a $10 bill in the fob pocket of every pair of trousers he buys. In that way he can never have the bad luck of forgetting to change his money when he changes his clothes. True, he might have the bad luck to forget to remove it when he sent the trousers to be pressed, but—as he philosophically expresses it—that would be good luck for the tailor.

"Movies" in Education.

Prof. Giacomo Boni, noted Italian archeologist, has suggested to the government the use of moving pictures to promote the study of history in the schools and among all classes of the people.

He declared that moving pictures were better than books or lectures, and recalled that after the Roman peace the Emperor Augustus, wishing to induce the people to return to the land, called upon the poets to sing of agriculture, and Virgil wrote the "Georgics."

Moving pictures, according to Professor Boni, must be employed in a similar manner to educate the people to a knowledge and appreciation of Italian history.

The Deed Was Done.

With our baskets full of goodies, a crowd of us enjoy going from house to house and havin "picnic" dinners. At our last meeting place our hostess was noted for making weak coffee. This worried my husband, who likes his strong. To please him I promised to go early and offer to make the coffee. Luck was against me, for when I arrived, she had already made it. Hoosier State Happenings

Indianapolis.—In letters mailed to the Republican members of the Indiana general assembly Governor Goodrich outlines a tentative legislative program for a special session of the legislature if it shall be called, and sounds out the legislators in regard to their views on the proposed program and additional legislative matters that should be brought before a special session for consideration. The tentative program outlined by Governor Goodrich is made up of 18 legislative matters which the governor says were discussed at the informal conference of Republican assemblymen the day following the one-day special session of the legislature, and some other matters that have been suggested to him since that time.

Jeffersonville.—James N. Howard, secretary of Howard's Shipyards and Dock company, says that the company has more inquiries for boat building now than in all the years he has been associated with the plant, of which his grandfather and father were successively the heads through a period of 70 years. The plant is busy building several towboats and a large number of oil barges, but indications are excellent for a big revival of river-borne traffic.

Decatur.—The board of county commissioners has ordered that the question of building a county hospital in Decatur be submitted to the voters at the May primaries, Tuesday, May 4. Action in the matter has been urged by the Adams County Medical society, and petitions signed by more than one-third of the voters have been filed with the commissioners. The estimated cost of the new hospital is $75,000.

Evansville.—Work has begun on the preparation of the petition for the huge Wabash levee in White county, Illinois, which will extend from below the Illinois Central railroad bridge in Grayville to the Louisville & Nashville railroad embankment at Maumee, Ill., a distance of 16 miles. Prominent land owners of White county are back of the project, which will protect approximately 30,000 acres of land.

Gary.—Official announcement was received here that the National Tube company will at once begin the erection in Gary of a mammoth tube plant costing $40,000,000 and giving employment to 10,000 men. Work will start soon on the construction of four large blast furnaces, to be followed by the erection of miles of tube mills, shops, office buildings and other structures required for the plant.

Richmond.—Because the city council is unable to determine from the method of presenting semi-annual reports whether the municipal electric light and power company is making or losing money, a special ordinance was passed authorizing the employment of experts to go over the plant's books for the last five years and present a report of its condition.

South Bend.—Twelve suits for damages, aggregating $100,000, brought to St. Joseph circuit court here from Laporte county on change of venue, have been disposed of, the Grand Trunk Western Railroad company, defendant, settling the cases for $15,000. The suits were the result of a train hitting a school wagon, carrying a number of children, six of whom were killed.

Lafayette.—More than 30,000 Indiana farmers will "keep books" this year of their business in record books put out by the agricultural extension department of Purdue university. Of this number more than 24,000 were distributed through banks in all parts of the state and more than 5,000 through county agricultural agents.

Brazil.—Because of a serious car shortage, factories and mines in this city are handicapped, and Mayor John J. Jones started a movement which he hopes will bring relief. The assistance of Senators New and Watson and Representative Sanders in the congress have been sought.

Wabash.—Practically every city in the Eleventh Indiana congressional district will show an increase in population this year, as compared with the 1910 census, according to announcement made by Will Alber, census superintendent for the district. While the cities will show an increase, the district as a whole will show a decrease, Mr. Alber said.

Warsaw.—This winter has established a new record in this region for continued cold weather. The lakes froze November 18, and the ice is now more than two feet thick. The lakes have not been open since the first freeze.

Shelbyville. — Fifty-two precincts have been outlined for Shelby county, an increase of nine over last year. Five have been created in Shelbyville, which will now have 18 precincts.

Indianapolis.—The Democratic state convention will be held Wednesday and Thursday, May 19 and 20, in this city, according to a decision reached by the state committee. A. C. Sailee, state chairman, was instructed to issue the call. Organization will be effected May 19 and the convention proper will be held May 20.

South Bend.—Forty-five secretaries of chambers of commerce in northern Indiana and southern Michigan will meet in South Bend March 15 to discuss administration policies of the commercial organizations which have made a success in their field.

Indianapolis.—Dealing in futures in eggs and poultry was vigorously discussed at the closing session of the sixth annual convention of the Indiana Egg and Poultry association meeting here. Opposition to speculating by this method was expressed. R. R. Ragan, president of the Wadley company, Indianapolis, was elected president of the association. Henry Pfeiffer of Logansport, first vice president; C. J. Lloyd of Greensburg, second vice president; William Locks of Indianapolis, secretary-treasurer, and Harry Molts of Decatur; William Berling, Bluffton; Simon Martin, Lewisville; O. Oliver, Madison, and Thomas Owens of Angola, directors.

Columbus.—"Today we are facing the most severe crisis ever seen in the history of the Indiana schools," said L. N. Hines, superintendent of public instruction, in an address on the school question at a business men's luncheon here. "This," he said, "is because we have not the right sort of teachers to carry on the work of education." He advocated a system of pensions for teachers of the state, saying, "This program will cost money, but what is more important than the education of our children?"

Evansville.—Dr. Alfred E. Hughes, president of Evansville college, has announced that a new department, which will probably be called the department of rural sociology, will be opened at the institution next fall. The purpose will be to show the advantages of life on the farm and to teach students how to improve social conditions in rural communities. The department was endowed by the Rosencrans family here, the fund being $50,000.

Lafayette.—The Tippecanoe County Bird Protective association will pay two cents a head for every English sparrow killed in this vicinity this month. This offer is in addition to the $10 bounty offered some time ago by the association for the person killing the first 1,000 sparrows. The offer of two cents for every dead sparrow is expected to bring about an extensive sparrow killing campaign.

East Chicago.—Because of a shortage of houses here about 5,000 men employed in East Chicago and Indiana Harbor are living in the neighboring cities of Hammond, Gary, Whiting and South Chicago. Unable to find houses for rent many of the men are buying property, and never before in the history of the city have so many real estate transfers been recorded.

Scipio.—The tobacco acreage in Jennings county will be greatly increased this coming season, both in old and newly cleared land. The success of the last few crops and the high prices that burley has brought on the Madison loose leaf markets seem to be the causes. It has not been an uncommon thing for one crop to bring enough to pay for the land on which it was raised, two or three times over.

Marion.—The plan to bring about the enactment of a daylight saving ordinance met defeat by a unanimous vote of the city council. Prominent farmers appeared before the council and declared that they bitterly opposed the plan, and that it would result in a serious loss of trade to the city merchants in favor of the mail order houses.

East Chicago.—Scarcity of laborers in the Calumet district of Indiana is causing much anxiety among the industrial heads, who find themselves seriously handicapped by the inability to obtain labor at almost any price. The government employment office at East Chicago has calls for 1,200 laborers, in addition to numerous calls for skilled men.

Princeton. — A prominent canning company has undertaken to teach the farmers of this county tomato growing by means of motion pictures. Films will be shown in every town in the county where electric current can be had and will portray the story of the tomato from seed to harvest.

Logansport.—Physical training will be taught in every room of the Logansport schools next year, according to plans now being worked out by the school board. An instructor will be hired, who will outline definite work for the different rooms.

South Bend.—Mayors and other officials of municipalities of Indiana will meet in South Bend June 15, 16 and 17 for the annual convention of the Indiana Municipal association. Mishawaka will join with South Bend in entertaining the visitors.

Indianapolis.—Calling attention to the fact that walnuts are selling at about 15 cents a pound and that walnut lumber commands a price of from $125 to $140 per thousand feet, the Indiana department of conservation has urged the growing of more of these trees.

Bloomington.—Women were put on an equal footing with men in the Indiana University Lincoln league when three women officers were elected. They are Miss Gertrude Miedema of Indianapolis, assistant vice president; Miss Louise Neal of Shelbyville, assistant treasurer, and Miss Wanda Kern of Bloomington, assistant secretary.

Indianapolis.—The forty-ninth annual convention of the state Young Men's Christian association ended here with an election of officers and the formation of the Indiana Red Triangle league. Officers were elected as follows: S. B. Bechtel, Fort Wayne, president; George L. Mackintosh, president Wabash college, Crawfordsville, first vice president; S. O. Pickens, Indianapolis, second vice president; J. M. Scudder, Huntington, secretary; Ray C. Ellis, New Albany, first assistant secretary; F. B. Raschig, Indianapolis, press secretary; J. F. Wellick, Indianapolis, treasurer.

MOTHER GRAY'S SWEET POWDERS FOR CHILDREN

Used by Mothers for over 30 years

Are pleasant to take and a certain relief. They tend to break up a cold in 24 hours, act on the Stomach, Liver and Bowels and tend to correct intestinal disorders and destroy worms. 10,000 testimonials like the following from mothers and friends of children telling of relief. Originals are on file in our offices:

"I think MOTHER GRAY'S SWEET POWDERS FOR CHILDREN are grand. They were recommended to my sister by a doctor. I am giving them to my little three year old girl who was very puny, and she is picking up wonderfully."

"We have used MOTHER GRAY'S SWEET POWDERS FOR CHILDREN at different times for past nine years, and always found them a perfect children's medicine and very satisfactory in every case."

QUEUE IS SIGN OF BONDAGE

Remarkable That Chinese Have Come to Look Upon It With a Degree of Pride.

If the Germans had won the war, would they have made us wear pigtails—in order that they might have something to yank us around by? And would they have applied their efficiency to a new system of punishment, perhaps with a different number of yanks for each offense against our conquering masters? The seal with which patriotic Chinamen cultivate the queues that they consider a sort of national distinction, and the fact that those Chinamen in other countries who discard them are forever considered outcasts is indeed paradoxical. For the pigtail is a sign of bondage, the earmark of a conquered race. Centuries ago ancient China had a civilization all its own. But on every side she was surrounded by warrior hordes that coveted the riches and luxuries of the more advanced people and harassed them continually. Finally overcome by a barbarian host, the Chinese were reduced to a state of servility. One of the exactions of the conquerors was that the men grow long queues, by which, as they flew by on their horses, they actually took hold of the helpless creatures to swing them before them to the saddle or to cut off their heads.

Slighting the Description.

Mr. Justwed—Here's my discharge from the army. Nice, isn't it?

His Bride—Let's see. "Had gray eyes, brown hair, light complexion—" Why, Edwin, that's horrid. It doesn't say a word about those dear amber glints in your eyes, nor that soft, tempting wave of your hair, nor your simply adorable complexion.

If all we had to do to get rich is to buy oil stock none of us would have to work.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed up with a cold or nasty catarrh.—Adv.

TOO QUICK IN CONDEMNATION

Billy Grimes Might Have Been a Little Less Hasty in "Bawling Out" the Doctor.

"The opponents of strong drink," said a politician at a dinner in New York, "are too ready with their accusations—accusations of drunkenness and what not—against all who don't share their views.

"Sometimes I think they are as bad as Billy Grimes.

"Billy's doctor had bought a fine new pair of acetylene lamps for his automobile, and one evening the water reservoirs of both lamps got empty, and so, of course, the lights went out.

"The doctor, halting in front of Billy's shack, shouted:

"'Hi, Billy, can you let me have some water for my lamps?'

"Billy came forth. 'Water?' he said. 'I guess ye mean oil, don't ye, doc?'

"'No, I don't,' said the doctor; 'I mean water.'

"Billy looked at the doctor, then he shook his head sadly.

"'Better go right off home, doc,' he said. 'Go home and sleep it off. Ain't ye ashamed of yerself—at your age—and all the lives of the community dependin' on ye.'"—Washington Star.

A Terrible Accident.

W. A. Spencer, fireman on the B. & O., met instant death at the river bridge east of St. Joe, Sunday morning at 6:40. Just how the accident occurred no one really knows as it was not witnessed by the other men in the engine. A fast freight was going east and it is reported that Spencer had gone out of the engine cab, on the running board to fix some part of the engine and it is thought that his wrench slipped and he fell head long, striking his head on the heavy iron bridge work, and by the looks, his head was split wide open as the brains were scattered over the structure where he struck, and his cap was thrown to one side and had lodged on the iron abutment. From here the body was hurled down to the river and the water was measured at eight feet where he lit and exceedingly swift. The train stopped and George Wilmot, who was walking the track found out the trouble and called the section men. As soon as the word was spread a large crowd gathered to assist in the search for the body but the whole day was spent there without any relief. No signs of the body could be found anywhere. Some boats were secured in the neighborhood and drag nets were fixed up and the river was scoured all day for a great distance and the men had to give up their search by the night time.

Below the bridge for 100 feet the water is open and then it comes to the ice, and it is the belief of those who worked there Sunday that the body was carried swiftly below and will no doubt be located some time down the river unless it should be caught on the limbs of trees that are frequent in the river.

The B. & O. sent three men here from Garrett in the morning to help in the search for the lost body returning to Garrett in the afternoon on one of the fast trains.

Spencer was a man of 32 years and had been employed at this work for about three years. He was a return soldier and had worked about a year on the east end. He is a single man and his mother lives at Fort Mitchell, Va.

On Monday afternoon the ice dynamited for a distance below the bridge but without any results. A reward of $50 for the recovery of the body is to be given by Garrett parties.

Obituary

Rhoda Samantha Knight was born September 18, 1837 on the David Knight farm, known as the F. Buchanan farm, and died on March 9, 1920, aged 82 years, 6 months and 16 days.

The deceased was married in 1856 to Augustus Hull, who preceded her by death on May 10, 1898. They commenced life's journey together on the farm purchased by Mr. Hull just across the road from the Tom White farm. Remaining on said farm until 1865 then moving to Illinois and Iowa. Remaining in the west until spring of 1876 they moved back to Indians, here they spent their latter days. To this union was born eight children, four boys and four girls, Henry, who died in iniancy, Mrs. Mary Tiffany of Lawrenceville, Ill, John C. of St. Joe, Mrs. Emma Slentz of South Haven, Mich., Mrs. Faith Marsh, who died February 6, 1890, Thaddeus, who also died May 16, 1894, William of near Garrett and Mrs. Nettie Hess of Painesville, O.

She was very fortunate in maintaining her health and home, being best contented at her home in Auburn most of the time until about November 1919, since which time she has steadily declined in health until the death angel called her to come up higher and join those gone on before. She united with the old Methodist Protestant Church at Concord in her girlhood days and after moving to Auburn she united with the Evangelical Lutheran Church. She leaves to mourn her departure three daughters, two sons, fourteen grandchildren, two great grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends.

The funeral was held on Thursday afternoon from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hull, Rev. C. O. Johnson officiating. E. R. Kinsey director. Interment at Riverside cemetery.

"Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me;
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea!
For though from out our bourn of time and place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my pilot face to face,
When I have the bar!"

Obituary

Adeline Sebert-Widney, daughter of Henry and Gedida Sebert, was born in Knox Co., Ohio, Aug. 5, 1836 She was one of a family of eight children all of whom preceded her in death to the Great Beyond. In 1847 she came with her parents to DeKalb Co., Ind., and settled on a small farm, three miles east of Auburn, where she was reared to young womanhood. At the age of twelve years she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church. She attended the public school in Auburn, becoming a school teacher in early life. On Sept 2, 1858, she was united in marriage to Charles Widney and to this union was born two children, Mary A., born July 12, 1859 and died Sept 20, 1865 and is buried in the old graveyard at Auburn, and Adolphus, born March 21, 1869. In July 1840, by the extreme carelessness of an older sister she was scald d nearly to death Her life hung in the balance for a long time. This injury affected her health during the remainder of her life. At the close of the Civil War she had a very hard stroke of paralysis and during one night her life hung in the balance. In 1838 she and her husband settled on a small farm in Jackson township where they liv d until the commencement of the Civil War, when having sold this farm they purchased the old Sebert home place three miles east of Auburn in Union township, where their second child was born and where they lived until March 1870. In the spring of that year they removed to Pottawatomi Co., Kas. In 1871 when her mother, who was making her home with Mrs John Talbert nearly four miles northwest of Auburn, lay dying, early one morning she heard her call her by name at the window, which was at the head of her bed, a number of times so loud that it awakened her out of a deep sleep, the last two or three calls were repeated when she was wide awake.

In 1873 came the panic known in history as the "Panic of '73." In Kansas prices of farm products went to smash. A double box load of corn would sell for almost nothing. In 1874 northwestern Kansas was visited by one of Pharoah's plagues. The chinch bugs got in the spring wheat at the roots and into the corn covering the latter from the roots nearly to the top, sucking the corn juice as they went up Then the drouth or extreme hot dry weather came on, and then the grasshoppers came in as thick as our house flies would gather on a molasses plate to clean up everything that was lest by the chinch bugs and dry weather, leaving the farmers nothing that was eatable. There were cattle thieves that would swipe a poor man's cow if they got a chance, and firebugs that would set the open prarie on fire at midnight to see the farmers hustle out of bed to fight the running prarie fire and get their eyes smoked out to save their haystacks, fences, houses and stables from burning up. They bought eighty acres of raw school land with three creeks running through it and uniting in the center. They rented their land for crop rent. The people were from Indiana, New Jersey, Michigan, Kentucky and Tennessee. When Adolphus was seven years old he was lost in a dense fog one morning and wondered over the prarie till toward evening when he was found by one of the neighbors The neighbors from the north and south turned out to look for him. In the summer of 1877 they sold their eighty acres for what they could get for it to Thomas O'Brien, and came back to Indiana. The railroad bridges were unsafe as it had rained several days and the rivers were out of their banks. They moved into a log house on a farm beloning to Park Sebert in the summer of 1877 and lived there until January 1879. when they removed to Concord Tp. In the spring of 1879 she and her husband removed to her late residence. On September 24, 1886, she was left a widow by her husband dying. He is buried in the Newville graveyard. In 1887 she joined the M. P. Church. For several years she had been in very poor health. On the evening of February 19th., she fell on some ice near the front gate and fractured her right thigh bone. She was removed to Dr. Souder's bospital at Auburn on February 23rd., by order of Dr. Shook, where she died the following day, aged 83 years, 6 months and 19 days. She was cared for by her son Adolphus during all those years of sickness.

Funeral service was held on last Thursday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Carpenter. Rev. C. O. Johnson, officiating. E. R. Kinsey, director.

The latter being defeated in this game. The second game will be on Thursday evening at this place but will not commence until after church.

Tourists Club Song.

A club song has now been written for the Ladies' Tourist Club of St. Augustine, Florida, with words by a club member, Mrs. D. F. Benninghoff, of St. Joe, Indiana, set to the well-beloved and always popular music of "Suwanee River."

"St. Augustine, Our Winter Home"

To the tune of Suwanee River.

Just down within the Ancient City,
Not far away;
There's where the wise tourists gather
There's where the good folks stay;
Go up and down the whole creation,
'Way from the snow;
It will be for you health's salvation,
For there's where the good folks go.

Chorus—

Oh, the world will never be dreary
Where'er I roam;
Oh, ladies, how my heart grows cheery
Thinking of our winter home!

All 'round this sunny place I wandered
Day after day—
Yes, many happy hours I pondered
Near by the waves at play.
When I was mingling with all nature
Content was I;
Oh, let me be near my Creator,
Thus let me live and die.

One little place among the many,
One that I love
Will rush to my mem'ry if any,
As o'er the world I rove;
Then will I hear the ladies humming,
'Round the fire-place,
Then still I hear the music drumming
Then see your happy face.

IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if Kidneys feel like lead or Bladder bothers.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulates them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

Water on the Knee.

A certain man of rather a waggish disposition, contends that his wife has no imagination. At dinner one night he chanced to mention a tragic circumstance, which he had read in the evening paper on his way home. A passenger on a transatlantic steamer had fallen overboard in mid-ocean, and had never been seen again.

"Was he drowned?" asked the wife.

"Oh, no," answered the husband, "but he sprained his ankle, I believe!"

TRAVELING EXHIBITS EXPLAIN METHODS OF GRADING DIFFERENT KINDS OF GRAIN

One of the Exhibits Sent Out by the United States Department of Agriculture to Help Growers, Buyers, Millers and Others Understand Grain Grading Under the Federal Standards.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Hanging in one of the rooms occupied by the main office of the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, in Washington, is a map showing an important phase of the government's work in interesting grain growers, dealers and millers in grain grading. The map is dotted with many colored pins, indicating towns and villages, scattered north, south, east and west, where this truth has been emphasized in connection with grain-grading demonstrations, given by representatives of the bureau. The map is an epitome of the grain experts' work in spreading the gospel of grain grading.

Grading Made Understandable.

It is not easy to explain grain grading if one attempts it without samples or apparatus, but with the equipment included in traveling exhibits sent out by the department it is a much simpler matter. With the help of information given by the demonstrators a farmer familiar with grain can soon learn to grade his own crop satisfactorily.

Prior to the establishment of federal grades, growers and interior buyers knew little of the various methods and interpretations of different local grades at the grain terminals. Under federal standards the government shows how the grading is done according to definite rules of one national standard, so that the farmer and interior dealer have access to the same knowledge of grain grading as was formerly had by the terminal dealer. The exhibits are designed to show the correct methods of applying the federal grades for oats, wheat and shelled corn. The apparatus displayed includes a moisture tester, scales for weighing samples and separations, a test weight-per-bushel device, a "50-50" separating device, sieves and a wild-oat "kicker."

To visitors interested in learning how samples of grain from a car or bin are secured which are truly representative, it is explained that a sampler makes probes in five or more different parts of a car with a tubelike instrument containing ten compartments. With this he secures grain from various depths of the load. The contents of each probe is emptied upon a sampling cloth and examined for odor, temperature and condition. A portion of the sample is put in an air-tight can and the remainder in a cloth bag. These two lots are then brought to the inspection office for examination, testing and grading.

But, the visitor objects, such samples are too large for testing and for a detailed examination of the kernels. That is true. That is just the reason for the "50-50" machine, the demonstrator explains. The sample from the bag is poured into the hopper at the top of this two-spouted cylindrical machine and a cone-shaped baffle, located just below the outlet of the hopper, causes the grain to spread evenly over its surface. At its base are a series of ducts, each alternate duct flowing into one of the spouts below, which accurately divides the sample in half so that one portion of it will grade exactly the same as the other. Five or six divisions of the sample are made in this way to reduce the portion to be examined from about 4½ pounds to from one to nine ounces, depending on the test to be made. This enables the inspector to analyze the sample rapidly. Part of the loose sample is put through the test weight-per-bushel machine. The value of this device lies in the fact that with all samples weighed the kettle is filled under uniform conditions. The sample falls just two inches from a hopper to the quart kettle, passing through an opening 1¼ inches in diameter.

Use of Type Trays.

When the examination of the individual kernels is undertaken the inquirer at the exhibit sees the value of the glass-covered type trays to the demonstration. If corn is being examined the demonstrator picks up a tray showing kernels that serve as types to determine whether a sample classes as "white," "yellow" or "mixed." Another group of kernels shows various types of damaged kernels.

If the grading of white oats is being demonstrated, another tray is used. If wheat is under discussion the inquirer is shown one or more of a large number of wheat type trays which illustrate the various classes and subclasses of wheat, the principal varieties in each class and types of foreign material and damage.

For Benefit of Visitor.

A portion of the sample retained in the air-tight can is placed in the moisture tester for the benefit of the visitor. He sees how the inspector determines the percentage of moisture in the grain and learns that definite percentages are allowed for each grade. All the other tests described above are made on the large sample in the cloth bag. The oat kicker is a mechanical device which separates the oats, weed stems, chaff, straw and other foreign matter known as dockage from wheat samples. This is the first test for wheat samples. In corn and oats samples the foreign material is separated by screening with hand sieves.

Thousands of farmers and others interested in grain have visited these exhibits, which are helping producers, dealers, millers and others understand the principles of grain grading. After talking with the demonstrators they realise that the application of the federal grades materially narrows marketing costs, and so is a direct benefit to both grower and consumer.

HELP IN MARKETING PUREBRED ANIMALS

Plan Inaugurated to Give Buyers Necessary Information.

Success Dependent on Co-operation of Breeders in County or Community With Each Other and With the County Agent.

The live stock farmer having only a few purebred animals for sale at rather infrequent intervals, often has difficulty in disposing of his surplus profitably, often because purchasers do not know what he has to sell.

The bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, in co-operation with the state, county and local agencies, has inaugurated a plan which assists buyers in obtaining information regarding the location, character and number of purebred animals. The success of this plan is dependent on the co-operation of the breeders in a county or community with each other and with the county agent. The latter's office should be in the headquarters for the association. In this office should be filed complete information regarding the purebred animals belonging to the members. Through the county agent, according to the plan, the state agent in marketing and the bureau of markets at Washington are kept in touch with the supply. These agencies likewise keep in touch with buyers and so are able to serve an increasing number of buyers and sellers effectively.

EASTERN SUPPLY OF TIMBER

Quantity in Far West Does Not Mean That the Country Is Not Already Suffering.

The fact that there are still large quantities of standing timber in the far West does not mean that our country is not already suffering from the consequences of forest destruction. Europe will look first to our eastern states for lumber, because of the shorter distance. And the eastern supplies of old timber are rapidly approaching exhaustion.

MEN CHANGED BY BATTLE

Soldiers Have Learned What Can Be Accomplished by the Use of Force, Sternly and Efficiently Applied.

Article IX

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Making a soldier out of a civilian does more than change the clothes he wears. It changes the man. Men who had never owned a revolver or rifle, who had never even shot one off, who had never killed anything in their lives, were given firearms. They were drilled, taught to shoot, taught to kill. The education was thorough and scientific. They learned to look down the sight of a rifle, pick out a human heart for a target, fire and eagerly watch for the man to fall. They were trained to rush madly at a wall of human beings and drive bayonets into men's heads and bowels. Many of these men a few years before would have fainted in a stockyards where cattle were being killed. For four years they have been in a human slaughterhouse, not only as spectators, but as part of the place. It steeled these men. Many of them contracted the undertaker's point of view towards life, a fatalism without fear.

Experience in battle taught them the meaning of the word "force." They discovered that the individual was only important and efficient when he acted in concert with a great group. Everything depended upon team work. Men learned that a group of men working in harmony, with nerve and rifles with fixed bayonets, could do wonderful things. They could take an objective. In other words, take the thing they wanted and needed. When these men came back into civil life and took off khaki and put on overalls, the taking off of the khaki and the putting on of mufti did not erase from their minds this lesson the war had taught them.

This lesson has borne fruit. The men look at the employer as an enemy. The employer thinks of them as a commodity. Hatred is cordial. The men want something. They demand it. The employer refuses. Their objective is to get the thing they want and need. The war taught them there is a way, a weapon—Force. Today in Europe men reason, "If we can't get what we want, and need, we must take it. We have the force." Having grown habited to suffering, accustomed to blood and death, they look with indifference on the question of danger, of price. They saw that when nations could not agree they resorted to force. They discovered that victory generally went to the nation possessing the greatest force.

Threat of "Direct Action."

In the labor movement of Europe we have this idea in what is called "direct action." "Direct action" is nothing more or less than applying war methods to peace conditions. It is an effort on the part of great groups of working men to compel recognition of their demands. They seek to secure their objective by force. No allowance is made for the fact that methods justifiable in war are not right in peace. Few people will deny that war is the supreme expression of force.

Many men got their first taste of fresh air and decent food while in the army. Very properly the allied governments gave the best of everything to the men in the armies. It isn't difficult to get accustomed to good food and fresh air; it is hard to go back to poor food and the tenements. Back home, many of the demobilized soldiers are not eating as well or as much as they ate during their service.

Notwithstanding the rigid discipline of army life, men are treated as men. The humblest man in the ranks has rights that must be respected. This is not always the case in civil life. Then, too, while in uniform the private was made much of. Class distinction was obliterated. He was looked upon as one of his country's defenders. Since he has been demobilised he has been forgotten and neglected. This has soured him. He resents it. Social distinctions have come back. He is only a working man now.

Another cause of unrest among the working man of Europe grows out of the war. Mobilization took millions of men from their jobs. A great shortage of labor resulted. Employers were forced to compete to get men. The usual competition was among men to get jobs. The law of supply and demand affected the labor market. Wages went up. The soldier went off to war. While he was in the trenches the wages back home were high. His pay was small. Our fighting men were not interested in pay. They went to fight for a principle. With the coming of peace a large quantity of labor was dumped upon the market. The demobilised men rushed for employment. Comrades competed for jobs. The same old law of supply and demand sent wages tobogganing. The number of men who wanted jobs was much greater than the number of places available. The returning soldier seeking a job was offered a much smaller wage than he knew was paid for the same work while he had been fighting. It incensed him. He figured that he had given four years out of his life, had come home tired and broke. He looked upon the decline in wages as a positive discrimination against him.

Comparison Breeds Discontent.

Everywhere I have heard these men say: "We are out of luck. The bands played and we were applauded when we left to fight. While we were gone the wages went up. We don't begrudge the men who stayed at home the wages they got, but it's damn funny that when we come back down go wages. The cost of living don't go down. I guess we're out of luck."

I found two phrases inseparable in the speech of the discontented, "the high cost of living;" "the profiteer." Workingmen with whom I talked, freely admitted that some of the high cost of living was the legitimate result of the great demand for everything and the natural shortage, but in the same breath they insisted that much of it was due to the mercenary, ghoulish profiteer.

The profiteer took blood money during the world's greatest tragedy. He exacted usury from the toiler at home and the fighting man at the front. He drew dividends out of the tears and wails of broken-hearted women and fright-stricken children. He minted his gold out of agony, starvation, heartaches. He stands today the Judas of the war, the most despised man of earth.

The profiteer is not an Englishman, a Frenchman, Italian or American. He is found in every country of the world, a man without nationality, without conscience, without humanity. He is the pimp of civilization. He is still on the job.

The profiteer has given the United States a terrible black eye. A common comment of Europe is, "The United States made money out of the war." These people do not refer to the money we made legitimately. They point to the fact, a fact that has been given great publicity in Europe, that in August, 1914, there were about 7,000 millionaires in the United States, while at the time of the signing of the armistice it was estimated the millionaire colony had increased by 23,000, making a total of 30,000 millionaires in the United States. The profiteer is still on the job. He is holding up the world, a starving, cold world.

Profiteering Case in Point.

Under date of November 17, 1919, J. S. Bache & Co., members of the New York stock exchange, in their financial letter say: "In mercantile circles there is proceeding at the present time a vast amount of speculation on a very large scale in commodities. An incident is cited to us of one concern that is carrying $15,000,000 worth of vegetable oils, which are in great demand, and the concern is holding them for higher prices. This is a distinct damage to the consumers, and keeps living prices in these things, used daily, at top and increasing levels. Speculation of this kind is a real detriment to the community."

The pair of shoes the workingman once bought for $3.50 are now $8 and $10. It is true that the cost of labor and material have gone up, but not enough to warrant any such exorbitant prices. Business men have taken advantage of the situation, and justify their larcenies on the ground of the law of supply and demand. A shoe man with a prominent Chicago firm, a man long in the business, told me that the present unwarranted and outrageous price of shoes was due to the fact that American shoe manufacturers could get almost any price for shoes from the barefooted people of Europe.

Governments are blamed for not dealing with this species of holdup. The discontented ask "Why isn't profiteering treason—why shouldn't these Fagans be sent to the wall with a firing squad as an escort?"

Greatest of Hun Crimes.

Evidence that destruction wrought in France and Belgium by German armies was deliberate and unjustified by military necessity has accumulated since the signing of the armistice, according to a statement given out by the national committee of the United States for the restoration of the library at Louvain. Col. William Barclay Parsons, subway builder, who commanded the eleventh engineers, the regiment that went to Haig's aid with picks and shovels when the Huns were driving at the channel ports, in a letter to the executive committee, of which Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, is chairman, called the destruction of the Louvain library, with its precious treasures, the greatest of Teuton crimes in Belgium. Noted Europeans were quoted as sharing similar views.

Germans to Be Prosecuted.

Prosecution will be carried out, according to announcement made in Berlin, of German subjects charged with offenses and crimes committed in Germany against the person or property of hostile aliens during the war and up to June 20 of this year. The attorney general will be obliged to prosecute crimes perpetrated by Germans abroad during this period if the crimes are also punishable under the law of the country where committed.

The law covering general procedure in these cases has been submitted to the national assembly. It permits relatives or heirs of the injured party to appear as complainants.

Country Uses Much Cocoa.

The United States is the world's largest consumer of crude cocoa, having taken in 1918 about 50 per cent of the total world production of 386,000 tons. The imports of crude cocoa into this country for the fiscal year ending June 20, 1919, were 313,037,419 pounds, valued at $35,953,990, a falling off of 21.6 per cent in quantity and 12.9 per cent in value from the high record of 1918.

"But the diamonds?" said I, meaning to test her attitude, since she'd had a chance to think over what I'd told her about monsieur's claims on them and particularly as he'd gone to her himself: "Will you take them home with you?"

She recoiled from me. "I can't—now—how can I?" she gasped. "Oh, you're going to help me, aren't you?"

She had caught hold of me and looked positively frightened as she spoke, glancing over her shoulder at the door to see that it was tight shut and that we could not be overheard.

"I depend on you—I trust you. If I lose those diamonds—oh, you can't guess what I shall lose! I wouldn't lie to you—I tell you that man De Ravenol is a thief. I get it clairaudiently every time he comes near me. I see the word, as I told you yesterday, over his head in white letters. My spirit guides wouldn't give it to me if it weren't true."

There was both scorn and appeal in her tone. I saw the moment was not ripe for a discussion of the Tibetan mahatma question. Nor did her renewed expressions of confidence in me and her obvious need of help in the present difficulties lessen the complications that now entangled me. Before I could think of anything suitable to say, she burst out: "You'll not desert me, will you?—now that I need you worse than ever!"

And what could I say but, "No—I'll stand by you though the heavens fall!" and wonder what new bizarre line of conduct I was committing myself to? I didn't try to think, but told her Billy was here and suggested that she meet him—particularly since he'd been to the hotel and was all wrought up over Claire's mysterious departure. Mrs. Delario demurred, but I overruled her and presented Billy.

Billy's relief and joy at the rediscovery of Claire were quite touchingly amusing and he made himself correspondingly agreeable to Claire's chaperon. He seemed conveniently to forget his dictum of a couple of hours ago that said chaperon was crazy. The only point we any of us attempted to elucidate was the new man's connection with the case—which we felt was somehow the key to monsieur's sudden disappearance—and I was not a little surprised to hear Billy ask her seriously: "Can't you get something about him, clairvoyantly?"

She told him she couldn't at the moment—the conditions weren't right—she was too worried—too confused.

"Of course," he agreed. "It's like everything else—takes your best powers."

"Ah—I see you understand," she replied gratefully, and it seemed to me with a little emphasis on the "you" that set him apart from me; and that, I have always thought, was the precise point at which they began to draw together in a friendship that made him her warm partisan, even against me; for the next time he saw me alone he told me he had decided she had better keep the diamonds.

"Of course," he agreed again. "And I can see how you couldn't feel equal to it after what you've been through this morning." This was artfully hinted to lead back to Claire.

They might have continued their interchange of opinions on Claire and her father for the next half-hour—judging by the way they seemed to be enjoying it—but I brought them to earth with the question: "How are we going to protect Claire from the new man? He's probably determined to see her and find out something about her father's whereabouts."

"The deuce!" cried Billy. "I'd forgotten him. Don't let him see her, if he comes back, whatever you do!" This to Mrs. Delario. "It would be simply too dreadful for her."

"I know. Still, I can't keep her a prisoner in her room. You wouldn't suggest that, would you?"

"Heavens, no!" Billy rapped out. "I should say not! Hasn't she been through about enough already?"

"But suppose the man has already traced her there and has the house watched—the same as her father did?" I flung in.

"That's one of the important things I came to see you about—" Mrs. Delario turned to me. "If the house is watched—and I feel it is, or will be before the day is over—Claire is virtually a prisoner. I won't dare to let her go out alone."

"The deuce!" cried Billy, jumping up and snatching his hat off the table as though he were about to run to the rescue. Then he turned as red as a beet and signaled me with his eyes and a couple of gestures which she did not see—"Help me out, can't you? Make her ask me to go home with her." For he had the wit to see, before he'd let himself in with a word, that he couldn't force himself on a woman like Mrs. Delario without placing himself before both of us in the position of an officious pup and very likely getting a snub that would spoil his chances.

I played to his signal—and won a bushel of gratitude from both sides.

"Won't you let Mr. Rivers go home with you and find out how Claire is and come back and tell me?" I asked her artlessly; and to him, "You'll do that for me, won't you, Billy?"

"Oh, will you, Mr. Rivers?" she asked, in great relief, rising as she spoke and preparing to hurry off.

Billy's eyes were popping and his feet were almost dancing. I pressed him with a frown—unseen by her—that said: "Now, look out, young man, how you play your cards!"

"What a relief to have Mr. Rivers!" she cried with feeling, and took my hand. Then she affectionately kissed me—for the first time in her life.

I saw her and Billy to the elevator, pushing my hall door flat against the wall to keep it from blowing shut on me, and waited, idly waving a good-by and watching her till the car had sunk out of sight. I had just stepped into my hall again and laid my hand on the doorknob, when I heard a sharp imperative "Wait!"

I jumped and wheeled. A man stepped out from the stairs back of the elevator shaft. His face was concealed in a pulled-up collar and a pulled-down hat. With three quick strides he was within the doorway. He pushed me out of the way and seized and slammed the door on us. Then he carefully put up the chain-bolt. As he did it, he held up his free hand with a "Sah!"

No need of warning—I was paralyzed! It had taken him just four seconds to make me his prisoner.

CHAPTER XVII.

A Little Scheme.

I had been too completely stunned by the suddenness with which my imprisonment had been effected even to think who my visitor might be, and it was not until he turned from bolting the door and apologised politely, "Pardon zis intrusion, madame," that I recognized De Ravenol. And then he removed his hat and motioned me to precede him along the hall.

"Madame, I ask a sousand pardons," he began suavely. "Unfortunate—or rasser, unforeseen circumstances, rendered zis intrusion necessary and I feared if you closed ze door—since you had had interview wis your friend Madame Delario you might perhaps be tempted not to speak wis me—and a delay to speak wis me might spoil all our plans."

While he talked I felt my courage come back, and in a voice I felt was not obviously shaky, I replied: "Oh, certainly. I understand. I was expecting you."

"Expecting me?" He seemed surprised that I should be expecting him at that time and asked why, at the same time motioning me to take a chair by my study table and showing me he would sit in the other.

To gain time on my side, I went on: "I fear you worried about Claire, when she did not come. I should have telephoned you, but my telephone seems to be out of order."

I had a malicious pleasure in reminding him that he was the one to suffer for it and a frown passed over his face, but was gone in an instant as he said: "It is of no consequence," and then plunged into the matter at hand.

"While I wait for ze lift to pass down just now, I sink I recognise ze voice of Madame Delario. She is here a moment since, ze she not?"

"Yes—she was here."

He paused as if in hopes that I would tell him what she had come for, but I had taken quick stock of the situation and decided to let him do all the talking.

"Zen she have probably told you zat I have seen her last evening?"

"Yes—she mentioned it, I believe."

"Bien—zat helps me to explain. You see, I feel it necessary to have some words wis her after she have talked wis you and before she can see you and communicate her ideas wis you. Hence I am oblige to put you to some trouble—for which I ask one sousand pardons—in order zat I accomplish it. Zerefore—I arrange it zat I leave my daughter to entertain you and Mr. Rivers while I make a brief call on Madame Delario and see what she have to say for herself about zose diamonds. And for zis reason: When I see you last evening, I am in positive command of information zat proves her to have ze diamonds."

I fear I gave a start at this information, for he threw himself back with a self-satisfied smile as much as to say, "I thought that would astonish you," and drew a cardcase from his pocket, removing a clipping torn from the "Personals" in the Herald and pointing to one notice, marked with pencil on the margin.

I read it:

"Large reward for name of person recently offering special set of matched stones. State numbef and color. Box 32, Herald Office."

I returned it to him without comment—I tried to appear ignorant of what it might mean.

"I have insert it sree times," he went on smugly. "I do so because I argue to myself as follows: Ze diamonds are find by Madame Delario and she say to herself: 'Probably somebody play a joke on me—zey are not real, zese jewels—zey are paste. Still, sey may be worse somesing even so, and I will take sem to a dealer and find out.'"

He paused to laugh and under cover of it gave me a look with his beady eyes—which I fancy told him nothing.

"Now sen, I ask myself where does she take sem first? Probably to Tiffany. I have myself inquire zere, but wisout result. And I realize I cannot interview every dealer in ze city—also it is not well for me to be seen too much looking for zose stones. Zerefore I have insert ze notice and I receive more zan fifty replies. All worseless but one—"

He produced a shabby scrap of paper, saying it was a veritable clue, and gave it to me to read.

"I can give you name and address of party offering seven large red stones last Saturday. Address by letter only, Haskins, 1861 Third avenue, Box 7."

"I see at once I have somesing of value. I have receive sis on Saturday morning. But before sat, I have received some uzzer letters"—he gave a little shrug to indicate that he referred to the decoy letters he had received from Billy and me—"and I sink I have not only ze clue, but sat I can obtain ze diamonds wisout to inquire of sis Haskins. So I make my endeavor—as you know—wis ze result—"

He stopped a moment and I saw he was making an effort to keep down his mortification—and probably his hate—and I hastened to help him do both by telling him cordially: "I'm really awfully sorry, monsieur, but then—what else could I do?"

"Ah, madame, it is no more to mention between us," he returned gallantly. "But—you American ladies! So energetic! One knows not how to take you!"

"I suppose we are puzzling—to foreigners."

"Puzzling! I have sink I know somesing of se ladies and of se Americans, since my wife is herself American, but I find since I am come to sis country I have much to learn. Oui!" and he gave me a little laugh, showing he meant me to take this in a complimentary way.

"And now I may tell you zat I have se name and se address of se one who have zose diamonds in his possession: It is Mr. Eugene Delario—ze young son of Madame Delario—who offers—or at least seeks to have valued—zose diamonds last Saturday at a dealer's on Maiden Lane."

It has always been a mystery to me that I managed to control—or think I did—every facial expression that might have shown him I already knew what he told me. But monsieur went on, apparently not noticing anything about me:

"You know se son of Madame Delario?—Monsieur Eugene?"

"I have never met him—no."

"Well—it is of no consequence—I know of a certainty it is ze son of Madame Delario who have shown zose diamonds last Saturday—and he don't know zey are diamonds! Oui! And after I have sis information, I argue zis way: Since I have her so positive denial, it is her son who have accidentally discover zose diamonds unknown to her and he says nossing! You see? All is now explained."

"But, monsieur, are you sure of this man Haskins?" I questioned. "Are you sure he wasn't lying for the reward?—that all he told you wasn't a mere coincidence?"

"Bah!" he cried in a tone of disgust and some contempt for me. "Coincidence! Madame, you must know zat when you find more zan sree coincidences in a case you have—circumstantial evidence! When you have sufficient circumstantial evidence you have—proof. And when you have ze proof of a crime—you can act!"

He shot this off in a fierce determined tone and I saw he was ready to spring the mine under the Delarios, mother and son. To gain time, I asked: "But are these coincidences sufficient?—are they evidence?"

"Bah!" he cried again. "Zey are sufficient for any court!" He leaned a little nearer to me and spoke in a more confidential way, as if he expected me to agree with him: "Ze chain of evidence is complete. Ze same house—ze house in which zose diamonds are known to go in zat slipper; ze son of ze lady who owns zat slipper; ze date on which zey are shown—not before zey have arrive in America, but some five days after; ze seven stones. And ze man Haskins have even describe ze same box! Oui—Monsieur Eugene does not take zose diamonds out of zat box to show zem!—a small white box about ze size—"

Monsieur glanced over my table and his eye fell on—the box with the diamonds!

"—about ze size of sis," and he picked it up.

My heart stopped beating. With a tremendous effort I raised my eyes from it to his face, just as he took hold of the elastic and snapped it.

My Heart Stopped Beating.

"Ze chain of evidence is perfect!" he cried, pulling up the elastic and—it broke with a sharp report.

The sound went through me like a pistol-shot. I jumped half out of my chair and exclaimed, "Oh!" and fell back again. I had heard the pens rattle. I thought, "Suppose he opens it—suppose he drops it! Heavens! What shall I do? How shall I get it out of his hands and not betray myself?" It took about a second for these words to flash through me, and before I had decided—or had need to decide, he exclaimed: "Pardon me, madame—did I frighten you?" and laid the box back on the table.

For a moment I was unable to speak. The tension of those few seconds while he actually held the diamonds in his hands, had paralyzed me.

I realized that I was pressing my hand to my heart! I stopped that and stammered, "Y—yes, I am a little nervous."

He waited a moment for me to recover my self-possession and then went on briskly:

"Madame, I wish to say immediately—before we proceed anozzer step—zat I appreciate your position. It is most difficult—most difficult for a lady such as yourself. You are se friend of Madame Delario, is it not?"

"Yes, I am—and you must realize—"

He stopped me. "Oui—perfectly. And it is as her friend zat I approach you now and ask your continued help."

"No, monsieur, you must let me withdraw now from all further connection with the case. I have done all I can—I truly have—"

"I know—I appreciate," he cut in. "Now attend, madame, to my argument: Sree sings must be considered." He checked them off on his fingers. "First, she confesses she has zose diamonds and will return zem to zeir rightful owner. Second, madame will deny absolutely zat she have ever seen zose diamonds. It may be ze truse—it may not be—se point is, zat she denies all knowledge. You and Monsieur Rivers have already told me se difficulty I meet here—if she have find sem and deny it. Or, sird—she confesses to you everysing about se finding of zose diamonds, but—you are her friend—she induces you not to betray her secret—you promise her you will not. A most difficult position for you, madame, if zat last is se case, is it not?"

"Decidedly," I remarked dryly.

"Oui. And now I beg you to appreciate sis evidence of my esteem for yourself—I wish to spare you all possible humiliation, and yet to retain your co-operation wis me.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1930, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR MARCH 21

JOHN'S PICTURE OF WORSHIP IN HEAVEN.

LESSON TEXT—Rev. 7:9-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honor, and power, and might be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen.—Rev. 7:12.

PRIMARY TOPIC — The Heavenly Home.

JUNIOR TOPIC.—A Glimpse of Heaven.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC —A Vision of the Glorious Future.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC —Permanent Message of the Book of Revelation.

I. The Worshipers (vv. 9-14).

1. Who they are (vv. 9, 11). (1) Redeemed men (v. 9). They are mainly Gentiles—"of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues." They are those to whom the "gospel of the kingdom" has been preached by converted Israelites (Matt. 24:14). In the first part of chapter seven we saw God sealing his chosen ones from Israel. They were sealed with the seal of God in their foreheads, which doubtless means the supernatural endowment of the Holy Spirit on the last days (Joel 2:28-32). While this was partially fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, its larger realization is still future (Acts 2:15-21). This outpouring is for the equipment of the Jews for their divinely ordained mission, namely, to preach the gospel of the kingdom to the whole world. When God sends forth the 144,000 Jews with the unction of the Holy Spirit, the innumerable multitude from all nations will receive Christ, the slain Lamb, for their redemption. (2) All the angels (v. 11). These angels indorse this ascription of praise offered by these redeemed men by saying "Amen."

2. Whence came these redeemed? (vv. 13, 14). They came out of the great tribulation (v. 14). After the rapture of the Church (I Thess. 4:13-18), awful days of suffering and trial shall come upon the world (II Thess. 2:7, 8). It is the time of sorrow when the anti-Christ shall hold sway; such days as were not before nor shall be after, in which if not shortened no flesh could be saved (Matt. 24:15, 21, 22; cf. Dan. 7:8; 9:26, 27).

3. What they say (vv. 10, 12). (1) Salvation to our God and the Lamb (v. 10). They ascribe their salvation to God through the sacrifice of the Lamb, Jesus Christ. (2) "Blessing." They acknowledge that all blessings come from him. (3) "Glory." They acknowledge him as the glorious one and the one to whom all glory should be given. (4) "Wisdom." He is infinitely wise and all wisdom comes from him. (5) "Thanksgiving," because salvation was provided by him. (6) "Honor." Their hearts went out to him in high esteem. (7) "Power and might." They recognized that all power inhered in him.

II. The Blessedness of the Worshipers (vv. 13-17).

1. They are before God's throne (vv. 9, 15). They are in heaven and near the throne of God. Jesus Christ is now preparing mansions for those who shall go to heaven (John 14:1-3).

2. Clothed with white robes (vv. 9, 14). Their white robes suggest their character. They have been made such in the blood of the Lamb. The only way for a sinner to be made ready for heaven is through the blood of Christ.

3. They bear palm branches (v. 9). The significance of the palm is found in the use that the Jews made of it at the Feast of Tabernacles. It was a time of great joy, because it represented the gathered harvest. The bearers of the palm branches will experience the blessedness of not only being in heaven, but of enjoying rewards for their work on earth.

4. They serve God day and night (v. 15). Heaven is not a place of idleness, or altogether of singing God's praises, but a place where real, vital service is rendered to God; indeed, there are nobler fields of endeavor awaiting us beyond this life. This life is but a training school in which we are made ready for service in heaven.

5. God dwells among them (v. 15). To get to heaven at all would be truly blessed, but to be there and have God to dwell among us will be wonderful.

6. Hunger no more nor thirst (v. 16). Here life is one continuous round of hungering and thirsting. In heaven we shall neither hunger nor thirst, for Jesus Christ, the Lamb, shall feed us. The straits and necessities of life will then be over.

7. Neither shall the sunlight or heat come upon them (v. 17).

8. God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes (v. 17).

This Day Only.

Enjoy the blessings of the day if God sends them; and the evils bear patiently and sweetly; for this day only is ours; we are dead to yesterday, and not born to tomorrow.—Jeremy Taylor.

Greatest of All Cunning.

A WELL-KNOWN INSTITUTION.

Probably no institution in America is more widely known than Doctor Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y. Although established many years ago it is today a modern sanitarium, having all the latest facilities for the correct diagnosis of diseases and their successful treatment through medicines or surgery.

It was Dr. Pierce, its founder, who over 50 years ago gave to the world that wonderful stomach tonic and blood purifier, "Golden Medical Discovery," and that famous non-alcoholic medicine for women, "Favorite Prescription."

In his early professional career, Dr. Pierce realized that every family, but especially those who live remote from a physician, should have at hand an instructive book that would teach them something about First Aid, Physiology, Anatomy, Hygiene; how to recognize different diseases, how to care for the sick, what to do in case of accident or sudden sickness, etc., so he published that great book, the "Medical Adviser," an up-to-date edition of which can be procured by sending 50 cents to Doctor Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y.

Later, Dr. Pierce added another link to his chain of good works by establishing a bureau of correspondence to which any one can write for medical advice, without any expense whatever, and if necessary, medicines especially prepared in Doctor Pierce's Laboratory will be sent by parcel post or express for use at home, at a reasonable cost. Thus those who have symptoms of disease need not suffer mental agony fearing that they have some serious ailment, but can have a diagnosis made free by a physician of high professional standing. Write to Dr. Pierce relating your symptoms if you need medical advice for any chronic disease. All letters regarded as confidential.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription.

Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Report of Meeting.

The following is a report of the Red Cross meeting held at Auburn a few days ago that will be of interest to our readers:

The meeting was addressed by McKenzie R. Todd, assistant manager of the Lake Division, Dr. S. E. Brewster, who has been holding meetings on Red Cross work in DeKalb county for the last week and by Miss Rosa L. Krause, field manager.

All three of these higher officials united in paying the people of DeKalb county the highest compliments on their Red Cross work and it was stated that no other chapter of like size in this division is in as good shape financially as the local organization. They declared, however, that the chapter here had been slow in adjusting itself to a peace basis, and that the organization here had not yet given the proper attention to the eight hundred ex-soldiers in this county.

They recommended that there should be established at once a county community nurse service and a home service department to take care of the ex-service men. At present only the Auburn branch has a community nurse and owing to the scarcity of trained nurses no more could be expected for DeKalb county.

They recommended that the Auburn branch surrender Miss Grace Lewis, the local nurse, to the county chapter and that she organize a county nursing service. This the Auburn branch declared it is willing to do although Miss Lewis has been so useful that Auburn people will regret to part with her. Dr. Brewster declared that in Miss Lewis and Miss Gladys Grimm, county tuberculosis nurse, DeKalb county had the best pair of trained nurses there is to be found in the entire Lake Division and he wondered that the people here were so lucky in getting two such capable nurses in DeKalb county.

In the new arrangement for the nursing and health service it is expected Miss Lewis and Miss Grimm will map out a plan of co-operation whereby every part of the county will be taken care of.

Mr. Todd informed the meeting that the present method of permitting each branch to deposit its own funds would have to be changed to conform to the rules of the American Red Cross and furthermore that the division of the funds in that manner prevented any general plan being followed and resulted in tying up a lot of money which should be used for the purposes intended.

The board of directors and executive committee accepted this suggestion and directed that all funds be consolidated to the credit of the county chapter but that money on deposit in banks in various parts of the county should not be withdrawn until used.

The school play that was put on last week by the grades proved to be a financial success as well as a pleasing time. The little folks did splendidly in rendering the program and the parents and others filled the hall in nice shape. The net receipts amounted to $55.68. The teachers are to be highly commended in their efforts to train the children to take part in public entertainments without such difficulty as has been experienced for years past. It is a well known fact that the people like the efforts of the schools better than any others and they would do well to plan for another such an entertainment soon.

YOU may not class yourself as a dairy farmer, but if you keep a few cows and sell all or a part of your cream you need a cream separator. The exclusive grain farmer has one harvest a year, but you 780 harvests. Twice every day in the year you may be said to harvest your crop of milk. Separating it to get the butter fat might be compared to threshing the grain on the grain farm. If a grain thresher is badly adjusted or worn out, it often wastes many bushels of grain. Because a grain farmer threshes only once a year, his loss of grain for the foregaing reasons comes in one lump and he feels it keenly. An unreliable or worn out cream separator can easily lose 3 to 5 cents a day on each of your cows. Because it comes a little at a time this loss is unnoticed.

Butter fact is worth many times more than wheat, hence you see the situation. If you trying to get along without a separator you are loosing more than enough to buy a good separator each year.

THE PRIMROSE is not the highest priced cream separator made, neither is it the lowest, but when you consider the cream saving qualities, and also that it is built to give the service you want, as long, if not longer, than any other separator made. Let us demonstrate the Primrose to your satisfaction. We have them on hand and can make delivery at any time.

DOCTOR ADVISED CHANGE OF CLIMATE

Run Down and Lungs Hurt—Stayed Home and Gained 22 Pounds.

"In November, 1911, I had a severe cold and la grippe, which left me with a bad cough. My lungs and shoulder blades hurt so I couldn't sleep and I finally had to give up my job and was ordered to change climate. In April, 1912, I began taking Milks Emulsion. On the second bottle I could see a change. My appetite was better and I commenced to gain strength and weight. Now (August 22, 1912) I have used 23 bottles, have increased 23 pounds in weight and believe I am permanently cured."—W. F. Bourland, Route 5, Wolf City, Texas.

Mr. Bourland was fortunate in commencing to use Milks Emulsion when he did. A run-down system invites disease. Milks Emulsion costs nothing to try.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whom sickness has weakened, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream. Truly wonderful for weak, sickly children.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. Price 50c and $1.00 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

BACK ACHING?

That "bad back" is probably due to weak kidneys, a trouble that often follows grip, cold, or overwork. It shows in constant, dull, throbbing backache, or sharp twinges when stooping or lifting. You have headaches, too, dizzy spells, a tired, nervous feeling and irregular kidney action. Don't neglect it. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Thousands have saved themselves serious kidney ills by timely use of Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

An Indiana Case

Boon Acton, Arthur St., New Harmony, Ind., says: "My kidneys bothered me and I think taking cold is what started the trouble. I had sharp stitches in my back and the kidney secretions passed too often. Then a dull pain started in the small of my back and I got lame and sore all through my back. A friend told me to use Doan's Kidney Pills as they had cured him of kidney complaint. I sent right away for Doan's and took about two boxes which cured me."

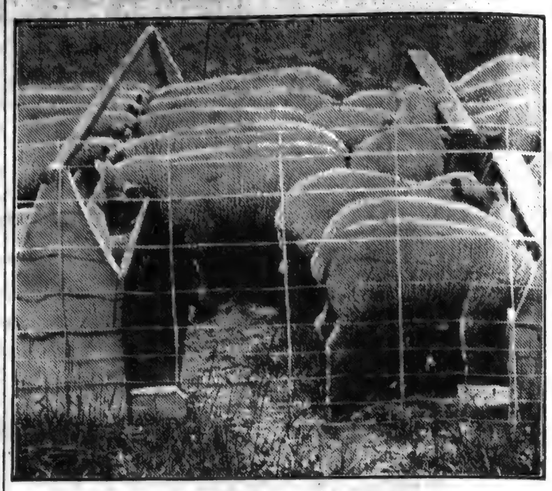
IN ORDER TO INSURE LARGEST PROFITS EWES AND LAMBS MUST HAVE EXTRA CARE



A Creep Can Be Constructed at Small Expense.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A large crop of lambs is the basis of good financial returns, while a small crop of lambs means less profit. It is very necessary that ewes and lambs be given extra attention in order to insure the largest profits, sheep specialists of the United States department of agriculture point out.

Heavy grain feeding just before lambing, especially in cases where the ewes have not been fed grain, is dangerous. If the ewes are not in good condition in the early part of the winter they should be gradually accustomed to grain six weeks prior to lambing time. A grain mixture of equal parts of corn, oats, and bran by weight, fed at the rate of one-fourth to one-half pound per head daily to ewes not in very good condition will be found a good practice. Prior to lambing the wool around the udder of the ewe should be clipped short to allow the lambs to find the teats readily.

When a ewe shows indications of lambing it will be found best to put her in a separate pen, which can be made of light panels four feet in length fastened together by a hinge and set in the corner. These panels permit the ewe to see the other members of the flock and prevent her from becoming excited and nervous. Their use also prevents the other sheep from disturbing the ewe and young lamb. The ewe has a good chance to get acquainted with her lamb at the start, thus averting the danger of disowned lambs later.

Give Careful Attention to Udders.

The lamb that is born strong and vigorous, with a good dam, will need very little care after the first day or two. It is important to see that the lamb gets its first feed promptly. When lambing pens are used the shepherd is able to give the individuals more careful attention and thus get them on the way more rapidly.

The shepherd should watch the ewes carefully to see that their udders are in good condition. This is of special importance during the first week with ewes which are heavy milkers. After lambing the ewes should be fed lightly at first, being put on full feed about the third or fourth day. At this time it is economical to feed heavily enough to produce a large flow of milk for the lambs. Ewes which are good milkers will use to advantage one to two pounds of grain per head daily. A good grain mixture consists of four parts of corn, four parts of oats, two parts of bran, and one part of oil meal, by weight.

Accustom Lambs to Grain.

When the lambs are two weeks old they should be provided with a grain feed in a lamb creep, which can be constructed so that only the lambs have access to the grain. Any convenient arrangement to meet the needs of the individual farm will be found satisfactory. Crushed corn and oats, with bran, fed in equal parts by measure, makes a very satisfactory feed to start the lambs with. They should be fed just a little at first until they become used to the grain, which should be gradually increased until they are receiving what they will clean up in 15 minutes twice a day. By providing grain for the lambs in a lamb creep, larger and more economical gains can be made.

When the lambs are from ten to fourteen days old they should be docked and castrated. When properly done it adds much to the appearance of a lamb and increases the selling price at the market. The best time to dock and castrate the lambs is in the morning of a clear, bright, sunny day. Care should be taken that they are not unduly excited before the operation is performed. Cleanliness should be followed in all cases in performing the operations. Another reason for performing the operation in the morning is that the shepherd has a chance to observe the condition of the lambs during the day to see that they are recovering satisfactorily.

For docking a sharp-edged tool can be used with very satisfactory results. Docking irons, which burn the tail, may be used and the loss of blood reduced to a minimum, but if it is used too hot the wounds will heal slowly. With any of these instruments the cut should be made about an inch from the body. The lamb should be held with the rump resting upon the top of the panel or pen partition, or upon a board, if the hot irons are used.

In castrating, the lamb is held in the same position. The hands and knife should be disinfected. Unless both testicles can be felt the operation should be delayed. The lower third of the scrotum should be cut off. The testicles then can be removed by pulling them straight out.

TUBERCULOSIS HARD DISEASE TO HANDLE

Owners of Live Stock Urged Not to Wait for Future.

Area Over Which Ailment Has Spread Is Too Vast, Herds Too Numerous and Funds Insufficient for Extensive Plan.

Live stock owners are earnestly requested, says the United States department of agriculture, not to wait until the states and federal government come into their localities to eradicate tuberculosis. It would not be possible indeed, at this stage to undertake to eradicate tuberculosis from the live stock of the United States solely through organized official forces established by the respective states and the federal government. The area over which tuberculosis has spread is too vast, the herds too numerous, and funds are insufficient for conducting the work on so extensive a plan even though trained veterinarians were available in sufficient numbers to do the work. Every live stock owner should be a party to this campaign which has been inaugurated to eradicate tuberculosis. In almost every locality of the United States are veterinarians capable of rendering valuable services to live stock owners in this great work, and the cost of eradicating is greatly reduced by combating the disease in its early stages. Yet even in badly affected herds eradication can be undertaken with success. There are records of many herds, in which three-fourths of the animals were affected with tuberculosis, which eventually were freed from it and afterwards maintained in a healthy condition.

TO DETERMINE BEST MARKET

Too Much Dependence Must Not Be Placed Upon Quotations Obtained Unless They Are Official.

In determining the best market, it is not sufficient for a shipper merely to get quotations from the different cities and ship to that market which quotes the highest prices, according to experts of the United States department of agriculture. Freight and other charges must be subtracted from these quotations. All factors considered, the best market is the market which shows the greatest net returns. However, too much dependence must not be placed upon these quotations unless official, as in many cases they are merely approximations of opinions as to the trend of the market and are not usually direct offers. In case of doubt the best plan is to sell in the market with which the shipper is most familiar, through some one familiar with the goods and ways of the shipper.

ROAD BUILDING

DRAINAGE IS BIG ESSENTIAL

Chief Requirement of Good Earth Road Is Drainage—Keep Crown Properly Dragged.

It can be truthfully said that drainage is the chief essential in putting earth roads into proper condition. An old Scotchman, an expert road builder, aptly said that the three requirements of good earth roads are drainage, more drainage, and still more drainage. The roads must not only have good surface drainage but must also have good under drainage. Surface drainage is secured by proper grading, adequate side ditches, and by keeping the crown of the road properly dragged. Stretches of road that do not dry out quickly must be under-drained by tile.

The drag must be used after each rain, if the best results are to be secured. Don't go on the road while too muddy, let it dry out slightly; it should be wet enough, however, so it will not crumble, but smear. When properly used, the drag brings a thin layer of earth toward the center of the road which is rolled and packed between the wet periods. If too much crown is secured by dragging, the angle of the drag should be reversed.

Several of the Grain Belt States Annually Expend Over $3,000,000 in Constructing and Maintaining Roads, Bridges and Culverts.

Getting the earth roads graded, ditches open, well drained, and properly crowned by dragging is about all that can be done until the people are ready to surface the road with gravel, broken stone or some other surfacing material.

GREAT 1920 ROAD PROGRAM

Necessary for Many States to Postpone Expenditure of Federal Funds for Building.

David F. Houston, secretary of agriculture, in his annual report, calls attention to the fact that the 1919 program for federal aid road building is greater than any previous annual road-building accomplishment in this country. It is so great, in fact, that it undoubtedly will be necessary for many of the states to postpone until 1920 the expenditure of the federal funds, because of the necessity of developing experienced contracting and engineering organizations from the stagnant conditions brought about by the war. Under the terms of the federal aid road act, the apportionment to a state for any one fiscal year remains available for expenditure until the close of the succeeding year. It is estimated that funds already provided will be sufficient to finance next year a program more than four times greater than any that has ever been undertaken.

GOOD MARKET IS REQUISITE

Prime Essential for Successful Diversified Farming—Bad Roads Are Drawback.

Farmers sooner or later learn the desirability of diversified farming. Perhaps no cause limits farming of this description so much as bad roads, for the prime requisite for successful diversified farming is a good market. This market may be either a nearby town or a city, or a distant market which requires railroad transportation.

ADVANTAGE TO AGRICULTURE

Time Saved in Hauling Over Improved Roads Really Reduces Cost of Transportation.

One of the great advantages of improved roads to agriculture is the time saved in hauling, which in reality amounts to a reduction in transportation costs.

BIGGER TAXES ON BAD ROADS

Less Time and Labor on Poor Highways Will More Than Build and Maintain Good Road.

Some folks object to a good roads tax. The American farmer pays greater taxes on bad roads than he does on the construction and maintenance of good roads. The time and labor lost on bad roads will more than pay the tax levy to build and support a good road.

NOT SO HARD TO UNDERSTAND

After Experience With Truthful Parent, Teacher Got Great Light on Johnny's Case.

A teacher who believed in co-operating with the parents of her pupils called at the house of a small boy whom she had caught in a number of falsehoods in order to take counsel with his mother.

"I can't see how you can say that," the boy's mother objected. "John never tells me lies. I'm mighty particular about it myself. He's out in the yard now. Annie," she said to his small sister, "you go out and tell him to come right in this minute!"

Annie went, but in a few minutes she returned without the small prevaricator. "He won't come," she announced proudly. "He says he won't."

"Did you tell him who was here?" inquired his mother.

Annie shook her head.

"All right," said the truthful parent. "Go back and tell him his grandmother is here and has some candy for him. That'll bring him!"—Youth's Companion.

Never the Same After That.

As I was making a bed one Monday morning a friend came to see me. She walked right in and not seeing me, said: "Are you at home?" I said: "Oh, yes, I never go visiting Monday morning." When I thought how it sounded, I was awfully embarrassed, and she never acted the same toward me.—Exchange.

FAMOUS BOWERY IS NO MORE

Prohibition and General Good Things Responsible for Disappearance of Its Oldtime Characteristics.

New York's old-time Bowery is no more. No final rites have marked its passage, nor has the last requiem been sung, but of recent months the change has been progressing swiftly and noticeably.

Only old-timers can remember the "Tub of Blood" and other famous dives, but now even the modern hangouts are disappearing one by one before the advent of national prohibition.

Most potent of the changes in America's former driftway of human wreckage is the virtual disappearance of the "Bowery bum." A newspaper feature writer recently sojourned on the street for a time, and he reported that the "bums" are now almost all at least casual workers, and that "cash," or a sizable roll of the "long green," abounds.

INDIANA NEWS

Columbus. — Bartholomew County Grange, the largest in Indiana, passed a number of resolutions defining the attitude of farmers on public questions. One demands legislation that would exclude from American shores all undesirable foreigners; another approved deportation of all reds, nihilists, communists, bolsheviki and other radicals. Other resolutions condemned the teaching of any foreign language; called for pure Americanism, with one system of schools, one language and one flag; opposed the re-enactment of the daylight saving law, and pledged farmers to fight it; demanded recognition of the agricultural class and appointment of genuine agricultural men on boards where agricultural interests are involved, and opposed the six-hour day.

Winchester.—A petition has been filed to dredge White river from a point three miles east of Winchester to Farmland, a distance of ten miles. It is proposed to drain 25,000 acres of land and the rights of way of the Big Four, Pennsylvania and Union Traction railways are affected. White river has its source six miles south of Winchester, and four miles of it was made a county drainage system six years ago. It is said that the petition will be fought vigorously by farmers affected.

Marion.—The Jonesboro post of the American legion has gone on record as opposing the Indiana state primary law, as being "dangerous to our great state and county governments." The use of money by candidates in elections, beyond a reasonable extent, is also condemned by the post, which says: "We are prone to return to the days of the pomp and pride of Rome, when the emperorship was sold at auction, and the publicans received corn, oil and wine for their votes."

Indianapolis.— A number of replies to the letters sent by Governor Goodrich to the Republican members of the state legislature in regard to their views on a special session of the assembly have been received at the governor's office. Governor Goodrich said that he will give the matter his attention as soon as all the replies are on file. The governor did not discuss the contents of the letters that have been received.

Crown Point.—Falling in line with many other counties in the state in adopting revised salary schedules for teachers the Lake county township trustees have decided on a new scale here for next year. The new minimum salary is $720 for new teachers in the elementary grades and ranges from that sum to a minimum of $1,170 for seventh-year class C teachers. The schedule affects only teachers in rural and small town schools.

Connersville.—Indications here are that the making of maple sugar and sirup in Fayette is to become a thing of the past. Very few trees will be tapped this year, and the output of sugar and sirup will not, in any case, more than satisfy local needs. The reason for the falling off in the industry, farmers say, is that there is no time to spend tapping the trees and gathering the sap.

Hammond.—Final negotiations are being completed between the United States Housing corporation and local property owners for the transfer and sale of the housing corporation's $1,000,000 housing project, built during the war to house employees at work on the government's $5,000,000 ordnance contract, given the Standard Steel car plant here. The property provides for 200 families.

Portland.—Ernest Smith of the state entomologist's office, following a general inspection of shade trees in this city, has reported to the secretary of the Commercial association that Portland's beautiful shade trees are doomed, unless immediate action is taken to save them from the ravages of cottony maple scale and oyster bark louse.

Warsaw.—Acting on a request from Warsaw club women, the city council has revived the old curfew law which was enacted in Warsaw twenty-five years ago and which was enforced for many years. Children under sixteen years of age must be off the street at 9 o'clock from September to March 1, and at 10 o'clock from March 1 to September 1.

Lafayette.—Smut, the greatest disease enemy of the oats crop in Indiana, is to be fought energetically this year by farmers of the state, assisted by the forces of the Purdue university agricultural experiment station and the agricultural extension department here. The weapon to be employed is the formaldehyde treatment.

Indianapolis.—The reserves of corn on Indiana farms on March 1 were more than 10,000,000 bushels greater than last year, and wheat reserves were more than 1,000,000 bushels greater, according to the report of the co-operative crop reporting service for Indiana. The total for oats, however, shows a decrease of approximately 12,000,000 bushels as compared with last year and barley shows a decrease of about 100,000 bushels. The average value of improved farm land shows an increase of $25 an acre over last year and $47 an acre over the value in 1916.

Boonville.—The plants and equipments of the B. F. Shaver Canning company, which have been in the hands of a receiver, have been sold as follows: Lippincott company, Cincinnati, O., the plants situated at Boonville for $50,000, and at Tennyson for $3,800; L. C. Hammell of Circleville, O., representing Huntingburg persons; the plants at Huntingburg, Jasper and Dale for $33,000; John Kemp, Dubois, the plant at Dubois for $1,200. The total sales aggregated $88,000. It is not known what the receivership will pay out. The canning company failed because the government refused to to take its commandeer order of 45 per cent of the 1918 pack of tomatoes, following the armistice. The Lippincott company will operate the Boonville plant all year.

Washington, D. C.—Enoch H. Crowder, who served as provost marshal-general during the world war, in a final statistical report to the secretary of war, shows that the total registration of men liable to military duty in Indiana was 639,834. This was 2.68 per cent of the registration for the entire country. Of this number, 23,798 registered as eighteen years of age, 436,203 registered as between nineteen and thirty-six and 180,032 registered as between thirty-seven and forty-five. The inductions into the service in the state under the selective draft law was 77,440. Of the number 73,048 were accepted on final examination and 3,828 were rejected.

New Albany.—An increase of 50 per cent in wages is asked by the teachers, principals and supervisors in the New Albany public school in resolutions submitted to the board of education by the New Albany Teachers' federation. The federation also asks that teachers be appointed and salaries fixed before May 15 and that the time for signing contracts be extended to August 15. In addition to the salary increase the teachers ask a bonus of one month's salary at the close of the school year.

Indianapolis.—The necessity of a "blue sky" law in Indiana was shown the Marion county grand jury in a report submitted to Judge James A. Collins of the criminal court. No indictments were returned by the jury, but a recommendation was made that a "blue sky" law be passed by the session of the legislature, and attention was called to the difficulty under present laws of the state to bring charges against persons or firms who are engaged in the sale of questionable stock.

Seymour.—Belief that certain parts of the state tax law should be explained more fully before any effort is made to amend them was expressed at a meeting of the members of the legislative committee representing the southern Indiana districts of the Indiana Federation of Farmers' Associations held in this city. A recommendation that the state board of tax commissioners give more information will be filed with the state legislative committee of the federation.

Shelbyville.—Farmers of Moral, Brandywine and Sugar Creek townships, Shelby county, at a joint meeting at Fairland, voted approval of the plan of the United States Grain corporation to credit Armenia and other nations in the near east suffering from hunger, with 50,000,000 bushels of wheat. The farmers of these townships also have decided to buy their binder twine from the Indiana state prison.

Lafayette.—As the result of a meeting held here by representative farmers of eight counties in this part of the state, the commission men of the Lafayette stockyards announced that they will provide improved facilities for the handling of live stock. The farmers had presented an ultimatum to them giving notice that, unless improvements were made, they would organize a co-operative live stock shipping association.

Laporte.—Teachers in the public schools of Laporte will receive a substantial increase in salaries. The Laporte city school board took another step in advance, when at a recent meeting it voted a 20 per cent increase on yearly salaries of the teachers for the next school year. Last summer the board increased salaries between 25 and 30 per cent. The new raise therefore makes the total increase about 50 per cent.

Indianapolis.—Confidence that ratification of the woman suffrage amendment will be complete in time for the women of Indiana to vote in the coming primary election is expressed in a telegram Governor Goodrich has received from Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, honorary president of the National League of Woman Voters.

Hammond.—Walter Hardy, judge of the Lake county superior court here, issued orders that foreigners seeking naturalization papers should study for the examination under English speaking instructors. The order came when applicants for citizenship papers answered questions with blank stares. The fact that the men could not understand English caused considerable delay in the court work.

South Bend.—South Bend will introduce the two-platoon system in its fire department July 1. Action by the common council in adopting an ordinance appropriating money for the employment of 25 additional men makes it possible to put the plan into effect. For the six months following July 1, it was necessary to appropriate $16,920.

Indianapolis.—A wholesale price of $17.20 a hundred pounds on eastern cane sugar and $18.70 hundred on beet sugar was agreed on at a conference of wholesale grocers with Stanley Wyckoff, fair price commissioner for Indiana.

Facts for Sick Women

Reliable Information

All American women know of the great success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in restoring to health women who suffered from ailments peculiar to their sex, yet there are some who are skeptical and do not realize that all that is claimed for it is absolutely true—if they did, our laboratory would not be half large enough to supply the demand, though today it is the largest in the country used for the manufacture of one particular medicine.

The Facts contained in the following two letters should prove of benefit to many women:

Buffalo, N. Y.—"I suffered with organic inflammation and displacement. When lifting I had such pain and bearing down that I was not able to stand up, and it hurt me to walk or go up or down stairs. I was going to a doctor without any results and he said the safest thing would be to have an operation. I met a lady who told me she had three operations and was not well until she took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

I felt relief after taking two bottles of Vegetable Compound and I kept on with it until I was cured. I always use Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and they are fine. Everything used to turn sour on my stomach and the Liver Pills relieved that."—Mrs. A. Rogers, 593 Fargo Avenue, Buffalo, N. Y.

Sacramento, Calif.—"I had organic trouble and had such terrible pain and swelling in the lower part of my side that I could not stand on my feet or even let the bed clothes touch my side. I gave up my work thinking I would not be able to go back for months. My mother advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as it had saved her life at one time, and it put me in a wonderful condition in a couple of weeks, so I can keep on working. I work in a department store and have to stand on my feet all day and I do not have any more pains. I surely recommend your Vegetable Compound to all my friends and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Bertha J. Parker, 3320 M St., Sacramento, Calif.

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Apply few drops then lift sore, touchy corns off with fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little Freezone on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right out. Yes, magic!

A tiny bottle of Freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Freezone is the sensational discovery of a Cincinnati genius. It is wonderful.—Adv.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ½ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and will make harsh hair soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

Township Convention

The best Sunday School Convention yet held took place Sunday, March 14. The union Bible schools were held in the following places. Adult division at the Christian Church under the supervision of Fred B. Leighty, County Supt. and J. R. Shilling' Township Supt., with Rev. T. A. Manley, supervisor of music. Judge Wm. N. Ballou of Fort Wayne was teacher of the lesson. Attendance 88 and offering $10 76. Young Peoples division in the Lutheran Church was in charge of the County President, George E. Beugnot and M. T. Bishop, Township Supt. There were 70 present with an offering of $4 - 14. The Children's Division was at the M. P. Church with O. J. Burnier and Mrs. Nellie Perry, Township Supt. Attendance 71, offering $2.23. Space does not permit of telling the many good things of the morning services. At noon a bountiful basket dinner was served in the basement of the Christian Church to which about 150 partook of.

At 1:30 the president, J. N. George, called a council meetiug of officers and teachers, F. B. Leighty, County Adult Division Supt., presided. The four schools of the township were splendidly represented and much interest shown. The talks and discussions were along the line of getting the best results in running a Sunday School. The afternoon session was commenced at 2:10, although the speaker of the day had not arrived we knew he would be present in a short time. The song service was conducted by Rev. C. O. Johnson. Scripture lesson from 1 Peter: 1 was read by Rev. A. K. Mumma who also offered prayer. A vocal duet followed by the Misses Ima and Dorothy Scholes. Several departmental reports were given at this time giving the speaker, Dr. Wm. Harris Guyer, of Findlay College time to rest a short time after his arrival. The Children's Division report was Cradle Roll 74, Beginners 36, Primary 30, Juniors 54 in the township. Young Peoples Division report was 11 chartered classes. Adult Division Supt. reported 18 organized classes of 143 members enrolled; Home Department total enrollment 19 Administrative Division reported one council meeting held during the month just past in which the International Standards for Sunday Schools were fully discussed. Three schools were represented, two new superintendents were elected during the quarter and that the four schools were better organized than ever before, 3 having reached 100% and one 94% standard, the township averaging 98½%, and right here we might say that Mr. Beugnot said that, "Indiana was the best Sunday School state in the union, DeKalb county stood first in the state and Concord township was the best in the county." After singing two verses of America, Dr. Guyer gave his address, "Getting the Most out of God," making four points clear, "We must believe that God Is," "We must Believe that God Gives us a Square Deal," "We must Believe that God is Sympathetic," and "We must Believe that God is Going to be Victorious." Prayer by speaker. Reports of Educational Supt., Secretary-treasurer and nominating committee, the latter reported the officers to be, President, Fred B. Leighty; vice president, Ed Pflaumer; secretary-treasurer, Ada Bassett; Children's Division Supt., Lena Meek; Young people, M. T. Bishop; Adult, Josephus Shilling; Educational, Joseph Haifley, Administrative, Jesse Provines. Talk by Mr. Beugnot who reported the county convention to be June 1, 2, to be held at Auburn. Dismissed by Dr. Guyer.

Evening session opened at 7:30 with a piano duett by Miss Eva Watt and Mrs. Ina Wyatt. Vocal solo by Floyd Reasoner. Song service led by Rev. C. O. Johnson. Reading by Dorothy Bowman. Address, "Getting the most out of Young People," Dr. Guyer, who brought out the following points, "Young people should be taught the spirit of Reverence," "To interest them, begin on time, keep things moving and quit on time." "Show them how to do things." Vocal solo Hildah Koch. Report of Resolution committee read by J. B. Haifley. Remarks by president and dismissed by Dr. Guyer.

50 Wedding Anniversary

Fifty years ago, March 16th., Washington Woodcox and Martha A. Callender were united in marriage by Justice of the Peace Hardy at Defiance, Ohio. Last Tuesday they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary when the following children were present: Iona Woodcox and family, Mrs. Laura Burley of Kendallville, Ward and Musie at home, also Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Burley. The other children were prevented from coming some on account of illness and others because of distance.

Mr. Woodcox is eighty-three years old, born and lived all his life in Concord township. He was twice married. The former wife died and left him with two children, Clyde of Columbus and Ward at home, also one having died when but a child, the present wife reared these children. Mrs. Woodcox was born in Pennsylvania seventy-three years ago. This couple was among the first families to settle in what is now St. Joe, coming to this part of the township in 1875, where they have always lived. The children of this marriage Iona who resides northeast of town, Clarence of Adrian, Mich., Arthur of Auburn, Miss Musa at home, Charles who resides north of town, Bert who died about a year ago at Columbus, Ohio, Elgin of Newellen, Nebr., and Mrs. Laura Burley of Kendallville. There are twenty-three grandchildren and three great grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Woodcox are still hale old people and still work. They received a nice present of ten dollars each.

Sunday, March 21st., was one of rare interest to Mr. and Mrs. Florence Buchanan, of St. Joe, the occassion being the safe arrival at the Golden Anniversary of their married life, which event they celebrated at the home of their daughter, Mrs. John Sturgis, of West Depot St., Butler, Ind. Here the highly favored couple enjoyed an elegant wedding dinner, surrounded by their children and grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan were married March 21, 1870, at high noon, at the home of the bride's parents at Auburn, Ind. Rev. S. B. Ward, pastor of the Baptist church, preformed the ceremony, in the presence of the immediate family and Capt. and Mrs. W. Griswald. They went to housekeeping in a log cabin on a farm west of St. Joe. Two years later they moved to Auburn where he was engaged in the furniture business for five years, after which they returned to the farm, remaining there until 14 years ago, when they retired and moved to St. Joe where they still reside. Mr. Buchanan was born in Fowlersburg, Brooks county, West Virginia, Dec. 24, 1841, and is the son of the late David and Elizabeth Buchanan. When a lad of 7 years he came to Indiana with his parents, making the trip in a covered wagon, locating on a farm in Concord Township, west of St. Joe, now owned by Orange Herrick. In 1859 he went to Auburn to learn the cabinet makers trade, working there until war was declared. In Sept. 1861, when the first call for 300,000 volunteers was made, he enlisted in Co H, 30th Ind. Vol. and was assigned to the army of the Cumberland under Gen. Buell.

He was wounded at the battle of Shiloh, April 7, and given a 30 days furlough, but the wounds proved so severe that he was out of the service for three months. He participated in the battle of Chicamauga and all the battles of the Atlantic campaign.

He was taken prisoner at the battle of Atlanta and held at Anderson prison one month, when he was exchanged in a special exchange of Gen. Hood and Gen. Sherman. He received an honorable discharge October 15, 1864. Mr. Buchanan is the last of a family of four children.

Mrs. Mary Buchanan was born in Royalton, Ohio, November 23, 1844, and when 5 years old came to Indiana with her parents, Wm. E. and Jemima Rush, locating at Auburn, Ind., where they resided several years, returning to their Ohio home while the father went to the gold fields of California. Upon his return they took up their abode in Auburn again. Mrs. Buchanan was a teacher in the Auburn schools for five years and for 9 years was a teacher in the district schools of Steuben and DeKalb counties. She is one of a family of 11 children, 4 of whom are living. Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan are both enjoying good health and feel they have been wonderfully blest throughout their lives. As yet there has been no break in their family, which consists of two daughters Mrs. John Sturges, of Butler; Mrs. Frank Rhoades, of Spencerville; a son, Harry L. Buchanan, of Centralia, Washington, and seven grand-children.

A telegram was received by Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan from Willis Brown and wife, of LosAngeles, California, on the anniversary day as follows:

"We would like to send you some flowers, from this sunny land of ours, on your fiftieth wedding event. Would like to be there the bride to kiss, but this is a joy we both will miss. So instead a message of love is sent."

More Jurors Drawn.

On account of so many jurors drawn for the March term of the circuit court being excused because of sickness, Judge Dan M. Link ordered an additional drawing.

Jury Commissioners Herman L. Brown and Albert W. Thrush and County Clerk W. W. Mounts therefore met in the clerk's office Saturday afternoon and the drawing resulted as follows:

G. W. Burtaner, Butler.
Lyman Bidlack, Newville.
George Dannells, Wilmington.
M. H. Howey, Spencer.

Farmers' Institutes.

Four of the township institutes for 1920 will be two day gatherings and three will be for one day, as the result of the meeting Saturday. The Tri-Township institute of Concord, Spencer and Newville townships, Richland and Fairfield institute, Union and Jackson townships and Keyser township institutes will be two day sessions while Butler Center, Ashley and Butler will hold one day gatherings. Soils and crops, live stock, home furnishings, community co-operation and farm management are the general topics which will be taken up and given thought in the gatherings next year. There is some talk of a short course being held in connection with the local institute and it is an idea that every one should encourage.

The high crown, the low crown the feathered hat and the flower ed hat, you will find at MRS. WARNER'S.

A Sudden Death.

Organic heart trouble was the cause of the death of Emanuel Easterday, who died at Newville Sunday, according to Coroner William E. Byers. Mrs. Mary Easterday was the only witness at the inquest. She stated that her husband had been complaining for some time of not feeling well. On Saturday he was as well as usual. He awakened Mrs. Easterday during the night but did not complain. Just before 5 o'clock Sunday morning both were awake and he talked to his wife. Suddenly Mr. Easterday began to shake and complain of his heart. In less than five minutes he was dead. His wife thought he just had a bad spell, as he had a few spells before. She called a doctor, but the latter found Mr. Easterday had expired.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcels Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

"Oh, not so badly," answered the C. O. without elation. "We brought down five planes the other day."

SENATE KILLS PEACE TREATY

Upper Branch of Congress Votes to Keep Out of League of Nations.

PACT GOES BACK TO WILSON

Senators Prepare to Vote Peace With Germany — League Controversy Now Becomes a Campaign Issue—Vote Was 49 to 35.

Washington, March 22.—The senate rejected the treaty of peace with Germany and sent it back to the White House with a resolution informing the president that the senate would not consent to its ratification.

For the second time since the treaty, with the covenant of the League of Nations, was brought back from Paris by President Wilson, the senate refused to give it the approval that is necessary to bind the United States to the engagements which it imposes upon the nation.

Exactly four months ago to the day the treaty was refused ratification by the vote of 41 to 51. Today's vote was 49 to 35, the majority in favor of ratification being seven votes short of the two-thirds required by the Constitution.

Immediately following the vote by which the treaty was rejected, the senate adopted a resolution by Senator Lodge directing the secretary to return the treaty to the president and notify him that ratification could not be accomplished. The vote on the adoption of this resolution was 47 to 37.

Before the senate convenes next Monday a messenger from the office of the secretary of the senate will have deposited at the White House the document which has been the cause of the most bitter struggle in the history of the senate.

Once in the hands of the president, the senate will have no authority to recall it, and the president is not likely to return it to the senate unless he can obtain reasonable assurance that ratification can be had.

In view of the president's desire to take the treaty into the campaign, it is not believed by any of his followers in the senate that he will for a moment consider sending the treaty back to the senate, at least until after the campaign is over.

The senate will immediately turn its attention to the proposition of declaring peace with Germany by a resolution which both houses of congress will be asked to pass.

Senator Knox began the discussion of his resolution on the subject shortly after the vote against the treaty had been recorded.

That such a resolution will pass is conceded by the ablest leaders of the senate, in view of the second failure of the attempt to bring about peace by ratification of the treaty.

The Knox measure is a joint resolution, requiring passage by the house as well as the senate.

It provides in addition to restoring a state of peace, that unless Germany confirms all the "rights, privileges, indemnities, reparations and advantages" to which the United States would have been entitled under the treaty of Versailles, the president may prohibit commercial intercourse with or financial assistance of Germany. The Knox measure is a joint resolution requiring passage by the house as well as the senate, and signature by the president. If it should be passed and vetoed by the president it could become a law, notwithstanding the veto, by a two-thirds vote of both houses.

When news of the senate's action was flashed to the White House it failed to bring forth one word of comment. Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the president, was at the executive offices until the senate adjourned, and the information of the defeat of the treaty was promptly transmitted to the president. But after the adjournment of the senate, Mr. Tumulty went home. He announced there would be no statement from the president.

Senator Lodge—"The treaty is gone. It has been rejected by the senate and sent back to the president. If the president chooses to return it to the senate it will have to go through the same process as before. If it goes to the foreign relations committee he will have a mighty hard time getting it out. If the president desires to make a campaign issue of it the Republicans are perfectly willing to meet it."

Senator Hitchcock—"I am glad the ratification did not carry on the Lodge reservations, but the result was about what I expected. It will now be up to the president and he will have to take the initiative."

The treaty, with essentially the same reservations commanded 15 more votes Friday, than in November, when it was 21 votes short of two-thirds. These votes were contributed by the following Democrats:

Ashurst, Beckham, Chamberlain, Fletcher, Henderson, Kendrick, King, Nugent, Phelan, Pittman, Ransdell, Smith (Md.), Trammell, Walsh (Mont.) and Wolcott. The irreconcilables gained two votes—Penrose (Rep.) and Shields (Dem.)—both of whom voted for the treaty in November.

Doldrums of Oratory.

The ratification roll call came shortly after six o'clock, following a day of listless oratory on the subject of the covenant and the reservations. The roll was called in a tense silence, with scores of persons in the crowded galleries keeping tally.

Amidst the confusion that reigned as soon as the defeat of the treaty was announced by Senator Cummins, the president pro tempore, Senator Lodge offered his resolution to return the treaty to the president and Senator Hitchcock strongly objected.

"I hope," he said, "that this resolution will be deferred for more mature consideration. While the treaty remains before the senate there is still a chance of its ratification, but once it is sent to the president that chance is removed. It seems to me that the sincere friends of the treaty ought to be willing to defer action on this measure tonight."

Senator Lodge retorted that the time had come to end the proceedings over the treaty.

"It seems to me," Mr. Lodge said, "that after a year of discussion and after the senate twice has failed to ratify the treaty, the time has come to end it. The hope of getting the necessary votes to ratify it is groundless, and we have no right to bring it again before the senate and interfere with other pressing public business. I feel that I have gone as far as I can, and in justice to the country we must notify the president that the treaty cannot be ratified."

"It's Up to the White House."

Senator Lenroot, Wisconsin, supported the resolution.

"It is very evident," he said, "that the treaty cannot be ratified until the president gives his consent. I believe, therefore, that it should be sent back to him. He can submit it again to the senate at any time that he sees fit."

Several senators attempted to speak, but their voices were drowned out by cries of "Vote! Vote!" of members weary of the long treaty fight and anxious to have it ended. The resolution went to a vote and was carried, 47 to 37.

Senator Watson, Indiana, Republican, moved to table the motion. The "mild reservationists" on this roll call joined with the Democrats. The motion to table was lost, 34 to 48.

Senator Robinson then moved to adjourn. Shouts of "No, no," arose from many parts of the senate and sion to settle the question. The moseenators insisted on remaining in session to adjourn was rejected, 33 to 42.

Chamber Is Adjourned.

Senator Knox then moved to proceed to the consideration of his resolution declaring the war at an end. Senator Lenroot said that while he felt such a resolution should be adopted within the very near future, he would oppose taking it up immediately.

Senator Lodge thereupon moved to adjourn and the motion was carried without a record vote.

CAMERA FOR FINGER PRINTS.

A camera has been recently made especially for the reproduction of finger prints. Marks left behind by thieves and criminals are easily reproduced by this instrument which works almost automatically. It carries lights for the illumination of the subjects and has a lens which is always in sharp focus when the instrument is held against the surface containing the marks. It is also suited for use in reproducing signatures and similar work.

Chinese Road Building.

If present plans are carried out China's longest modern highway will be completed within six months. It will extend from Peking to Tientsin, a distance of about eighty miles. The first section of this road, from Peking to Tungchow, 13 miles, was constructed in 1917. Through the efforts of the Peking Motor club it is reported that a loan of $150,000 has been negotiated with the Banque Industrielle de Chine for the construction of a modern road between Tungchow and Tientsin.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

HOPE FOR PERMANENT PEACE

Those Who Fought, and Those Who Suffered at Home, Alike Favor Some Form of a League of Nations.

Article X.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Europe was succumbing to exhaustion when the war came to an end. The terrible waste was telling. Endurance had reached the breaking point. With peace one thought ran around the world: There must be no more war. The men who did the fighting said it loudest.

"I'm glad I had a chance to do my part—I wouldn't have missed the 'show' for a million dollars, and I wouldn't take a million dollars to go through it again," is the way they put it. Everywhere in Europe I heard, "It is over, it is finished, thank God."

The first thought of reconstruction was a plan to make peace permanent.

The laboratory and the machine shop gave to this war a terrible meaning, new agencies had been introduced to kill and maim men, liquid fire, mustard gas, high explosives, bombs from the clouds, torpedoes from the sea depths. The world was horrified. The length of the war, the number of dead and crippled, the raiding and bombing of defenseless cities taught the world that an end must be put to war if civilization was to live.

So the people, particularly the working people, took heart when a League of Nations was suggested as a means of enforcing peace. They placed their hopes in it. They had suffered most from the war. The dead were largely their dead. The returning cripples were blood of their blood. As they put it, they were from their class. Of course the sons of the other class fought, shared the hardships, paid the price, but they were few. The group from which they came is small, while the toll of casualties from labor's ranks was large.

All men know that controversies between nations are inevitable. In the absence of some scheme of arbitration there is but one way that these controversies can be settled. It is force—War.

It is not uncommon for individuals to have serious differences of opinion. Every lawsuit, and there are thousands of them in every city of every country, represents a difference of opinion. If we did not have courts providing a peaceful determination of these disputes, the litigants would be compelled to settle their differences by force. Assault and battery would succeed orderly procedure. Nations have been without a peaceful means of adjusting their difficulties, and as a consequence they have been compelled to resort to force. Until some scheme of arbitration is created, to talk peace is to waste words, to hope for it is idle dreaming.

Peace Conference Fell Short.

The peace conference met in Paris. Labor watched it. At an early stage in its proceedings intrigue was discovered at work. Wrangling, bickering, bargaining and trading for commercial advantage occupied the time and thought that the world expected would be devoted to the building up of a league that would at least decrease the chances of future wars. Statesmen in their blind devotion to expediency lost sight of the great reason for the conference. They talked of boundary lines, discussed frontiers, and always from the point of view of financial and military advantage to their respective countries. It was noticed that the territories over which they quarreled were rich in minerals or some other thing of great commercial advantage. They squabbled over spoils. Then, too, these men who were supposed to be concerned in the future peace of the world, in arguing over frontiers urged their respective claims on the grounds that their respective countries needed these frontiers to make them secure in future wars. What future wars and why the discussion of future wars at a conference, the object of which was future peace?

Working men watched, listened and thought. They construed these bickerings and wranglings as evidence of the fact that there is an interest in the world which does not believe in giving up force. I am only reporting the truth when I add they suspect this interest is Capital.

If the League of Nations fails this suspicion will be confirmed. The movement toward an internationalism of the workers will be given great impetus. The League of Nations failing, they argue there is only one other means of preventing war. It is for the men who make up the rank and file of the armies in time of war, the millions recruited from shops, factories and fields, to get together and organize an international labor authority to save the working men from war. Such a movement would take away from governments an important and necessary function and give to one class in the world a power so great that political governments would be puppets in their hands, and yet in the light of the happenings of the last five years labor could not be blamed. The world is entitled to protection against such slaughter as we have just gone through, and if the political governments fail to take the necessary steps the plain people will.

World Now Closely Knit.

Internationalism is coming—in fact it is already here. Inventions have brought the people of the world close together. The wireless and the cable give us the happenings of remote parts of the world in a few hours. Distance has been destroyed. We are becoming neighbors in knowledge of each other, whether we live on the same continent or not. Modern transportation is shortening the time between places. An air service is in prospect which promises to make London as near New York tomorrow as Chicago is today.

We already have a successful internationalism in finance and credits. Big business long ago obliterated national lines. The commerce of the world is already organized internationally.

The important question at this time is what form will the new internationalism take? Will it be an internationalism of organized dollars? If so, the world is in serious danger of a financial autocracy. Will it be an internationalism of organized labor? If this happens it means the dictatorship of the proletariat. Both are equally undesirable. No part of the people should be permitted to enforce their will upon the rest. One kind of slavery is as bad as another. The great majority of the human race wants freedom, not advantage. It is not ambitious to dictate—it will not be dictated to.

A League of Nations is the solution. It is a union of the nations of the world, and as the nations of the world represent all the people of the various states such a combination is democratic. That it is necessary is plain. Rivalry for markets, competition for trade, are bound to lead to war unless we have an agreement that these and other problems will be submitted to arbitration. It is not necessary to submit questions involving national honor. Few of such questions ever directly provoke war. It is when nations fighting each other for markets reach a point of positive disagreement that they begin calling each other names. These insults wound honor, war results.

Peace Table Proves Worth.

A League of Nations is a continuance of the peace table, and notwithstanding the wranglings of the present peace table there would have been war in Europe before this if it was not sitting in Paris. Two cases serve to illustrate. The coal fields of upper Galicia, to be determined by a plebiscite between Poland and Germany would have been a cause of war if the peace table was not in existence. Poland had troops on the border. Germany had her soldiers at the frontier. One thing, and one thing alone, prevented war—it was the fear of the peace table. The same facts described the controversy between Poland and Czecho-Slovakia; war has been avoided by the peace table submitting the Teschen question to a vote of the people of the territory.

No League of Nations will have much effect upon the future peace of Europe which does not include the United States. The nations of Europe do not trust each other. Every one respects the fact that the United States does not seek territory in Europe. This gives our country the commanding place as the one disinterested power in the world. With this moral force we can do much to maintain the peace of the world.

The propaganda of revolution coming out of bolshevik Russia, urging the workers to organize an international dictatorship of the proletariat and seize the world, is not nearly as dangerous to the peace of the world as the political heckling against the League of Nations.

TAXES IN GERMANY HEAVY

Individuals Are Beginning to Feel That Country Really Suffered Defeat in the War.

The individual German has not begun to feel the peace terms, financially.

During the war the Germans have been loaning their money to the government. This year they have begun to give it.

There is an estate tax graduated as to size and as to relationship. It imposes the heaviest tax on the largest inheritance from the most distant relative.

A peculiar feature of this law, illustrating its severity, is a provision that in no case may the tax exceed the amount of the inheritance taxed. No mean cousin can leave "spite money" which would compel the recipient to pay more than he got, anyhow.

An income tax ranges to about 76 per cent as the income grows.

There is a profits tax and a heavy tax on wealth increases during the war—to get the profiteers—the usual taxes for revenue, heavier than ever, and a capital levy is being considered.

With food, coal and clothing short, they are bound to add to the discontent. Agitators will make the most of the crisis.

But Germany has weathered two crises as serious: In the most difficult months just after the surrender a year ago; and the peace conference period, when she woke up, as loser, to the terms.

LESS MEAT IF BACK AND KIDNEYS HURT

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Adv.

"Madame, if zose diamonds are not in my possession in two hours from now, Monsieur Eugene will be arrested and go to prison, and his stay zere will not be short, for I ask to have bail—as ze crime is a great one—fixed at one hundred sousand dollars and his muzzer is unable to give it. Madame, if you are her friend, you can save her now. I give you two hours in which to bring me zose diamonds."

And the diamonds lay on my table beside him! I had only to reach out my hand and say, "Here," and the matter was settled. Yet something in me kept saying, "No — no — no — you mustn't!"

I said nothing and monsieur repeated, "If in two hours zose diamonds are not in my hands I will have her son arrested," and I sat there looking at the box and thinking that in two seconds—if I so willed it—the diamonds would be in his hands!

No—I dared not do it without at least exacting some proviso that should prevent their use in the treaty with Mexico—it would be treachery to my country, cowardice. We had two hours—we could do something in that time—we'd not, the three of us, give up without a struggle.

"Well?" he asked.

"But just what do you wish me to do?" I asked, finding my tongue again. "I don't seem to be clear on it."

"I have been telling you," he showed signs of impatience. "I wish you to call upon her immediately—she is at home, for my daughter is with her—" he smiled at that, remembering how he'd used Claire to checkmate Billy and me the night before. "Repeat zis interview zat you have wis me—convince her zat I am ready to have her son put under arrest"—he drew forward to the edge of his chair and continued in the tone of one addressing a partner—"I asure you zat when you have communicate zis wis her, she does one of two sings: If she have already confess to you she have ze diamonds, she release you instantly from ze obligation to keep her secret; and if she have not already confessed all to you, she does so—she is obliged to do so to protect herself—to ask advice of a friend who comes to warn her."

By this time I had perceived that my one feasible line of action lay in pretending to fall in with his plans, thus gaining time in which to consult Billy as well as Mrs. Delario, and I said smoothly:

"I appreciate the delicacy with which you have put the case to me and relieved me of the necessity of talking to you about my friend—I can't tell you how I appreciate it—" and there I stuck!

What did I mean to do?—tell him I'd go? And if I did, was I to take the diamonds or leave them behind in the house? At that instant of indecision and perplexity my eye lighted upon the note sent up by my recent mysterious caller—the supposed detective. My counter-move! I drew it from the envelope and with it I made a fresh start in conversation.

"I appreciate it so much that I trust you with a corresponding confidence and I ask you to explain one or two little matters so that I may avoid any difficulties that may arise while I'm discussing the matter with Mrs. Delario."

"Wis pleasure—anysing—"

"Well, this—I should like an explanation of this note."

I put it in his hand.

He read it, frowned, turned it over to see if there were anything on the other side and still frowning said, "Zis note? I know nossing of zis note." And he read aloud—"'Mademoiselle Claire de Ravenol has disappeared!' My daughter has not disappeared—except so far she has disappeared zis morning to Madame Delario's house."

His words and manner to my mind at once disposed of the hypothesis that the new man was monsieur's accomplice; but I went on: "The man who sent this up—and whom I saw—claimed to be a detective in your employ."

Monsieur gave a start. "A detective—in my employ—looks for my daughter! Impossible! When do you receive zis note?"

"About two hours ago!"

"A detective—two hours ago tells you I employ him to seek for my daughter! What does it mean? I have employ no one to seek for my daughter—no one. He tells you an untruse. What have you sought is his object to tell you zat he seeks my daughter?"

"I thought it was a plot against her."

"A plot against Claire! Mon Dieu! Zis I am not prepare for."

He was too genuinely shocked and astonished for me to doubt his word and I went on, "Yes—and Mrs. Delario thought so, too—and Mr. Rivers, they both saw the note and thought it was a plot against Claire. The same man was at her house last night looking for Claire just after you had left to go to ze hotel for her. Perhaps her fainting here actually saved her from him," added, quite keen on the dramatic side of it all and feeling that it was an excellent counter-irritant to diamonds.

"Mon Dieu! What kind of a plot? And who—Mon Dieu!"

Instantly I saw my chance and used it: Mrs. Delario still had the whip-handle end of the situation; she had his daughter in her keeping while he was talking about arresting her son!

"Mrs. Delario and I both thought," I said firmly, "that there is a plot on foot to kidnap Claire and hold her for ransom. It could be done."

He shrank as if he'd been struck a blow.

"That is what Mrs. Delario came to see me about this morning," I cried, pushing my advantage as fast as I could. "She is frightened—she believes something is going to happen—and with you in California—"

"I am not in California," he put in hastily. "But it was necessary zat I make some adequate reason why I leave my daughter wis her for day or two—a few hours, only, I had expected—"

"Until you can arrest her son! Oh, for shame, monsieur!" I exclaimed hotly, with both real and assumed indignation. He tried to excuse himself, "But ze arrest of Monsieur Eugene is only a possibility—in case you fail to impress her wis ze wisdom of to return zose diamonds immediately; a possibility zat you avoid for her entirely."

"Your obligations to Mrs. Delario are now such—"

"Oui—I appreciate it—ze situation is changed in an instant of time. . . . But zis man—he calls upon you and he asks you some questions about my daughter and you tell him—"

"He got nothing out of me—why, of course not! I put him off till tomorrow—I wouldn't even let him in."

"He returns? And he goes perhaps once more to Madame Delario's and she tells him Claire is in her house!"

Monsieur bounded up at that, white as a sheet, and I was just trying to reassure him—telling him that Mrs.

Now Was My Chance.

Delario would guard Claire as she would her own child—when the front bell rang.

I made a sign to him for silence, thinking it was Billy come back with his news, but wishing to keep on the safe side, went noisily along the hall and opened the door a crack against the chain-bolt to reconnoiter before I let anyone in.

It was my unknown visitor of the morning—the detective! And somehow I wasn't surprised!

"What, you here again?" I exclaimed testily, and in a voice loud enough for monsieur to hear—and I knew he was straining every nerve to do it, too.

It came over me in a flash that now was my chance to get it "coming and going"—that, having played on his fears for Claire, I'd see if I could play on his fears for himself; I'd make the detective talk loud enough for monsieur to learn something.

"I am sorry to trouble you again—after what you said," the detective apologised. "But the case is so urgent—if you will spare me ten minutes now, it may save a life."

My reply was to laugh in the man's face. He drew back a step.

"If you come here pestering me any more about anything," I retorted, "I shall telephone for police protection. I don't know who you are, or what you are after, but I do know that when you came here the first time, you told me a pointblank lie and that is enough for me."

He changed his tactics so suddenly it almost took my breath. He came close to the door and admitted: "That is true—I did tell you a lie. It was rendered necessary by the extreme difficulties of the case in hand."

"Well—and what was the lie?"

"I told you I was looking for the daughter—knowing that you must have some little interest in her and would respond to my note and allow me to see you. I wished to find the daughter, but only that I might find—her father."

He stopped abruptly, as if hoping I'd say something to the point.

"I told you that I would see you tomorrow."

"You may regret your delay." His tone sounded threatening.

"All right—then I'll regret it."

"Really, madame, I feel I must insist—for your own sake, since you are acquainted with Monsieur De Ravenol—"

"I'd like to know what you mean, coming here and forcing yourself on me this way?" I cried, in partly feigned exasperation. "You haven't even troubled to tell me your name, and how do I know what you are?"

"Ah—so that is it!" he smiled, and light appeared to break upon his understanding. "You are afraid of me!"

"I am."

He laughed. "Well, that is a confession! In five minutes—in one minute—I can convince you."

"I hope you can—tomorrow morning," said I, and pressed on the door to show him I had no more to say to him.

He hesitated, and then probably deciding that there was no more to gain by trying to force me to see him, told me, "I will return in the morning with credentials," and bowed himself off. He went down the stairs without ringing for the elevator.

I had totally forgotten monsieur and the diamonds—alone together—and my heart dropped into my boots as I turned from the door, and bounced up into my throat as I caught the first glimpse of him. He had tiptoed to the hall archway and was pressed against it, where he could hear every word, yet remain unseen. He was actually clinging there for support and shaking—not trembling, but shaking.

"Are you ill?" I asked, for he looked like a corpse.

He pointed to indicate the man who had just left and gasped out, "It is a plot against my daughter," staggered to the nearest chair and crumpled up in a heap.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Monsieur Explains.

From considerable experience with the Latin temperament, I long ago came to the conclusion that it "works in a mysterious way its wonders to perform;" and certainly its emotional reactions are so much more histrionic than one is accustomed to in Anglo-Saxon life that I was not completely unhinged when monsieur collapsed in a chair and buried his face in his hands and began to sob. Even then I had a sneaking suspicion that he was not without an eye to the main chance in its dramatic effect on me; his fate was in my hands and he had to make every appeal that would work.

I said, "Sah" and tiptoed back along the hall, threw open the front door as wide as I could get it on the chain-bolt and peeped out to see if the detective had returned and was eavesdropping. But though I thought I heard a slight shuffling noise on the stairs, I could see nothing and did not dare to investigate more intimately and went back to my study with another "Sah" to monsieur, who by this time was alive again to the case.

"It was you he was after—didn't you hear what he said?"

"Oui—I hear everysing—and it is my little Claire." He buried his face in his hands and his shoulders heaved as if he were weeping.

I didn't relish this sort of a scene with him, and besides, time was pressing—if this man were trying to find Claire and kidnap her, something had to be done immediately.

"Do you sink zat man suspects I am here?" asked monsieur, suddenly looking up.

"No—I don't see how he can. But I think he's trying to find out where you are."

"Oui! And why does he seek me? Only zat he knows if I have my daughter still wis me—and can protect her from zose who have already seek to steal her from me once before."

"Oh! Then you know who this is?"

"I do not see him, but I sink to recognise his voice. It is a plot against us—it is a plot on ze part of France to prevent ze treaty wis Mexico. Oui! Mon Dieu— it has in some way become known zat I am ze secret messenger of ze emperor and spies are sent out to follow me and if not to kill me, at least to keep me from going to Mexico until it is too late!"

Monsieur put the case tersely. And tragically.

"And do you not see ze plot?" he cried. "Zey accuse me of some crime—zey have me put under arrest and while I am in prison zey get my little Claire."

"But what crime, monsieur? You have not done anything on this side of the water, have you, that any one can get hold of?"

"Bah! I do nossing! Zey bring forged papers from France—perhaps zey extradite me before I can even say farewell to my child."

"But haven't you got some proofs on your side?" I ventured. "You can make it evident to the court—"

"To—ze—court!" he fairly hissed the words at me. "Mon Dieu—what is it you say? Ze messenger of ze emperor under arrest in America?" He drew out his handkerchief and wiped his brow. "What does it matter if I prove zis or sat—I am under arrest—she is left at ze mercy of zose scoundrels! I could kill zem with my naked hands!"

"Why not let Mrs. Delario take her immediately to California?" was the bright suggestion from me.

He met it with scorn. "How far does madame get wis her? To Chicago? To Pittsburgh? Probably she does not even leave New York! She gets into a sleeping-car, and a man—two men—a man and a woman, perhaps—step up to her and say, 'You are kidnaping zat young girl—you are under arrest—come wis us immediately.' And Madame Delario—what does she do? She goes wis zem—naturally; she dares not do usserwise. She gets in a carriage wis zose strange people and zey take her where zey please—she and a young girl can do nossing. I do not need to be told how easy it is—I have experience in zose sings—I know how easy it will be, even in your boasted New York and your America!—because I know ze people I have to deal wis."

I realized that that was the way he had fixed it for me—the time he sent me the decoy telegram—but I did not remind him of it. Instead, I admitted:

"Yes—I see, it could be done. It wouldn't be safe."

"Zey care not for sat," he broke in. "Mon Dieu! How is she to be saved?" He looked at me and there were tears in his eyes.

The only thing I could suggest was, "We might appeal for police protection," which he met with something between a groan and a shriek.

"Ze police! Never! We must exhaust all sat we can sink of to try—all places where we may hide, she and I."

"Mrs. Delario will conceal Claire, and for myself—" he stopped to consider this a moment and asked again: "You do not sink zat so-called detective suspects zat I am here? Well, zen I hide here for ze present."

"Oh, I can't keep you here!" I cried in some dismay.

"No, madame—I do not suggest it." He smiled a little. "But I can trust you to keep my confidence sat I have gone to my apartment below?"

"Oh—I remember! But how are you going to get into it? There's probably a man in the hall now, waiting for you to come down."

"Ze fire escape—after dark. Zat is, if I dare trespass upon your hospitality for zis afternoon?"

"Yes, of course," I answered as cordially as I could; though the prospect didn't fill me with any joy—a whole afternoon shut up alone with him and the diamonds!

"It really isn't safe for you to stay here," I began, when the rumble of the dumb-waiter gave me another bright thought. "And the fire escape won't do, either—somebody would be sure to see you. You'll have to go down by the dumb-waiter, and you'd better do it as soon as possible—in case that man comes back. And he will—I know he will."

Monsieur considered this a moment and then asked: "But how should I arrive inside my own apartment? Ze door to zat little lift is shut and fastened on ze inside."

"I'll lend you my icepick and you can pry the door open. It's easy enough to do—the elevator boy once got into my own flat that way for me when I had lost my key—borrowed an icepick from some one in a flat below and came up the dumb-waiter."

"Ah—I see," and he agreed with me it would be safer for him to go. Thinking I might start him on his downward way and be rid of him before Billy came—and I was expecting him to return from Mrs. Delario's every minute and thought it much wiser to see him alone and hear the news about Claire—I stepped into the kitchen to get the icepick and show monsieur how to use it on his door.

The dumb-waiter was rumbling up and up—apparently it was stopping at my flat; and thinking it might be something for me, or else a mistake for the flat below, to which I would have to call down, "You've got the wrong flat!" I stopped a moment, icepick in hand, to see if the bell would ring.

Record Swim for a Crocodile.

How far can a crocodile swim? Perhaps it would be more practical to ask how far crocodiles do swim? J. Stanley Gardiner claims the record for a crocodile (Crocodilus porosus) that recently landed in the Fiji islands, where he took its photograph. No crocodiles of this species inhabit the Fiji islands, and the nearest spot where they are known to live is the New Hebrides, 688 miles distant.

Therefore, this crocodile must have swam 688 miles in the open sea. If anyone knows of a crocodile that wants to challenge this record, he should write to the editor of the English magazine Nature.

AFTER 6 YEARS--STILL WELL

Now Strong and Hearty Though Case Looked Hopeless

"Six years ago I was in awful condition," says E. K. Chase, 36 E. Cross St., Ypsilanti, Mich. "My family was told I couldn't live more than two months. I was in constant pain from the uric acid and was so bad with rheumatism my legs seemed all drawn up. My back never stopped hurting. The kidney secretions were held back until only a few drops came, and I bloated until I thought my skin would burst. My legs were twice their normal size.

Mr. Chase

"The water seemed to fill my chest and press against the heart. For three months I never moved out of the chair and I choked and gasped for breath like a dying man. All the doctoring failed, and my weight went from 185 to 125 pounds. "Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life. Eleven boxes cured me of every complaint. I have been well six years and able to work as hard as any man."

"Can't Cut Off My Leg" Says Railroad Engineer

"I am a railroad engineer; about 20 years ago my leg was seriously injured in an accident out West. Upon my refusing to allow the doctor to amputate it I was told it would be impossible to heal the wound. I have tried all kinds of salves and had many doctors in the past 15 years, but to no avail. Finally I resolved to use PETERSON'S OINTMENT on my leg. You cannot imagine my astonishment when I found it was doing what over 100 things had failed to do. Life of Mrs. Trostel.

Sarah Sewell, daughter of Joseph and America Ann Sewell, was born in Defiance county, Ohio, June 26, 1852. When about nineteen years of age, she with her parents came to DeKalb county, Indiana, moving onto a farm near Hamilton, where on the 17th. of March 1872 she was united in marriage w th George W. Trostel. To this union three children were born, Mary Ellen who died February 9, 1919, Abner W., of Garrett and America Ann Tustison of St. Joe. After their marriage, they resided on a farm in Defiance county, Ohio, until 1879, when they moved to a farm near Hamilton in this county. Twenty-six years ago they moved into the home where she died March 19, 1920 aged 67 years, 8 months and 24 days. Since 1879 her home has always been in DeKalb county except one year, during which time they lived in Missouri.

While living in Defiance county, she united with the Evangelical Church, and a number of years ago her membership was transferred to the United Brethren at Newville. For about thirty-five years her health has been such that she has been deprived of many of this world's privileges and pleasures, and kept her from being the active worker in the church and other activities of the community, which she might otherwise have been.

She leaves to mourn her departure, the aged husband, two brothers, one sister, two children and nine grandchildren; also a host of friends, relatives and neighbors, by whom she will be greatly missed, as she was ever ready to minister to those who were unfortunate or in distress.

The funeral service was held from the home east of St. Joe, Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Rev. C. O. Johnson, officiating. E. R. Kinsey, director. Burial in Alton cemetery.

The ladies of the St. Joe Rebekah lodge had charge of the service at the grave.

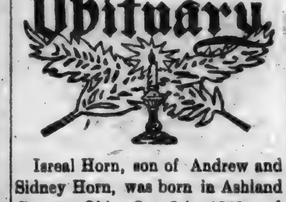
Community evangelistic meetings every night this week, ending in "Join the Church Sunday" on Easter Sunday. Everybody is urged to come. Neighborhood prayer-meetings every afternoon but Saturday. You are asked to attend the meeting nearest you. The church bell rings at twelve each day to remind the people that the campaign is on, and let every christian pause a moment and offer a prayer for the success of the campaign. Slogan "Every christian in circulation for God and the community." Rev. J. W. Furgeson of Auburn will speak Thursday night.

Obituary



Isreal Horn, son of Andrew and Sidney Horn, was born in Ashland County, Ohio, Oct. 8th., 1840, and departed this life March 17th., 1920, at the age of 79 years, 5 months and 17 days.

He came with his parents to the state of Indiana in the year 1852 at the age of eleven years. He was a Civil War Veteran having enlisted on Oct. 8th., 1864, on his 24th., birthday. At the close of his service he was given an honorable discharge. In the year 1870 he was united in marriage to Rachel Wyatt, to them were born two children, the oldest dying in infancy; the surviving child being Mrs. Minta Rhodes. His wife preceeded him in death four years ago. Mr. Horn was a frugal and industrious man remaining so up to within a few hours of his death. He leaves to mourn their loss, a daughter, Mrs. Minta Rhodes; three grandchildren; one brother, Milton Horn, of Santa Fee, New Mexico, and one sister, Mrs. Jane Lake, of Pleasant Lake, besides many relatives and friends. The funeral was held on Friday afternoon at 1:30 from his daughter's home. Rev. E. E. Wright, of the M. E. Church, officiating, assisted by Rev. A. K. Mumma of the Lutheran Church. Interment in the White City Cemetery. The pall bearers were veterans of the World War:—Beeks Erick, Eugene Baker, George Hart, Herbie Webb, Delt McKinley, and Arthur Hemrick.

ESCAPED AN OPERATION

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Many Such Cases.

Cairo, Ill.—"Sometime ago I got so bad with female trouble that I thought I would have to be operated on. I had a bad displacement. My right side would pain me and I was so nervous I could not hold a glass of water. Many times I would have to stop my work and sit down or I would fall on the floor in a faint. I consulted several doctors and every one told me the same but I kept fighting to keep from having the operation. I had read so many times of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped my sister so I began taking it. I have never felt better than I have since then and I keep house and am able to do all my work. The Vegetable Compound is certainly one grand medicine."—Mrs. J. R. MATTHEWS, 3311 Sycamore Street, Cairo, Ill.

Of course there are many serious cases that only a surgical operation will relieve. We freely acknowledge this, but the above letter, and many others like it, amply prove that many operations are recommended when medicine in many cases is all that is needed.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

BELCHING
Caused by
Acid-Stomach

Let EATONIC, the wonderful modern stomach remedy, give you quick relief from disgusting belching, food-repeating, indigestion, bloated, gassy stomach, dyspepsia, heartburn and other stomach miseries. They are all caused by Acid-Stomach from which about nine people out of ten suffer in one way or another. One writes as follows: "Before I used EATONIC, I could not eat a bite without belching it right up, sour and bitter. I have not had a bit of trouble since the first tablet."

Millions are victims of Acid-Stomach without knowing it. They are weak and ailing, have poor digestion, bodies improperly nourished although they may eat heartily. Grave disorders are likely to follow if an acid-stomach is neglected. Cirrhosis of the liver, intestinal congestion, gastritis, catarrh of the stomach—these are only a few of the many ailments often caused by Acid-Stomach.

A sufferer from Catarrh of the Stomach of 11 years' standing writes: "I had catarrh of the stomach for 11 long years and I never found anything to do me any good—just temporary relief—until I used EATONIC. It is a wonderful remedy and I do not want to be without it."

If you are not feeling quite right—lack energy and enthusiasm and don't know just where to locate the trouble—try EATONIC and see how much better you will feel in every way.

At all drug stores—a big box for 50c and your money back if you are not satisfied.

RISING IN THE WORLD.

"Ah," said Mr. Oldboys, thoughtfully, "no one can say that my brother, Tom, has not advanced. He began at the foot, but he has worked up to the head in a very short time."

Landlady—I'm very glad you noticed it, sir. I was about to say that we don't charge for the mushrooms you will be able to pick here every morning for your breakfast.—London Tit-Bits.

Metaphors Mixed.

"The old circus keeper told me his lion Brutus was the flower of the flock."

"I guess he meant Brutus was a dandy lion."

Accounted For.

"Those two families seem to know a great deal about one another. Are they in any way connected?"

"Oh, yes. Their cooks are first cousins."

Explained.

"How is it I have such big telegraph bills?"

"You told me, sir, to use dispatch in that correspondence, so I wired all the letters."

"Did your son graduate with honors?"

"No. He had good marks in all his studies, but he won no medals or letters or sweaters for athletic or oratorical ability."

Those Girls.

"Maud reminds me of a public office."

"Why so?"

"She's continually seeking the man."

Its Extent.

"It is of no use whatever borrowing trouble."

"Yet that is a loan which is always oversubscribed."

Sad Prospect.

"Do the doctors give your friends any hope for their rich uncle?"

"Not a particle. They say he may live for years."

Simplicity Itself.

The mother was listening to stories of army life being told by her returned hero.

"How in the world did you ever learn to police company streets?" she asked.

"Easy enough," was the answer. "I just picked up things as I went along."—The Home Sector.

Very Much So.

"Do you always receive a warm welcome when you go home?"

"Naturally, when I always get into hot water there."

PUBLIC ROADS

HORN AUTOMATICALLY TOOTS

Device Installed on "Dead Man's Curve" in North Carolina Warns of Approaching Motor.

"Sound your horn!" "Dangerous curve ahead!" The roads are well fortified with these bright red warnings. But you can't see signs by the roadside at night, and you surely don't want to toot your horn continually, waking sleepers in the houses you pass. What then?

The solution lies in the unpretentious oblong piece of metal lying in the road. As your car passes over it a horn a few feet in front of you automatically toots loud and long, letting the people around the curve know that you are coming.

The device is not unlike the light signal system used in the New York subways and that are operated automatically by the trains.

You will notice two treads running lengthwise. As your car passes over the one on the left it will be depressed and an arm extending downward from it will hit a ratchet wheel. This wheel then rotates and carries with it a larger wheel attached to its shaft.

Contacts on the large wheel will hit against electric brushes as it rotates. Wires from the brushes lead to the horn and its motor. When the circuit is thus closed the horn will toot.

But why have this revolving wheel instead of ordinary metal contacts? Because if your automobile is going at the usual rate of 20 miles an hour the tread will be depressed for only about one hundredth part of a second—much too short a time for even starting the motor on the horn. The revolving wheel tends to prolong the contact.

And now for the tread on the right side. This prevents the horn from tooting unnecessarily when a car approaches from the opposite direction where it has already passed the danger.

The right tread likewise has an arm attached to it. But this arm is fixed at an angle so that it almost touches the arm of the left tread. Then, when the right tread is depressed, the right arm swings into the left one and throws it clear of the ratchet wheel. There is no rotation and no consequent tooting.

As the Operating Tread Is Depressed, a Contact Is Made Through a Revolving Wheel and a Horn on a Post a Few Yards Away Will Toot.

The device was invented by Charles E. Lyman of Asheville, N. C., and the first one was installed on "Dead Man's Curve" in Buncombe county near the building of a casket company.—Popular Science Monthly.

ROAD TESTS IN CALIFORNIA

Concrete on Sides With Oiled Macadam in Middle Is Being Tried on County Highway.

An experiment in road construction over adobe land is being made in a section of the county highway between Baypoint and Pittsburg, Cal.

Experience has shown that concrete roads built over adobe land results in the cracking and disintegrating of the road in a few seasons and in an effort to overcome this trouble County Surveyor Arnold is having the link of the county highway constructed in a manner tried in several eastern states and proved successful.

The concrete is laid in two separate sections, each eight feet wide, with a two-foot strip through the center. In this strip is placed oil macadam, which is placed level to the surface of the concrete and the entire surface is faced with a topping.

POOR ROADS WORK HARDSHIP

Continuity and Value of District School Work Impaired Where Children Cannot Attend.

Bad roads inflict twofold hardships on the one-room district school. Where the school is on a poor road, a common practice in severe weather is to keep the children at home. The attendance is thus, at times, almost entirely depleted, and the continuity and value of school work are much impaired.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL
SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(Copyright, 1930, Western Newspaper Union)

LESSON FOR MARCH 28

REVIEW: THE LIFE WORK OF PETER AND JOHN.

SELECTION FOR READING—Rev. 21: 21-22:5.

GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world—Matt. 28:19, 20.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—John 1:43; 21:15-24; I Peter 1:3; I John 1:1-4.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Two Stories About Peter (Acts 3:1-16; 12:1-17).

JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter and John Winning Others to Christ (material of last quarter).

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Peter and John Compared and Contrasted.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Contribution of Peter and John to Christian History.

The review of the quarter's lessons can be profitably made to center in the service of Peter and John, or perhaps better, the activity and power of the risen and ascended Christ manifest in the service of Peter and John.

Lesson 1. Peter Preaches at Pentecost (Acts 2).

Peter proves that Jesus Christ arose from the dead, ascended on high and poured forth the Holy Spirit upon the church; the evidence of it was the unusual behavior of the disciples.

Lesson 2. Peter and John Heal a Lame Man (Acts 3).

This remarkable miracle wrought in the name of Jesus Christ proved that though the Jews had crucified him, he was now alive and continued his work through the disciples.

Lesson 3. Peter and John Witnessing of the Risen Christ Before the Sanhedrin (Acts 4).

As a result the Sanhedrin took knowledge that they had been with Jesus, that is, his life and work were being reproduced in and through them. Being with Christ will: 1. Give an experimental knowledge of him, so that the life will remind one of Jesus. 2. Take away the fear of man. Peter, who a little while ago quailed before a Jewish maid, is undaunted before the august sanhedrin. 3. Open a man's lips. Peter said: "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." What the heart feels, the mouth must speak out.

Lesson 4. The Risen Christ Vindicating His Church (Acts 1:5-16).

He passed judgment upon Ananias and Sapphira for their hypocritical pretense of generosity. The living Christ knows the intents of the heart; nothing can be concealed from him.

Lesson 5. The Living Christ Saving Men and Women in Samaria (Acts 8:4-25). His sanction of the preaching of the Gospel by Philip in Samaria is shown by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Peter and John were sent by the mother church to confirm the work.

Lesson 6. The Living Christ Healing the Sick and Raising the Dead (Acts 9:32-43).

That Christ is alive is proved by the vanquishing of the dreadful malady of palsy and the retenanting of a corpse by the departed soul. Nothing like this had been known since the days of Christ.

Lesson 7. The Risen Christ Revealing Himself to a Gentile (Acts 10).

Peter testifies to Cornelius that Jesus Christ died for sin and is to be the judge of the quick and the dead, and that everyone who believes on him will receive remission of sins.

Lesson 8. Peter Is Delivered From Prison Through the Living Christ Sending His Angel to Open the Doors (Acts 12:1-19).

The church prayed for Peter's deliverance and the prison was opened. All power is given him in heaven and in earth; there is nothing too hard for the living Christ.

Lesson 9. Peter Shows the Resurrected Christ as the Head of the Church (I Peter 2:15; 11-25).

Because Christ is alive, those who are joined to him by faith grow. Because of the contact with him they are able to maintain seemly behavior in the various relations of life.

Lesson 10. Christ Is the Revealer of God's Love (I John 4:7-21).

The proof that Christ is alive is the love of God in the hearts of those who have been born again.

Lesson 11. Christ Is Alive Because He Is Walking in the Midst of the Churches (Rev. 1:4-18).

Lesson 12. In heaven, the crucified, risen and glorified Christ will be the center of worship. All glory and honor are ascribed to him because of his marvelous work of redemption.

KING HAD SOME IMAGINATION

Wonderful Story of "Waterless Sea" Would Have Done Credit to Baron Munchausen.

Prester John as a title was like the Egyptian Pharaoh and belonged to whole lines of king who reigned in the East and in Ethiopia in particular. One writer of long ago sets Abyssinia as the kingdom of Prester John. Abyssinia used to be called "Middle India."

It is related that before the year 1241 a letter was addressed by Prester John to Manuel Commenus, emperor of Constantinople, saying that in Prester John's country there is a "waterless sea," which none have ever crossed. It consists of tumbling billows of sand, never at rest, and contains fish of most excellent flavor.

Three days' journey from the coast of the sand sea is a mountain whence rolls down a "waterless river," consisting of small stones, which crumble into sand when they reach the sea.

Whoever Prester John may have been, if he invented that story, he certainly possessed a vivid imagination and considerable originality.

Too Much for Her.

Four-year-old Harold was going away on a visit. His mother had been giving him final instructions in table etiquette and the general importance of being polite.

His six-year-old sister listened with increasing disdain. Finally, unable to bear it any longer, she said:

"Now, mother, if Harold's going up there to act a d—n sissy, I'm not going."—Home Sector.

Crusty Comment.

"We all think the baby has got its mother's nose."

"I'm glad to hear it. Then she can't go around any more poking it into other people's business."

Dire Consequences.

She—You liked my cooking well enough just after we were married.

He—I didn't have dyspepsia then.

"O Happy Day" sang the laundress as she hung the snowy wash on the line. It was a "happy day" because she used Red Cross Ball Blue.

Safety First.

Mrs. Smith and her daughter attended the movie. On entering they found it very dark. The daughter, taking the lead, found seats No. 2 and 3, about midway in the balcony. The man in seat No. 1 stood up to let the two pass, and when they had entered the row the mother thought she was falling and reached her hand forward to catch herself. The man, still standing, said to the mother: "Lady, you have your hand on that man's head."

Drawing her hand back with surprise, she turned to the speaker and said: "Oh, I thought it was a post, for it shone like that post up there."

After seating herself she addressed her daughter in a loud voice, and said: "I put my hand right on that man's head," pointing to a man in the row below. Much laughter followed and many lost interest in the rest of the film.

Kindness.

When the Brazen Hussy moved into the house next door, the "Uplifter" said: "Of course, I can't exactly call. But if she comes out on her veranda to sit, I shall smile at her. The only way to get a hold on people like that is to be friendly."

And the Brazen Hussy looked at the "Uplifter" next door and said to herself: "Poor fright! I suppose I might as well speak to her. Perhaps after a little she will let me show her how to do her hair."—Life.

MODERN YOUTH HARD TO TRAP

Little Near-Tragedy Story That Is an Example of His Quick Wit and Duplicity.

Of course, he shouldn't have done it, and all that sort of thing, but both Hazel and Betty were charming girls, and it was summertime, and he was young, and he had gone and got himself engaged to both of them. He was sitting on the beach pondering the various problems this situation presented, when two soft hands were laid lightly over his eyes, and a soft voice whispered at the back of his head "Guess who?"

Now, the voices of Hazel and Betty were much alike, too much alike when heard as a whisper to make identification sure. And it didn't help any when the voice cooed—"I'll give you a hint—it's some one you told you loved."

Still he hesitated, his mind in a whirl. Should he name either girl and chance it? Already he felt a cooling of the air, as the voice continued: "Well, if that doesn't tell you who—"

"Of course I know who it is!" he exclaimed. "It is the prettiest, sweetest, dearest, smartest little girl in all the world!"

"Oh, you dear old boy!" she chirped in satisfied delight. "How did you really know for sure it was I?"

A Dusty Worm.

"Why don't you marry him?"

"He has such freakish ideas. Says he's a worm of the dust."

"But as long as he is a worm with the dust, what do you care?"—Boston Transcript.

FASCINATED THE FAIR SEX

Marat, Repulsive in Person and Manners, Was Noted for His Attractiveness to Women.

Jean Paul Marat, one of the leading and most infamous figures of the French revolution, was described by a contemporary as "beyond any question the ugliest man in the whole of France—and not merely ugly, but positively repulsive in person, habits and manners." And yet, in his early years, he was the most popular physician in Paris, not because of supposed professional skill, but on account of his attractiveness to women, the most wealthy and beautiful women of France daily crowding his consultation rooms, pushing, almost fighting, to get a word or perhaps, a single from him. That he turned a cold shoulder to their allurements seemed only to inflame their ardor, and at one time he contemplated flight, so embarrassing became their attentions. Even when he contracted a loathsome skin disease while hiding in the sewers of Paris, fair women continued to adore him.

Teacher's Splendid Record.

Miss Jennie Fish, placed on the pension list at the age of seventy by the New York board of education after 52 years' continuous service as a teacher in one school in the Bronx, has taught 40,000 children, including three generations of at least one family. In all the 52 years she was never late in reporting for duty and has been absent only once, when there was a death in the family.

Hoosier State Happenings

Crawfordsville.—Petitions are being circulated in Montgomery county to be presented to the board of county commissioners, asking for the erection here of a memorial hospital to cost $150,000, in honor of the Montgomery county men who died in the world war. Recently a petition was circulated asking for the erection in the county courthouse of a memorial tablet for the soldiers. On account of the pressing need that exists for a new hospital, and in accordance with the request of the members of Byron Cox post of the American Legion of this city, the petition was withdrawn and the new one put into circulation.

Indianapolis.—Curtailment of the construction program of the state highway commission to conserve material and labor was urged by John A. Riggs, assistant secretary of the United States department of agriculture, at an informal conference with members of the highway commission. Mr. Riggs said that much of the material used in road construction was needed in building houses in the city, where the housing situation is acute and material difficult to get. The car shortage was another reason put forward by Mr. Riggs for curtailment.

Shelbyville.—Reports of the township assessors and their deputies to the county assessor, on their first two weeks' work, shows that the assessments on personal property in Shelby county will be about the same this year as last on all except farming implements and household goods, which will be slightly higher. Horses in the county have been assessed at an average of $82 a head; cattle at $54; hogs at $14.25, and sheep at $16.75; automobiles at $360.50; household goods at $118, and farming implements at $130.30.

Indianapolis.—Township trustees and advisory boards who fail to levy sufficient school taxes to run their schools at least 120 days, or when they find the levy insufficient fail to refuse to borrow money sufficient for such purpose, provided that their school corporation is able to borrow money, have not complied with the Indiana rural school law, according to an opinion given to L. N. Hines, state superintendent of public instruction, by Ele Stansbury, attorney general.

Indianapolis.—That it will not be necessary to hold a special session of the Indiana legislature in order to provide adequate machinery to take care of the woman vote is the opinion of Miss Helen Benbridge of Terre Haute, president of the Woman's Franchise league of Indiana. Miss Benbridge is supported in her views by other officials in the state suffrage organization, so thus far the organization has not urged the calling of a special session for this purpose.

Columbus.—Bartholomew county, with 800 returns for income tax, sent in the largest number of all the counties in the district, of which this city is headquarters, according to officials here. Counties filing returns through the Columbus office are Jackson, Decatur, Ohio, Switzerland, Ripley, Dearborn, Jennings, Jefferson and Bartholomew. Ohio township sent in the smallest number of returns. Bartholomew's number is twice that sent in last year.

Indianapolis.—Charles J. Orbison, prohibition director for Indiana, has issued a warning relative to the sale of Jamaica ginger, laying emphasis on indiscriminate sales by druggists and by grocers, restaurant men and others. It is the opinion of Mr. Orbison that only druggists, selling the product for medical purposes, are authorized to sell Jamaica ginger and he asserted that close investigation will be made of all other sales with a view of prosecution.

Indianapolis.—The state board of agriculture, in resolutions, indorsed the candidacies of John Isenbarger, North Manchester, for the Democratic nomination for governor, and of Warren T. McCray of Kentland for the Republican nomination for governor. Mr. Isenbarger is a member of the board and Mr. McCray formerly was a member.

Shelbyville.—Seed corn tests in which 3,620 ears were submitted to the modified "rag-doll" method, have been completed, and the results announced by the county agricultural agent. The test shows that the "rag-doll" test method is proving a money-saver to the farmer in a large way.

Valparaiso.—Members of the Hurlburt local of the Chicago Milk Producers' association have declared that they will not exchange thrashing or silo feed with any neighbor who will not co-operate with the local in the marketing of milk in Gary and Chicago.

Indianapolis.—Following a brief public hearing on the daylight saving ordinance, the common council defeated the ordinance by a vote of 6 to 2.

Newcastle.—A petition asking that the Dublin pike, a part of the Dixie highway, be paved with concrete under the county unit road law, has been filed with the county auditor. The petitioners desire the highway paved from the corporate limits of Newcastle to the Henry-Wayne county line.

Salem.—A movement to abandon all rural schools in this township and to centralize the system in the graded schools here, providing new buildings for the accommodation of the additional children, has met with vigorous protest by the farmers of the community.

Indianapolis.—Hoosierdom's last toll road will soon become a public highway as the result of the action of the state board of tax commissioners in approving a bond issue of $25,000 asked by Floyd county to purchase the Corydon turnpike. The turnpike extends from New Albany to Lanesville and is owned by the New Albany, Lanesville & Corydon Turnpike company. The petition for the bond issue sets out that $15,000 is to be paid for the road and $10,000 for the property of the company, which includes the only stone quarry in Floyd county available for road building. The county is particularly desirous of obtaining title to the turnpike for the reason that it will be included in the designated state highway system.

Kendallville.—At a meeting of more than 200 farmers held here and presided over by W. C. Auman, township chairman of the Federation of Farmers, a resolution was passed protesting against the proposed increase of 25 cents in the monthly rental rates by the Central Union Telephone company. The farmers agreed to pay the present rate of $1.50 and no more. They pledged themselves to have their telephones removed if the rate recently authorized by the public service commission is put into effect. Petitions with more than 400 names were signed to this effect.

Indianapolis.—Carl J. Fletcher of Indianapolis, secretary of the Knox County Coal Operators' association, surrendered himself to the United States marshal here. Fletcher is one of the 125 coal operators and miners indicted here by a special federal grand jury on a charge of conspiracy to enhance the price of coal and to defraud the United States government. Fletcher was the first man indicted to surrender himself. It was said here that other indicted men intended to give themselves up.

Evansville.—Governors of seven states have been invited to attend the interstate good roads congress, to be held in this city April 22, the invitations being sent by Samuel L. May, president of the Chamber of Commerce. The seven governors invited are James P. Goodrich of Indiana, Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky, A. H. Roberts of Tennessee, Charles H. Brough of Arkansas, W. P. Hobby of Texas, Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, and O. A. Larrazolo of New Mexico.

Indianapolis.—Results of the rural school survey, which the state department of public instruction began in January, are being compiled at the office of L. N. Hines, state superintendent of public instruction. A resume of the results will be made at a rural school conference which will be held at Indiana university in July. Conditions in one-teacher schools where, Mr. Hines said, nearly half the teachers are planning to resign, will receive particular attention.

Aurora.—Amos N. Oberting, a young farmer, who lives near the Ohio and Indiana state line, sold a crop of tobacco on the floor of the Aurora Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse company, of 1,990 pounds, averaging 60 cents a pound, which was raised on a little less than two acres of new land. The two-best baskets sold at 98 cents a pound. This was said to have been the best-handled crop of tobacco sold on the floor this season.

Noblesville.—Real estate has been very active in Hamilton county during the last few days. For the six days there were 36 transfers made in farm land and city property which, according to the considerations specified in the deeds, involved $271,905. This is the most property to change hands in the county during any one week in the last year.

Indianapolis.—Confidence that ratification of the woman suffrage amendment will be complete in time for the women of Indiana to vote in the coming primary election is expressed in a telegram Governor Goodrich has received from Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, honorary president of the National League of Woman Voters.

Indianapolis.—The clouded atmosphere that has prevailed in Democratic circles since Gov. Edward I. Edwards was entered here as a candidate for the presidential nomination was suddenly clarified when the governor sent a telegram to Secretary of State Ed Jackson asking that his name be withdrawn.

South Bend.—Although the prices of milk, wholesale, has been reduced to the producer in St. Joseph county, the price to the consumer still remains at 14 cents a quart and 8 cents a pint. Farmers say they are receiving only 22 cents a gallon, or 5½ cents a quart, which is a reduction of 8 cents on the gallon.

Lafayette.—The county agricultural agent situation throughout the state is not so acute as it was a few months ago, but the demand still exceeds the supply. Fifteen vacancies are waiting to be filled. If all the applications for county agents could be filled, 85 of the 92 counties of the state would be supplied.

Indianapolis.—Governor Goodrich in an official proclamation issued here designated Friday, April 16, as Arbor and Bird day in Indiana.

Shelbyville.—The city council refused to pass an ordinance for the daylight saving schedule for Shelbyville in the summer months. A petition asking that such an ordinance be passed was presented to the council two weeks ago, and bore the signatures of several hundred residents.

Alexandria.—The school board here has proposed the annexation to the city by ordinance of all factories in the community, as a means of providing money for an increase in teachers' salaries. At present only one manufacturing concern is annexed to the city.

OPEN NOSTRILS! END COLD OR CATARRH

How to Get Relief When Head and Nose Are Stuffed Up.

Count fifty. Your cold in head or catarh disappears. Your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more snuffling, hawking, mucous discharge, dryness or headache, no struggling for breath at night.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist and apply a little of this fragrant antiseptic cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothing and healing the swollen or inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Head colds and catarrh yield like magic. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable. Relief is sure.—Adv.

Supreme Office.

Robert came home filled with excitement about a new club formed by several of the neighborhood associates. He said, "Jim is president and Myron is vice president, but I am the most important officer."

"And what are you?" asked Uncle Robert.

"Why, I'm janitor, and they can't get in till I unlock the door!"

Want to Be Americanized.

The people of the Virgin islands are begging to be Americanized. Now that they are under the American flag, they have a right to be dissatisfied with the old Danish laws and customs. One of these makes it necessary for a man to have an income of $300 a year in order to vote. This law gives only about 300 people in the islands a chance at controlling legislation.—Exchange.

RUB RHEUMATISM OR SORE, ACHING JOINTS

Rheumatism is "pain" only. Not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Stop drugging. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" right into your sore, stiff, aching joints and muscles, and relief comes instantly. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism cure which never disappoints and cannot burn the skin.

Limber up! Quit complaining! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" at any drug store, and in just a moment you'll be free from rheumatic pain, soreness, stiffness and swelling. Don't suffer! Relief awaits you. "St. Jacobs Oil" has cured millions of rheumatism sufferers in the last half century, and is just as good for sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, backache, sprains.—Adv.

California's Fruit Crops.

In the year ending August 31, 1919, California fruit growers marketed 10,904,892 boxes of oranges, 3,708,667 boxes of lemons and 208,188 boxes of grapefruit.

STOMACH TORTURE GONE FIRST SLEEP IN THREE MONTHS

Mr. Heinricks Was Ready to Give Up, Then He Found How to Regain Health.

"My first sleep in 8 months was on the second night after I began using Milks Emulsion. I had had a bad case of stomach trouble and constipation for years and was ready to give up. I was troubled with gas, dizziness, bloat after eating, gnawing sensation and cramps in the stomach. Milks Emulsion was a Godsend to me, and I want everyone to know about a medicine that will cure cases like mine."—C. E. Heinricks, 702 S. Alabama St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Thousands of sufferers from catarrh of the stomach, indigestion and bowel troubles have found that Milks Emulsion gives prompt relief and real lasting benefit.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whom sickness has weakened, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. Price 60c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Count your blessings every morning. It should make you an optimist till noon, anyway.

THEY SUFFERED FROM BACKACHE AND KIDNEYS

Tiffin, Ohio.—"Dr. Pierce's Anuric is the best kidney medicine I have ever taken and I have tried many. My work is very hard on the back and I developed kidney trouble and backache and uric acid spread through my system, causing me to have rheumatism as well. After trying many remedies I decided to try Anuric and it has given me more real relief than anything I have ever taken. Consequently I consider it the best there is."—H. C. Harnish, 98 E. Davis St.

Naturally when the kidneys are deranged the blood is filled with poisonous waste matter, which settles in the feet, back, ankles or wrists; or under the eyes, in bag-like formations.

Dr. Pierce's Anuric is many times more potent than lithia and often eliminates uric acid as hot tea melts sugar.

Send Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel 10 cents for trial package Anuric (anti-uric).

Fremont, Ohio.—"Anuric cured me when doctors and other medicines had failed. For about five years I suffered with kidney complaint and bladder trouble. Had pains in my back and across my kidneys, and rheumatism set in through my limbs and arms. I doctored without getting relief until I decided to try Anuric tablets, and it was only necessary for me to take three bottles to completely cure me of all the rheumatism."—Mrs. Daisy Cherry, 813 Garrison St.

The fact that the centralization of schools is becoming popular throughout our state is revealed in the compilation of the facts as they are now existing. Taking DeKalb county, in 1890 we had 107 one room school houses. In 1920 we had 66, showing that 41 had been abandoned. Randolph county leads the state as they had 115 in 1890, and in 1920 only 9 schools were remaining that had but the one room facilities, 92.1 being abandoned.

St. JOE, IND.

It Refrigerates Without Ice.

The Bee Hive Grocery and Meat Market, operated and owned by Wm. Smith of St. Joe, is now in a class by itself, having recently installed a refrigerating plant that really refrigerates without ice. For ages natural ice has been used for cooling and refrigeration. With the introduction of large ice machines came the manufacture of artificial ice, but this brought no relief from the slop, bother and muss, no relief from the uncertainty, inconvenience and waste of using ice, besides the hard work and expense of putting up ice for the summer season and of filling the coolers. Nearly all users of ice have wished that they might have the drudgery part of their business fully eliminated. Mr. Smith is the first business man in this part of the county to undertake the installing of one of the new cooling devices. The system has proven to be successful and as Mr. Smith says will operate at much less expense than the using of natural ice, they do not always get ice of sufficient thickness to really warrant its packing because of the heavy loss in melting during the summer days.

Old methods of refrigeration must give away to the mechanical refrigerating machines and Progress and Competition demand this clean, sanitary and efficient way. If you have never seen a plant of this character operate it would pay you to visit the Smith Market and Grocery and ask that you be shown. The system is put into operation by a gasoline engine and is charged each morning and evening.

County Conference on 7th

Rev. A. P. Bourns, pastor of the Auburn Presbyterian Church and appointed County Converer for the Interchurch World Movement, announces that there will be four men and one woman on the team of Workers sent by the state office to conduct the DeKalb County Conference in Auburn Wednesday, April 7th. Each church in the county should be represented by its pastor and at least two lay members and as many more as are able to attend.

A wonderful amount of interest is being manifested in this great movement, not only in the United States, but all over the world. The DeKalb County Conference is one of a series which is being conducted in each county in the United States. The very best of speakers are secured for the leadership. The stereopticon will be used at the evening session to illustrate the activities of Interchurch work and the great need for the same.

Too much can not be said of the importance of this County meeting and every one should bend every effort to attend the three sessions, the first of which begins at 10:30 Wednesday morning, April 7th., at the Presbyterian Church on South Jackson street in Auburn.

Value of the Home Service

How many soldiers from DeKalb county were maimed, wounded, gassed or had their physical health impaired during the world war and are entitled to government compensation? If this question were asked most people they would say, "Oh I don't know of any." Yet on the first two days of the investigation of Miss Rosa Krause of the home service department of the American Red Cross, Lake Division, who is here assisting Miss Bess Kinsey, home service secretary they found over twenty cases in DeKalb county.

They found one man almost unable to work who has a family to support, they found another who is afflicted with tuberculosis from being gassed and other instances where home service work in DeKalb county is needed and needed right now.

A concrete example of how the home service department helps soldiers and their families is shown by an incident in Garrett. A telegram came to the Red Cross asking about a certain fireman who had telegraphed his wife at Philadelphia Pa., to come to Garrett to live.

Before leaving she asked the Red Cross to assist her and the Red Cross telegraphed Garrett to find what kind of a home she was coming to. Here is what they found. That the man, who had worked in the engineering school of the Baltimore & Ohio for only a short time, had the night before resigned his job, packed up his clothing at his rooming house, drawn his pay and left. Had she been allowed to come to Garrett she would have arrived there without money and without a home.

During the war the home service department was a division that was established for the soldiers' families while they were away. Its assistance was not of a charitable nature but helped wives to get allotments which were delayed by government procedure, assisted in establishing mail connections between the soldiers and their families and in case of sickness secured nursing attention.

Many soldiers in DeKalb county are entitled to compensation and do not know it. Many are entitled to vocational training but do not realize it and it is this kind of work that the home service department will carry on in DeKalb county. As a preliminary step Miss Bess Kinsey, the new home service secretary, of the Red Cross, will prepare a roster of all the soldiers who went from DeKalb county.

Once this is completed she will send out blanks on which will be questions as to whether a soldier has while in service been in a hospital, gassed or wounded and with such a questionnaire she will prepare a list of soldiers who may be entitled to assistance. Then these men will be interviewed personally.

Insurance Offer Soon Expires.

The insurance offer to soldiers who wish to convert their insurance or reclaim it, is good for a few months longer and Miss Kinsey will go over this work with the soldiers.

The securing of liberty bonds which have been lost, back pay, travel pay and like matters will be under the supervision of Miss Kinsey. She will be in the office of the Red Cross over the Savings Loan & Trust Co., at first only a part of the time. She will make a number of trips over the county getting the information as to the location of men who are thought to be entitled to compensation.

If there are men in the county who are not able to work or who desire to take vocational training they will be examined to find out if they are physically fit, and if they are not they will be placed on compensation and in a hospital until they are.

For example eight men have been found in Garrett who are entitled to government compensation. Three were found in Auburn, Butler, Waterloo, Spencerville and other settions of the coupty were also found to have men entitled to government assistance. Every part of the county will be visited in the search and the secretary will be glad to correspond with any one regarding compensation, insurance, vocational training or home service work.

Suffragists were elated Saturday over the ruling of Attorney General Stansbury for Indiana, saying women of this state can cast their presidential preference ballots at the primary elections May 4. Stansbury says that he has not been requested for an official opinion on the question, but that this is just his private opinion, indicating he would rule that way in case he is asked.

SKIRTS OF TWO MATERIALS

Handsomest among sport skirts made of rough silk and heavy satin weaves, are those made by combining two colors, or a plain with a striped or plaid pattern. Georgette crepe is also used in combination with these silks and satins for the upper half of plain skirts. Almost without exception these straight-hanging skirts are gathered at the waist and worn with a girdle made of the silk.

White and deep blue in a rough silk make the elegant skirt shown above. The blue is set in, in bands that are graduated in width and the simulated pockets are in blue. Other colors are used in the same way, with white.

OF PLAIN AND DOTTED VOILE

Here is a pretty blouse made in surplice style, of plain and dotted voile. The dotted voile is brought about the waist to form a twisted girdle. Three-quarter length sleeves of the plain material are finished with scant flounces cut in points, made of the dotted goods. This blouse is not at all difficult to make and suggests the combination of short lengths of material that could not otherwise be used.

CHARMING FROCK OF TAFFETA

Taffeta is made up in many charming ways this season and one of them appears in the quaint frock pictured. It opens at the front over a chemisette of lace, that terminates in a point below the waist and has elbow sleeves finished with bands of velvet ribbon. Velvet band on the skirt and girdle and a bow and ends of narrow ribbon complete it.

THE STORY OF SMOCKS

The story of smocks is long already—and it is to be continued. Their popularity grows and has not reached its peak; hence designers are giving a great deal of attention to varying and elaborating this graceful garment. Just now crepe de chine and crepe georgette are oftenest employed for making the smock, either of them providing a suitable background for rich embroideries and beautiful stitching done in silk or yarn or beads. Hand painting, outlined with silk floss, has made its appearance among the latest embellishments.

The smock shown here is a dark blue crepe de chine. About the bottom there is a border of embroidered grapes and leaves, in several colors. The neck is outlined with an embroidered band which is repeated at each side over the shoulders.

OUTDOOR DRESS OF GINGHAM

Spring fashions have their try-outs at the winter resorts and that is where new gingham frocks with hats to match, made their appearance on the streets and at the beaches. These outfits proved so pleasing that they will be worn all summer. The smaller checks and plaids look best in them.

CHIC COAT ON RUSSIAN LINES

There is no style that has more chic character than that of the Russian blouse and none so becoming to thin women. Here is a perfectly new achievement in a coat cut with remarkable cleverness in Russian blouse lines, although it is not a blouse at all. Its designer is to be credited with about the most original piece of work that the season has so far presented.

In this model of tan-colored cloth, the fullness that is usually belted in, in the Russian blouse, is cut away at the waist line, and arranged in plaits above and below it, in the manner shown by the picture. A folded belt is smartly trimmed with round buttons and the long sleeves flare and turn back at the waist.

SMART SILHOUTTE FOR SUITS

Nothing more unusual than dark blue serge and large bone buttons make the suit shown above. With these reliable means it achieves much smartness by adopting a popular silhouette for spring. The skirt is straight the coat flares below the waist line and sits close to the figure above it.

A Learned Capital.

Aarau, capital of the Swiss canton of Argovia, posseses one of the hardest working libraries in the world. Though the library consists of only 80,000 volumes—which is not so large as public institutions go in the United States—the population of the capital itself is only 10,000. With eight volumes per inhabitant, the library of Aarau has just cause to boast of itself as a miniature Athens.

MEANT FORM OF CRITICISM

Original Expression, "Getting the Dickens," Was Not, as Many Think, Something Profane.

Sometime, somewhere, from somebody we all get "the Dickens." And those of us who become prominent get it more than the others.

Among those of us ordinary mortals who occasionally find relief in letting off steam in the form of something more expressive than slang, there seems to be a common misconception that "getting the Dickens" is a modification or abbreviation of (heaven help us!) "getting the devil." It is not. It is a harmless, legitimate and respectable expression that may be used with impunity in the best of company. It is simply an allusion to our old friend, Charles Dickens.

Though immortal as a novelist, Dickens was well known in his own time as a newspaper man. So vitriolic is he said to have been in his attacks on faulty public officials or other prominent men that gradually it came to be said, when anyone was criticised by him, that he got "the Dickens."

New Life-Saving Device.

Firing a test shot with its barrel full of water was the unusual performance of an improved form of gun for shooting a life line over a wrecked vessel, in recent official trials, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. A one-piece shell containing powder and projectile gives the new gun a great advantage over the old muzzle-loading type. The barrel may be regulated to elevations of thirty, forty-five, sixty or eighty degrees, and its range is 1,700 feet. The barrel is readily carried by one man, and the one-piece carriage has a pair of wheels for easy hauling. The firing mechanism is actuated by a lanyard, and the lifeline, attached to the projectile, unwinds from the center of the reel without kinking.

The man who marries a disagreeable woman for her money swallows a bitter silver-coated pill.

REASON IN LOWER ANIMALS

That They Possess More Than Mere Instinct Seems to Have Been Abundantly Proved.

In the woods when male deer get to fighting, the rattle of their clashing antlers may be heard a long way off, and sometimes other males hearing the sound make toward it and lure away the female over which the other two are fighting.

Hunters frequently employ this knowledge of deer habits to decoy bucks into range of their rifles by rattling together a couple of sets of old antlers.

Take it all in all, it is hardly fair to the animals to say they merely possess instinct, when we have so many instances of their reasoning powers. If monkeys were able to preserve the best thoughts of each generation of their species as humans do with the printing press—well, anyway, it is too bad that Garner didn't live to establish on the Florida coast his monkey colony. Had he done this, who knows what startling discoveries he might have made concerning their intellect?—Exchange.

His Liver.

Recently John, the young son of the pastor of the Brightwood Methodist church, was sick. His father took him to see Dr. W. C. Engle. The doctor was giving him a thorough examination to determine his ailment.

In the examination he said: "John, I am going to see whether you have a liver. Have you a liver, John?"

The boy replied: "Not yet; I wi" have one after dinner."

"After dinner," said the doctor. "How is that, John?"

"Well," said John, "mother is cooking an old hen for dinner, and I am going to eat her liver."—Indianapolis News.

INDIANA NEWS

Indianapolis.—Candidates seeking election in the state to several specified offices will be asked regarding their views on matters of particular importance to farmers, by the Indiana Federation of Farmers' associations, according to a decision reached by directors of the organization. The purpose of sending a questionnaire to ascertain the candidates' policies will be to provide information concerning each candidate in such a form that it can be given accurately to the federation's members. Those seeking election as United States senator, representative, governor, lieutenant governor, member of the legislature and county commissioner will be requested to fill out the questionnaires.

Indianapolis.—The state board of tax commissioners in the promulgation of new rules paved the way for the reassessment this year of any real estate in the state that was not properly assessed last year. The rule is of importance because it opens the way to correct real estate assessments this year instead of permitting the valuations found last year to continue in effect until the next regular appraisal of real estate in 1923. It was explained by members of the board that under the workings of the true cash value system last year there were many instances of discriminatory assessments by local officials.

Franklin.—The city council has passed an ordinance increasing the pay of city officials, all of whom had resigned because of the low salaries they received. The fire chief is to receive $960 a year; firemen, $900; street commissioner, $960; city marshal, $1,080, and custodian of city building, $900. The increase is approximately $120 for each man. All of the old employees will be reinstated. The council also has voted to build new quarters for the fire department in the rear of the city building.

Terre Haute.—Caplases were served on 80 coal operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America, recently indicted by the federal grand jury at Indianapolis as a result of investigation of conditions in the fuel industry. Frank Thorpe of Terre Haute, an operator, connected with the Sugar Valley Coal company, was the last man to provide bond, which was fixed at $10,000 in his case. The total of bonds provided by the 30 men amounts to more than $275,000. They will be arraigned May 4.

Indianapolis.—The 128 truant officers in Indiana last year returned 32,779 truant children to the public schools and 1,706 to parochial schools, according to figures compiled in the office of the board of state charities. The officers obtained 685 convictions out of 1,213 prosecutions. They aided 32,014 children and worked 21,579 days. Administration of the law cost $67,485, of which $24,712 was for assistance to children. The per capita for truants was $1.24 and for children assisted, 77 cents.

South Bend.—Based on the present prices of intoxicating liquors, confiscated liquor worth $40,000 is at the South Bend police station awaiting destruction. Just as fast as the cases in which the liquor is used as evidence are heard, the whisky and wines are sealed and set aside with other liuquor doomed for the sewer. An inventory of the stock showed that whisky and wines valued at $22,000 have been condemned. The stock will probably be poured in the sewer.

Danville.—Setting out that he made a mistake of $23,000 in figuring on the contract for the state road from Brownsburg to the Marion county line, James J. Nejdl, state senator from Lake county, has filed a petition with the Hendricks county commissioners, asking that he be released from the contract. Nejdl's bid was $193,741.88, and was $6,000 under the county engineer's estimate, and $43,683.27 under he next lowest bidder.

Indianapolis.—"The Vernon municipal water works plant has been in operation for 25 years and never was self-supporting," reads a petition for higher rates filed with the public service commission by the town clerk. He adds, however, that the deficits always are made up by the tax payers. He wishes the commission to authorize rates for the town so it can operate its plant at least without loss.

Anderson.—Early preparations are being made for two large camp meetings of religious organizations in Madison county. It has been announced that the annual international camp meeting of the Church of God will convene at the permanent meeting place at Anderson, June 18, and will close June 27, and the Indiana association of Spiritualists will hold its annual camp at Chesterfield in July.

Petersburg.—Farmers and land owners in the White river bottoms west of Petersburg are organizing to build a temporary levee along White river, to keep the backwaters off of valuable land, until the government and state come to their aid, when they hope for a permanent levee from this ity to the Wabash river. The building of the contemplated levee along the Wabash river in Gibson county will avoid the destruction of thousands of dollars' worth of crops along White river annually by the backwaters, it is believed. The Indian Creek Coal company, which owns much river bottom land, will erect a big levee to protect its bottom land from overflow this spring and summer.

Indianapolis.—The public service commission ordered a change in its ruling establishing rates for freight carried on passenger interurban cars. The order directs that the rates shall be 150 per cent of the Central Freight association class rate scale instead of 150 per cent of Central Freight association first-class rates applicable to the articles shipped. The Union Traction Company of Indiana, the Terre Haute, Indianapolis & Eastern, and the Indianapolis & Cincinnati Traction company petitioned for the change and also for certain increases in the minimum charge. The commission declined to increase the minimums.

Connersville.—Whether or not a man be county superintendent and high school principal at the same time is a question which must be answered here, since Claude Trusler, recently elected county superintendent to succeed Earl Lines, who resigned, is principal of the Harrison township high school. Absolom Simpkins, the trustee of Harrison township, says there is no hope of obtaining another teacher for the remainder of the term. He believes Trusler may hold both offices, providing he receives pay for only one.

Indianapolis.—The Indiana Federation of Business and Professional Women, formerly the Women's Association of Commerce of Indiana, at its third annual meeting at the Severin hotel, adopted resolutions favoring adequate pay for men and women, but denouncing the extravagant demands of extremists and calling on all women to take a safe and sane attitude toward labor and production problems, and to insist at all times not only on adequate pay for a day's work but adequate work for a day's pay.

Shelbyville.—"Good soil and good people go hand in hand. This combination has kept Shelby county to the front. One need only look into the history of the county to know that this is true," says the county agricultural agent, in outlining Shelby county agricultural accomplishments. "We are an agricultural people, and I hope to prove that Shelby county is really first in this line of work," he says. "We have 1,480 members in our Farmers' association, the largest county membership in the state.

Evansville.—Many of the farmers living in Vanderburg county say that the price of wheat will soar this spring and summer. The county agricultural agent of Vanderburg county says there are 992,000 acres of wheat less this year in Indiana than last year. The shortage is due to the fact that there was a lot of wet weather last fall, and then, too, farmers were unable to get enough help. A great deal of the wheat in this part of the state was frozen out during the last winter.

Bloomington.—Five cents an hour is the difference between a baby asleep and one awake, according to the schedule of prices adopted by Indiana university young women students who are earning money to pay their way through school. Bloomington women who have cared for sleeping babies and wide-awake babies, say "it's worth twice as much to care for a baby awake." Twenty cents an hour is the price for the baby asleep and 25 cents for one awake.

Vincennes.—As the result of urgent appeals being made to a prominent oil company by the Francis Vigo chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, an old walnut tree known as the "Treaty Tree," located on the company's property in Vincennes, will be preserved. According to the statistics history was made under this tree in the days of Harrison, Tecumseh and the Northwest territory.

Columbus.—More prisoners are needed at the Indiana state farm at Putnamville, in order to do the necessary work at the institution, says Charles E. Talkington, superintendent, who said only 250 prisoners now are at the farm. A few years ago, he added, the normal population was from 700 to 800 The decrease in the number of prisoners is attributed chiefly to the operatio nof the prohibition law.

Mount Vernon.—Farmers and landowners of Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky met at the courthouse in this city and organized the Wabash and Ohio River Flood Control association, an organization that will try to obtain legislation that will result in the dredging of the lower Wabash river and prevent the building of additional levees on the upper Wabash and the White and Patoka rivers.

Etons Bring Sashes.

The Eton jacket suits, aside from the fact that they are always charming for young women, are especially fascinating this season because of the many lovely sashes that are designed to accompany them. The sash may be of self-fabric, with gayly embroidered ends, or it may be of plaid or plain bright-colored silk. Black satin sashes are very smart with ends embroidered in metal thread and often finished with metal ball fringe. Suit makers are finishing many of their smartest models by attaching a tiny French bouquet or a single flower—artificial, of course—to the lapel. Suit-coat sleeves are generally three-quarter length and the blouses that are worn underneath them are more often than not equipped with sleeves that reach about half-way between shoulder and elbow.

Importance of Clothes.

Don't be seen unless you are faultlessly attired. This counts even among men; among women it is positively invaluable.

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

There is only one medicine that really stands out pre-eminent as a medicine for curable ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proven to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of distressing cases. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing vegetable compound.

Start treatment at once. Sold at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Vain Endeavor.

"Who is the despondent-looking person?"

"The former proprietor of a cabaret. He says life holds nothing more for him."

"Why doesn't he establish himself in Cuba?"

"It's too late now. He wasted the savings of years trying to convince his patrons that the vaudeville he gave them while sober was just as good as the performances they used to applaud wildly when three sheets in the wind."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

WAS BADLY RUN-DOWN FROM PNEUMONIA

Mrs. Washburn quickly regained her strength and flesh.

"I had grippe, followed by pneumonia. It left me with a terrible soreness in my chest, constant pain in my throat and so weak and nervous I could neither eat nor sleep. I had a chill every morning.

"One day a young man told me how Milks Emulsion had got him out of bed and built him up after he had been reduced to a skeleton and given up by the doctors. So I tried it. I have gained in strength, appetite and flesh, sleep better than I have for years, am doing all my own work again and feel like a new person.

"The beauty about Milks Emulsion is that it doesn't wear out like most things, and is so pleasant to take. It is a food as well as a medicine and builds up the blood and tissues. It surely put new blood in my veins and I have the healthiest color I ever had."—Mrs. M. Washburn, El Centro, Cal.

It costs nothing to try Milks Emulsion. It will build you up more quickly, more surely than anything else.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, promotes appetite and puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are usually relieved in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. Price 50c and $1.00 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Seeing Ourselves.

A well-known film buyer was chatting to a producer the other day and became so interested in the subject of film acting that the latter thought he ought to be tactful and offer him a part. When the film was complete the producer invited the buyer to see himself as he really was.

"Well!" said Mr. Producer, "and are you going to buy the film?"

"No," replied Mr. Buyer. "I'm going to commit suicide!"

GRIDDLE CAKES and WAFFLES
From the NEW ROYAL COOK BOOK

THERE is an art in making flapjack pancakes, griddle cakes or wheats, call them what you will. But it is an art very easily and quickly acquired if you follow the right recipes.

Here are some recipes for a variety of breakfast cakes that will make grandmother envious. The secret, of course, is Royal Baking Powder.

Royal Hot Griddle Cakes

2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
1½ cups milk
1 tablespoons shortening

Mix and sift dry ingredients; add milk and melted shortening; beat well. Bake on slightly greased hot griddle.

Griddle Cakes with Eggs

2½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
2 eggs
2½ cups milk
1 tablespoon shortening

Mix and sift dry ingredients; add beaten eggs, milk and melted shortening; mix well. Bake immediately on hot griddle.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure

Buckwheat Cakes

2 cups buckwheat flour
1 cup flour
4 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
1½ teaspoon salt
2½ cups milk or milk and water
1 tablespoon molasses
1 tablespoon shortening

Sift together flours, baking powder and salt; add liquid, molasses and melted shortening; beat three minutes. Bake on hot greased griddle.

Waffles

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
½ teaspoon salt
1½ cups milk
2 eggs
2 tablespoons melted shortening

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together; add milk to yolks of eggs; mix thoroughly and add to dry ingredients; add melted shortening and mix in beaten whites of eggs. Bake in well greased hot waffle iron until brown. Serve hot with maple syrup. It should take about 1½ minutes to bake each waffle.

Friday was Visitors Day at the St. Joe Schools giving the parents and friends of the scholars the opportunity to see part of the work, at least, that had been done the present term. In each room was displayed the work of the grades in that room. The High School using the reciaation room for their work and showed the regular work being done in the various classes in all the branches of their studies. The Manual Training Class have been working on magasine and book racks which are very neatly finished. The Domestic Science room is a picture in neatness and is quite well equipped. The Class had several well made garments and neatly made fancy work on display. Special mention should be given in the work of the little tots in their writing their cut-out colored pictures and other ways of directing the minds of so many little folks in the best way. The instructors have been tireless in their efforts to educate the children this term. The grades will close school this week while the High School will continue for several weeks yet.

St. Joe School Children is Examined.

That the children of the public schools need some special attention, more than that given by their parents concerning their health was revealed last week in the local schools, when the results of the work of Miss Gladys Grimm, Tuberculosis Nurse, and Miss Grace Lewis, County Red Cross Nurse, were made known. The ladies spent two days at St. Joe, last week, examining each of the children in school. Dr. C. R. Price was given the task of making the examination of their teeth and Dr. Sheffer made the physical examination and the results are as follows:

High School, examined 54 O. K. except teeth, 46; ears, 3; teeth O. K. 17; underweight, 15; overweight 13; eyes, 12.

Grades examined 129, O. K. except teeth, 76; tonsils, 12; eyes, 10; ears, 3; adenoids, 1; lungs, 2; heart 1; underweight, 14; overweight, 6.

This work is to be followed up carefully by the nurses and each parent with defective children will be notified from the county office to see to having the corrections made before the next term of school. It is the plan to carry this out in every school at least once a year and more often if they can get around to it. The plan is for better health conditions in the future generations. The nurses were well pleased with the results and it is hoped that the response from the parents will be prompt in having these corrections made. If you desire further information it can be had by calling the office of the county nurse at Auburn.

Mrs. Swineford Dies.

Mrs George Swineford died at her home in St. Joe, Wednesday morning at about 3 o'clock after an illness of only a short time, since Friday of last week. Her condition was so serious on Tuesday afternoon that the report was circulated that she had passed away but she rallied and lived for several hours. Heart trouble was the cause of her death. The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Lutheran church. The body will lie in state from 10 until 1 o'clock.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

RADICALISM IN THE SADDLE

Without a Definite Program, People Everywhere Are Demanding a Change in Present Conditions—Threat of "Direct Action."

Article XI.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Radicalism in Europe is rampant. The workers are active, the middle class sympathetic. The industrial centers are hotbeds. The conservatism of the farmers and peasants is breaking down. It is hard to define this radicalism—it is without form. It isn't a definite program, it isn't even political. The people are dissatisfied. The red flag is popular. It promises a short cut. It answers the cry of the impatient. I was surprised to see many of the very men who fought so gallantly under their country's flag and who but yesterday would have torn the red flag from the flagpole, now defending it, carrying it and following it. I am sure they do not know what the red flag stands for. To them it represents a protest against things as they are. Summed up in a word, the attitude of mind of the workers of Europe is eagerness for a change—some change—any change. Every one knows the symptoms, understands what is wrong, but the remedy is only vaguely discussed.

I attach much significance to the new attitude of organized labor in Europe. Labor unions formerly concerned themselves with wages, terms of employment, shop conditions, safety appliances, recognition of their right of collective bargaining. Since the war the labor movement has taken up questions entirely outside of its field, questions properly the concern of all the people, questions of government policy. I have in mind recent demands made by the working men in England, France and Italy. These demands were addressed to the regularly and properly elected representatives of the people, the governments. They were accompanied by threats of general strikes if they were not acceded to. This step is an innovation; it is revolutionary.

The working men are citizens and have a voice in the government equal with all other citizens. After the people have selected their representatives, the men chosen should be responsible to all of the people without regard to class or station. A government by one portion of the people is autocratic. Government of the people, for the people, and by the people, means all of the people. The effort on the part of a minority in the labor movement, who challengingly call themselves socialists, to dictate to the state, representing all of the people, is an attack upon democracy. If successful it would destroy the state and leave the great majority of the people, including the workers, less free than they are now. What sane man, whether he is a working man or not, is in favor of minority government?

Demands Hard to Understand.

I witnessed many demonstrations in Europe under the red flag, in which the leaders demanded three things from the government.

First, they demanded the release of all the men in jail who were held for political crimes. These included men found guilty of sedition and treason during the war. I cannot understand this demand. Why should men be released from jail who sought to stab in the back the men who went to the trenches to fight and die for freedom? I should much prefer to see all of the burglars released. If I am compelled to choose between the traitor and the burglar, I will have no trouble in making my decision.

Second, they demanded that no soldiers be sent to Russia. The agitation on this point was so strong that when the British government attempted to send soldiers to Russia last summer (1919), the soldiers mutinied, and so far as I am able to learn the feeling was so strong, the situation so critical, the government did not dare court-martial them.

Third, they demanded that all conscription laws be abolished.

It is apparent that these demands, coming from a minority, backed by a threat, constitute an invasion of the rights of the people. The question isn't whether or not one believes these things should be done; the issue is the method resorted to. Personally I do not believe soldiers should be sent to Russia. In my opinion allied interneddling has been stupid and harmful, but if these matters of general public policy are to be decided, all of the people should have a vote in making up the verdict.

When you consider this new attitude of labor in conjunction with the growing popularity of "direct action," it indicates that the labor movement is losing faith in law and political action. I am not saying that their experience with politics, their betrayal by men they have supported, the default of political parties to carry out pre-election pledges, may not be responsible for a distrust in political government. I am not denying that capital has had the ear of government more than it should; that property has been given more thought than human beings. I am concerned with the danger that these innovations promise, a danger to the working men themselves a menace to law and order, without which no one is secure, without which there can be no freedom.

Political Action Called Failure.

I heard a speech in London that deeply impressed me. It was applauded by several thousand men and women—average good British working people. Most of the men wore service badges. The speaker, a clean young Englishman of about thirty-five, said:

"Political action is a failure. We vote and we are betrayed. Political parties are the agents of bands of capital. Their purpose is to keep the workers apart, knowing that divided we are powerless. The only time they are willing we should unite is when war calls for men. What did we win in the war? Nothing. We thought we had a stake in the game, that the hand we were playing was our own. Now that it is over we have discovered that we won nothing.

"What did the working man ever get by voting, except the worst of it? The word vote comes from a Latin word, meaning 'to wish.' Who ever got anything by wishing?

"We are like the story in Bellamy's 'Looking Backward.' You remember he spoke of a coach. On top of this coach the capitalists sit in the sunshine enjoying the ride. On the side of the coach, hanging by their fingernails and toenails are the hundreds of thousands who make up the middle class. Millions of men are pulling the coach. They are sweating and trudging—they are the working men. Running along the side of the coach are millions more, fighting to get a chance to get hold of the rope and pull the coach. They are the idle. There is only one thing to do. That is to stop pulling the coach, let go of the rope. Don't wish about it; do it. The fellows on the top of the coach don't do any wishing—they boss and drive."

The crowd cheered. There is some truth in the speech. It is true that the working man has not had a square deal, but the fact that he has not had fair treatment does not make the plan of direct action a sane, wise plan. Revolution would only lead to blood and disorder and leave the very men who revolted in a worse plight than they are now. The millions who are the majority have an infinitely better weapon than force. They have the ballot. They are in the majority. Men must think their way out of the wilderness. They cannot fight their way out. When they try to they go deeper in.

Bolshevism Finding Favor.

I found the word bolshevism in the minds and on the lips of the working people of Europe. I expected to find them antibolshevik if for no other reason than that bolshevism came from Russia and the bolsheviks made peace with Germany while the allies were in a death struggle with her with the result in doubt. I found them confessing their faith in bolshevism, speaking of it as a new religion, resenting the obstacles their own governments had placed in its way.

In Ireland, the last place I expected to find a leaning toward bolshevism, I found an open devotion to it. The Irish people are in many respects the most conservative in the world. The only radicalism they have ever shown is the revolutionary spirit expressed in uprisings for freedom. The Irish are a people of reminiscence and tradition. The Celtic mind is devoted to form and custom. I was present at the Irish Federation of Labor convention held in August, 1919, at Drogheda. The delegates to this convention, representing 300,000 union men and women, went on record almost unanimously for bolshevism. I later learned that few of them, if any, knew exactly what bolshevism was. I asked a leading spirit of the convention if he believed in communism, the abolition of the private ownership of property, and he said, "Of course not; that's rank nonsense; socialism; impossible and impractical." The pro and con of bolshevism has from the beginning been partisan and prejudiced. Working men are bolsheviks because employers are against it, and employers are against it because the men are for it.

Duty Before the World.

Millions of gallant young men have fought for the new world. Hundreds of thousands died to establish it. If we fail to honor the promise given to them we dishonor ourselves. What does a new world mean? What was the old world like? It was a world where toil for myriads of honest workers, men and women, purchased nothing better than squalor, penury, anxiety and wretchedness; a world scarred by slums and disgraced by sweating, where unemployment through the vicissitudes of industry brought despair to multitudes of humble homes; a world where, side by side with want, there was waste of the inexhaustible riches of the earth, partly through ignorance and want of forethought, partly through entrenched selfishness. If we renew the lease of that world we shall betray the heroic dead. We shall be guilty of the basest perfidy that ever blackened a people's fame.—David Lloyd George.

Golden Pheasant Feathers.

A considerable source of profit exists in the feathers of the golden pheasant, which are used in salmon fishing. These birds, which are natives of China, are the hardiest of the pheasant tribe, and are not at all troublesome to rear in this country.

MENTAL HABITS.

No one escapes trouble, so whatever may be your condition you have no monopoly in suffering. You have your compensations. Don't whine and get the complaint habit. "Make the best of things." This homely phrase is, after all, the shibboleth of life. It is the faculty of seeing some good—of drawing some inspiration from the most hidden source, that makes life endurable, that glorifies it. Life is pleasant or unpleasant, hard or easy, according to the way you look at it, the way you think of life. Thoughts govern action, and he who governs his thoughts is master of his destiny. Destiny is not about you, but within you. Healthful, hopeful, optimistic thoughts are essential to strong minds and bodies.

Worry is one of the very bad mental habits; it injures beyond repair certain cells of the brain; and the brain being the nutrient center of the body, the other organs become gradually injured, and when some disease of these organs or a combination of them arises, death finally ensues. Thus may the habit of worrying kill. Only too often mental habits are morbid in their nature, and consequently cast a morbid influence upon the physical system over which they rule. Especially is this true when our minds are centered on the involuntary functions of the body. A man who has his mind constantly upon his digestion will soon have indigestion. Nature purposes to run her own machinery, and when we undertake to supplant it by human plans or artificial ways we destroy the natural process and disease results.

Thinking of what is eaten during or after meals is a dangerous practice, and if continued until it becomes a habit will be a greater obstacle in the way of curing any disease of the stomach than any other factor.

A person who suffers pain, and suffers his mind to revert to it constantly, establishes a nerve habit of pain, and the sense of pain grows, while the capacity to endure pain lessens. There can be no greater calamity to chronic invalids than that they get together and tell their ailments to each other. Such a course is but nursing disease and rendering it less curable. It should always be the aim to cultivate reversed habits of expression to those we feel during illness. Sickness is not the least of the opportunities in life. It is the time for reflection. It does not come by accident usually, but is the effect of a cause. Reason and reflect upon the cause rather than the effect. The break in the wrong modes of living which is present affords the best opportunity to change the bad mental habits and a start in better ways.

Many people go into society just for the purpose of telling their aches and pains and troubles. Such people should be sent to the pest house and kept in quarantine until they are cured; they are as untouched by the myriad happy influences of life as the mole is by the light of a star or the flash of a comet. They say "No one is as bad off as I am." Their salutation is always one that plunges at once into the condition of the liver, stomach, nerves, or some bodily ailment. Forget it! Don't get the habit of talking about sickness with every one you meet. Can't you find a topic of conversation more elevating than that of your aches and pains and troubles?

Cheerfulness is to the body what sunshine is to vegetation. Hence with a person who is in search of health, the essential thing to do is to cultivate cheerfulness, hopefulness, courage, and not allow one's self to think of his ills, much less to talk about them, except to those who may find it necessary to know them in order to properly direct his life. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

WORK.

"Employment is nature's physician." Health is maintained by occupation. When one quits work he loses the pep that comes to him from doing something and being of some use, of responding to demands and maintaining a routine, and his muscles get soft, his internal organs go on strike, his appetite fails and he loses sleep. Work is necessary to growth, because through it one acquires strength of mind and body. Both brain and muscle grow strong by exercise, by assuming responsibilities, by bearing burdens and doing things. Work of some sort is as necessary to health as eating and drinking.

Idleness and inaction breed nervous prostration, fear, worry, gossip, crime, constipation, and a host of evils. We make friends through work, we find in it beauty, humor, pathos—all that goes to make up a full, normal life. Congenial work is as necessary to peace of mind as it is for the health of the body; it is the symbol and avenue for almost all that is worth while in human life. The happiest hours of your life should be when you are working, and you can learn to like any work you may be doing. But whatever your job is you should dignify and vitalize it by putting your ideal into it, giving your life, your energy, your enthusiasm, all to the highest work of which you are capable. Your heart must inspire what your hands execute. Your work sometimes may be hard and thankless, but like tough metal it serves to suit the needs of a strong man and is better suited to that purpose than sipping soft drinks at a summer resort.

Cut out your "grouch" if you have one. Quit feeling sorry for yourself and feel sorrry for others. When you pity yourself because you think you have a hard job your soul shrivels up, but when you pity others your soul expands and grows. When you are troubled with grouchiness and self-pity just remember that you are in a universal guild of toil, and the universal forces are infinitely adaptable to the poor jobs as well as to the good ones, and that someone must do the work—why not you? Any labor will be irksome if done in a discontented, unhappy spirit.

"Who sweeps a room as in His sight Makes that and the action fine."

To work, and to honor one's task by associating it with the whole; to cut out envy, jealousy and complaint, and replace them with nobler traits would prevent much sickness and go a long way toward solving the labor problem.

Anyone can be healthy, happy and successful who holds the right mental attitude and who works with enthusiasm, determination and a light heart. When you work, cultivate calmness, poise, sweetness, doing your best, bearing all things bravely, living your life undisturbed by the prosperity of your boss, or the malice and envy of the man out of a job.

Health and happiness are free if you but reach for them—occupation and the right state of mind are pretty sure to fetch them. The more useful work you do, and the more you think and feel, the more you really live. Then after your work is over for the day, give yourself an hour or so for self-examination, for thought, for body and brain rest, for amusement, and you will have a good conscience, a good appetite, and peaceful slumber. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

Health Notes

So far as feelings are concerned, live only in the present. The past is done for; it is not half so bad as you suppose. Verify this by recalling its pleasures and successes alone, resolutely ignoring its sadness and failures. Live in the present of a sunny mood. Anticipate nothing but good in the future.

We must make automatic and habitual, as early as possible, as many useful actions as we can, and we should guard against the growing into ways that are likely to be disadvantageous to us as we would guard against the plague.

Cheerfulness gives elasticity to the spirit; specters fly before it; difficult not to feel deep emotion and sorrow to exercise it, but it implies a power to rise from depressing influences and to exercise reason and courage in overcoming them.

Nervous strength, power of concentration, of application to a task, of control of emotion, of decision, of inhibition and perseverance, in spite of distraction and fatigue, come only by exercise and practice—in short, by work.

If anyone wants a happy old age, he must first of all never betray his optimism; second, never brood over the past and the dead; third, work away to the last breath, to keep as much of his cerebral elasticity as possible.

We can not wholly change at once, but we can begin to look upon the bright side of things, and so fill the mind with cheerful affirmation and aspirations, that pessimistic thoughts will find no standing room.

Life is the interval between one breath and another—he who only half breathes only half lives, but he who uses NATURE'S rhythm in breathing has control over every function of his being.

All defects in the air passages, as well as the unphysiologic conditions arising from them, must be corrected before one can breathe properly and be well.

Many people treble their troubles, making three out of one, by looking forward, looking on, and looking back. Troubles grow mightily, if you brood over them.

Let us abate something, at least, of our devotion to the almighty dollar, and regard the world as something better than a huge workshop in which we are to toil and moil unceasingly, till death stops the human machine. Let us learn how to play.

However uncomfortable and forlorn you may be, don't add to your own and the world's misery by fretting. There never yet was a sorrow that could not be lived down; there never yet was one that could be cured by fretting or worry.

Highway Improvement

ADVANTAGES OF GOOD ROADS

Prosperity Made to Flow Into Any Locality by Construction of Substantial Highways.

The way to make prosperity flow into any locality is to build roads that will last and not have to be done over every few years.

With good roads farmers can deliver all their products directly to towns within a radius of 50 or more miles, and by making more profit themselves they reduce the high cost of living for other people; for merchants are able to take advantage of new sources of supply to buy their stocks under favorable conditions, and sell them to their customers at a lower price.

Millions of dollars are lost every year through perishable goods spoiling on the railroads because of freight delays and complications, writes C. W. Morrison in Farm Journal. Single large firms have actually saved more than $100,000 yearly by using motor-trucks; and the trucks will undoubtedly contribute largely to organized improvement of roads.

Good roads are a paying investment. Local authorities in cities, towns and counties should act without delay to meet the growing national and local demands before trade goes in other directions. It is almost impossible to get back the lost advantage after other districts have won it.

Good roads bring trade and increase property values in a community. They attract homeseekers and industries.

ROAD PROJECTS AUTHORIZED

Plans Involving Improvement of 12,159 Miles at Estimated Cost of $181,143,644 Ratified.

The record indicates that from July 1, 1918, to November 1, 1919, the United States department of agriculture approved 1,345 road projects, involving the improvement of 12,159 miles, at an estimated cost of approximately $181,143,644. Of this sum approximately $78,592,167 represents federal funds. Since the passage of the federal aid road act 1,927 projects have been approved. These call for the construction of 18,596 miles of road, at an estimated cost of $225,267,847, of which about $95,498,140 will be borne by the federal government. Gratifying progress also has been made in connection with the national forest road work. From July 1, 1918, to November 1, 1919, 74 projects, involving 923 miles of road, were approved, and plans were completed for the improvement of 50 others, aggregating 946 miles.

These facts are brought out in the annual report of the secretary of agriculture.

BENEFITS OF BETTER ROADS

Release From Bondage the City Man as Well as Farmer—Solve Living Cost Problem.

To both city man and farmer the good road means release from bondage. Counties and states where good roads have become a part of a progressive program of legislation have seen values rise; and this again has brought home the fact that good roads pay for themselves. More important to the city dweller, however, is the fact that eventually good roads will prove the solution of the high cost of living problem.

COST OF ROAD CONSTRUCTION

Some of Determining Factors Are Right of Way, Material and Culverts or Bridges.

Some of the things which determine the cost of road construction are: Cost of right of way, cost of clearing and grubbing, amount and kind of material to be excavated and amount of filling to be done, amount of ditching for surface drainage and tiling for subdrainage, number and size of stream crossings necessitating culverts or bridges, cost of securing and placing material.

DISADVANTAGE TO TRUCKERS

If Roads Are Not Improved He Is Unable to Compete With Farmer Living on Good Road.

A trucker ten miles from a market for spring crops, such as rhubarb, peas and spinach, is at a great disadvantage if his market road is unimproved, and he may be totally unable to compete with the trucker the same distance from market in another direction on a good road.

HAS NO PAIN NOW

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Mrs. Warner.

Onalaska, Wis.—"Every month I had such pains in my back and lower part of stomach I could not lie in bed. I suffered so it seemed as though I would die, and I was not regular either. I suffered for a year and was unfit to do my housework, could only wash dishes once in a while. I read an advertisement of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other women and decided to try it. It surely did wonders for me. I have no pains now and I can do my housework without any trouble at all. I will always praise your medicine as I do not believe there is a doctor that can do as much good in female weakness, and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. LESTER E. WARNER, R. 1, Box 69, Onalaska, Wis.

The reason women write such letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. and tell their friends how they are helped is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives. Freed from their illness they want to pass the good news along to other suffering women that they also may be relieved.

INDIGESTION

Caused by

Acid-Stomach

Millions of people—in fact about 9 out of 10—suffer more or less from indigestion, acute or chronic. Nearly every case is caused by Acid-Stomach.

There are other stomach disorders which also are sure signs of Acid-Stomach—belching, heartburn, bloat after eating, food repeating, sour, gassy stomach. There are many ailments which, while they do not cause much distress in the stomach itself, are, nevertheless, traceable to an acid-stomach. Among these are nervousness, biliousness, cirrhosis of the liver, rheumatism, impoverished blood, weakness, insomnia, melancholia and a long train of physical and mental miseries that keep the victims in miserable health year after year.

The right thing to do is to attack these ailments at their source—get rid of the acid-stomach. A wonderful modern remedy called EATONIC now makes it easy to do this.

One of hundreds of thousands of grateful users of EATONIC writes: "I have been troubled with intestinal indigestion for about nine years and have spent quite a sum for medicine, but without relief. After using EATONIC for a few days the gas and pains in my bowels disappeared. EATONIC is just the remedy I needed."

We have thousands of letters telling of these marvelous benefits. Try EATONIC and you, too, will be just as enthusiastic in its praise.

There was a slight pushing against the dumb-waiter door—three or four little clicks against the catch, such as the wind might make blowing up the shaft, had there been any wind to blow. Almost before I had taken this in, there was a different sound along the crack, like a tool on sheet metal—a sort of scratching, followed by a sharp creak. The door burst open and I found myself looking into the eyes of my just-dismissed detective.

It would be hard to say which of the two of us, the man or myself, was the more flabbergasted by the situation. As for me, I was too astonished to utter a peep; and on his side, the rumble of the dumb-waiter had drowned whatever noise I had made in getting the icepick, and hearing not a sound in the kitchen while he listened before trying the door, and seeing me now in a warlike attitude with a savage-looking weapon in my hand ready for a lunge at him, well—I fancy it was not calculated to inspire him with calm. At any rate, I know it was I who first discovered some presence of mind, and—before he could pull himself up high enough to get in, for his waist was below the level of the sill—I bounced back into the hall, slamming the kitchen door after me and locking it. In two seconds more I had up the chain-bolt and had warned monsieur of danger and to keep absolutely still; and all this while Mr. Detective Man was scrambling into the kitchen.

He gave a wrench on the door handle, expecting to find me trying to hang on to the other side—and found the door locked.

"Diable!" I heard him say, low under his breath.

Monsieur had tiptoed to a place beside me, and though white as a sheet, conducted himself admirably. I had, by framing the words with my lips, made him understand that the man who had just broken in through the dumb-waiter shaft was the detective I had dismissed at the front door not fifteen minutes ago.

By signs I then communicated to monsieur the suggestion that now was his chance to escape by the front door while I held his pursuer in the kitchen.

Monsieur disagreed with me, flatly, and by signs informed me that there might be half a dozen men waiting in the outer hall to nab him the instant he showed his face. Which seemed reasonable and likely and I had no means of disproving the contention.

I therefore made the next move on my intruder.

"Hello, mister," I called through the door at him. "You may as well go out the way you came in, for you've got as far as you'll get into this flat."

"Madame, listen," he returned. "On my word of honor I mean you no harm—I wish only to speak with you, privately and immediately."

"Your method of obtaining private interviews is most inviting—also convincing of the truth of what you say."

"You left me no alternative—I am obliged to see you."

The truth flashed into me that he'd already traced monsieur to my flat and the determination to see me was only an excuse to lay hold on him: and at the same moment monsieur touched me on the shoulder and by signs communicated the same fear, ending with a pantomimic appeal to me to save him.

"Mr. Smith," I called through the door again, "you asked for a private interview with me and now you have it. I will put my ear to the keyhole and you may whisper through what you have to say."

He said something that I didn't catch—I know it was a bad word—and replied with politeness, "If you will kindly unlock the door and allow me to enter, you will have no cause to regret it. On my word of honor, I assure you that no harm shall come to you—or any property of yours."

"Thanks for your kind assurance and I won't unlock the door."

"Madame, I beg of you to listen to reason—"

"Mr. Jones, if you are not out of there in two minutes, I shall telephone for the police."

"If you do not unlock this door in two seconds I shall break it in."

He waited two seconds; then taking the tool with which he had pried open the dumb-waiter door, he started to jimmy open the kitchen door.

"Stop!" I commanded.

He stopped—evidently thinking I meant to unlock the door.

"It won't do you one particle of good to jimmy this door open," I began, "because I have a chain-bolt on here the same as on the front door. Listen—" and I rattled the chain against the woodwork. "Do you hear that? Well, that means that before you can get through that door, you'll have to take it off its hinges—and you can't very well do that, because it opens in on your side. Is that clear to you? Look at the hinges, if it isn't."

I heard him say "Diable" again, fiercely but softly, and then tread quietly along the floor and push the catch on the window.

I flew to my bedroom, and seizing the revolver Billy had brought me, I threw up the window—at right angles to the kitchen window—and just as he was about to step on to the fire-escape and try the bathroom window, I shouted, "Hold on, there!" and aimed the revolver at his head.

He ducked back in a hurry, peeking at me from behind the window-frame.

"There's no use in your trying the bathroom window," said I. "It's nailed down, and before you could break the glass and get in, I'd have shot you dead. Go back to the kitchen door—I have something to say to you."

He did as I told him, and I returned to my side of the door, revolver in hand.

"Now, Mr. Robinson, I want you to go out the way you came in—and hurry," said I.

"Yes, madame, I shall do so immediately. But first I wish to ask you a single question—is a gentleman by the name of De Ravenol in your flat with you now?"

"Ask anything you please."

"Pardon—I did not understand what you said. Is he there?"

"I said you might ask anything you pleased."

"Ah—I understand now—"

"Mr. Jackson, I'd like you to understand one thing—my revolver is pressed against the other side of the door—hear that?" I clicked the muzzle on the door several times. "It is loaded and I can fire it. And I am going to—if you are not out of that kitchen in just three seconds."

"Certainly, madame. But before you fire, let me give you a piece of information that may be of value to you: I have a warrant for the arrest of that gentleman, De Ravenol."

Monsieur's hand flew up as he heard it and his jaw dropped open, but he made no sound.

"Have you a warrant for my arrest also?" I asked.

"No, madame—and I would not trouble you, only that we have traced the man here."

"Have you anything else to say to me, Mr. Simpkins?"

"Only to repeat that I have a warrant for De Ravenol's arrest and I believe him to be with you at this moment. And so I ask you to open the door."

"You have the warrant actually with you?"

There was a rustling of papers—"Yes."

"Slip it under the door and let me see it."

An edge of paper slid under the door and I made a dive for it. The edge disappeared.

"Will you return this warrant to me?"

"I'm not saying what I shall do—but I have the right to demand to see it, since you've broken into my flat."

There was a silence of considerable length—I don't know what he was planning to do, but I thought I heard him moving cautiously about, and I shouted, "You haven't any warrant! You are simply trying to get in here and rob me! Now then, Mr. Jenkins, I'll give you five seconds to get out the way you came in. I shall fire through the door when I count five. Ready! One . . . two . . ."

"Goodby," he called. "You will see me again—and wish you had been more civil."

"Three . . . four . . ."

I heard him scrambling onto the dumb-waiter and then the cumbersome, cloggy sound it makes when it goes down loaded. I waited till it had reached bottom and then unlocked the door and peeped in over the chain-bolt. He was gone—there was no pretense about it.

"Quick, monsieur," I said, snatching up his coat, "put on your things and go."

I thrust the ice pick in his hand, threw off the chain-bolt, dashed for the dumb waiter and began pulling it up, hand over fist, as fast as I could go.

"Mon Dieu! What shall I do?"

"Skip! Get down into your own flat and hide. That man will be back here with a police officer in five minutes."

The top of the dumb waiter had come up level with the sill, but at my words monsieur's nerve seemed to forsake him entirely.

"He will be back—after he is gone wisout to find me?—and he brings ze police?"

"Of course he will—just to justify himself to me if for nothing else—and to satisfy himself that you're not here in hiding. You heard him say he'd traced you here."

"Zen I am lost—and my little Claire is lost."

He seemed about to sink down in a heap again.

"No, you're not. Where's your hat? Get it."

He brought his hat from the dining room, jamming it on his head and whispering, as he looked at the dumb waiter: "How shall I make my escape wis zis? I have never in my life—"

"Get on," I commanded. "Don't stop to talk about it—unless you wish to be found here and arrested. You haven't a minute to lose."

He hesitated, murmuring, "Mon Dieu—how can I make my descent—"

"It's your only chance to save yourself and Claire," I urged. "Let yourself down to your flat and pry open the door. Hold her steady—go slow—count the doors and don't miss yours," I whispered as a parting warning, and he began his descent.

At that moment I caught the sound of the elevator coming up—it might or might not be the detective, but I took no risks. Leaving the dumb waiter door just as the Unknown had left it I slipped softly to the kitchen door, closed and locked it and put up the chain-bolt again. To the casual eye the kitchen was as it had been five minutes before, untouched, unopened.

As I stepped into the dining room the front bell rang long and loud.

I let it ring and ring again, and heard a voice, "Yes—she's there."

The fourth ring was followed by the pounding of a heavy hand.

I had been listening to the dumb waiter and it had now stopped. I thought it safe to make a move on my side, so I walked noisily along the hall and called through the door, "Who's there?"

"Police officer. Open the door, please."

"What precinct?"

There was a grunt before he answered, "Thirty-six."

"Oh, all right!" I opened the door on the chain-bolt.

There stood a broad-shouldered "one of the finest," and off to one side of him, looking very pale and insignificant, my detective.

"Oh, it's you!" I exclaimed affably, addressing the officer and taking no notice of the detective.

"If ye'll open the door—" he suggested very politely.

"With pleasure," and I took off the chain-bolt and threw the door wide open.

"Step in," said I. "Now, officer, what is the trouble?"

"Well, you see, this gentleman here believes you're hiding a party he's got a warrant fer."

"Help yourselves," said I curtly, moving aside to let them pass.

The Unknown darted along the dining room; the officer followed; I brought up the rear. A glance showed that both the dining room and my study opening into it were empty.

He went back to the bedroom—casting a glance at the kitchen door as he passed, which was chain-bolted as I'd told him it was—and looked under the bed. After that he peered into the bathroom and returned for a final survey of the double room before unlocking the kitchen door. As he threw it open the first thing that caught his eye was the dumb-waiter door, gaping wide the way he'd left it, and as he stepped across the threshold I shot off at him, "I hid your man in the refrigerator—be sure to look there."

And he pulled open the refrigerator door!

I gave the officer a look. This was too much for the Irish in him, and he threw back his head with a guffaw. I checked him with another look that gave him to understand I thought there was something queer about my other visitor, who, very red now, slammed the doors and faced us.

"I'd have taken my oath that man was here fifteen minutes ago," he extenuated.

"Then he's give y' the slip," jibed the big officer—"if he was here at all." The tone of his last words showed considerable doubt.

"It would appear so," replied the other vaguely, and they followed me to my study, the officer, whose sympathies were all with me by this time, telling me heartily, "I guess that'll be all and we'll wish you good morning," and motioned to the Unknown to leave.

I smiled—I tried to make it a very sarcastic smile—and told the Unknown, "I hope this won't interfere with your keeping your appointment here tomorrow."

"Certainly not. With your kind permission I shall see you at nine o'clock tomorrow."

He bowed himself out. He seemed in a hurry, and I fancied he was anxious to communicate with his guard; and I shut the door on him, little supposing he'd really keep his appointment, or that when he did our positions would be reversed and I should be asking favors of him!

CHAPTER XIX.

The Blow Falls.

Why didn't Billy return? He'd been gone long enough for three trips, if nothing happened to him. And I was really worrying on that score when a messenger appeared with a scrawled note:

Can't see you before night. Things very serious here. Mrs. D. wants me to stay and keep guard till son gets home. Going after my duds now. May need you before the day is over. If so, will telegraph.

AFF. BILLY.

Billy came at nine. I could have fallen on his neck and wept, only he was so dreadfully sober himself.

"I'm at my wits' end," he blurted as soon as he was inside the door. "So is Mrs. Delario—so is Miss de Ravenol. We're all in a muddle because we can't any of us explain all we know to anybody else. Miss de Ravenol has it in her head that her father's arrested—going to lose his life because she lost the 'papers.' I don't know what to do! If I tell Miss de Ravenol it was diamonds and they've been found, she won't believe me; and if I tell Mrs. Delario what Claire means by 'papers,' she won't believe me! So between us all, the poor girl's cried her eyes out and we're all distracted.

"And that's only part of it," he hurried on. "Baron von Follow-up was there again, and I got him neat! He came in, same as the other customers and sat down in the reception room—just the way Mrs. Delario said anyone could do who was wise to the game. I was there pretending I'd come for a reading like the rest.

"I recognized him and he recognized me—you know, I passed him in the hall up here yesterday. But I didn't wait for him to make the first move—I sailed in on him. He took the sofa and I got up and went over and sat down beside him. I told him, 'You're here in the interests of the Emperor William about a little matter of state—diplomatic business Monsieur de R. had charge of—that hasn't gone exactly according to program.'

"Say—he pretty near jumped down my throat! Gave it all away completely! Said he had a private—and very important—communication from the emperor to deliver immediately—there was a change of plan in the diplomatic business—he must see De Ravenol immediately and he hadn't been able to locate him. Did I know where he was?

Not a New Discovery.

Mollie and Jim were napping one hot Sunday afternoon and were delighted upon waking up to find refreshments awaiting them—a cantaloupe cut in halves and filled with ice. Warm-hearted Jim ran off to hug mother, but Mollie lost no time in devouring hers, and succeeded in scooping out a good bit of Jim's before his return, while "Miss Ophelia," their water spaniel, had slyly dislodged Jim's gum from where he had stuck it on the side of the bed. In complaining of such treatment to his father, Jim said: "Ain't wimmens just chuck full of tricks, daddy?"

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(Copyright, 1930, Western Newspaper Union)

LESSON FOR APRIL 4

EASTER LESSON.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 24:13-25.

GOLDEN TEXT—Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?—Luke 24:26.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of a Wonderful Walk.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Walk to Emmaus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Proofs That Jesus Rose From the Dead.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Fact and the Meaning of the Resurrection.

I. Two Disciples Journeying to Emmaus (vv. 13-10).

1. Who they were. One was Cleopas (see v. 18); some think the other was Luke, whose modesty forbade him to give his name; but it is not definitely known. Why they were going we can only conjecture; perhaps they were only walking away from Jerusalem to relieve their anxiety and drown their sorrow. The ordeal through which they had passed left them somewhat stunned; they needed the physical exertion and quiet of the country to calm their nerves. They were sad (see v. 17).

2. What they talked about (v. 14). "All the things which had happened." Strange and wonderful things had taken place and they could not but commune together concerning them.

3. Jesus joins them (vv. 15, 16). It was while they communed togther and reasoned about Jesus that he appeared to them. He never leaves those in doubt who sincerely seek the light; he promises to meet even with two or three who gather in his name (Matt. 18:20). Those gathered in his name have their heart toward him in love, and their talk is concerning him. If we would have Jesus draw near to us more frequently then let us more frequently commune together concerning him.

II. The Conversation on the Way. (vv. 17-27).

1. Jesus' question (v. 17). Though he was a stranger to them his question did not provoke resentment; there must have been something in his manner and tone which unlocked their hearts.

2. The disciples' answer (vv. 18-24). Though surprised that there should be a single man in the confines of Jerusalem unacquainted with the things which had recently come to pass, they spoke fully and freely of what they had communed about.

(1) It was concerning Jesus of Nazareth (v. 19). This Jesus was mighty in word and deed before God and the people. (2) Delivered, condemned and crucified by the chief priests (v. 20). (3) Shattered hopes of the disciples (v. 21). They had reposed their hope in him as the Redeemer of Israel. (4) Their bewilderment (vv. 22-24). The story of the women concerning the empty sepulchre reminded them of Christ's words that he would arise on the third day. A new hope seemed to be arising in their hearts, yet they were too timid to take their stand upon it. (5) Jesus expounding the Scriptures to them (vv. 25-27). He chides them for their unbelief of the prophetic Scriptures (v. 25). What sorrow and perplexity they would have escaped had they believed what God had recorded! Jesus showed them that what had happened was exactly what the Scriptures had foretold concerning the Messiah and that it behooved Christ thus to suffer and to enter into his glory.

III. The Lord Reveals Himself (vv. 28-35).

1. Nearing the end of the journey (vv. 28, 29). He made as though he would go farther, but they constrained him to abide with them. It would have been a great loss to them if he had not been "constrained."

2. Sitting together at the table (vv. 30, 31). His blessing of the bread and breaking it were so familiar that they knew him. Then, too, they may have seen the nailprints in his hands while he broke the bread. They now knew for a certainty that the Lord whom they had mourned as dead was alive and in their very presence. If we had eyes to perceive we could see Jesus daily walking and talking with us. What a different life would be ours if we would but see him!

3. The disciples convinced (vv. 32-35). They at once returned to Jerusalem and reported to the eleven what things were done and how the Lord had revealed himself to them in the breaking of the bread. They exclaimed, "The Lord is risen indeed!" May Christ come to every believer on this Easter occasion in such a way that we may know beyond the peradventure of a doubt that he is really alive!

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Doesn't hurt at all and costs only a few cents

Magic! Just drop a little Freezone on that touchy corn, instantly it stops aching, then you lift the corn off with the fingers! Truly! No humbug!

Try Freezone! Your druggist sells a tiny bottle for a few cents, sufficient to rid your feet of every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and calluses, without one particle of pain, soreness or irritation. Freezone is the discovery of a noted Cincinnati genius.—Adv.

Logic in Her Assertion.

Mabel, age seven, led off after the Sunday blessing with a story she had heard on the way home from Sunday school. "A little boy," said Mabel, "who went to ball games said Sunday school wasn't much different from ball games, because at the Sunday school they sang, 'Stand Up for Jesus,' and at the ball game they said—"

"Mabel!" cried the horrified family in unison, "don't tell that story!"

"Why?" asked Mabel. "Have you all heard it?"

"Of course, and it's—"

"Well, then," proceeded Mabel calmly, "it won't hurt you to hear me tell it."—Kansas City Star.

A Boy's Idea.

The small boy's idea of hell seems to be an empty wood-or-coal box when it is time to go skating.—Leavenworth Post.

FIND THE CAUSE!

It isn't right to drag along feeling miserable—half sick. Find out what is making you feel so badly and try to correct it. Perhaps your kidneys are causing that throbbing backache or those sharp, stabbing pains. You may have morning lameness, too, headaches, dizzy spells and irregular kidney action. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands of ailing folks. Ask your neighbor!

An Indiana Case

Mrs. R. P. Feaster, 207 W. South St., Greenfield, Ind., says: "I had a terrible spell of gravel and passed several stones. A little cold was enough to put me in bed and I had pains all through my back. My kidneys didn't act right at all. My ankles and limbs swelled and I couldn't get my shoes on. I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills and I found them the right medicine. When I had finished eight boxes I was cured."

Obituary

Isabelle, daughter of Isaac and Lucinda Hornberger was born March 14, 1853, in DeKalb County, Indiana, and after a brief illness resulting from heart trouble, passed away at her home in St. Joe March 31, 1920, aged 67 years, 17 days.

She is survived by her husband George Swineford; by three sisters Mrs. James Sherwood of Auburn, Mrs. Charles Towsley and Miss Minnie Hornberger of Elkhart and one brother John Hornberger of Auburn. Her parents and two sisters having preceded her in death a number of years ago.

She was well known in this county, having been a public school teacher for several years and in her chosen profession was very successful and won for herself a large circle of friends who today mourn her departure.

She was united in marriage to George Swineford on November 2, 1879. For a number of years they lived on the farm and for nine years had charge of the "Swineford House" in Auburn from whence they came to St. Joe nineteen years ago, where they have since resided.

Tho not a member of any church the deceased was converted to the christian faith in 1881 and ever enjoyed a knowledge of the blessed Word and the comforting power of prayer, saying several times during her closing hours: "It is all with God. If he wants me to go, I am ready. I am not afraid to die. My blessed Savior is standing by me," and again, "Tell my dear husband to meet me in Heaven."

Mrs. Swineford was for many years a member of the "Ladies Literary Club" of St. Joe, which organization will so sadly miss her as she was intensely loyal and always displayed a keen interest and a brilliant intellect.

For her, none had but words of praise. Her friends, her neighbors to whom she had endeared herself—how they will miss her sunny, genial disposition, her sympathy, her encouragement, her helpfulness always so quietly and willingly given!

Her sisters and brother—the neices and nephews—how they will miss her tender love, her unselfish interest in them, the courage her cheerfulness instilled!

And the bereaved husband—how he will miss her incomparable love and devotion! She was so faithful to every duty—so patient in the sublime repression of self for him to whom she was such a dear and loving companion and helpmeet.

Her life was so well lived that the memory of it will be an inspiration to all and there's consolation in this beautiful thought: "To live in hearts we leave behind, is not to die."

"To living hearts, to mourning homes,
God's meekest angel gently comes;
No power has he to banish pain
Or give us back our lost again;
And yet in tenderest love, our dear
And heavenly Father sends him here.
O, thou who mourneest on thy way,
With longings for the close of day;
He walks with thee, that angel kind,
And gently whispers: 'Be resigned.
Bear up, bear up, the end shall tell,
The dear Lord ordereth all things well.'"

The funeral service was held at the Lutheran Church on Friday afternoon, Rev. Mumma officiating assisted by Rev. Johnson. E. R. Kinsey, director. Interment in Riverside Cemetery.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to sincerely thank all those who so kindly assisted during the illness and death of our beloved wife and sister also for the beautiful floral offerings contributed by the Church, L. L. C., loving neighbors and friends.

George Swineford and Immediate Family.

Among those from out of town who attended the funeral were: Dr. Dean Metcalf and wife, Mrs. Birdie Wood and John Hornberger of Fort Wayne; Mrs. Faye Miller and two children of Gary; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Towsley and daughter Harriett and Miss Minnie Hornberger of Elkhart; George Brown of Danville, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Boyles of Norwalk, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. John Dilley of near Waterloo; Ezra and Frank Horn of Spencerville; Mr. and Mrs. James Sherwood, Mr. and Mrs. John Hornberger, Dr. and Mrs. Dorsey Hines, Mrs. Eugene Carper and Ira Wingard of Auburn and H. S. Platner of several miles northwest of town.

Charles Romeo Headley, son of Jesse and Julia (Keefer) Headley, was born May 28, 1866, on a farm one mile east and one-half mile south of Coburn's Corners in DeKalb County, Indiana and died at his late home in Hicksville, Ohio, April 1, 1920, at the age of 50 years, 10 months and 4 days.

He spent forty-two years of his life on this farm, his childhood, boyhood, young manhood and eighteen years of his married life. He was married to Anna Meltert, February 5, 1891. They lived on the farm eighteen years, three years at Solo, eight years east of Coburn's Corners and one year at Spencerville and four months at Hicksville. To this union were born nine children: William Hershall, who died at the age of four months; Samuel Walter, who died at about the age of ten years; Charles Owen, who died on board the U. S. Ship Seattle, on his way home from over seas, a soldier boy brave and true who gave his young life to save his country, at the age of twenty-four years; Estella Marie, Delta Ray, Alta May, twins, Garnett Lucile, Gladys Leone and Jesse Merle, who are left with their mother to mourn the loss of a kind and loving husband and indulgent father. He also leaves one sister, Mrs. Lucy Koch and her daughter Mrs. Jessie Hughs and her two children Mary and Vance, all that are left of the immediate family.

About twenty-six years ago he and his wife made the good confession of their faith in their Saviour and united with the congregation at Coburn's Corners, (under the pastorate of Elder J. O. Rose,) where they have been faithful workers all these years bringing up their children in the Sunday School and church and teaching them the Word of God in their home. Romeo was always a very patient man during his whole life, and in his last long sickness he never murmured or complained. He said, "He had lived a long time with his family and would like to have lived much longer to have helped care for his loved ones, especially his little girl Gladys and his baby boy Merle, who needed a father's care and protection." He said to his wife, "Whatever you do keep the children together, if it is God's will for me to go I am ready." He fought the battles of life manfully and bravely, always on duty. Romeo will be missed, oh so sadly in his home, in the church and among his many friends and relatives.

The funeral services were held at the Christian Church at Coburn's Corners April 3rd., conducted by Elder J. O. Rose of Angola, Ind. Undertaker J. M. Hosack of Hicksville, burial in Alten cemetery.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

MEN TURNING TO BOLSHEVISM

Something Profoundly Disquieting in the Constant Repetition of Word Which Seems to Convey Such a Sinister Meaning.

Article XII.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

I met a young American major just back from the French front. I had known him for many years. Before the United States entered the war he was one of the many impatient at our delay. He believed that it was our duty to join the fight when the ruthless submarine campaign torpedoed the Lusitania, sending to cold, wet graves American women and children. I distinctly remember his face as he read the headlines in the papers telling of the murderous slaughter of Americans on the high seas. Now when he greeted me he startled me with his first words, "The war is over. I'm a bolshevik." I did not know what the word meant, yet it carried to my mind an impression, and while the impression was hazy, it was clear at least in one particular. It sounded like the confession of a crime.

He had always been of a quiet, conservative type. Before the war one would have judged him to be a pacifist; he was even-tempered, mild of manner, and I still think that before August, 1914, he was a pacifist in head and heart. It was only the call of a just cause, the fight for an ideal in which he believed, that had made him a soldier. In this respect he was typical of 90 per cent of his countrymen.

I had spoken to him the day he enlisted, for he was one of those who volunteered, who might have waited for conscription and claimed a just exemption. He was in the beginning of his married life, with two very young children. By profession he was an engineer. Going to war meant leaving a wife and two babies, leaving a job that promised advancement. I recall his enthusiasm, the intensity of his patriotism, his quiet disregard of the danger to himself. I am sure that there was little hate in his morale. He saw a danger to the world. The honor of his country had been offended against. He was an American, one of those upon whom the duty fell, so he went.

He a bolshevik! Why? I was confounded, confused. The only meaning I gave to his remark was that he was an anarchist. The word "bolshevik" sounded red to me. It flared of the torch, photographed disorder, lawlessness—it registered blood, violence, assassination, force, hate, insanity. I wondered how this nine-lettered word had become the vehicle for so many sensations that disturbed peace of mind and sounded alarm.

Where had the word come from and what company had it kept that so fouled its soul? What did it really mean—had it a definite meaning? Was it a bug like the "flu" germ? Had it come among nations to destroy them and to the hearts of men to silence the heavenly message, "Peace, on earth, good will to men." Would it run around the world as a scourge? Was it a postscript to the bloody war lesson, prophesying more anguish and tears than four years' fighting had brought? Would the world, coming out of the war bent, now be broken?

Or was it a meaningless myth? Was the word a bogie, a bad joke, a nightmare pressing heavily on a tired, nervous world's head?

Seeking Word's Real Meaning.

Or was the meaning that men had read into the word a lie? Was bolshevism the message of a new Messiah being cried down by the money-changers of our time in the same way their ancestors had silenced the word from the Mount and destroyed the Message Bearer with the lash and the cross?

In every mind was the thought and from every tongue fell the word. Russia had given the world a word. It had encircled the globe. Everywhere people were speaking the word—it found lodgment in every brain, a living place in every language. Its use had become universal. The old, the young, rich and poor, the learned, the uneducated, the serious, the simple, the toiler, the artist, the poet, and the peddler, the tinker and the thinker, held the thought and spoke the word. Men, women and children spoke the word, read the word, and felt the thought it carried.

To the nine hundred and ninety-nine it was a word of ill-omen, a word of terror and fear. To the one in a thousand it was a word of hope, a light for the feet of a stumbling world, and the nine hundred and ninety-nine said that some of these people called bolsheviks were dreamers of a strange dream, that twisted idealism had made them mad, that the majority of those who profess faith in bolshevism were sick with a strange, social fever, that they were mischief-makers, ne'er-do-wells, criminals, that they sought to burn the world.

I made up my mind that I would learn the real meaning of the word. The dictionary definition threw no light on its meaning. I came to the conclusion that to learn what bolshevism is I might with wisdom adopt the scientific method used by the doctor of medicine in arriving at a diagnosis. The doctor examines and gathers the symptoms, the meaning of the disease. He then determines what diseases might produce these symptoms. By a process of elimination he discards one possibility after another until at last there is but one disease left, one thing that the symptoms can mean.

I discovered at the outset that most of us have the habit of using terms loosely. Seldom do we give time or thought to the exact, real meaning of things. The meaning of bolshevism is too important to the world not to try to understand it. There is a difference between having the acquaintance of a word and knowing; the former is a mere introduction, the latter an intimacy.

Since the war, when the fastidious diner wearily orders his consomme and the waiter brings it a bit tardily or cold, he thinks to himself, or if courageous enough to speak his mind, he calls the cook a bolshevik. He has found a word to express his irritation. It serves his profane feelings and at the same time saves his smug respectability.

See Bolshevism Everywhere.

Once the maid asking for an afternoon off provoked a knowing smile. Her mistress granted the request, charged it up to a possible romance and generally suspected the policeman on the beat. Since the war it is different. The maid is looked upon with suspicion. Her motives are questioned. The request is considered a symptom of the new terrible disease, bolshevism. The mistress thinks to herself: The maid doesn't want to work any more; she is down with the epidemic.

The office boy, working the reliable excuse that his grandmother has died again, to get an afternoon off to go to the ball game, is trying to shirk work, in the opinion of his employer, who formerly, when such an application was made from the same source, chuckled as he granted it, while his memory took him back to his own boyhood days when he used the grandmother yarn to answer the call of the ball field.

Many captains of industry see the symptoms of the new dread in every movement and thought of the workers. The demand for living conditions and decent wages are grudgingly received by minds soured with the thought that it is bolshevism.

The hirers of child labor, looking hatefully at legislation designed to end child slavery, call the leaders of child life conservation bolshevists. When doctors and public-spirited men and women insist that an irreparable injury is being done the nation in allowing women to work for a period in excess of the hours they are able to work without menacing their motherhood, the profiteers from woman labor cry out: "You are invading the right of private contract; your are mad with bolshevism."

Every Sort of Definition.

The wag with the wit of a barber defined bolshevism as a wild idea surrounded by whiskers. The saloonkeeper, bowled over by prohibition, screams "bolshevism." The anti-saloon leaders come back with the answer, "Your 'personal liberty' cry is only a camouflage for bolshevism."

If anyone disagrees with you, don't grant him the right to an opinion, don't reason with him—just call him a bolshevik. The word has become an epithet, a popular invective, a slur, an insult, an outlet for contempt, contumely and hate. Its parenthood influences our definition of it. Most of us see the Russians with the eyes of the caricaturists, who for so many years have portrayed the Russian as the moujik with high boots, disheveled hair, wild whiskers, the face of an assassin, the body of a terrorist in action, the suggestion of a long dagger smeared with hot blood, under his greatcoat.

If a doctor, making an examination of all of the patients in a hospital, discovered they all had certain symptoms in common, such as temperature, weakness and pain, and because of these findings should diagnose the sickness of all of the patients as pneumonia, the doctor would be regarded a lunatic, yet there are men in the world today who are as foolish as such a doctor would be. They call every symptom of unrest, without regard to its history, bolshevism.

Roumania's Oil Wells.

Many of the Roumanian oil wells are not in working order, which is chiefly due to the military measures taken by the allies at the time of the German advance in Roumania. Although Gen. Falkenhayn's experts, devoted particular attention to the reconstruction of the dismantled wells, their work was crowned with limited success, and it will take a long period of systematic work to raise the Roumanian oil fields again to their pre-war importance. The Roumanian government is reported to have lately concluded a convention with the Austrian government whereby they are to supply the Austrians with petroleum and other material of primary necessity in exchange for industrial products.

Have Evidence Against Germans.

Evidence of German crimes is furnished by M. Delannoy, librarian of Louvain; Henri Davignon, secretary of the Belgian commission of inquiry; Paul Lambotte, director of the art galleries of Belgium, and M. Lamy, secretary of the French academy. The latter, it was said, has made a most telling indictment of those who were responsible for acts of savagery.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR APRIL 11

DEBORAH AND BARAK DELIVER ISRAEL

LESSON TEXT—Judges 4:4-5:31.

GOLDEN TEXT—God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.—Ps. 46:1.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL — Judges 4:1-3; Heb. 11:32, 33.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Brave Woman Helping a General.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Story of a Hero and a Heroine.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Fighting on God's Side.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Services of Women in National Leadership.

The book of Judges covers the period from the conquest of Canaan and death of Joshua to the judgeship of Samuel. While Joshua and the elders of his generation lived the people in some measure remained faithful to God in obedience to his Word, but the very next generation went into apostasy. Their declension may be accounted for as follows:

1. Failure to drive the Canaanites from their midst.

2. Their amalgamation with the Canaanites. Their close proximity to the people had its leavening effect, for they soon intermarried with the heathen. Tolerance with the enemy is closely followed by union therewith, and quick disaster comes in the wake of such union.

3. Idolatry. Intermarriage with the heathen was soon followed by the worship of the heathen gods. Thus Israel's power was gradually weakened, so that instead of being conquerors they became the conquered.

In chapter 2:6-9 is given a synopsis of the book of Judges:

1. The sin of the people (vv. 6-13).

2. God's judgment for their sin (vv. 14, 15).

3. Repentance of the people (3:9).

4. God's deliverance at the hands of the judges (vv. 16-19).

A repetition of sin, oppression by the enemy, repentance on the part of the people, and God's deliverance, is the story of the book of Judges.

I. The Judgeship of Deborah (4: 4, 5).

Her name means "Bee," suggesting orderly instincts. As suggested by another, "She answered her name by her industry, sagacity, and great use to the public." The period was marked by awful oppression. The Israelites were helpless, for the enemy had 900 chariots of iron. Deborah was an unique character. God raised her up for such a time as this. Under a palm tree she held an open court for the administration of justice.

II. Deborah Summons Barak (4: 6-10).

Barak means "lightning." Deborah, being a prophetess, was able to select the man whose gifts would enable him to rally the forces needed to gain the victory over the formidable foe.

1. Deborah's call (vv. 6, 7). It was God's call through her. She gave definite instruction as to the number of men and the strategy to be employed, assuring Barak that God would deliver Sisera, the captain of Jabin's army, into his hand.

2. Barak's reply (v. 8). Expression of unwillingness to go unless Deborah would go with him should hardly be considered as cowardice or weakness, as it is a well-recognized fact that the presence of a woman, especially the prophetess, would inspire courage on the part of the warriors. However, he should have believed God's ability to give the victory without the aid of a woman.

3. Barak's rebuke (vv. 9, 10). Deborah yielded his request, but made it plain to him that it would detract from his honor as a conqueror, "for the Lord shall sell Sisera into the hand of a woman."

III. The Defeat of Jabin's Army (vv. 11-16).

Sisera, the captain, gathered a mighty army and went forth with full assurance of victory, but he made a sad mistake; he did not consider that it was the Lord's battle (v. 15). At the psychological moment Deborah gave the signal to charge, assuring Barak that the Lord would give the victory (v. 14). Through supernatural interposition the enemy became panic-stricken (see 5:20).

IV. Sisera Killed by a Woman (vv. 17-24).

In his flight he took refuge in Jael's tent. Under the guise of friendship, she committed the most heinous murder. She fastened his head to the ground by means of a tent pin.

V. Deborah and Barak's Song of Victory (chap. 5).

This was composed and sung in celebration of the marvelous victory which God had wrought.

ANOTHER ALBATROSS STORY.

"Ah," said Mr. Alec Albatross, "it is all right for you to leave because it means you're coming back again. When you go forth to the great sea to look for food, even if you stay quite a little while, I know that you are coming back again.

Talk to King Foam.

"And I can scarcely bear to let you guard the egg, for I've grown so used to it and love to do your work for you so.

"But the best is that you came back and that I can tell you how fond I am of you and how I care for you. For it is nice for creatures to be devoted. It makes them happy, whereas if they didn't like each other they'd be miserable, I'm sure.

"Ah, and the last time you were going off, how proud I was as I saw you start. I watched you from the nest as you stepped beyond and over the hillside where you ran down the side of the hill so fast and then with the speed you had made you arose up into the air.

"They have new things, or more or less new, called airplanes, and we're known as monoplanes. They say we are beautiful flyers and magnificent in our flights. I certainly believed it to be true when I watched you the last time.

"Ah, what a lovely life is that of an albatross, a sweet life of nesting and caring for the little ones and flying high over the ocean."

"Swimming is fun, too," said Mr. Alec Albatross. "I'd be so wretched if I couldn't swim in the beautiful, clear ocean.

"When I get in the water I stay for a while, too, partly because I enjoy it and partly because it is hard work to get right up and fly from the ocean, for we are not small sea birds. We must rest first.

"We can catch squids, or sea food, of enormous size and we are good ones to hunt. We love the wild sea and we're great restless birds who know the joys of traveling.

"Oh, what joy it is to go far out over the ocean. We don't bother about summer resorts and winter resorts. We care for freedom too much for that.

"Some of the pelicans and sea gulls, who were talking one day, told us that at summer resorts and winter resorts folks all wore best dresses and every-day dresses and best hats and every-day hats.

"Fancy an albatross bothering about such things. Of course, we are fond of our plumage and we take care to make it look well, but we aren't always going around following fashions and wasting time changing our garb.

"That would be such a nuisance. Why, we wouldn't have half the time to make the nest so perfect, to take lovely naps and rest our heads on our own soft back pillows. We wouldn't be able to travel and see the world, or the ocean, as we do."

"Of course," said Mrs. Alec Albatross, "we mightn't have to do all these things if we went to summer resorts or winter resorts, as the birds don't fuss all the time like that, but, in any case, I wouldn't like it. In a summer resort, where would I find delicious squids? I mightn't find them.

"And, oh, the restless life of an albatross when he or she isn't busy about the home is wonderful.

"We talk to old Mother Ocean. We talk to King Foam. We have long conversations with the Breaker Boys and with the Wave Daughters.

Take Our Photographs.

"We couldn't have all that at a summer resort, and even if a summer resort would be near the sea, it would not be as it is around these parts, where we can keep so cool, so cool, and have so glorious a time and be where there aren't many people.

"We like people; we wouldn't hurt them for worlds; they are too nice for that, but we like to be away, away where the albatross family have always made one of their most special dwelling places.

"And if folks wish to come and call on us, we'd be very happy to receive them politely and to let them take our photographs. That is what we will do."

"But," said Mr. Albatross, "with all our traveling we won't ever desert the ocean, and these wonderful parts around South Georgia; no relation to the Georgia of the United States!"

NEVER FREE FROM TROUBLE

Border Between United States and Mexico Has Always Been Lawless Strip of Country.

The border between the United States and Mexico has been for a long time one of the most troubled, romantic and lawless in the western hemisphere. Not only do the Mexican revolutionists periodically start something by shooting or raiding across the line, but this border also affords one of the finest opportunities in the world for smuggling. A large part of the opium which is consumed by addicts in this country comes by way of the Mexican border, and an illicit business in arms and ammunition goes the other way.

In the old days stealing horses in Mexico, driving them across the river and selling them in the United States was a thriving industry and it is probably still carried on to some extent. In the old days it was known politely as the "wet horse trade," because the horses were often sold when they were still wet.

The border country is admirably endowed by nature for these lawless doings. It is flat, near-desert country, too dry for farming, but not too dry to support heavy thickets of chaparral and mesquite, which makes one of the densest and most impenetrable covers in the world. That part of the country which lies within the big bend of the Rio Grande is an especially dense jungle of this kind. It swarms with game. The desert white tail deer, the peccary, the wild turkey and the Mexican quail are abundant. This supply of wild meat makes it easy for a Mexican outlaw who knows where the water holes are to hide out for long periods.

His Principal Objection.

The house agent had sounded his praises of the new property to the prospective buyer and at the end he said: "The death rate in this suburb is lower than in any other part of the country."

"I believe you," said the prospective buyer. "I wouldn't be found dead here myself."—London Tit-Bits.

After Three Physicians Failed

Dodd's Kidney Pills Gave Prompt Relief

Here's one of the many unsolicited testimonials which reach us from every section of the United States. Thousands upon thousands have been relieved of their kidney complaints and there is no reason why Dodd's—standard for two generations—won't give you the same prompt benefit.

Mr. B. C. Birchler of Fulda, Ind., writes, "In the year 1905 I was very low with a severe attack of kidney trouble and three noted physicians had given me up expecting death at any moment, but death did not come and I lingered for several months until accidentally one day I found an old Dodd's Almanac in my house which described symptoms exactly as mine. I then procured a box of your pills and took a double dose and the second day actually felt relieved. After a week I felt so good that I was glad to be alive. I continued using them for a time and they cured me.

"This was fourteen years ago and I can truthfully say I have never yet been laid up with the same disease. A severe attack of 'flu' last winter affected my kidneys to a certain extent so I bought three boxes of your pills and used them for my whole family with the same good results."

"As soon as the baron asked me where De Ravenol was I saw the chance to get rid of him so he wouldn't be pestering around any more. I said yes—I knew about where he was—on the train—he went to California in the morning—"

"California!" I gurgled. "On the train! Not for a mile! He's downstairs in this house, hiding—he was here when your baron came with a warrant to arrest him!" And punctuated with Billy's astonished exclamations, I poured out my own tale of woe and romance and wound up with monsieur's explanation—that it was a plot of the French government to hold up the Mexican deal by keeping Claire's father from going to Mexico and putting it through.

"Don't believe it," cried Billy. "Monsieur's made a mistake—he didn't see the man. Why, old Follow-up admitted to me he was working for the Emperor William! De Ravenol's got the wrong scent. But say—we must see him right off and put him wise to this. Say—it's awful tough—her father in such a hole. It 'most looks as if we ought to give him back the diamonds."

Before we could discuss it and how to communicate with the gentleman himself, he appeared at the front door. He'd gotten out in the basement, instead of his own flat, because he'd heard voices and had taken his chances on slipping upstairs unobserved.

I hurried him in, a chastened spirit, and Billy plunged into the recital of his interview with Baron von Followup and the clever way he thought he had got rid of him by saying monsieur had gone to California.

I thought I had seen monsieur at the top notch of emotionalism already, but I was mistaken. He actually tore his hair—not a great deal, but enough to see.

"My life is ruin wis sis revelation," he wailed. "Wisout to obtain sose diamonds immediately—wisout to be able to return sem to sair owner when he sens for sem—I am lost. Mon Dieu! I am regarded ze same as a robber.

"And how do I tell him sey get lost?—it is my young beautiful daughter Claire who lets get lost sose diamonds? God forbid I tell him sat.

"But how does he answer when I tell him ze truse? Does he say, 'De Ravenol, I am sorry you lose sose most precious diamonds, but accidents will happen and I know you are a good man?'"

He paused for a bitter laugh and to wipe his face with his handkerchief.

"Perhaps you sink he says sat. Non! He tells me—'De Ravenol, I know you steal sose diamonds while you pretend sey are lost. Sings like sat don't come lost so easy as you say. So I punish you for a robber and see sat you gain nossing from stealing my jewels.'"

Monsieur heaved a great sigh. "Zis morning, if I have sose diamonds, I am already on my way to Mexico, but now—"

"Hide man, hide for a couple of days," urged Billy, trying to cheer him up. "We'll help you. I think you ought to be down in your den now—I'm afraid every minute that man may turn up here again."

Later, I remembered the alacrity with which monsieur accepted the offer, assuring us fervently, "Only to hide saves me and my child from disgrace. I srow myself on your mercy—I trust you wis my honaire—wis what is dearest to me—wis my life."

Billy was deeply affected, I could see, and hurried monsieur off, returning in about half an hour to report, "All serene."

I fell asleep and was dreaming that the dome of the national capitol was toppling over on all of us, when I was awakened by the ringing of the front bell.

I saw by the dim light it was early—too early for anything but a fresh calamity—and I hopped out of bed and ran to the door.

"Who's there?" I called through.

"Billy. Open quick."

Billy tumbled in. "Claire's kidnaped!" he shouted in my face.

I don't know whether I put my arms around him, or he put his around me. Both, probably; but the next minute we were clinging together and his chest was heaving with hard dry sobs. When I finally got a coherent account out of him he told me that Claire had been a "little light-headed" through the evening.

"Then she's just wandered off in a half-delirious state," I affirmed positively.

"She's kidnaped," Billy affirmed more positively. "Old Follow-up has noticed her out on the pretext of finding her father, and now he'll use her as bait to get him out. I can't decide whether to see him and tell him now, or wait."

"Don't tell him yet," I advised promptly. "You're all upset and you think she's kidnaped—I know she isn't—she's just lost. She's wandering about the streets now looking for her father."

I dressed. What could I do? Nothing but stay home and wait—as I had been doing all through. I was hardly through my simple breakfast when George came up.

"Why, that gen'lem'n—the one sent the note you wouldn't see yestiddy—he say he got an appointment with you for nine o'clock."

The very man Billy believed had kidnaped Claire!

"Show him up," I instructed with alacrity; and when he came I greeted him so affably he looked afraid to enter.

I almost flung the question at him—"Where is Miss de Ravenol?"—before I thought; but saved it just in time. He sat down in the chair I pushed forward; I sat opposite. He seemed at a loss to begin; I said not one word.

He opened fire on me thus: "I feel I owe you an apology for my uncermonious call yesterday—"

I merely bowed in acknowledgment.

"I shouldn't have insisted, you know, only we had traced the man to the house, and since he had called on you the evening before, it was a natural conclusion that he was calling on you then, also. They drove from their hotel to the Grand Central station, dismissed the carriage there and I have lost sight of their combined movement for about an hour."

"And you don't know where the girl is?" I asked, trembling a little and trying to control my voice.

"No—not yet. There is no chance of her hiding—or of her being hidden—for more than a few days—a few hours. No chance. Most natural that she should have gone in search of her father. He has not left the city—I am positive on that score. It is probable the girl has joined him by a preconcerted plan—or was meaning to when she left the house. I'll find her, I promise you!"

"And nothing is going to happen to her after you find her?"

"Happen to her! What could happen to her? I have nothing to do with her—my business is to locate her father and arrange a matter with him—quietly, I hope."

"And will the emperor imprison him if the diplomatic matter isn't satisfactorily arranged?"

"The emperor? I'm sure I can't say—I don't know anything about the emperor's diplomatic affairs."

"Then what are you after De Ravenol for?"

He reflected a few moments, and then with one of his funny looks, he remarked: "I'd rather have you for a friend than an enemy. It appears that De Ravenol carried off a million dollars' worth of diamonds in Paris the moment they were returned from the diamond cutter's in Antwerp where he had induced the owner to send them for recutting."

"Oh, never!" I exclaimed, shocked, and at the same time appreciating how monsieur had foreseen this very accusation. "I can't believe he's a thief—it's impossible."

"I don't wonder you doubt it," he replied. "I did myself for a while—that's what gave him the start of me." And with that, off he went.

Poor monsieur! Accused of stealing the emperor's diamonds! And suddenly the words, "They were stolen the moment they were returned from the diamond cutter's in Antwerp," flashed over me and into perspective, and with them, the thing I tried all along to remember, and couldn't—monsieur's slip when he told us the legend of the diamonds; he said they were cut in Venice in the fifteenth century and they were cut in Antwerp in the twentieth! The most modern cut, and Van Routen cut them! I'd been trying to remember about Van Routen when I threw down the proof sheets of "Belgian Byways."

"I Feel I Owe You an Apology."

I snatched the pages off the table and fingered them back and forth and found at last an obscure little passage:

"Van Routen's most important work of recent years was the cutting of a collection of seven diamonds, worth at a rough estimate five million francs, which an American millionaire purchased in Paris from an Indian rajah."

De Ravenol stole the diamonds from the millionaire and told Billy and me a pleasing yarn to account for his possession. Of course he wouldn't dare mention when the diamonds were last cut!

CHAPTER XX.

All Is Explained.

The credit of Claire's discovery falls first to her and second to me—she found herself at my door late in the afternoon.

"Claire!" I cried, and at the same moment she cried, "Have they arrested papa?" and collapsed into my arms.

"They haven't arrested him—he's perfectly safe," I assured her. "Let me take off your coat and then I want you to lie down at once."

"No—I mustn't stop a minute—take me to papa."

"Listen to me, Claire," I expostulated a bit sternly. "I can't take you to your father now—it isn't possible."

She obeyed like the sick child she was and then the bell rang and there stood Billy and Mrs. Delario—Billy white and woebegone. Mrs. Delario white and distracted.

"She's here," I whispered, pointing in the direction of the study.

Billy stood on no ceremony—he swept both of us aside and romped through the hall and I heard one glad cry, "Claire!" and found him on his knees by the divan.

My only comment was a maiden-auntie smile that went over his head—or under his feet, perhaps, for he was in too lofty a state at having found her to notice such trivial details as that he "found her" in my flat.

Later he drew me to one side while Claire and Mrs. Delario were bubbling together and told me: "Say—I think I've made Mrs. D. understand about those things—I simply had to—it was getting too serious for everybody. But one funny thing—nothing I can say can shake her that our foreign friend is a thief—says she 'sees' it too plainly and she can't be mistaken."

"I'm afraid she's right," I whispered back. "The Great Unknown was here this morning—he says the diamonds belong to an American millionaire."

Things were happening that day exactly like a story-book plot—before I could get out another word of explanation the bell rang and the Great Unknown came in! I was too much astonished at having him pop up in answer to my speaking his name to keep him out, and he reached the room and saw the object of his search reclining on the divan with Mrs. Delario sitting beside her.

"Well—you've found yourself, I see," he said pleasantly to Claire after nodding casually to Mrs. Delario and Billy. "I've been hunting you all day and now, if you'll be so good as to tell me where your father is—I have business of great importance to him."

"I don't know where he is!" Claire cried, and then appealing to me, she blurted out: "But you do. Oh, tell him and let him save papa."

Tableau!

The cat was out of the bag! Everybody looked at everybody and the Great Unknown snapped his eyes and said, "Ah!" staring very hard at me.

"An accomplice!" And he gave the word a horrid twist as he said it, and I felt I was proving it by my cheeks.

"Say—look here! Accomplice in what?" Billy demanded fiercely.

"Accomplice in what? In the greatest diamond robbery of modern times," he replied imperturbably.

He sketched the story rapidly: An impecunious Indian rajah visiting Paris owned the stones and through De Ravenol, an impecunious nobleman and ex-diplomat who'd run through his own money and his wife's dowry, sold them to a Pittsburgh millionaire—name not mentioned—who intended them as a gift worthy himself and a certain lady of the operatic stage. The stones were so badly cut that De Ravenol induced his friend to send them to Antwerp for recutting by Van Routen. On the day of their return they mysteriously disappeared, as did also one of the rajah's retinue, who knew about the stones and had himself taken them to Antwerp. Suspicion fell upon him and the case was put into the hands of the Great Unknown.

"It is true," said Mrs. Delario earnestly, "every word of it. I see it—I hear it—I know it. We must give back the diamonds at once."

Her "we" gave us away completely! I saw the detective's eyes jump, but he said suavely, "I shall be thankful for your co-operation in recovering the stones—particularly if we can, keep the matter quiet. You see, there is the wife in Pittsburgh—"

"I'm sorry—very sorry to hear that. It isn't right," Mrs. Delario interrupted.

The Unknown shrugged. "If the gentleman can be induced by you ladies to make voluntary restitution the case will be dropped. And merely for his daughter's sake—"

He broke off and looked at Claire kindly and inquiringly. I took the hint and asked:

"Will you promise me that if I succeed in getting him to return the diamonds the case will be dropped?"

"Gladly. I have explicit instructions on that head."

"Billy, you go after him—but don't let him know what he's wanted for."

Five minutes later he and Billy were in the room. When monsieur saw the Great Unknown he almost had a fit of hysterics; when Claire saw her father she did.

"Now, monsieur," said I coolly, when he had done with his "Mon Dieus" and "What does sis mean?" and a few more exclamations, "we'll help you out of your difficulties if you'll confess the truth. Did you steal those diamonds from the Pittsburgh gentleman?"

Monsieur clasped his hands and turned to me. "It was se impulse of a moment—se temptation of a single instant," he wailed. "I have regret it every hour—I am justly punish for my sin. I take sem—I know not for wat—to make sport wis fate—and I sink to hide sose jewels, to bring sem to

On His Knees by the Divan.

America—dispose of sem in Pittsburgh where nossing dares be said about sem because of se wife. I am in one little instant tempted and I yield and lose everysing. Mon Dieu."

I asked the detective: "Are you satisfied if he returns the diamonds now?"

"Certainly. It's all I ask."

I motioned to Billy and pointed toward my table. "Under that sheet of paper," said I.

Billy produced the blue box and placed it in monsieur's hand.

"Mon Dieu!" he ejaculated. "But, madame, you have give me your word of honaire sat you do not find sese diamonds in your slipper you carry off!"

"She didn't! I found them," cried Mrs. Delario. "And when you accused me of robbing Claire I hadn't the least idea you referred to these stones and, anyway, I had already given them to my friend to keep for me—I didn't have them in the house the day you searched."

"And I kept them," I remarked, with a bitter smile. "It's all I've been doing for the last ten days."

He handed the diamonds to the Great Unknown. Silence fell on all of us for a moment, in which Claire lifted her tear-stained face from my shoulder, her eyes encountering an ardent gaze.

"Oh, Mr. Rivers," she cried, in answer to it. "You've been so good to dear papa!"

Billy! Mrs. Delario and I had nearly killed ourselves and Billy got the only thanks that were worth anything!—not that we grudged him the gratitude, considering; but then, you know! Well, such is life! She and I looked at each other and I winked. She winked back, and we never let out so much as half a smile. But two dear young things were happy, so we let it go at that.

The names of the Pittsburgh millionaire and his surreptitious lady were never revealed to me, nor did the detective ever tell us his; and though I learned who he was, he wished to be known as "the Unknown" and to myself, I always called him "the Great Unknown."

The diamonds were returned and the case hushed up for the sake of all concerned; and now, but one little reverberation of it lingers in my life: young Mrs. Rivers permits me alone in the whole world to call her husband "Billy" without protest; to everybody else, even to his mother-in-law, he is William—William Shakespeare Rivers, a rising young dramatist with what looks like a real future before him. All thanks to me, of course; and when I remind him of it as a delicate hint for appreciation he warmly acknowledges, "Yes, I owe all to you that I don't owe to Claire."

The First Needle.

Needles were first made in England by a native of India in 1545. The art was lost at his death, but Christopher Greening recovered it in 1560. Mr. Damer, an ancestor of the earls of Dorchester, settled at Long Crendon, in Bucks, where the manufactory was still extant last century.

You Can Be Free from Pain as I Am, if You Do as I Did.

Harrington, Me.—"I suffered with backache, pains through my hips and such a bearing down feeling that I could not stand on my feet. I also had other distressing symptoms. At times I had to give up work. I tried a number of remedies but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me more good than anything else. I am regular, do not suffer the pains I used to, keep house and do all my work. I recommend your medicine to all who suffer as I did and you may use my letter as you like."—Mrs. MINNIE MITCHELL, Harrington, Me.

There are many women who suffer as Mrs. Mitchell did and who are being benefited by this great medicine every day. It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound contains no narcotics or harmful drugs. It is made from extracts of roots and herbs and is a safe medium for women. If you need special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Miss Leone Widdifield, of Hicksville, was a Sunday guest of the Misses Lucile and Aleen Rhodes.

The new Community Hall at this place will be decicated on next Saturday night, April 10. Cafeteria supper will be served. Tuttle's Orchestra from Pleasant Lake will furnish the music.

Rev. E. E. Wright left Monday for Richmond, Ind., to attend the Northern Indiana Conference.

Results of the Union Servic's

The union revival services that have been in progress at the St. Joe churches closed Saturday evening. The attendance throughout was very good averaging better than 110 for the three weeks. The cottage prayermeetings proved to be very helpful and also well attended, the attendance being as follows: West division, 115; Center, 109; East, 126 and North, 48. On Thursday a union prayer service was held at the Lutheran Church.

The results of the meetings would be hard to estimate but the following report of those received into churches of the community will give some limit of it The Christian Church reports 9 additions, the Lutheran 6 and the Methodist 10, a total of 25.

The spirit of harmony prevailed throughout the series and the sentiment expressed by those who attended was that the meetings have been a great benefit to the community.

The pastors wish to express their appreciation of the co-operation of the community and also to thank the business men for closing their places of business during church hours.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912.

Of St. Joe News, published weekly at St. Joe, Indiana, for April 1st, 1920.

State of Indiana, County of DeKalb, ss:

Before me, a Justice of the Peace in and for the state and county aforesaid, personally appeared Fred B. Leighty, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the Editor and Publisher of the St. Joe News, and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 443, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business manager are:

Publisher, Fred B. Leighty, St. Joe, Ind.

Editor, Fred B. Leighty, St. Joe, Ind.

Managing Editor, Fred B. Leighty, St. Joe, Ind.

Business Manager, Fred B. Leighty, St. Joe, Ind.

2. That the owners are:

Fred B. Leighty, St. Joe, Ind.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are:

None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

Common Sense Comments on Health, Happiness and Longevity

By GEORGE F. BUTLER, A. M., M. D.

HABITS.

Man is the result of his education, nd his education is only the sum of is habits, or those things which he as most habitually or repeatedly done. n a certain sense the old saying, "Line pon line; precept upon precept," is ounded on correct principles. Repetion continued results in becoming a art of the man. This is true not nly in an intellectual and moral sense, ut is even more true in our physical ature. The sum of healthy exercise ill make a healthy muscular system. he spasmodic, irregular and unwholeome exercises only can result in a ck of formation of muscular strength nd muscular habits. What a man is ells the story of what his habits have een, and what his habits are determines what he is to be. This is true ith all the voluntary functions of the ody, and is indirectly true with the nvoluntary functions. The physical audencies of childhood and youth are arely ever changed throughout life; nd even later, we are constantly falling into ways which follow us in all ur future career. Not only are physcal habits thus established, but the peration of the mind has the same endency. We think a thought, and it s considered trifling, but it returns, nd sometimes suggests itself a third ime to us. In this way the same hought recurs over and over in the erve centers, and without our willing t we find it present in the passive porions of the mental system until it nally becomes a habit of the mind. Ve are ever making ourselves over by ur thoughts and deeds. We can make very action of our life, every thought f our mind effectual if we will. We nust devote a good deal of thought to he ought-to-be, the shall-be, and remember, that as we think, as we work, o shall be the result.

Many of the ideas that we have inerited help to narrow and cramp the nner life. We must change our habits f thought. The proper adjustment o our life and environment and the aily effort to gain one's poise and self-ontrol, is effective in proportion to he clearness and strength of our hought and the confidence we put into t. Even happiness itself may become habitual. One may acquire the habit of looking upon the sunny side of things, and he may also acquire the habit of looking upon the gloomy side. Thought habit is character. You are now, in mind, body and estate, just what previous thinking has made you. Habit is a force to be harnessed. Every repetition of an ideal makes its impression deeper. There is more and more of its quality lodged in the subconscious mind. There it lives. Through reiteration the higher and purer thought develops and strengthens its corresponding brain cells. Its physical functioning ground thereby becomes more responsive, fertile and easier to use. Through reciprocity there is a mutual stimulation. Like capital, habit earns interest.

Many of the noblest qualities of life never can have a richer opportunity for cultivation than during illness. Patience, endurance, cheerfulness, forgetfulness of self, and thoughtfulness of others, when exercised and cultivated, will yield good returns, "like a medicine." People who are predisposed to nervous disorders should get into the habit of living simply. They should mold their lives according to some philosophy or religion. They should develop a fixed routine to free them from the jars and strains of constant change. As an enslaver of body and brain, the habit way is most disadvantageous to us. If we become addicted to bad habits, our health becomes impaired and we age early. We must overcome bad habits, we must get out of unwholesome ruts. All evil habits may be destroyed by the man who really desires to master them. We must keep the right idea before the mind—either that of overcoming the habit, or that of the consequence of yielding. It's up to us! LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

PLAY.

One of the most important, as it is one of the hardest, lessons for the busy man to learn is to play. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." More men have been killed by the negative influence of lack of play than by the positive effect of excessive work. Of all things, the busy man should give up the senseless and wearing habit of revolving in his mind in the evening, and during his spare time, the matters which have occupied him during the day. A certain brand of tobacco used to be advertised with the epigrammatic advice, "If smoking such and such tobacco interferes with your business, quit your business." Of course, the admonition is absurdly overdrawn, but it has a grain of sound philosophy in it, too, which is, that it is just as important that business should not be allowed to interfere with play as that play should not be allowed to interfere with business.

Play is a form of rest if properly indulged. If improperly indulged it becomes labor, poisonous exertion, drudgery, doing harm rather than good. It is as bad for the body or any of its members to be overstrained in play as in work, and in the excitement or rivalry of play the line of demarkation between benefit and injury is very often overleaped. The basic definition of play is, "To engage in some exercise for the sake of amusement." Here the word would seem to mean what it does not mean, for "amusement" is that which amuses or pleasurably engages the mind. So "play" has come to mean many different things, from music to gambling. Whenever, however, in any amusement you are interested chiefly in some advantage to be won, you have passed from the amusement of play to the amusement of work. In playing it is not necessary that it be purposeful. One should let himself "go" now and then and just frolic. All that is necessary to learn about play is to understand that all play is good if indulged in moderation and at reasonable times. Work, play, rest, should balance. Rowing, running, golf, tennis, all sports that will take us where there is good air and sunshine, and force us to exert our bodies to the point of taking deep breaths are beneficial. Indoors, light reading when the mind is weary, card playing and other frivolous amusements are sometimes good. The all-important requisite is to maintain a playfulness of spirit which is quite independent of external aids.

You can learn even to have fun with yourself letting your imagination play all kinds of pranks. Play is recreation, refreshing and lightening the monotony of life. Change of work is not recreation enough for the intense worker of today. The mind and will must be emptied of all seriousness and purpose, and relaxation should be sought in romp and frolic.

The place and inspiration of a man's play should be, par excellence, his home, although sometimes it is better to get utterly away from your family and all familiar things and people, to play alone or with new-made friends or comparative strangers.

Home, however, should represent to a man the highest type of play—the unbending and relaxing of his faculties in frank and loving sociability. And it is this element in his life, typified by his home, and for the most part afforded by his home, that I urge upon my readers and patients to deliberately cultivate, thus adding many years to their physical life and untold blessings to their minds and hearts. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

Health Notes

The deepest-rooted cause of disease is that overworking of the brain and over-excitement of the nervous system, which are the necessary consequences of their intense activity. Hence, nervous prostration, nervous dyspepsia, consumption, Bright's disease, and innumerable other maladies. In a word, the American often works himself to death.

Do not eat too often, and never between meals. Two meals a day at an interval of six or seven hours is better for persons with slow digestion than more frequent meals. Food taken before the stomach has had time to empty itself and recuperate robs the stomach of needed rest.

Play is the great harmonizer of the human faculties over-strained and made inharmonious by labor. It is the agency that keeps alive and in healthy activity the faculties and sympathies which work fails to use or helps to repress. It is the conservator of moral, mental, and physical health.

Exaggeration of the instinct of fear and apprehension not only makes people ill, but is illness itself. The thousand and one needless worries over the future are simply providence for the mentally sick.

Man becomes a slave to his constantly repeated acts. In spite of the protests of his weakened will the trained nerves continue to repeat the acts even when the doer abhors them. What he at first chooses at last compels.

Smiles are little things, cheap articles to be brought with so many blessings, both to the giver and the receiver. They are the higher and better responses of nature to the emotion of the soul.

These are great advantages in the way of health that come to the person who is cheerful, buoyant and happy, seeing the bright, even the ludicrous side of the affairs of life.

Avoid all pursuits which enslave the mind or keep it in a fever of unwholesome excitement, or discouragement and depression. Do not live alone, nor become pessimistic nor sour; but cultivate joyousness, and seek that perfection of nature which is within your reach.

* * *

Insist on being well; go to bed with that idea and get up with it; carry it about with you as you carry your own face and hands about with you—and somehow you are apt to find that it is unto you even as you will!

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

HAD TERRIBLE COUGH AND NIGHT SWEATS

Cough about gone, eats and sleeps well, and gained 12 pounds.

"In December, 1913, I had a fearful cough, and my physician ordered me to change climate immediately. I went to San Antonio, Texas, and entered a sanatorium. Left there and came to Oklahoma City in October, 1915. Had no appetite, could not sleep, had night sweats and was losing from one to three pounds a week. I also had catarrh of the bowels, which the doctors had been unable to relieve.

"Relatives urged me to try Milks Emulsion. I did so and began to improve, slowly at first, but steadily. My weight has increased 12 pounds, I have no temperature, and my cough is about gone. I can eat heartily, sleep well, and am working at my trade again."—V. W. Neff, 610 No. Dewey St., Oklahoma City, Okla.

Nature does wonders in fighting off disease, if given the chance. Milks Emulsion is a powerful help in providing strength and flesh. It costs nothing to try.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. Price 60c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

LOOK AT ASPIRIN

If the name "Bayer" is on tablets, you can get relief without fear.

When the Bayer Company introduced Aspirin over eighteen years ago, physicians soon proved it a marvelous help in relieving Rheumatism, Colds, Headache, Neuralgia, Earache, Toothache, Lumbago, Neuritis, Aching Joints, and Pain in general.

To get this same genuine, world-famous Aspirin, you must ask for "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," marked with the "Bayer Cross." You will find safe and proper directions in every unbroken package.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets cost only a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.—Adv.

"But Doan's Made Life Again Worth Living," Says Mrs. Harris

"I was in excellent health until my kidneys weakened," says Mrs. N. A. Harris, 1000 Indiana St., Neodesha, Kansas. "The kidney secretions burned like fire and passed so often I couldn't get a moment's rest. My back ached and for days at a time I was confined to bed, fairly tortured with the sharp pains. I couldn't stoop without fairly screaming with misery.

Mrs. Harris

I lost strength and weight and was so weak I became a nervous wreck. Headaches and dizziness added to my distress. My sight blurred; limbs, hands and face were swollen and puffy sacs came under my eyes. I lost hope of being well again.

Finally a neighbor brought me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and later I got several boxes. My troubles began to lessen and soon I could sleep all night and wake up refreshed and happy and life was again worth living. I am now a strong, healthy woman and owe my health and happiness to Doan's.

A MOTHER'S ADVICE

Conneaut, Ohio.—"Always during expectancy I would become so lame that I would be bedfast; my back would be so stiff that I could not move by myself. I tried various medicines, but not until I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription did I get relief. I consider 'Favorite Prescription' a perfect tonic for the expectant mother, for it not only strengthened me and relieved me of all pain and lameness, but I had comparatively no suffering, and my babies were hardy and strong—absolutely perfect—mentally and physically, which I considered due to the fact that the tonic I took, 'Favorite Prescription,' contained no harmful ingredient."—Mrs. Frank Luce.

Elyria, Ohio.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is an excellent medicine for prospective mothers. It is good to take all during the period, and if more women would take it there would be more healthy babies and the mothers' own health would be so much better, too. At one time I was miserable, suffered with sick stomach, could not eat anything and retain it, and I was not feeling good in any way when I began taking the 'Prescription.' It soon stopped the nausea and kept me feeling fine right up to the last. I had practically no suffering, and my baby was strong and healthy.

"I have thought so well of 'Favorite Prescription' ever since that I am always recommending it to my friends, and all who have taken it agree with me that it is the very best woman's medicine there is."—Mrs. W. H. Woodford, 115 Fairlawn Ave.

SALTS IF BACKACHY AND KIDNEYS HURT

Stop Eating Meat for a While If Your Bladder Is Troubling You.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

Important to all Women Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Adv.

PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

TRUCKS AIDING ROAD PLANS

Long Island Cited as Example of Prosperity Maintained by Efficient Highway System.

(By WINDSOR T. WHITE, Chairman Motor Truck Committee, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.)

Motor highway transportation has grown to such vast importance in the past few years and has so well demonstrated its value and efficiency that it has won official public recognition in many of our states. But this activity can develop in a sound economic way only as good roads programs are developed. While there are examples where motor transportation has succeeded when run in territories that have undeveloped roads, they, in comparison with the thousands of motortruck routes, are practically negligible.

One of our greatest wastes in the handling of the prime necessity, food, occurs in our present transportation methods. Hundreds of millions of dollars are annually wasted because the present method of transportation adapted to our present road system, is so costly that it does not pay to move this food from the farm to an area of consumption.

It is said that New York state has 18,400 miles of surface highways and 79,398 miles of unimproved rural roads. While the state has a much higher percentage of improved roads than is common for the United States, they do not benefit the farmer as much as could be desired.

Long Island is one of the most prosperous agricultural areas in New York state. It is not exceptionally fertile; in fact, it may be said that it is fertile because man has made it so. There are many areas in the state that are naturally more productive than Long Island, but which are far less prosperous. If you could take a trip over the island you would know the reason why the island farmers are famous for their product and financial independence. A well-planned, well-constructed, and finely maintained system of roads is the greatest asset the island has. Every evening one can see hundreds of motortrucks, from two to five ton capacity, rolling over these roads, bound for the New York market. Here is no 50 nor 40, nor even 10 per cent waste. While in other rural districts the farmer drives a floundering team through a sea of mud or well-nigh impassable snowdrifts or chokes with the dust raised by his team if the road is dry, the Long Island farmer carries a greater load, makes about four times the speed, and is more comfortable in driving his motortruck over the good highways.

Farmer's Wife Transferring Farm Produce to Motortruck to Be Taken to City Market.

SAMPLES OF ROAD MATERIAL

Tests Made by Laboratory of Bureau of Public Roads Show Increase Over Preceding Year.

A special laboratory devoted to the microscopic examination and classification of road-building rocks, maintained by the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture, has examined 686 samples of material during the past year, according to the chief of the bureau. This represents a considerable increase over the preceding year and shows the pronounced interest in matters relating to highway construction. Of the samples examined, 249 were rock, 41 slag, 151 gravel, 189 sand, 45 clay, and 11 miscellaneous.

BENEFITS OF HIGHEST VALUE

Following in Wake of Improved Roads Are Better Buildings and Greater Civic Interest.

The benefits that follow in the wake of good roads by improved farm lands and buildings, from shiftlessness to progressive activity, better schools and churches, more intimate social intercourse, greater civic interest and better living conditions are of inestimable value.

Another Royal Suggestion

PIES and PASTRIES

From the NEW ROYAL COOK BOOK

CHEER up! There is no further reason for worrying about table variety. The new Royal Cook Book gives new suggestions for every meal every day. The book is so full of surprises there will never be another dull meal in the home. Here are a few suggestions from the new Royal Cook Book.

Plain Pastry

This recipe is for one large pie with top and bottom crust

2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
⅓ cup shortening
cold water

Sift together flour, salt and baking powder; add shortening and rub in very lightly with tips of fingers (the less it is handled the better the paste will be). Add cold water very slowly, enough to hold dough together (do not work or knead dough). Divide in halves; roll out one part thin on floured board and use for bottom crust. After pie is filled roll out other part for top.

Rich Pastry

2 cups pastry flour
½ teaspoon Royal Baking Powder
½ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup shortening
cold water

Sift flour, baking powder and salt; add one-half shortening and rub in lightly with fingers; add water slowly until of right consistency to roll out. Divide in halves; roll out one half thin; put on in small pieces half remaining shortening; fold upper and lower edges in to center; fold sides in to center, fold sides to center again; roll out thin and put on pie plate. Repeat with other half for top crust.

Apple Pie

1¼ cups flour
1½ teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons shortening
4 apples, or 1 quart sliced apples
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon milk

Sift flour, baking powder and salt; add shortening and rub in very lightly; add just enough cold water to hold dough together. Roll half out on floured board, line bottom of pie plate; fill in apples, which have been washed, pared and cut into thin slices; sprinkle with sugar; flavor with cinnamon or nutmeg; wet edges of crust with cold water; roll out remainder of pastry; cover pie, pressing edges tightly together and bake in moderate oven 30 minutes.

NOT MUCH STUDY INVOLVED

Grandma Evidently Didn't Think Highly of the Doings at Women's Debating Club.

Tiny Timothy had to be very quiet on certain days in the week. Sunday mornings were bad because then father had to study his lesson for the afternoon Sunday school. Tuesday evenings he had to tiptoe around while brother John studied his lodge ritual. Friday evenings sister Nellie went to a debating club and it was often preceded by the last look at her part in the debates.

Then one day mother announced that she had been invited to join a bridge club. Every one was anxious for her to join but little Timothy, who sighed: "Oh, mother, now will you have to study, too, before you go there? What do they recite at your club?"

Everybody smiled but dear old grandmother, who did not approve of bridge clubs. "Oh, she won't have to study much," she retorted tartly. "She can just listen at the first few meetings until she learns how to gossip like the rest of them."

A Kindly Caddie.

"Oh, yes, sir, there's worse golf players in the world than you are, sir," the caddie said kindly. "Lots worse!"

"Well, that makes me feel better," the dub responded. Then he swung his club, failed to touch the ball, but lifted a section of turf as large as a dinner plate.

"Yes, sir," the caddie continued, "there's certainly worse players, but they never let anybody catch 'em on the links!"—Everybody's Magazine.

While You Wait.

A fur shop in one of the Japanese cities has the sign: "Ladies' and gentlemen's skins repaired while they wait."

LAUGHS AT GREENLAND COLD

In His Primitive Abode, Eskimo Dwells in Comfort Through the Monotonous Arctic Winter.

The Eskimo of Greenland, no matter what his station in life may be, always has both a summer and winter home. The winter house is described by Roger Pocock in the Wide World Magazine as being a dugout with an upper structure built of turf and beams of driftwood. It has but one window, as winter in Greenland occurs during the four-month-long arctic night. Entrance to the one large room of which the house consists is gained through a long tunnel about five feet in height, in which the dogs live. In the rear of the living room is a raised dais on which the entire family sleep, and in the front part stands the stove. This stove consists of a hollow stone filled with seal oil in which burns a rag wick, which lights and heats the house and cooks the meals.

Up to Date.

At the now justly famous Jackson day dinner a number of good stories were told and the women are enjoying one told by Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska apropos of the growing influence of women. Referring to the habit of American men of calling their wives "the better half," he repeated a story told him by the prince of Wales during his recent visit here.

Visiting a dugout occupied by American doughboys the prince was surprised to find there, side by side, large pictures of his father and mother clipped from some illustrated magazine. He stepped closer to note the inscription. Under one was "King George the Fifth;" under the other, "The Other Four-Fifths!"

Poets are born just the same as other unfortunates.

Tough on the Patient.

Nurse—Oh, doctor, what shall I do? Your patient followed your directions perfectly.

Doctor—Well, there's nothing to worry over.

Nurse—Yes, there is; the directions blew out the window and he jumped out to follow them.

HEADACHE

Often Caused by

Acid-Stomach

Yes, indeed, more often than you think. Because ACID-STOMACH, starting with indigestion, heartburn, belching, food-repeating, bloat and gas, if not checked, will eventually affect every vital organ of the body. Severe, blinding, splitting headaches are, therefore, of frequent occurrence as a result of this upset condition.

Take EATONIC. It quickly banishes acid-stomach with its sour bloat, pain and gas.

It aids digestion—helps the stomach get full strength from every mouthful of food you eat. Millions of people are miserable, weak, sick and ailing because of ACID-STOMACH Poisons, created by partly digested food charged with acid, are absorbed into the blood and distributed throughout the entire system. This often causes rheumatism, biliousness, cirrhosis of the liver, heart trouble, ulcers and even cancer of the stomach. It robs its victims of their health, undermines the strength of the most vigorous.

If you want to get back your physical and mental strength—be full of vim and vigor—enjoy life and be happy, you must get rid of your acid-stomach.

In EATONIC you will find the very help you need and it's guaranteed. So get a big 50c box from your druggist today. If it fails to please you, return it and he will refund your money.

Obituary

George, son of Peter and Lettie Kester was born in Jackson Township, DeKalb County, Indiana, March 26, 1846 and died Sunday morning April 4, 1920, on the farm on which he was born and had lived nearly all his life, aged 74 years, and 9 days.

He was married to Catherine Smith November 23, 1904 who survives him. Of the immediate relatives left to mourn his departure are his wife, one son and one daughter by a former marriage, one brother, two sisters and a large circle of distant relatives and friends.

Mr. Kester was a veteran of the Civil War. Entering the service when a young man, he thus gave the best of his life to the service of his country and was honorably discharged.

In his business relations with his fellow man Mr. Kester was a model of up-rightness and made a practical application of the Golden Rule, "To do unto others as he would have others do unto him," and in his death the home has lost a kind husband and the community a good friend and neighbor.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. A. K. Mumma in the Methodist Church in Spencerville on last Wednesday morning and buried in the White City cemetery.

Taken To Hospital

Miss Edna Jackson was taken to the Lutheran hospital at Wayne Friday morning to be operated on for appendicitis, but upon being given a thorough examination there it was found that an operation was not needed that her sickness was caused from her kidneys and had developed a case of Pyritis. She will take special treatment until able to be removed home. Mr. Jackson came home Monday morning and stated that she is not much improved if any, and that her fever was running around 104 degrees.

A Candidates Expense Account.

A candidate for the office of commissioner in a certain county in Georgia is said to have filed the following itemized account of his expenses in the campaign: "Lost 1,349 hours of sleep thinking about the election. Lost two front teeth and a whole lot of hair in a personal encounter with an opponent. Donated one beef, four shoats and five sheep to a country barbecue. Gave away two pairs of suspenders, four calico dresses, $8 cash and 13 baby-rattlers. Kissed 126 babies. Kindled fourteen kitchen fires. Put up four stoves. Walked 4,076 miles. Shook hands with 9,508 persons. Told 10,101 lies, and talked enough to make in print one thousand volumes. Attended sixteen revival meetings, was baptized four times by immersion and twice by some other way. Contributed $50 to Foreign Missions and made love to nine grass-widows. Hugged forty-nine old maids. Got dog bit thirty-times and was defeated."

Fifteen To Graduate

Plans are fast materializing for the graduating of the 1920 class of the St. Joe High School. Tuesday evening, April 27th, has been chosen as the date for the Senior play to be given and the commencement exercises to follow on Thursday evening the 29th. The class contains fifteen bright young folks of Concord and Newville township.

Following are the graduates:

Mary E. Armstrong
Carson M. Culler
Clara M. Donley
Geneva P. Martin
Kenneth J. Roberts
Pauline M. Barney
Charley H. Curie
Faye V. Hughes
Mary Lois Muryhy
Correl G. Simanton
Edith M. Berry
Donald C. Davis
Gladys M. Layman
M. Marguerite Milliman
Garnett L. Wyatt.

The class bears the distinction of being one of the largest for some years. The full details of the commencement week have not been made and as fast as we learn of them the public will be informed.

The announcements for the class were printed this week at The News office.

The Alumni banquet will be held at the school house on Saturday evening May 1st., and it will be open to the public. Tickets are on sale at the Bank and News office at 40 cents each for the adults and children under ten years, 20 cents each. The public is asked to affiliate in all the school activities for the the week.

Young Folks Entertained.

A surprise party was given in honor of the eighteenth birthday of Miss Dorothy Bowman at her home in the west part of town on last Saturday evening. About twenty young people had been invited and during the day Miss Dorothy had taken a trip to the country home of Miss Parley Nicholls and upon her return home she found the young folks at her home and everyone was patiently waiting for her arrival. The home was beautifully decorated in pink. A luncheon was served and the young folks had a very pleasant evening. Mrs. Helen Benninghoff assisted her mother in preparing for the event.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

SOME LIGHT ON BOLSHEVISM

Movement Not Anarchistic, as So Many Seem to Think—Probably Is Best Described as "Consistent Socialism."

Article XIII.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

If I were asked to name the principal cause for the growing unrest my answer would be bolshevism. The almost universal attitude of big business toward Russian bolshevism—an attitude adopted by most of the governments of Europe—has been, and is, Kill it; don't waste time examining it; it isn't worth trying to understand; no good can come out of it; it must be fought; it isn't entitled to a trial. Reams of paper have been used to assail it. Captains of industry and government officials have vied with each other in making assault on it. Many of those who oppose bolshevism are indignant if you ask them what it is and why they oppose it. They characterize it, attack it, resent it. Great heat has been shown in discussing it, without throwing any light on the subject. Absurd lies have been told about bolshevism. Later these unnecessary and stupid lies have been exposed, with the result that suspicion has been bred, unrest fed. The effect upon the workers has been to increase their hate for their employers and destroy their already weakened faith in government.

Whether bolshevism is right or wrong, whether it is a good thing or a bad thing, it is at least a definite political plan, capable of being examined, measured, weighed and tested. It is few of the things it has been called. It is entitled to a hearing on its merits. It cannot be howled down in abuse.

Bolshevism Not Anarchy.

Those who lead the campaign against it frequently and confusingly define it as anarchy. If there is one thing that bolshevism is not, it is anarchy. Much controversy will be avoided, many differences of opinion dissolved if we come to a fair and open understanding of the bolshevik program. One of the great misfortunes is that we form opinions without information, rush to judgments without understanding, then stubbornly close our minds. Much of the discord and strife of life in big things, as well as in little matters, is due to this habit. Anarchy is not criminal lawlessness, notwithstanding the fact that this is the popular misconception of the term. Say "anarchist" and the average man or woman to whom you say it looks frightened, thinks of a bomb-thrower, a dynamiter, a firebrand. Such a man is not an anarchist; he is a terrorist, a criminal, a destructionist, a murderer. Let us call a spade a spade and be sure we know what a spade is, and we will understand each other better.

Anarchism is an old and respectable philosophy. The anarchist is an individualist. He is in favor of a free life for the individual. He is opposed to turning over the individual's power to the state. He argues that great power delegated to government limits the growth and freedom of the individual. He dreams of an ideal state in which human beings will be so perfect they need no law. His doctrine is an enlargement, an exaggeration of the idea that the government which governs least governs best. He isn't a lawbreaker. He is a law abolisher. He reasons that when murder leaves the human heart there will be no occasion for laws against killing; that the statute against murder is only printed words on the page of a law book, utterly and entirely without meaning, or existence, to the man who is incapable of killing his fellow man. He says that we should develop our artistic and moral sides and, by evolution gradually repeal one law after another until all law disappears. It is pure idealism—it is a movement toward perfection. It is the millennium. It is poetry. Kipling wrote its constitution when he wrote:

And only the Master shall praise us,
And only the Master shall blame,
And no one shall work for money,
And no one shall work for fame,
But each for the joy of working,
Each in his separate star
Shall draw the Thing as he sees it
For the God of Things as They Are.

Merely a Beautiful Dream.

Few people will contend that this theory is anything more than a beautiful dream. Probably the first and greatest of the anarchists was the great Greek philosopher Zeno, from Crete, the founder of the stoic philosophy, who died 270 years B. C. It is disturbing to find dynamiters called anarchists, and in the same breath hear included some of the greatest idealists that have ever trod the earth. The very mention of the two types in the same class gives respectability to the totally ugly, depraved, ignorant, lawless criminal.

I went to a standard authority for a common-sense definition of bolshevism. I was in Prague on my way up toward the bolshevik front. I spent an afternoon with President Thomas G. Masaryk of the new Czecho-Slovakian republic. He is a Slav. He knows Russia. He was in Russia during the revolution and at the beginning of the counter-revolution which put bolshevism in the saddle. He has written of Russia and is accepted as an authority on the subject. I asked him, "What is bolshevism?" His answer was: "Bolshevism is consistent socialism."

Bolshevism is an old, untried theory of government. Its object is to secure a greater production and a more just distribution. Socialism says that men are without motive for efficient work today because they do not get a fair share of the things they produce; that the way to stimulate production is to adopt common ownership. Under such a plan, they say, every man would be working for himself, in the sense that all would be working for the state, and that as all are an equal part of the state their interests would be common and mutual. The socialist says that by working and doing as much as he could he would be helping to shorten the workday, because if all the people of the world were at work they could produce an abundance of everything necessary for the world's happiness and comfort, every one would have all he needed, no one would have more than another and it would be to the interests of each individual to work to shorten his own workday.

The program of socialism promises to destroy all private ownership. There will be no such thing as private property. No one will own land. The land, the factories, the railroads, the mines, everything, will be owned in common. The state will hold the title to everything, manage everything and distribute the product. This plan abolishes profits, rent and private capitalism.

Money and Capital.

To understand this doctrine it is necessary to clearly know the meaning of the word "Capital." Many people confuse the word "capital" with the word "money." These words have totally different meanings. Money is the metal or paper used by a government to make easy the exchange of products. Without money the world would go back to the barter system, in which the man who had corn traded it for meat, clothes, and the others things he needed. Capital is the unconsumed product of labor. In other words, all of the food, cloth, clothing, machinery, etc., in the world is its capital, just as a man's capital is the food he has in the cupboard, the clothes he hasn't worn out, the money in the bank which represents a power to buy. It is the surplus. It is the reserve.

Plato, the great Greek philosopher, was one of the first of the socialists. In the republic of Plato we find a defense of state socialism. From Plato to Lenine men have been urging communism as a cure for the ills of the world, as a remedy for wrong, as a means of realizing exact justice.

Modern socialism dates from the "Communist Manifesto," published in 1848, by Karl Marx and Frederick Engels. Their outline of the socialist plan seized upon the thought of the world. Since that day it has been gathering the dissatisfied of the world and grouping them in a class, developing what they term a "class consciousness." Back of it has been an insistent, uninterrupted propaganda which has reached every corner of the globe. Billions of leaflets, pamphlets, tracts and books have been circulated. Millions of speeches have been made. Drawing rooms have been thrown open to it, highbrows have professed the faith, lowbrows have thundered the creed from soapboxes on the street corners. It has flourished best in Europe. It has furnished prime ministers. Its voice today in the parliaments of Europe is not a whisper—it is a shout. In the new governments which have come out of the war it is a militant, dominant factor.

The bolshevism of Russia is pure socialism—literal communism. At this moment I am not writing of the methods of the bolsheviks. First, I want to make clear and simple their plan. Bolshevism is an effort to put into practice the doctrine preached by Plato, programmed by Marx.

Advocates Trial of Hun Leaders.

If Hindenburg and Ludendorff are guilty of offenses against humanity they, and not some of their underlings, should pay the penalty. It would be a farce to let them go and to convict their subordinates; and it would be a farce to try to impress the German people with the inviolable majesty of international law while fearing to try leaders who are in position to arouse a public clamor in their behalf. By all means let Hindenburg and Ludendorff be among the first to answer. They stand as heroes before their followers and no lesson would be more impressive to those followers than the spectacle of their leaders brought to book.—Exchange.

Showing Kaiser's Viciousness.

The Germans, in setting fire to the Louvain library, totally destroyed not only the printed books numbering from 250,000 to 300,000 volumes and nearly 1,000 manuscripts which the library contained, but also the famous university halls, thus destroying in three days that which had taken five centuries to build up. Only once before in history has such a disaster been inflicted upon the world, when in A. D. 643, the Caliph Omar, with blasphemy only equaled by that of the kaiser, destroyed the library of Alexandria in the name of God, and that is of very doubtful authority.—Chicago Evening Post.

HOW TO LIVE

Common Sense Comments on Health, Happiness and Longevity

SLEEP.

Good sleep is absolutely essential to good health. Broken, irregular sleep, if long continued, is bound to result in nervous and physical breakdown. Different people require different amounts of sleep, but there are few who can keep healthy and do their best work on less than eight hours' sleep in the twenty-four. Continuous curtailing of the sleep, even if it be slight, is more serious than the occasional loss of many hours. It renders the mind heavy and sluggish; it makes one irritable and impatient, and greatly diminishes the power of good work. Sleep must be natural, dreamless, restful. Such a sleep cannot be produced by drugs; neither will it come to the man who eats and drinks to excess late at night. The active business or professional man who loses sleep, or who does not get good sleep, and who eats, drinks, and smokes to excess, is breeding a bunch of trouble that is bound to overtake him sooner or later, almost invariably about middle life, or soon after. The irregular life of the society man or man about town cannot be combined with that of the strenuous business man with impunity. Drugs and stimulants won't help you. You cannot drug yourself into society or business.

By the aid of sleep we recover the energy we have used for the day, and actually accumulate and store up energy. The foolish man tires out his mind and body and then resorts to drugs to get to sleep. He is a slave to his conscious mind: he depends on his body, with its cerebro-spinal system that tires and wears out easily. The wise man, whether he is energetic or slow, depends on his superconscious mind, which he opens to all elevating influences. It is he who lives the real life, whether it be short or long. And if you could know his mind, his inner life of thought, you would find that he never allowed mundane matters to interfere much with the amount of rest, including sleep, that he had learned to be necessary for his good health. On going to bed at night, after taking breathing exercise, you should understand that first of all it is wrong to attempt to force sleep, for that will prevent you from sleeping if anything will. It will make you anxious, and anxiety is death to sleep. Just assume a natural, easy position in the bed and give yourself up to the soothing influence of the night. The superconscious will do the rest, in ordinary circumstances. But if sleep should not come at once, don't worry. A variety of reasons for sleeplessness may exist, but they mostly resolve themselves into one, namely, a tendency to think instead of casting all thought from the mind. After a little practice, you can learn to submit yourself to rest without thought, leaving everything to the superconscious mind. Outdoor sleeping is preferable, but plenty of fresh air is imperative. The bed clothing should be light and porous, but sufficient to keep the body warm. A good mattress, and not too high a pillow are essential. When you awaken in the morning you may lie a moment, getting used to the change from sleep, and then you should get up. Do not lie there dozing. Dozing in bed in the morning often will be enough to set the tone for an entire day of weariness. You would better get up even if you do not feel fully rested. You will sleep the surer and the better for it during the coming night. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

REST.

Man's body is so constituted that it must have periods of repose. Rest is as necessary as food, after a hard day's mental or physical work. Effective activity is based on its intervals of rest. Much of our fatigue and ineffective work is often caused by unnecessary tension and waste effort. Use only the force necessary for the successful accomplishment of your task. Avoid all unnecessary strain. Do not use the whole body in a piece of work that requires only the exercise of some special part.

When you rest, keep still; when you move, move with that part of the body needed. Do not waste your force by walking with your arms and face as well as your legs. If circumstances force an unusual and fatiguing amount of exertion upon you, break it now and then by periods of absolute rest. A minute or two of quiet, with eyes closed, with your tension relaxed and the gearing of the machinery thrown off for the moment will help and refresh you greatly. You must learn to rest your mind as you do your muscles. The habit of mental relaxation is as necessary as that of muscular relaxation.

One of the most essential principles of efficient, successful work, is to know when to stop. The most efficient person is the one who works only when at his best, and quits at the first signs of fatigue.

Efficient work requires close and continuous attention. Inability to give close attention to the work in hand is Nature's warning that the fatigue point has been reached. Persistent failure to heed these symptoms usually marks the beginning of nervous exhaustion with all its attendant evils. The vital functions are all affected by fatigue, producing a condition of low vitality in the organism, making it very susceptible to all forms of disease. The tired man loses his self-control, his judgment, his sense of proportion. Fatigue is so far reaching that it affects the power to live up to moral principles. You must realize that it is better to regulate your daily tasks with some regard for your nervous system than to burden yourself with nerve-racking work for weeks and months until you are forced to take a rest. You should make it a rule to rest a little after every important task accomplished, particularly after you have gone through a severe nervous strain.

When the time comes to rest, do so in fact, not merely in name. The power of perfect, child-like relaxation must be cultivated in order perpetually to renew the body. When this is acquired you will get as much rest in a few minutes of quiet as many get out of several hours' sleep. To relax for a few minutes during the day is often very refreshing. Fatigue and rest must balance. If you rest too much you are not going to get strong. If you work too hard, physically or mentally, you will go to waste. Activity is life; stagnation is death. Learn to balance! When man learns the art of wholesome living, the recuperative power of intelligent rest and the rejuvenative power of contented thought, that "tired feeling" will disappear and he will be filled with energy, enthusiasm, peace and happiness. Only by daily, harmonious use of all one's being—faculties, functions, senses, muscles—can one earn the right to prolonged possession of them. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

Health Notes

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your neighbor's faults. Forget the slander you have heard. Forget the temptation. Forget the peculiarities and fault-finding of your friends and only remember their good points.

When you retire for the night, you are not to ask yourself whether the day has been a good day or a bad day. You are not to review the past, or look forward into the future. You should empty your mind of all conscious thought.

If you wish for health and happiness in old age, regulate your mind and body according to the rules of sweet reasonableness and eat and drink about one-half of what you could eat and drink.

The whole secret of remaining young in spite of years is to cherish enthusiasm in oneself by poetry, by contemplation, by charity—that is, by the maintenance of harmony in the soul.

Most of the luxuries, and many of the so-called comforts of life, are not only not indispensable but positive hindrances to the elevation of mankind. With respect to luxuries and comforts, the wisest have ever lived a more simple and meagre life than the poor.

A fort may have brave men enough within its walls to repel any attack which may be made against it. A man may have such a stock of high health as to resist the most destructive disease.

One of the most important adjuncts to proper diet is perfect mastication. Every morsel of food should be so thoroughly chewed and mixed with the saliva that it becomes a liquid before leaving the mouth.

This is a high-pressure age, and in trying to "keep up with the procession" many persons do more than they are capable of doing, drain their vital powers and become physical and nervous wrecks.

To yield and yield again to the expression of every emotion is weak-minded, and leads to weak-mindedness, besides weakening the body and impairing the health generally.

The world will be to you very much what you make it. The cheerful are its real possessors, for the world belongs to those who enjoy it.

Cheerfulness is not only power; it is mental progression, and health and happiness and long life to yourself and to your friends and family.

The ordinary healthy man is quite unconscious of the existence of his own physical mechanism. It is the last thing he thinks about. This is partly due to the fact that he is healthy, but his health in its turn is partly due to the fact that he does not worry about his interior.

You must sleep well, if you mean to work well. You must have body and mind in good working order; and they will not be in good working order unless you sleep regularly, steadily, and enough.

LITTLE JESTS

A QUICK CHANGE.

"This plaintiff in the Court of Domestic Relations claims that his wife got 'hard boiled' all of a sudden."

"Is it possible for anybody to undergo a transformation like that?"

"Perhaps so. I've seen people go into a telephone booth at peace with all mankind and come out a few minutes later thirsting for blood."

Merely Tolerated.

"Gustavus, you don't seem to like my family at all," pouted the bride.

"Give me time, my dear. I'm doing my best to be agreeable."

"But what's wrong with my family?"

"Nothing whatever, but I'm a sensitive man, I am, and the look of hopeless resignation your people wear whenever I'm around is getting on my nerves."

Youth's Handicap.

While awaiting me my friend asked my little sister where her two other sisters were.

"O," she replied, "they are some where in mischief."

"Why don't you join them in their fun?"

"Mother trusts me so dreadfully that I can't have much fun," replied she with a sigh.—Exchange.

The Main Thing.

"That poor man you sent out to clean the back yard had his feelings very much hurt. I saw his face working."

"That's all very well, but what were his hands doing?"

EGGS.

Visitor—An egg is mighty valuable these days.

Farmer—Of course. An egg will bring almost enough to pay for feeding the hen until she lays the next one.

A Prodigy.

For speed in Independence, Rose,
Our baby, can't be beat,
Already, 'twixt her mouth and toes
She's making both ends meet.

Unpopular.

"Evidently she doesn't like me."

"What did she say?"

"She just told me that she wouldn't marry me if I were the richest man on earth."

The Reason.

"I haven't seen you in your car lately. Have you been out of the motor running?"

"No; just been run in."

The Umpire.

"I guess I must be the umpire in my family."

"What makes you think so?"

"Because all my decisions are hooted at."

The Proviso.

"Don't you believe it is right for a man to say exactly what he thinks?"

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne; "provided he really thinks."

Bound to Be Heard.

Patience—What makes that child cry so awfully loud, do you suppose?

Patrice—Why, both of her parents are deaf, you know.

Very Much So.

"Did you see where a sailor on an incoming ship locked the cook up in the icebox?"

"What a cold-blooded act!"

Speaking of Kings.

Mr. Pecked—Smith is king in his home.

Mrs. Pecked—Yes; I was there the day his wife crowned him.

Harsh Terms.

"Why did Jibway and Gadspur fall out?"

"Gadspur says Jibway kept picking on his flyver."

"That's strange. 'Picking,' you say?"

"Yes. Jibway refused to call it anything but a 'chariot.'"

The Kind He's After.

Tom—Do you intend to go abroad on your wedding trip when you get married?

Dick—I do if I marry the right girl.

EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Adv.

STOMACH TROUBLE AND CONSTIPATION ENDED

Suffered So He Couldn't Work for a Year, but Mr. McCormick Was Cured Promptly.

"I had stomach trouble and constipation for five years. One year of this time I was unable to work, suffering untold agony. I doctored with some of the best physicians, also took many proprietary medicines, but could not find permanent relief. Finally a friend recommended Milks Emulsion. The first few doses relieved me greatly, and three bottles of it effected a permanent cure."—C. A. McCormick, Anderson, Ind.

Mr. McCormick is only one of many hundreds who have endured torture for years and then found that Milks Emulsion gives blessed relief and real, lasting benefit. It costs nothing to try.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy and natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whom sickness has weakened, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream. Truly wonderful for weak, sickly children.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. Price 60c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

"TAKING STOCK"

Should Sentiment Always Have Precedence?

"Taking stock" of oneself is a periodical duty, probably not always practiced, and is as necessary as taking stock of your household effects or your "store goods." The right minded man will do this. In unmolested moments he gives way to deep meditation; he gathers his thoughts to ascertain if brains, energy, and ability are syncopating properly, working together on lines that answer to an ambition that looks for a satisfactory return.

If there be a deficit, his endeavor should be to discover the leakage. It may be that he lacks the nerve to go into a retrospective analysis, or fails in initiative that will prompt him to throw his horoscope in the future. Unless he can do these things he will never be able to pull himself out of any "rut" in which his condition has placed him. He must "take stock."

"Stock taking" leads to modern-day efficiency, and is demanded of every worker if unsatisfactory conditions are to be overcome. In the case of the farmer it may be that he is working a "too high-priced farm"; interest and rent may be an "overhead" eating up the profits. There may be other reasons why profits are not shown. It is just possible that he is sacrificing profit and encouraging loss because of sentiment, but he does not realise that this is the cause. The farm was his birthplace; reared upon it, he knows every nook and corner of the old place. He fished in the brook, hunted squirrels in the woods, hid in the hayfield, grew to manhood upon the place, courted and married and brought up his family there. These are ties that commend themselves, and why shouldn't sentiment have a say? To many this will appeal. But are these good reasons to continue? Does not one owe it to himself and to his dependents to "take stock," and put into effect action that will bring a balance on the credit side of the ledger—the balance that will bring happiness and give a comfort far greater than a mass of unpaid bills and a house full of worry, and a devotion to sentiment? Should he not look around for more favorable conditions, which may easily be found?

Procrastination is said to be a thief. In this case the axiom is undoubtedly true. To allow the adverse conditions under which you may be laboring to continue may keep you for years longer in the present unsatisfactory position.

There was a man at Brazil, Ind., who made weekly visits for upward of a year to the office of the Canadian government at Indianapolis, Ind., and from the agent secured all the information he possibly could as to conditions in Western Canada. But he lacked decision, did not "take stock," or if he took it, failed to act. This was fourteen years ago. He lived on a small farm, which gave him a mere existence, and no promise of anything more. He is still on the same place and no better off today than then. He had a friend working in a glass factory, who also had but little means. He became interested in Western Canada. He possessed, though, spirit and action. With the impulse thus prompted he moved to Saskatchewan and took up a farm. Today he is the owner of a splendid section of land, has plenty of money in the bank, and could retire with a handsome competence.

That which has been the good fortune of the Brazil glass worker, who had "taken stock" and profited by it, may be that which will follow any other of like temperament and a firm wish to erect for a satisfactory future.

Western Canada submits for consideration and approval conditions in agricultural lines that are exceptional. There is land there that annually produces about the same return as any other farming land, and it can be purchased at but a portion of what the place which has not been a source of profit can be sold for. A section instead of a quarter-section, worked under western conditions, with no more effort, solves the big "overhead" expense. The social conditions, which are an important factor in deciding on a new home location, are ideal.—Advertisement.

LADY LARKSPUR

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons

LADY LARKSPUR

"Lady Larkspur" is a delightful little whimsey of a story by Meredith Nicholson, author of "The House of a Thousand Candles" and other charming romances that nearly everybody has read. It's short and sweet and full of the fanciful charm which has made Nicholson deservedly popular.

Bob Singleton is the hero. He's an aviator invalided home. His Uncle Bashford has married an Englishwoman in Japan in his old age, died and left a widow whom Bob has never seen. Said widow, present whereabouts unknown, is mystery No. 1. Mystery No. 2 is Violet Dewing, an entirely charming English actress, also missing from public view. Bob's friend Searles has written a play, "Lady Larkspur," especially for her and naturally is combing the universe to find her. Bob goes to the Bashford "farm" at Barton in New England to recuperate. The household is made up of broken-down hotel employees befriended by the uncle—comedy material.

A young and attractive woman arrives and says she's the widow. Bob is quickly captivated. Appear in due course a puzzling stranger, a remarkable fan, and a suspected German spy—material for adventure and incidents both exciting and entertaining, to say nothing of mystery deep and dark.

In the end—but what's the use in spoiling it! Read it for yourself.

CHAPTER I.

The "Troops"

"It was hard luck," said Searles, "that I should spend a year writing a play for a woman only to find that she had vanished—jumped off the earth into nowhere. This was my highest flight, Singleton, the best writing I ever did, and after the vast pains I took with the thing, the only woman I ever saw who could possibly act it is unavailable; worse than that, absolutely undiscoverable! Nobody knows I have this script; I've kept quiet about it simply because I'm not going to be forced into accepting a star I don't want. I have a feeling about this play that I never had about my other things. The public has been so kind to my small offerings that I'm trying to lend 'em on to the best I can do; something a little finer and more imaginative, with a touch of poetry, if you please. And now——"

He glared at me as though I were responsible for his troubles. As he knew I had been flying in the French aviation corps for two years and had just been invalided home, I didn't think it necessary to establish an alibi. Fate had been kind to Dick Searles. In college he had written a play or two that demonstrated his talent, and after a rigid apprenticeship as scene-shifter and assistant producer he had made a killing with "Let George Do It," a farce that earned enough to put him at ease and make possible an upward step into straight comedy. Even as we talked a capacity house was laughing at his skit, "Who Killed Cock Robin?" just around the corner from his lodgings. So his story was not the invention of a rejected playwright to cover the nonappearance of a play which nobody would produce.

"Isn't it always a mistake to write a play for a particular star?" I suggested. "Seems to me I've read somewhere that that is among the besetting sins of you playwrights."

"Old stuff, my boy; but this isn't one of those cases. The person I had in mind for this play wasn't a star, but a beginner, quite unknown. It was when I was in London putting on 'Fairy Gold' that I saw her; she had a small part in a pantomime, and pantomime is the severest test of an actor's powers, you know. A little later she appeared in 'Honorable Women,' a capital play that died early, but there again I felt her peculiar charm—it was just that. She was exquisite! No one ever captured my imagination as she did. I watched her night after night. I was afraid that when I heard her voice it would break the spell, and I actually shook like a man with an ague when she tripped out on the stage as the ingenue in 'Honorable Women.' And her laughter! You know how hollow the usual stage mirth is, but that girl's laugh had the joy of the lark ascending!"

"By Jove!" I ejaculated, "there's more here than appears. You're in love with the girl!"

"Rubbish," he cried impatiently. "You'll think I'm talking rot, but this girl was the visualization of a character I had dreamed of and groped after for years. That's all; but it's a whole lot, I can tell you!"

"Let us be practical for a moment, Searles," I urged. "Emperors, presidents, and popular murderers are not more conspicuous than the people of the stage. No girl talented enough to get two engagements, even for small parts, in a first-class London theater could vanish. With your acquaintance in the profession you'd be able to trace her anywhere on earth. By the way, what did the paragon call herself?"

"Violet Dewing was her stage name and the only name the managers knew her by. I assumed that, of course, all I had to do was to finish my play and then have Dalton, who represents me over there, make an appointment to read it to her; but Dalton worked for three months trying to find her, without success. I wasn't the only person who was interested in her. Dalton said that half a dozen managers had their eye on her, but after 'Honorable Women' closed she stepped into the void. I knew what you're thinking—that the other members of the two companies she appeared with must have had some inkling of her identity, but I tell you Dalton and I exhausted the possibilities. It was by accident that she got her chance in the pantomime—some one wouldn't do at the last minute, and they gave Miss Dewing a trial. She was well liked by her associates in spite of the fact that she was a bit offish and vanished from their world the minute the curtain fell."

"Oh, I'm Not Knocking the Dead!"

"A clever governess out of a job, satisfying a craving for excitement and playing the mysterious role as a part of the adventure. Am I to assume that you've burned your play and that the incident is closed?"

"Oh, I didn't burn it; I have a copy locked in a safety vault, and Dalton left one heavily sealed at a small exclusive London hotel where, he found after much difficulty, the girl had lodged during her two engagements."

"You're morbid," I said. "Show me her photograph."

He laughed ironically. "Never a chance, Singleton! You haven't yet got the idea that this young woman is out of the ordinary. She refused to be photographed—wrote it into her two contracts that this was not to be asked. I never saw her off the stage, and I can't give you a description of her that would be of the slightest assistance to the keenest detective alive. In that pantomime she was a frolic, the clown's daughter, and, although nobody saw it, she was the whole piece, the elusive sprite that could evoke laughter and tears by a gesture, a lifting of the brows, a grimace. By utterly different methods in 'Honorable Women' she proved her wide range of appeal. Here was the one true characterization in the piece. When Terry was in her prime you remember how we used to say that only one bird sang like that, and from paradise it flew? Well, this bird sings on the same branch! Her voice was her charm made audible!"

"Rave some more!" I pleaded. "You never talked better in your life."

"Don't be an ass," he said sourly. "Let's forget her and take a squint at your affairs. Just what do you mean to do with yourself?"

"My shoulder still creaks a little, and the doctors advise me to sit around for a while. They offered me some jobs in Washington, but desk work and inspection duty are too tame after a couple of years spent in star climbing. I'm going up to Barton-on-the-Sound and I'll camp in the garage on my uncle's place."

"Your uncle played you a nasty trick," interrupted Searles; "getting married and then adding to the crime by dying. You couldn't beat that for general spitefulness."

"Do you remember the immortal lines:

"'Oh, skip your dear uncle!'
The Bellman exclaimed
As he angrily tinkled his bell'?

"Oh, I'm not knocking the dead!" he protested. "Mr. Bashford always struck me as a pretty decent, square sort of chap, and not at all the familiar grouchy uncle of fiction and the drama. I made notes on him from time to time with a view to building a play around him—the perfect uncle, unobtrusive, never blustering at his nephew; translating the avuncular relationship into something remote and chaste like a distant view of Mount Washington in winter. It was just like him to retire from business on his sixtieth birthday and depart for the Orient, there to commit the shameless indiscretion of matrimony."

"Like him! It was the greatest shock of my life. To the best of my knowledge he never knew any women except the widow of his partner in the importing house. She was about eighty and perfectly safe. He spent twenty years in the Tyringham, the dullest and most respectable hotel in the world, and his chief recreation was a leisurely walk in the park before going to bed. You could set your clock by him. Pretty thin picking for a dramatist, I should think. He used to take me to the theater regularly every other Thursday—it was a date—and his favorite entertainment was vaudeville with blackface embellishment preferred. But in his shy fashion he was kind and generous and mighty good to me."

"If you hadn't gone to war, but had kept right at his elbow, the marriage might have been averted," suggested Searles. "He did leave you something, didn't he?"

"Fifty thousand cash and the right to use the garage at the Barton farm. Calling it a farm is a joke; it's rocks mostly. He bought the house to have a place to store his prints and Jap ceramics. He hated motoring except in taxis up and down town, and when I urged him to set up a machine, he told he to go ahead and buy one and build the garage. Told me I'd better fix up the studio in the garage and have it as a place to work in. His will provides that I may lodge in the garage for life."

"The estate footed a million, as I remember, so I can't praise his generosity. But the widow, your unknown auntie, the body-snatcher who annexed the old boy—what of her?"

"I've asked the trust company people whether she's in sight anywhere, and they assure me that she is not on these shores. Torrence, the third vice president—you know Torry; he was in the class ahead of us at college, the man who never smiles—Torry said she acknowledged the last remittance three months ago from Bangkok—wherever that is. I suppose the old girl's resumed her tour of the world looking for another retired merchant to add to her list."

"Very likely. To what nation, tribe, or human group does this predatory person belong?"

Too Deep for Him.

An Irish sailor, after pulling in 50 fathoms of line, muttered to himself. "Sure, it's as long as today and tomorrow! It's a good week's work for any five men. More of it yet? The say's mighty deep, to be sure." Then he suddenly stopped short; and, looking up to the officer on watch, he explained: "Bad luck to me, sorr, if I don't believe somebody's cut off the other end of this line!"—Congregationalist.

A Thought.

It's not easy to be famous or skillful or pre-eminent in one's chosen profession, but it is easy for every man to be a kind father, a good neighbor, a true friend and a loyal citizen. If he is these he is all that men of renown can be. The great man who has won his greatness at the expense of his children or his neighbors or his friends has traded lasting memories for temporary fame.

GOOD ROADS

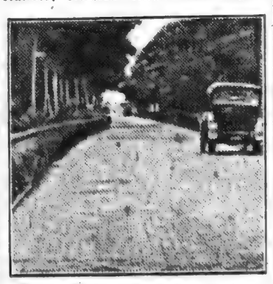
MORAL NECESSITY TO BUILD

To Maintain Happy and Prosperous People on Farms We Must Improve Rural Conditions.

(By J. DENNY O'NEIL, Pennsylvania Highway Commissioner.)

The problem confronting the highway department in these abnormal times when labor and material are so scarce and so high, is this: Shall we go ahead constructing new roads? I am convinced that good roads are an economic as well as a moral necessity. We must have food, and if we want boys and girls to stay on the farm to produce it, we must dig them out of the mud by building roads so they can get to market or to a railroad.

There are places in Pennsylvania where it costs more to haul farm products to a railroad station than it does to pay the freight to France. As in the past, the hope of the future from a moral point of view, is to maintain a happy, contented and prosperous people on the farms and in the small towns and villages. They don't produce I. W. W.'s, ballot-box stuffers, election fraud crooks, gunmen and commercialized vice on the farms. These are the exclusive products of the cities, and if we want to keep the people away from the cities, we must give them good roads and do what we can to improve living conditions in rural communities.



A Brick Road in Pennsylvania.

FARMERS ARE BEHIND ROADS

National Grange Officers Confer With Senator Townsend on Bill He Has Introduced.

Proceeding in accordance with instructions given them at the annual meeting of the National Grange, held recently in Grand Rapids, Mich., Washington representatives of the organization, which comprises some 700,000 farmers, have conferred with Senator Charles E. Townsend of Michigan and will hold further meetings with him on the measures which he has introduced in Congress providing for a national highway system to be built and maintained by the government under the direction of a federal commission.

In a special report adopted at the grange meeting, it was held that the time has come when, with due regard for the present and future necessities for permanent, hard-surfaced highways, all the highway activities of the national government should be unified in a single administrative department under such limitation of powers as will secure the greatest possible degree of efficiency and economy in the expenditure of national funds.

VITAL IMPORTANCE OF ROADS

Modern Medicine Points Out There Are Few Physicians and Nurses in Rural Communities.

That good roads are of vital importance to the health of a community and particularly those who live in rural communities is shown in an article in Modern Medicine. It is pointed out by the writer that there are few physicians, few nurses, and practically no hospital facilities in rural districts. In some communities, even in older states, there is only one practicing physician to 1,500 population. Hardships of travel make young physicians scarce. Better highways, he points out, will lead physicians to go after country practice in increasing numbers.

HIGHWAY WORK IN WYOMING

Now Under Way $2,560,000 Worth of Federal Aid Improvements—More to Follow.

There are now under way in Wyoming $2,500,000 worth of federal aid highway improvements. These improvements are the first ones of a program contemplating the expenditure of $6,000,000 in three years.

THREE PRINCIPAL DIVISIONS

Due Consideration Must Be Given to Location to Reduce Cost of Maintenance.

The three principal divisions of actual road making are location, construction and maintenance. In planning a road it is necessary that we take into consideration all three of these steps, since proper location affects the cost of construction and may materially reduce cost of maintenance.

I SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Finally was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lowell, Mass.—"I was all run down and had an awful pain in my right side, was persistently constipated and had very dizzy spells. I suffered for three years and was perfectly miserable until a friend was telling me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I found it a wonderful medicine. I can now do twice as much work and I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other women. You can use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. M. THEALL BESSEY, 186 Appleton Street, Lowell, Mass.

Why women will continue to suffer so long is more than we can understand, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound!

For forty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

WHAT A MOTHER SAYS

Cleveland, Ohio.—"During expectancy I was sick for three or four months, my strength left me and I became weak and nervous and just felt miserable. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and my strength returned very rapidly, and I felt very well the remainder of the time. My baby was a very strong, healthy child and always has been. I would especially recommend 'Favorite Prescription' to the expectant mother."—Mrs. Bessie Baumgardner, 2354 77th St., E.

Cleveland, Ohio.—"I think Dr. Pierce's medicines are all fine. I have given the 'Favorite Prescription' to my daughters when they were growing into womanhood and it proved very beneficial to them. We have also used the 'Golden Medical Discovery' as a tonic and blood purifier, and it proved equally as beneficial as the 'Favorite Prescription.' I take pleasure in recommending these good medicines of Dr. Pierce's."—Mrs. J. H. Walls, 1708 E. 16th Pl.

Was Run Down, Nervous

Ashtabula, Ohio.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is an excellent woman's tonic. I was all run-down, weak and nervous and was feeling very bad when I began taking 'Favorite Prescription,' and I must say it was very quick in giving me relief and building me up in health and strength."—Mrs. Emma Schultz, 344 West St.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Power Farming
—More Work with Fewer Men

ROCKWOOD
The DRIVE PULLEY
[with section removed to show construction]

ROCKWOOD, The Drive Pulley, consists of a solid block of tough, wear resisting fiber (seldom less than two inches thick) built around and into a heavy cast iron hub. The end-grain is exposed as a surface to grip the belt surely and firmly—a surface made up of layer upon layer of fiber hydraulically compressed and cemented—a surface that renews itself automatically as it wears and wears and WEARS. Rockwood, The Drive Pulley, has no "cover" to strip. It is ALL pulley, and is thoroughly waterproofed.

BIGGER PRODUCTION at the sources of supply is the great national need today! Farms, as well as factories, mines and mills, all must work to produce more. Farm labor is scarce—and costly. Power takes the place of men—and horses. It is at your command—every day! It does more work, at a lower cost, with fewer men.

The tractor is the first step toward power farming—it is the great all-purpose, year-round power plant. With a tractor, the farmer can plow, cultivate, and haul.

But he can also do a score of other hard jobs on the farm efficiently and economically. Using its belt power, he extends its service through the entire year. He can thresh his grain, husk his corn, hull his clover, shred his fodder, shell his corn, cut his ensilage, fill his silo, saw wood, bale hay, grind feed, pulverize limestone, pump water and operate his repair shop. The farm, equipped with tractor power, produces in a larger way and at a lower cost. It becomes more profitable. It is not affected by the "hired man" problem.

One of the vital factors in power farming is Rockwood, The Drive Pulley. On tractors and belt-power farm machines, it delivers the full power of the engine to the driven machine, assuring full speeds and dependability of operation. Rockwood, The Drive Pulley, is built for "brute service." It is the acknowledged standard pulley for farm machinery. See that each new farm power machine you buy is equipped with Rockwood, The Drive Pulley. To all who are interested in power farming, a booklet, "Belt Power on the Farm," will be sent free of charge. Write for it today to Henry Ford's distributors for this district—THE INDIANA TRACTOR CO., Indianapolis, Ind.

Indianapolis.—Women will not be permitted to vote in the primary elections in Indiana May 4, according to a decision reached by the state board of election commissioners after a conference with Gov. James P. Goodrich. Indiana stands tenth among the states of the Union in its number of women voters, according to a table prepared by the Republican national committee. The total for the country is 26,800,000, while Indiana has 847,723. New York leads, with 3,083,273. Other states whose totals exceed that of Indiana are Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Texas.

Goshen.—Threatening to establish a co-operative creamery if their demands are not granted, Elkhart county milk producers, who met in Goshen and formed an association, served notice on the Goshen Milk Condensing company, one of the largest concerns of the kind in the state, that higher prices must be paid for milk. Elkhart county producers assert they are receiving less for 4 per cent milk than farmers of adjacent counties are receiving for 3½ per cent milk.

Richmond.—Members of the executive committee of the Five Years' meeting, the American Friends' board of foreign missions, the home mission board, the Bible school board, the Young Friends' board, the American Friends' service committee and probably other boards of the Five Years' Meeting of Friends in America will meet at Richmond May 16-22 for their annual session.

Shelbyville.—The Shelby county board of commissioners has contracted with the members of the manual training classes of the Shelbyville high school to supply ballot boxes and voting booths to be used in the primary and general elections this year. The boys who are members of the classes will make the boxes and booths as part of their class work.

Indianapolis.—Seventy-six persons lost their lives in Indiana fires last year, according to H. H. Friedley, state fire marshal. There were 5,348 fires in the state in 1919, and they caused a loss of $6,135,526 worth of property and directly imperiled more than $45,000,000 worth of other property nearby. Ninety-seven persons were injured.

Gary.—With nine of the 12 blast furnaces banked until the yardmen's strike is settled, 12,000 men employed in Gary industrial plants are idle. Only 17 of the 340 switchmen of the belt line are at work. The United Enginemen's Association of Chicago sent three organizers to Gary to organize the locomotive engineers and firemen.

Gary.—Old high cost of living was slapped by the Froebel school shoe repair department of the public school system at Gary. The manager of the department recently bought 250 pounds of leather belting at cost from the old Aetna Powder company. The pupils will make half soles for shoes and sell them at ten cents a pair.

Evansville.—Farmers are not profiteers and misleading figures and propaganda are used when it is alleged that they are getting exorbitant prices, says Prof. G. I. Christie of Purdue university, who spoke in Evansville at a meeting of Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky farmers living in a radius of 100 miles of Evansville.

Lafayette.—Charles W. Scott of Warsaw, for the past two years a member of the board of trustees of the Indiana State Soldiers' home, was selected by the other members of the board to succeed Col. Daniel B. Kehler as commandant at the home. Colonel Kehler tendered his resignation.

North Vernon.—The first contingent of feeble-minded patients has been received at the state farm colony at Butlerville, 30 being in the group. They will be employed in clearing the land and will live in farmhouses now on the site, as the state has not started its building program.

Richmond.—The Eastern Hospital for the Insane at Richmond is to have a new two-story industrial building and two colony farms, according to an announcement by Dr. S. E. Smith, general superintendent. Work is to start at once.

Franklin.—Trustees of the town of Bargersville will advertise for bids for the construction of an electric light and power line from that town to Whiteland, bonds being issued for the construction of the line.

Clinton.—Acting favorably on a petition circulated in the county, the Vermillion county commissioners have ordered an election authorizing a county hospital for May 18. The county has no hospital.

Brazil.—About all that was left of Perth, a mining town, after the tornado of 1913 was destroyed by fire a few days ago. The fire, which started in a general store, spread to 11 other buildings.

Fort Wayne.—Three thousand employees of the Pennsylvania railway shops in Fort Wayne, on strike since April 1 to enforce demands for a closed shop, returned to work.

Huntington.—Huntington has a population of 14,000, an increase of 3,728, or 36.8 per cent.

Indianapolis.—Parents can no longer keep their children out of school on the grounds of employing them, according to an interpretation of the compulsory school attendance law issued by the state board of truancy. In the judgment of the board, employment certificates cannot be issued except to children who are being employed for hire. The board held that parents cannot employ their children.

Indianapolis.—Advances of from 25 cents to $1 a ton on different grades of coal were announced by Indianapolis coal dealers.

FEDERAL GRADES AID TO FARMERS

Miller Willing to Pay More for Wheat if It Meets All Requirements.

PREMIUM ON POOR PRODUCT

Demonstrations at State Fairs, Local Schools and Other Places Given for Purpose of Acquainting Farmer With Grades.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The miller buying wheat from a farmer is willing to pay more for it if, among other things, it has a heavy bushel weight, is dry and sound and is free from weed seeds—in other words, if it meets the federal requirements for No. 1 grade, of the proper subclass. The miller knows he can get from such grain more and better flour, with less labor and expense on his part. This is illustrated by results of several hundred tests made by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, in which No. 1 spring wheat (according to federal standards) weighing 58 pounds per bushel, yielded 71.8 per cent of straight flour and 28.7 per cent of bran and middlings. On the other hand, spring wheat grading No. 5, weighing 50 pounds per bushel, yielded 63.8 per cent straight flour and 36.2 per cent bran and middlings.

Penalizing Grower of Good Wheat.

When the country dealer under normal marketing conditions buys the wheat of his section at a flat rate he has in mind the approximate federal grade the average run of local wheat will receive at the market where he sells, and he pays accordingly. But under such circumstances the farmer who raises choice wheat receives the same price as the one who raises poor wheat. The farmer who raises the poorest wheat in the section, therefore, receives more than he should, while the one who raises the best receives less. This putting of a premium on poor wheat tends to discourage the growing of a better grade product.

Grades have long been used in the larger markets. Prior to the fixing of federal grades, however, these local grades often differed in the various markets and their application frequently was based largely on the judgment of the individual inspector at each market. Consequently, it was very difficult for the country dealer to apply grades accurately. He was not sure that the grain he had bought at one grade would be received at that grade by the one to whom he delivered it. In contrast to this, the grades established by the federal government are uniform throughout the country. Furthermore, standardized equipment has been perfected for making many of the tests to determine the grade, so that with the aid of uniform rules for grading, the federal standards can be applied uniformly in all parts of the country.

Acquainting Farmers With Grades.

While the government has no authority under the United States grain standards act to supervise grain grading under federal grades, except in the work of licensed inspectors and in interstate shipments, the government does want to acquaint farmers and dealers generally with the application of the federal standards so that they may benefit more generally thereby. This is one reason why federal grain supervision officials give demonstrations of federal grades at state fairs, local grain-grading schools, and other places, and colleges give grain-grading courses. By these means the farmer learns how to apply the grades to his own wheat. He may not care to supply himself with a set of the equipment to grade his own grain but by learning the essential features of the standards and the grading rules he will be able to know whether the country buyer is correctly grading his grain when he markets it.

Appealing to Inspector.

In addition, if a country dealer buys by grade and his farmer customer thinks he doesn't grade right, they can mail a sample upon which they both agree as being representative of the lot of grain, to a licensed grain inspector for grading. The sample required should be at least two quarts in quantity. About one and one-eighth pints of it is put in a clean, air-tight can which is placed with the rest of the sample in a clean cloth sack. A reasonable fee—usually not over $1—is charged by inspectors for each certificate issued.

Bulletins which explain in detail the methods of taking samples, how to mail them to an inspector for grading, and the grading rules, have been prepared by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture. They will be sent free to any one requesting them.

PARCEL POST USEFUL FOR SHIPPING SIRUP

Two Types of One-Gallon Containers Satisfactory.

Packages Properly Wrapped and Marked, as Required by Postal Regulations, Will Carry Without Danger of Leakage.

Maple, cane and sorghum sirups may be readily shipped by parcel post if properly prepared for shipment, according to investigators in the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, who have made experimental shipments from many parts of the country, over many different mail routes. Of 894 shipments only three showed any material loss because of leakage and this was due to unusually rough handling. The average distance covered by these shipments was greater than sirups are likely to be sent by mail under ordinary conditions.

Two types of one-gallon tin containers were found satisfactory for parcel post shipments. Both types have screw caps and are provided with outer cartons of corrugated paperboard. Snugly fitting pieces of cork in the caps cover the opening in the cans when screwed down tightly. Such packages properly wrapped and securely tied, marked "Fragile," as required by the postal regulations for packages containing liquids, will carry without danger of leakage in the mails. While the one-gallon can is most commonly used, any size up to five gallons may be shipped under the present parcel post weight limit of 70 pounds. Light but substantial wooden crates should be supplied for the larger containers.

Suggestions on obtaining customers and dealing with them by parcel post may be found in Farmers' Bulletin 922, "Parcel Post Business Methods," which also suggests how consumers may get in touch with producers. A copy of this bulletin will be sent free on receipt of a request addressed to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

CHEESE PRODUCED ON FARMS

Practically Ceased in United States, Factory-Made Article Taking Its Place.

In the last half century the production of farm-made cheese in the United States has practically ceased. Factory cheese, which has taken its place, now exceeds 300,000,000 pounds annually, about three times the highest figure ever reached by cheese made on farms.

FERTILE VALLEYS ONCE SEAS

Naturalists of Opinion They Were Laid Bare by Great Convulsions of Nature.

Many of the most fertile valleys and plains in the world appear to be the bottoms of ancient lakes laid dry, an exit having been opened by some convulsion of nature, in some instances by mere gradual operations, for the waters that were previously enclosed by impenetrable barriers.

Most of the great rivers were formerly successions of lakes, like the St. Lawrence river in North America. The level spaces between the Allegheny mountains and other parallel chains appear to have been inland lakes, until the rivers which descend from these heights formed for themselves exists.

The Euxine and Caspian seas, as well as Lake Aral and several others, are the remains of an extensive sea, which covered the great part of the north of Asia, according to the belief of Peter Simon Pallas. It has been conjectured that the opening of the Bosporous was the occasion of the draining of this ocean in the midst of Europe and Asia, the memory of this disruption of the two continents being preserved in the traditions of Greece.

"Arise!" we said in a tone admirably adapted for declamatory purposes, addressing the sluggard, who was still slugging at an unconscionably late hour. "The lark is up to meet the sun. The bee is on the wing. Remember the manner in which the inexperienced schoolboy read aloud the admonition to Lucy: He had been taught that when he encountered two letters of the same kind he should pronounce them 'double-o,' or whatever they might be, instead of 'a,' 'o.' So he sternly recited, not 'Up, up, up, Lucy!' The sun is in the sky,' and so forth. Why do you not double up, and to your tasks away?"

"That is a very good story," replied the sluggard, "but it does not move me. We are told that nature does most of her repair work on us while we are in bed. It is my intention to lie here until she fixes me up so that I feel like going to work."—Kansas City Star.

LESSON FOR APRIL 18

THE VICTORY OF GIDEON'S BAND.

LESSON TEXT—Judges 7.

GOLDEN TEXT—There is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few.—I Sam., 14:6.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL — Judges 6:1-40; 8:1-35.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Gideon and His Three Hundred.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How Gideon Won a Victory.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Victory by God's Help.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—One With God a Majority.

So grievous was Israel's affliction that they hid in dens, caves and strongholds (Judges 6: 2). In their distress they cried unto the Lord, and again he heard them and sent deliverance. The angel of the Lord appeared to Gideon while at the post of duty. God always calls men who are doing something. Gideon's hesitancy when called was not due to unbelief, but to modesty and cautiousness. When once he was convinced of duty he was courageous and enthusiastic.

I. The Opposing Army (v. 1).

Gideon and his army arose early on that eventful day and encamped by the spring of Harod. Over against them was the host of the Midianites in battle array. His army was insignificant in comparison with the Midianites.

II. The Sifting of Gideon's Army (vv. 2-8).

At Gideon's call 32,000 men responded, ready for the struggle. This seemed a small army to go against the Midianite army, 135,000 strong, but God said this was too many lest they be led to boasting and self-confidence. Their real danger was not in their small army, but in their pride. All that were faint-hearted were allowed to go back, leaving only 10,000. There were 22,000 cowards in that group of men, and, worst of all, they were not ashamed to confess it. Still this was too many. When God was through with his sifting process only 300 remained. The 10,000 were brave men, but not of proper quality and fitness. Those who lapped the water showed alertness and watchfulness. This test revealed the quality and fitness of the men whom God would use to win victory.

III. God Gives Encouragement to Gideon (vv. 9-15.)

God bade Gideon go down to the Midianite camp, where he would hear something which would cheer his heart and strengthen his hands. When he came near he heard a man tell a dream, which was that of a barley cake tumbling into the camp and smiting it. He also heard the interpretation given to that dream, which made Gideon to be that cake. This greatly cheered his heart and strengthened him for his work, and caused his heart to burst forth in praise to God. A barley cake is a very insignificant thing, a very cheap affair in itself, but with the hand of God upon it, it would be sufficient to spread consternation upon the Midianites and bring destruction upon their armies.

IV. God Gives Victory to Gideon (vv. 16-23).

His army was very insignificant and his weapons most worthless. His attack was unique. The whole matter was of faith (Heb. 11:32). The ground of his faith was God's word and the token which he had given him. God does not ask us to go forward without good ground upon which to rest our faith. Gideon with his 300 men formed into three companies, each man being provided with a trumpet and with a lamp concealed within a pitcher. Thus armed, they surrounded the camps of the Midianites. They were all instructed to keep their eyes upon their leader and imitate him. We, too, are to keep our eyes on our leader, Christ, and to ever do as he does. At the proper moment they blew their trumpets and broke their pitchers, giving opportunity for their lights to shine out. This awful crash of breaking pitchers, following the sound of trumpets, accompanied by the shout, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon," threw the Midianites into a panic, causing them to fight among themselves. One hundred and twenty thousand were thus slain, leaving but 15,000 of that mighty army (Judges 8:10).

In making the application to ourselves in this age, we can think of the sounding of the trumpets as representing prayer, or calling to God; the torches, as the light of the gospel; the pitchers, our human nature; and the whole, as this treasure in earthen vessels. Only as the pitchers were broken to allow the light to shine forth, and as we sound loud and long the trumpet of prayer can we expect victory.

Doing the Will of God.

The end of life is to do the will of God, whatever that may be; if we could have no ambition past the will of God, our lives would be successful, for the maximum achievement of any man's life, after it is all over, is to have done the will of God.—Professor Drummond.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

BISCUITS, BUNS and ROLLS

From the NEW ROYAL COOK BOOK

BISCUIT! What delight this word suggests. So tender they fairly melt in the mouth, and of such glorious flavor that the appetite is never satisfied. These are the kind of biscuits anyone can make with Royal Baking Powder and these unusual recipes.

Biscuits

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoons shortening
¾ cup milk or half milk and half water

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt, add shortening and rub in very lightly; add liquid slowly; roll or pat on floured board to about one inch in thickness (handle as little as possible); cut with biscuit cutter. Bake in hot oven 15 to 20 minutes.

Royal Cinnamon Buns

2¼ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
2 tablespoons shortening
1 egg
¾ cup water
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoons cinnamon
4 tablespoons seeded raisins

Sift 3 tablespoons of measured sugar with flour, salt and baking powder; rub shortening in lightly; add beaten egg to water and add slowly. Roll out ¼ inch thick on floured board; brush with melted butter, sprinkle with sugar, cinnamon and raisins. Roll as for jelly roll; cut into 1½ inch pieces; place with cut edges up on well-greased pan; sprinkle with a little sugar and cinnamon. Bake in moderate oven 30 to 35 minutes; remove from pan at once.

Parker House Rolls

4 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
2 tablespoons shortening
2½ cups milk

Sift flour, salt and baking powder together. Add melted shortening to milk and add slowly to dry ingredients stirring until smooth. Knead lightly on floured board and roll out ¼ inch thick. Cut with biscuit cutter. Crease each circle with back of knife one side of center. Butter the small section and fold larger part well over the small. Place one inch apart in greased pan. Allow to stand 15 minutes in warm place. Brush each with melted butter and bake in moderate oven 15 to 20 minutes.

The Second Epistle From Easthaven.

My wind is gone
And my body's thin,
But I'm a good, old hoss
For the shape I'm in.
—Bill Hill, his song.

Editor St. Joe News,—

Upon a previous occasion, I wrote a letter to you from Easthaven: but I confess, to my sorrow, that I made no mention of the gentleman whose song I quote above. My oversight is pardonable, however, for at that time, I was not acquainted with Bro. Hill; but now, knowing him as I do—oh! how intimately—not to give him first place, would be an unpardonable sin. He is the whole show, from ticket wagon to trick mule, including the clown and trained monkeys.

Our dreams are often full of strange phantasies, but no dream ever dreamed contains more vagaries than are born in Hill's brain in his waking hours nor fancies more fantastic. I have known him for months, but I am just beginning to get acquainted with him. Do not infer from what I have written that Bill is but an ordinary person. He is far from it (in his mind). He is—so he says in substance—the central figure in the Divine tragedy that occurred on Calvary; or, to employ his own language, he is the "Father, Son and very old Devil." Do not be shocked at this. Remember, it is but the vanting of a disordered brain.

Mr. Hill owns—or says he does—all the court houses, electricity and hospital grave yards. He manages them by means of his "machine men"; but just what his "machine men" are I have never heard him explain. And (would you believe it?), for a person in his position, he is one of the most industrious, but not artistic, swearers you ever heard. I have admonished him on this sinful propensity, and he excuses himself by saying: "I save myself and can do as I d—n please."

His song fits him: he is a little, dried-up old fellow, with a face on him like an animated nut cracker; and when in action (talking, principally), he hops about like an incarnated jumping jack. To appreciate him fully, one must know Bill.

Here is another character worth brief notice, who suffers from a novel, yet serious affliction: "three of his inside organs are potatoes." The reason for this may exist in the fact that he is a vegetarian. I can discern no difference physically between him and ordinary mortals, but he may have "inside" information upon the subject of his own anatomy that I do not possess. Another one claims that Indiana owes him $10,000,000 and finds it cheaper to keep him here than to pay him. 'Tis true, the state has offered him his liberty if he will accept payment at the rate of 50c. per day. He refuses this offer. He says he doesn't want to wait 82,000,000 days to get what's coming to him. Before coming to Easthaven, he busied himself, among other things, with finding the graves of and digging up the remains of men and women who had been murdered and secretly buried and I'll say that he tells some harrowing tales. According to him, the hospital grounds are honeycomed with the bodies of murdered people; but the doctors will not permit him to disinter them.

Fred, you asked me to write a personal letter, saying my friends in St. Joe would be glad to hear from me. I started out to do so; but like the old lady who bought David Copperfield's caul, I "meandered." So here goes.

I am as well situated as a man can be in an institution of this kind. I am on the best ward on the place and have my liberty—that is, I am permitted to be out during the day without a guard. I have gained over twenty pounds, which means that I have a good appetite and sleep well. In fact, I sleep like a kid.

I work, too, belonging to the green house detail. I, who could not be depended upon to distinguish between a dandelion and bull thistle when in St. Joe, am rapidly becoming a florist. I will not try to tell you what I know about floriculture. I am modest, you know—sometimes. In addition to the green house, I work extra in the dining room. I leave the ward about 6 A. M. and am out until about 6:30 P. M., except on Sunday. Do not think I am overworked—you know me too well for that. I have much leisure time and access to the hospital library, a privilege granted to but few patients. You can put one and one together—leisure time and library—and tell how I pass many hours.

When I get out of here and where I shall go, I do not know; but one thing I do know—whenever I go and wherever I go, I shall take with me the same lively and kindly remembrance of St. Joe that I now have; and I hope—I do, indeed, that the good people of your town will ever regard me as I do them. Kit.

P. S.—Fred, I never wrote you a letter that I did not append a post script to it, did I? I will not depart from the rule now. I will add that if ever I come to St. Joe—and I hope to—the first thing I will do will be to tackle and take a fall out of Jim Rhodenbaugh and Elza Kinsey—the long and the short, the lean and the fat—not that I have anything against them, but to show the people of your town that I have not been relegated to the ranks of the "has beens." I will add further that I see by The News that Sylvester Widney has a house to swap for an automobile. I think there is but one thing that "Dick" needs more than a huss wagon—a pair of roller skates.

Regards to all,
D. W. Carson.

Federation Meet.

Saturday evening at the town hall was held a meeting of the farmers of the township to complete there organization in the Federation movement. A good meeting was held and the officers elected to serve until October 1920 were as follows: President, Frank E. Johnson; Vice president, Ern W. Johnson; Secretary, J. R. Shilling and Treasurer, Lankey Morr. The association will meet at least once a month and take care of any business that is of importance to the farmers of the township. The movement is a good one will result in some definite good for the community as they intend to back up all projects of special interest for the betterment of the township and to discourage all things that are of a detriment to the people of the community. H. M. Widney gave a splendid talk giving the origin of the Federation and the results that are possible to be obtained if the farmers will unite on one common ground and stick together. The fighting of legislation that deals directly with the farmer and products of his labor. Three directors will be appointed by the officers elected to assist in the work.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

RUSSIA'S TRIAL OF SOCIALISM

Ultimate Good to the World Looked for From the Practical Test Now Being Made in That Country.

Article XIV.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

The "red flag" remedy has been demanding a trial, a test. The demand has been growing. Before its advocates can be silenced they must be shown. Out of the test of socialism in Russia is bound to come good. Whether the theory is a practical one or not, putting it to the test will answer a question, satisfy a demand, and tend to quiet unrest.

The fair-minded investigator cannot deny that there was justification and reason back of the effort to try the remedy. That the world has been suffering from poverty cannot be denied. I have found few men, even among the conservative, responsible leaders of business and governments in Europe, who did not admit that conditions in the world before the war were not right; that some change in the order of things was inevitable; that the dissatisfied elements in society were coming together and that unless men were given better lives, they were determined to fight. The working man was deteriorating physically under the strain of brutal working conditions which exacted too many units of physical energy for the number of calories of food he was getting. The haemoglobin count, the red corpuscles, were disappearing from the blood of the working people. It was not a theory; one could see it in the faces and movements of the people. Medical men recognized the fact. A walk through the poorer district of any industrial city in Europe furnished plenty of evidence of this alarming condition. Men, women and children were resorting to false stimulants to keep up. Tea, coffee and alcohol were being used in increasing amounts.

Always on Verge of Want.

Men were stretching their arms and yawning. Squalor and filth furnished the homes. Many lived in abject poverty, many more lived on the border line of the garbage alley. Few were able to accumulate even the smallest surplus. They could not by scraping and denial get a week ahead of the game. It had become a hand-to-mouth existence, a weekly, monthly fight to meet the grocery bills, buy stockings, shoes, and the scant amount of clothes to cover their bodies. It was bread and coffee for breakfast, bread with jam and tea for dinner, tea and cheese for supper. Sausage sometimes took turns with cheese. Once a week, the Sunday repast, a great stew, a few vegetables and a bone. In the Latin countries it was the same, except that diluted cheap wine was substituted for tea. The great majority of men found themselves poorer and older at the end of the week than they were at its beginning. Over the workingman's head was suspended night and day by a thin, weak thread, the dreaded sword of poverty. Men feared that the thread might break any minute. It was the thread by which they held the thing called a "job." What did they care about the rights of private property? They didn't have any private property. The socialists had willing listeners when they ranted about communism. It promised to give these people property, to give them a common ownership of everything. It wasn't hard to convince them that this was better than ownership of nothing.

The bolsheviks of Russia are entitled to the presumption of good faith in selecting the Marxian formula. It is only fair to them, and to the remedy, to examine the experiment with a mind free from prejudice. In admitting the good intentions of the bolsheviks I am not conceding that bolshevism is practicable, workable; that it has succeeded or can succeed. For the present I am trying to fairly give the whole story of the effort. It is as foolish to try to answer the bolshevik propaganda by calling the bolsheviks ugly names, as it would be stupid to accept bolshevism because its advocates are sincere.

Need for Calm Consideration.

Russia is the patient. If we are to intelligently judge the treatment called bolshevism, it is necessary to get a complete history of the patient and examine the conditions under which the experiment was tried. Any doctor who is a scientist would follow such a procedure in handling a medical case. If a doctor announced to the scientific world that he had a remedy for cancer, which at the present time is an incurable physical disease, just as poverty is a social one, the scientists would give a hearing to his theory, seek a fair test for it, keep their minds open, and judge the efficacy of the remedy by the results it produced. Communism, as a treatment, a cure for poverty, has never been put to the test on a scale and in circumstances which justify any positive judgment as to whether or not the plan is a practical one. As I have written, the Russian bolsheviks insist that if every one owns everything in common there can be no poverty. They base this statement on their faith that communism will increase production. They claim that competition shackles production. They say that the competitive system takes from the individual the inducement to work—that communism would give him an incentive to work; that it would be a stimulant; that under it men would work better and produce more. They add that the present system is bound to provoke an increasing number of strikes and that strikes stop production, cause waste, increase poverty. There is no doubt about the fact that there could be no poverty in the socialistic state if communism succeeded in stimulating men to work harder, thus greatly increasing production, because there would be more to eat, more to wear, more to use, and as the distribution would be controlled by the state, all of the people would receive an equal share of the great abundance, all would have enough. For the sake of fairness to them, I am conceding that the distribution program would be honestly and justly carried out, but a better distribution, a more equal and just division would mean nothing if the first, the fundamental promise of bolshevism—greater production—is not fulfilled. Any plan which decreases production causes a shortage of the things necessary to life. If the bolsheviks are wrong in their belief that communism will increase production, then bolshevism would make poverty general, universal, and instead of bolshevism curing the cancer on the body of civilization, it would make the entire body of civilization a cancer. If the claims of bolshevism are well founded, sound in common sense, capable of fulfillment, communism would be the greatest blessing ever conferred upon humanity. On the other hand, if the bolsheviks are wrong, and communism took from them the inducement to work, then notwithstanding the good intentions of the bolsheviks, their communism would be the greatest scourge the world has known. This is the simple issue in the case. If bolshevism is the good thing its advocates say it is, it will bring the millennium, and every human being should be in favor of it; but if it is not practical, and will not work out, then it is a danger, the red flag is its proper signal, and the world should avoid the danger signal as an engineer charged with the safety of human life would avoid running by a red light on the track ahead.

Examine Before Condemning.

Going back to the case of our friend, the doctor who honestly and sincerely believes he has a cure for cancer, let us consider what the scientific world would demand before offering a judgment as to the value of his proposed cure. First, they would free their minds of all prejudice. They would be reasonable and patient as they would be thorough in examining the proposed remedy from every possible angle. They would analyze the formula, examine it in the light of experience. Why shouldn't we follow the same sensible plan in considering bolshevism? Won't we get farther if we do? Hasn't such a course an advantage over quarreling about it? Why should some of us accept it without knowing what it is? Why should others condemn it without understanding? And why should both these groups get excited and irritated, call each other names, learn to hate, and add to the world's unrest?

I propose to follow the method of the scientist as nearly as I can in examining the patient, Russia, the world cancer, poverty, and the remedy—bolshevism.

1. A complete family history, so that we may know and understand the constitution of the patient.
2. The physical and mental condition of the patient at the time treatment was begun.
3. The formula—the remedy.
4. The theory of the cure.
5. The methods used in applying the remedy.
6. The history sheets showing the effect of the treatment upon the patient.
7. The condition of the patient after more than two years of bolshevism.

Monarchs Tire of Switzerland.

Former Emperor Charles of Austria and Empress Zita are tired of remaining in Switzerland, according to a telegram from Prague, and have applied to the Czecho-Slovak government for permission to reside in Prague. The request was refused for political reasons.

One reason given for the request is that owing to the low rate of exchange in Switzerland the former royal couple are receiving only one-tenth of their income from Vienna. Empress Zita is reported to have been forced to sell more of her jewels.

An American newspaper is understood to have offered the former emperor $500,000 for his reminiscences, but although financially embarrassed, he refused.

Child Victims of the War.

In Jugo-Slavia there are 500,000 fatherless children of whom 150,000 are absolutely destitute. Among them tuberculosis, eye and skin diseases are rife. Of these children, up to July, fewer than 2,000 had been provided for, largely because of the tremendous difficulties attending the work in an utterly disorganized community. The government at Belgrade and the great American and English relief organizations are now working in thorough harmony in their efforts to carry these children safely through the winter. They can only succeed if there is no slacking of effort on the part of the American and British public.

HOW TO LIVE

Common Sense Comments on Health, Happiness and Longevity

By GEORGE F. BUTLER, A. M., M. D.

Copyright, 1920, by International Press Bureau

FEAR.

The chief fears which lower the vitality and invite disease are the fear of ill health, the fear of misfortune or bereavement and of loss of money or position. But should sickness, bereavement or adversity come to you, face the facts courageously, catching the spirit of the ancient song, "I Will Fear No Evil, for Thou Art With Me." Do not fear anything. Every morning when you awake repeat the words of this song, until the strength of them is felt in your mind and body. "In quietness and in confidence shall be my strength." Begin each day with these promises uttered aloud with confident assurance and again each night as you prepare for sleep and you will be surprised how much easier your days will be and how more restful will be your nights. The habit of serious, resolute, trustful meditation upon these divine assurances, once formed and held, works its own marvels. The verifiable results of such a practice upon health, upon mental adequacy, upon character, delicate and imperceptible though they seem at first, are increasingly registered upon the life within until they utter themselves in an enlarged and well-framed efficiency for all life's tasks. This is what the psalmist said—he was perfectly aware of the fact that life would not be all green pastures and still waters; he would be compelled to walk in and through the valley of many a shadow, but come what might, still he would not fear nor be afraid. The man whose inmost soul is filled with and possessed by such thoughts finds himself strongly fortified against the encroachments of disease.

According to your faith, your openness, your willingness, your capacity, be it unto you. If every one could form the habit of going about with the words "I will be well! I will be well! I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me! I will fear no evil for Thou art with me!" on his lips, in his mind and deeply embedded in his heart, I do not say it would enable him to lie down with rattlesnakes or to drink water full of typhoid germs unharmed, but it would add greatly to his prospects of good health. Pitch your expectation high—look for the best, hope for the best, strive for the best, and according to your faith be it unto you. If you will say these words resolutely and keep on saying them trustfully, hopefully, that very action of your inner life will work wonders. I do not say that no disease can stand before you, for you are not omnipotent, but I do say that you will set in operation one of the great healing forces of the world. Fear of disease and death is normal; but to allow the mind to dwell on these things is to become a hypochondriac. To shrink from pain is as natural as hunger, and as necessary for the preservation of the race; but to be a slave to suffering is to be a nervous wreck. Stop talking about your ills, stop thinking about them, stop pitying yourself, fix your eyes on something high, fine, useful, be unafraid, and say bravely and steadily I will be well! I will! I will! I will fear no evil! You will be helped because then you will be in tune with the infinite—your desires and determination will be linked with the purpose of God for you.

We are put into this world with a clean way-bill to another port than this. Across the ocean of life our way lies straight to the harbor of eternity. We are freighted with a consignment which is bound to be delivered sooner or later at the Master's wharf. Let us be alert, then, to recognize the seriousness of our destinies, and content ourselves no longer with shallow soundings. Look to it that your ship is in good order, then spread the sails, weigh the anchor, and point the prow fearlessly and trustfully for the country that lies on the other side of the restless sea. Sooner or later, the voyage must be made. Let us make it, then, hopefully, courageously, uncomplainingly, with a resolute will at the wheel, and the great God himself to furnish the chart. Then shall we weather the wildest gales, and find entrance at last to the Harbor of Peace. LEARN HOW TO LIVE!

CLEANLINESS

Cleanliness is next to godliness, but it takes many godly people a long time to "get next." All know that emanations are constantly passing from the body, its impurities, its deadly waste matter, which nature has no use for and which she is constantly trying to pass off by the pores of the skin. The average number of these for each square inch of the body is estimated to be two thousand and five hundred, or seven millions in all, making if joined together, a canal 28 miles long, which conducts from the system every twenty-four hours in the state of sensible perspiration, or water called "sweat," or insensible perspiration called "vapor," three pounds and a half from one person in the ordinary occupations of life, and much more in extraordinary callings.

The sensible perspiration from a sleeper during the night is enough to bathe the atmosphere of a whole room; and it is the breathing and rebreathing of an atmosphere thus contaminated which makes the night the time of attack of the great majority of violent human ailments; it is this which fires the train of impending disease and which might have been deferred, if not entirely warded off if the sleepers and the bedchamber had been clean. In addition to the excretion of unclean or poisonous waste matter from the body, there may be deposited on the hands and other portions of the body disease germs which may endanger health. Food is frequently contaminated by disease germs from the unclean hands of people. No one who is sick with an infectious disease or who is just recovering from such a disease should have anything to do with the handling or the preparation of foods. Tainted foods are worse than tainted money. It is necessary to health to keep the skin clean by a daily bath. It is unnecessary to use soap every time save on exposed parts of the body.

Water is even more essential to the inside of a man than to the outside. Water constitutes more than one fourth of the bulk of the body, and all the functions of life are really carried on in a water bath; and, although the sense of thirst may be trusted to call for a glass of water when required, the fluid can be drunk most advantageously for many reasons besides mere satisfying of thirst. Digestion is much facilitated by drinking water; and there is no good reason why you should not drink water with meals as well as between meals. The habit of drinking water in moderate quantities between meals contributes to health, and indicates the fact that those who visit resorts for the purpose of drinking the waters of mineral springs might profit by staying at home and drinking more water. When water is taken into an empty stomach it quickly passes into the circulation to liquify solids, whose excretion from the system is thus facilitated. Very few people think of the necessity of washing the inside as well as the outside of the body, and he who would be perfectly healthy should be as careful about the cleanliness of his stomach and bowels as of his skin. "Clean out, clean up, and keep clean!" It is so easy to obey the laws of health! You should revere your body, revere it in deeds, not sentiment alone. Warm it with good food. Ventilate it with fresh air. Cleanse it with hearty exercise and daily baths. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

Health Notes

Relief from great responsibilities, and contentment with humble clothing, humble fare, humble society, humble aims and ambitions, humble means and humble labors—Oh! how many weary, overloaded, nervous men—how many disappointed hearts—have sighed for such a boon!

Good living must have for its precedent a good appetite, and must be followed by a good digestion; and these can be obtained, in all attainable cases by pure air and exercise.

* * *

Appetite is the most important factor in digestion, and when it is normal, there is a desire for some particular simple food accompanied by a "watering of the mouth."

* * *

Teach yourself that sleep is a duty, that it is not an accident, an incident, or a bit of good fortune; and you will be able to resist the temptation to carry on the business of the day in the hours of the night, hours which are reserved for a very different affair.

Take time to eat. Most people eat too fast, too little attention being given to the enjoyment of the meal hour. Hasty eating is a habit, firmly fixed by long years of practice, to overcome which requires determined and continued effort.

He who would sleep at night must regulate his day, by not undertaking more than he can accomplish without undue stress, and, second, by carrying through what he does undertake without undue solicitude, anxious doubts, and morbid fears.

The maturity of the soul is worth more than the first brilliance of its faculties, or the plenitude of its strength, and the eternal in us can but profit from all the ravages made by time.

* * *

The most serious violation of hygiene in clothing is wearing garments that restrict respiration. Adjust clothing to nature's requirements, and cultivate perfect pores and respiration.

* * *

In all likelihood the man who toils and moils at business, without rest, relaxation and enjoyment, through the best years of life, with the hope of retiring at last and making the evening of life all holiday, all play, will never retire, except into an untimely grave.

* * *

There are too many Esaus who sell their birthright of health for a mess of pottage, and it is difficult to realize how much of the suffering and ill humor of life is due to not having learned how to live simply.

HAD NO USE FOR FAIR SEX

St. Columba, Even in Fanatical Age, Carried His Aversion to Womankind to Excess.

Iona, which is one of the Hebrides group of islands off the coast of Scotland, long ago suffered the distinction of being a land without women.

During the middle ages the island was given to St. Columba, the patron saint of Argyle, by Christian, the king of the northern Scots. The holy man built a chapel with his own hands and established a mission station from which to send out missionaries to the heathen Picts. Then, in order to make sure that his island was a holy place, he decreed that no woman should set foot upon its shores. He carried this prohibition against the weaker sex even to the length of refusing to allow a cow to be kept on the island.

A difficulty arose in the fact that many of the converts, which he made among the heathen had wives and refused to be separated from them. To obviate this difficulty another island a couple of miles away was set apart as a home for the wives of the faithful. On Iona a watch tower was built, from which the island of females was constantly watched to see that no woman left it. Legend says that post of watchman was in great demand among the brothers.

Later the good saint left Iona, and an abbess and nuns moved in.

It is a curious fact that when, many years after St. Columba had gone to his reward, a pilgrimage was made to the island of Iona, about two-thirds of the 4,000 pilgrims who went there were of the sex that does not mind being hated or feared, but cannot stand indifference.—Niksah in Chicago Daily News.

Last year my granddaughter had a scrofulous swelling develop on her neck just below the ear. The doctors ordered her to go to the hospital to have it lanced, but I advised her to take the 'Golden Medical Discovery' instead, and this medicine cured her from within, instead of having to submit to possibly serious results from lancing. Her whole system seemed to be greatly benefited by the 'Golden Medical Discovery;' it did her so much good. We are most enthusiastic in praise of the 'Discovery' and do not hesitate to recommend it at every opportunity."—Mrs. Mary H. Ring, 738 Maple Ave.

Acid Stomach
Makes the Body Sour
Nine Out of Ten People Suffer From It

It sends its harmful acids and gases all over the body, instead of health and strength. Day and night this ceaseless damage goes on. No matter how strong, its victim cannot long withstand the health-destroying effects of an acid stomach.

Good news for millions of sufferers. Chemists have found a sure remedy—one that takes the acid up and carries it out of the body; of course, when the cause is removed, the sufferer gets well.

Bloating, indigestion, sour, acid, gassy stomach miseries all removed. This is proven by over half a million ailing folks who have taken EATONIC with wonderful benefits. It can be obtained from any druggist, who will cheerfully refund its trifling cost if not entirely satisfactory. Everyone should enjoy its benefits. Frequently the first tablet gives relief.

LADY LARKSPUR

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

"A FOREIGN GENTLEMAN."

Synopsis.—Richard Searles, successful American playwright, confides to his friend, Bob Singleton, the fact that, inspired by the genius of a young actress whom he had seen in London, he has written a play, "Lady Larkspur," solely with the thought that she should interpret the leading character. This girl, Violet Dewing, has disappeared and Searles refuses to allow the play to be produced with anyone else in the part. Singleton has just returned (invalided) from France, where he had been serving in the aviation corps. His uncle, Raymond Bashford, a wealthy man, had contracted a marriage a short time before his death, while on a visit to Japan. He left Singleton a comparatively small amount of money and the privilege of residence in the "garage" of his summer home, Barton-on-the-Sound, Connecticut. Mrs. Bashford is believed to be traveling in the Orient

"I'll tell you all I know. Just as I was sailing from France I got a letter from Uncle Bash stating in a most businesslike fashion that he was about to be married to a lady he had met on the trip out to Japan. The dire event was to occur at the American embassy the following day. From which I judged that my presence at the ceremony was neither expected nor desired. Oddly enough, months afterward, I picked up an English paper in a French inn that contained an announcement of the marriage in the usual advertisement form. The lady was succinctly described as Mrs. Alice Wellington Cornford, widow of the late Archibald Reynolds Cornford, Pepperharrow road, Hants. All Torrence knows of the subsequent proceedings is what he got in official reports of Uncle Bash's death from the consul-general at Tokyo. Whether the widow expects to come to America ultimately or will keep moving through the Orient marrying husbands and burying them is a dark mystery. If she should turn up, the house at Barton is hers, of course, but with her roving disposition I fancy my aunt Alice wouldn't like the place. The Jap stuff is worth a bit of money, and if the lady is keen for such things and not a mere adventuress she may take it into her head one of these days to come over and inspect the loot."

"I can see the vampire," said Searles musingly, "landing at the Grand Central with enough hand-luggage to fill a freight-car; a big, raw-boned creature, with a horse face and a horrible mess as to clothes. You will be there to meet her, deferential, anxious to please. You will pilot her up to the coast of Barton, tip the servants heavily to keep them from murdering her, and twiddle your thumbs in your garage as you await her further pleasure. By the way, are those ancient freaks still on the place—those broken-down hotel employees who were your uncle's sole experiment in philanthropy?"

"Torrence assures me they are all very much there."

Searles yielded himself to laughter. "An Englishwoman with lofty ideas of domestic service would certainly enjoy a romp with that crew."

"Oh, they are in the same class with me," I explained. "The place can't be sold till I die, and while I live they're to be harbored—about thirty of them—clothed and victualed."

"I think there's a farce in the idea, and I may try it one of these days," he said, scribbling in his note-book. "A refuge for broken-down chambermaids, venerable bell-hops grown gray in the service, and the head waiter who amassed a fortune in tips and then toyed with the market once too often and lost his ill-gotten gains. What was the head waiter's name who presided with such stateliness in the dining-room of the Tyringham?"

"That's Antoine, who married the assistant housekeeper at the Tyringham. He's the butler and has charge of the place. When I get settled I'll ask you up and you can study the bunch at leisure."

"Splendid! I'll be up in a couple of weeks. I'm going to Ohio tomorrow for a family reunion and a look at the loved spots my infancy knew."

"You're lucky to have home-folks even in Ohio," I remarked enviously.

"Well, there's always your distant auntie cruising the seven seas in pursuit of husbands. Nobody with an aunt to his credit can pretend to be alone in the world. Aunts must rank just a little below mothers in the heavenly kingdom. When I was a boy out in Ohio there were two great occasions every year in my life—one when I went to visit a grand old aunt I had in the country, the other when she visited us, arriving with a wagonload of jam, jelly, salt-rising bread, pound-cake, and other unpurchasable manna."

"Stop! or I'll call the food censor," I pleaded, picking up my hat. "Send me your copy of 'Lady Geranium,' and I'll tell you whether it's a classic or not."

"'Lady Larkspur,'" he corrected with a shudder. "You shall have it by trusted messenger tomorrow."

I wired Antoine that I would reach Barton-on-the-Sound the following day. This was September, 1917.

As the train rolled along the familiar shore toward Barton I shook off the depression occasioned by my enforced retirement from the great struggle overseas. I had done under the French flag all that it was possible for me to do; and there was some consolation in the fact that by reason of my two years on the battle-line I was just so much ahead of the friends I met in New York who were answering the call to the colors and had their experience of war before them. The tranquil life that had been recommended by the doctors was not only possible at Barton, but it was the only life that could be lived there. My leisure I meant to employ in beginning a novel that had been teasing me ever since I sailed for home.

Of my uncle Bash I had only the happiest and most grateful memories. Quite naturally it had occurred to me at times, and my friends had encouraged the idea, that my uncle would die some day and leave me his money. There was no particular reason why he should do so, as he had never manifested any unusual affection for me and I had certainly never done anything for him.

Antoine was at the Barton station with the touring-car Uncle Bash had bought to establish communication with the village. Flynn, the big Irishman who had been the doorman at the "Forget it, Antoine!"

Tyringham for years and retired because of rheumatism acquired from long exposure to the elements at the hostelry's portals, was at the wheel.

Antoine greeted me with that air of lofty condescension tempered with a sincere kindliness that had made him a prince among head-waiters. As I shook hands with him his lips quivered and tears came to his eyes.

I bade Antoine join me in the back seat that he might the more easily bring me up to date as to affairs on the estate.

"It must be a little slow up here after the years you lived in town," I suggested, "but of course you're all old friends."

"Well, yes; all friends," he acquiesced, but with so little enthusiasm that I looked at him quickly. He pretended to be absorbed in the flying landscape at the moment. Flynn, I noticed, was giving ear to our conversation from the wheel.

"It was sad, very sad, Mr. Bashford passing away so far from home, sir. It was a great shock. And he had looked forward for years to a quiet life abroad."

Antoine's speech was that of a well-trained English upper servant, and I imagined that in his youth he had taken some English butler as his model. He used to pretend that he knew French very imperfectly, and I was surprised when he now addressed me quite fluently in that language.

"You have been with the armies of dear France," he remarked. "The war is very dreadful. My parents were of Verdun; it grieves me to know of the suffering in the land of my people."

As I replied sympathetically in French I saw Flynn straighten himself at the wheel with an impatient fling of his head. Antoine indicated him with a contemptuous nod: "Married Elsie, the German woman who worked in the linen-room at the Tyringham! This had caused some trouble, and there is a pantry girl, Gretchen, who was ill for a long time before the master left, and he sent her here for the country air. She is a little devil with her dear Fatherland."

I laughed at the old fellow's gravity and earnestness. That the war should be making itself felt on the quiet acres at Barton-on-the-Sound was absurd.

I was pondering the recrudescence of race hatreds due to the upheaval in Europe when he startled me by a statement uttered close to my ear: "There have been inquiries for the widow; these have caused me much anxiety. It seems that there are persons anxious to see her. There have been inquiries, one—two—three times."

"Probably some of her American friends anxious to pay their respects, or some of the neighbors making calls of courtesy," I suggested.

"A foreign gentleman who acts very queerly," Antoine persisted.

My uncle's widow was a vague, unknown being whom I had never expected to cross my horizons. If she meditated a descent upon Barton-on-the-Sound, the trust company would certainly have had some hint of her approach, but Torrence clearly had no tidings of her beyond her last communication from Bangkok. Still, it was wholly possible that a globe-trotting widow would have friends in many parts of the world, and I could see nothing disturbing in the fact that inquiries had been made for her. I said as much. Antoine's answer was another shrug and a jerk of his head toward Flynn, as though even the employment of an alien tongue might not conceal our conversation from the big Irishman. When we had reached the farm and were running through the grounds Antoine spoke again.

"We thought we would put you up at the house, Mr. Singleton, and not in the garage," he said inquiringly.

"Not at all, Antoine," I answered quickly. "We must stick close to the law in such matters."

"Very good, sir. Stop at the garage, Flynn."

To the casual observer the garage was a charming two-story house following the general lines of the plaster and timber residence, from which it was separated by a strip of woodland and a formal garden. The garage and quarters for the chauffeur were at one end and at the other were a down-stairs living-room, with a broad fireplace, and three chambers above so planned as to afford a charming view of the Sound, whose shore curved in deeply at this point. On the chauffeur's side was a small kitchen from which I had been served with my meals when I lodged there.

"The house is in order. You will have your meals at the residence, I suppose, sir," Antoine suggested.

I debated this a moment and when he hinted that dinner could be more conveniently served there than in my own quarters, I said that for the present the Flynns might give me breakfast and luncheon at the garage, but that I would dine at the house.

It was five o'clock when I reached the garage, and Antoine left me after opening my bags, with the suggestion that I could summon Zimmerman, a former valet of the Tyringham, for any service I might require. I knew Zimmerman very well and said I would call him when occasion required.

"He is of that race," said Antoine plaintively in the French which now seemed to come readily enough to his lips.

"Race? Botheration! You musn't trouble yourself about race questions out here, Antoine. Zimmerman is a good old chap, who's probably forgotten the very name of the German town he was born in."

"They do not forget," Antoine replied with emphasis. "There has been much discussion—much——"

"Forget it, Antoine! I supposed you were all living here like a happy family. Please tell them at the residence that I'll dine at seven."

"Very good, sir," he said in his pompous manner, but I saw that he was miffed by my indifference.

Flynn, having disposed of the car, came to ask if there was anything he could do for me.

"Tony's against the wife and me," he said mournfully. "It's the war, sorr, and she and me that lile, sorr, the American flag floats from the garage every day. And if a heart can be lile, Elsie's as true to America as though she was born in Boston statehouse."

"I believe you, Flynn," I said, touched by his nervousness. "Don't you worry about Antoine and the rest of them; they're just a little nervous; I'll see what I can do to straighten things out."

A coming widow casts her shadow before.

Sophistication.

Bernice had some of her little friends in for luncheon the other day and among other things she had olives. She offered them to Effie, who said she did not like them, whereupon Bernice replied in a superior fashion: "Oh, I didn't like 'em myself at first, but you must accumulate a taste for them."

ROAD BUILDING

FAVOR THROUGH MAIN ROADS

Motortrucks Expected to Play Prominent Part in Transportation Facilities.

England is now debating roads for motor transportation, for, although she is amply equipped with railroads, it is believed that hereafter motor-trucks will play a prominent part in the business of the country. Systems of special highways are being mapped out, and the plans proposed include an apparently excellent feature. To avoid the delays and congestion incident on traversing towns, it is suggested that the main road be located beyond the borders of the town, and this would certainly expedite traffic, as it would not be necessary for every vehicle using the route to painfully thread its way through every village on the way. Of course this would not appeal to the local tradesman who hopes to catch an occasional penny from the passing cars, nor to the local magistrate who inflates his own income, and the funds of his town, by his interpretation of the law; but this is a matter of national interest and not to be restricted by petty local considerations.—Scientific American.

IMPROVING KING ROAD DRAG

Found Too Weak for Work in Pennsylvania and Strengthened by Wrought Iron Strips.

The old form of King road drag was merely two sides of a split log, fastened so that the sharp sides of the split surface faced forward, the straight surface extending vertically; the two parts were spaced about two feet apart and connected by struts to hold them parallel; the outfit was dragged by a chain, fastened to the front half-log, and the angle at which the contrivance was dragged over the surface was controlled by the manner in which the team was hitched to the chain, the chain itself being fastened permanently at both ends to two staples in the front log, which altered the angle at which the team was hitched, writes L. Ruppin of Pennsylvania in Rural New Yorker.

"We found the original form too weak for our road work here, so we devised certain improvements, which are shown in the sketch, the most important of which was that we shod the front log with a strip two inches wide, one-half inch thick, of wrought iron, said strip being placed at the lower edge with the two-inch width extending vertically along the front log."

SAVE PERISHABLE PRODUCTS

Rural Motor Transportation Affords Opportunity to Get Crops to Market Quickly.

With the advent and development of rural motor transportation comes direct encouragement to raise better and bigger crops because of the better and broader market thus afforded. In the production of marketable produce there comes an opportunity for the saving of perishable products by quick deliveries, and for higher prices because of the excellent condition in which these commodities can be delivered.

PROPER CARE FOR ROADSIDE

Means Substantial Addition to Value of Adjoining Property and Aids Appearance.

Proper attention to the roadside means a definite increase in the pleasure of traveling over it, a positive preservation of the road itself and a substantial addition to the value of adjoining property. No matter how smooth and well constructed the traveled road may be, if the roadside is not properly cared for, the highway as a whole will not give a good impression. Macadam or gravel roads particularly need the protecting shade of trees.

Add to Social Advantages.

Good roads add to social advantages. They strengthen the country church, tend toward better living, bring a good class of people into a community, and help to hold a bigger share of the best boys and girls on the farm.

Cost of Good Road.

It has been found that it costs about $2,500 a mile to build a really first-class road, but when it is properly constructed it is as permanent as a railway.

Suffered for Years
Miserable From Kidney Trouble Doan's Made Mr. Barnett Strong and Well.

"I suffered untold agony with my kidneys for years," says John Barnett, 30 Virginia Place, Buffalo, N. Y. "Sometimes I felt that I would burn up with fever, but every now and then would have a severe chill. Often my clothes were wringing wet with perspiration. The kidney secretions were unnatural in color and odor and burned terribly. At night my shoes were so tight on my feet that I could hardly get them off and my hands swelled so I couldn't hold a tea-cup. My back! Oh, how it ached! I walked with two canes and was all bent over like an aged man. When the terrible pains shot through my kidneys my knees would give way, and many times I had to be lifted to my feet by people on the street. I didn't care whether I lived or died I was so miserable. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me of all kidney trouble. Doan's made me strong and well."

Failed To Show Up

On March 8, 1920, a letter was received from the Manager of the St Joe Telephone Company, enclosing a petition addressed to him, signed by C. E. Fry and about sixty other subscribers, protesting against an increase of rates recently authorized by the Commission.

The matter was set for hearing on April 12, 1920 at 1:30 P. M. at Indianapolis, as suggested by petitioners. On the day of the hearing, the Manager of the telephone company appeared in person, but no one appeared on behalf of the petitioners.

The Commission being advised in the premises, finds that this cause should be dismissed and closed of record.

It is therefore ordered by the Public Service Commission of Indiana, that this petition be, and it is, dismissed and closed of record without prejudice.

MonteL.Green

Seeks Nomination of County Treasurer

Keyser township presents as a candidate for one of the important county offices the name of Monte L. Green, President of the Garrett Savings Loan and Trust Co. Mr. Green for a number of years was the active Vice President of the Auburn Savings Loan and Trust Co. He is asking for the nomination subject to the primaries to be held May 4th. Mr. Green is a certified accountant, an expert book keeper and a member of the DeKalb County Bar. During the busy days of the McIntyre plants at Auburn he was the General Supt. was President of the DeKalb County business Men's Association and an Ex-president of the Auburn Commercial Club and has such experience as not only renders him a man well prepared for the responsibilities of the office but it is a privilege to secure men of his fitness in public office.

Mr. Green's parents were born in Indiana and his father a veteran of the Civil War. He had two sons to enlist in the World War, both earning commissions. He married the daughter of the late Jack Ralston of Auburn and his wife is the Democrat Woman County Chairman. Through Mr. Green's financial interests he is a large tax payer in addition to real estate which he owns in his own name, and would thus have the interests of the county at heart.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

H. H. Squires of Auburn, the republican candidate for sheriff subject to the primaries to be held May 4, has been a resident of DeKalb county all his life. He was born on a farm in Jackson township, and is nearly forty years of age. He is a son of Dr. J. W. Squires of Fort Wayne. Ever since he was nineteen years of age he has been a taxpayer in DeKalb county. He has been actively engaged in farming, and only last fall he sold out his farm and moved to Auburn and then it was that he announced his candidacy for county sheriff.

During the Spanish-American war he served as a member of Co. G. 160th Indiana Regt. in Cuba. With a record as a taxpayer and a life long resident of the county, he asks the support of the republicans at the primary.

Mr. Squires lived east of Spencerville on the Handy farm and before moving to Auburn lived on the J. W. Sherer farm, one mile west of Fairview.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The Ford Sedan, with electric starting and lighting system, demountable rims with 3½-inch tires all around, is the ideal family car because of its general utility and refined and comfortable equipment. Finely upholstered. Plate glass windows. An open car in the spring, summer, and early fall. A closed car in inclement weather and winter. Rain-proof, dust-proof. In the city or the country, a family car. The low cost of operation and maintenance is not the least of its charms. Won't you come in and look it over?

Let these great mills feed your live stock

In determining a feed for your horses and cows or hogs one of the most important points is to secure a feed which meets the requirements of these different animals. If you do not exercise care in choosing feeds you will turn a profit into a loss, even though you have good stock and good quarters. Badger Monopoly Feed is a carbohydrate stock feed. It is milled by an individual patented process from scoured whole corn, oats and barley. There are no other ingredients in Badger Monopoly Feed, and in it the good qualities of corn, oats and barley are made more available to the animal by our special milling process. Badger Monopoly Feed is relished by horses largely on account of its palatable variety. It produces real energy, and being bulky insures freedom from colic and many other horse troubles. When Badger Monopoly Feed is fed to cows it constitutes an ideal carbohydrate portion of the cow's ration because its bulkiness and natural sweetness make it a desired, satisfying ration for the cow. Badger Monopoly Feed is also used with high protein concentrates, such as Krause Dairy Feed or Badger Sweet Cud, both of which are 24% protein. It will prove particularly economical for mixing with tankage for hogs or feed without additions to brood sows. One sack of Badger Monopoly Feed will convince you that you are losing money to be without it.

Eight pupils from the Wise School, just east of town, took the Allen county 8th., grade examination at Harlan, Saturday. They were Miss Beatrice Wasson, Mary Smith, Nellie Beery, Florence Krick, Mary Nieuwlanet, Paul Dean and Robert Ward.

The Spencer Township Sunday School Convention will be held at the M. E. Church at this place on Monday, April 26, in the afternoon and evening. The reason for changing the time from Sunday to Monday was—the committee in charge wished to have with them E. T. Albertson, the general secretary. Melvin Howey, chairman, and E. W. Tustison, Secretary, of the convention.

A grand display of High School work was held on Friday evening at the Community Hall, consisting of Charcoal drawings, paintings, sewing, crochet work, tatting, mechanical drawing and Manual Training Work. The refreshments and Manual Training work netted the school the sum of $207. Prof. Nelson and Miss Reed had charge.

Rev. Albright, of Washington, Ind., the new Methodist minister, will arrive here this year. Rev. Wright, the retiring pastor was appointed pastor of the Parker Church, three miles north of Fort Wayne, and left on Sunday morning to deliver his first sermon. Rev. Charles Hollopeter had charge of the morning services at the M. E. Church.

The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered next Sunday night, April 25, by Rev. T. A. Manley, of the Coburntown Church, at the Spencerville Lutheran Church. The M. E. Church will furnish the music. The Senior Class play will be given next Saturday night at the Lutheran Church, and the Commencement on Friday evening, April 30. The address will be given by Rev. Linstrom. The class consists of three boys and eight girls, namely: Lucile and Alien Rhodes, Mary Tyndall, Lois Smith, Bernice Hart, Minnie Walker, Margaret Lake, Gaylon Markle, Vernie Reed, Henry Beams and George Doll.

For Sheriff on the Republican Ticket as a Farmer.

To my friends, the voters of DeKalb County:—

I desire to direct your attention to my candidacy for the nomination for Sheriff on the Republican ticket, at the coming primaries.

I was born in DeKalb County where I have resided all my life. I have been a farmer my whole life time, and now reside on my own farm in Wilmington Township, where I have resided the past six years.

I have never asked for a public office before, and can only assure you that if nominated, I will try every honorable effort to be elected and if elected sheriff I will perform my duties as such officer to the best of my ability.

Judging from my past success as a farmer and stock-raiser, I have some basis for assuring you that if elected, Sheriff I will perform my official duties with no less efficiency; and if elected will give to DeKalb County the best possible services.

I court your closest investigation for I believe you will learn from my past life that I am at least worthy of your careful consideration. I have always voted the Republican ticket.

Yours very truly,
Henry W. Emme,
Butler, Indiana, R. F. D. 5.

Just Where and How Is the Money to be Spent?

A businesslike Answer to a businesslike Question

THIRTY denominations cooperating in the Interchurch World Movement have budgeted their needs. No business could have done it more scientifically.

They have united to prevent the possibility of duplication or waste. At least a million dollars will be saved by the fact that thirty individual campaigns are joined in one united effort.

Each denomination has arranged its budget under six main heads:

1 FOR THE CHURCH'S WORK AT HOME. A score of items come under this head. Consider only one. Five and a half million people in the United States cannot even read and write the English language. Who is to carry forward this vast work of Americanization if the church does not?

2 FOR HOSPITALS AND HOMES. Every year thousands of men and women seriously ill are turned away from Church hospitals because of lack of room. The children's homes are compelled to turn away more children than they can receive.

3 FOR HIGHER EDUCATION. Of the 450,000 American students in institutions of higher grade, one-half are in institutions founded and supported by the Churches. Many of these institutions have had no great endowment campaign, but their needs are just as pressing as the needs of larger schools; and you have only to read their list of alumni and alumnae to measure the value of their contribution to America.

4 FOR RELIGIOUS TRAINING. At least 12,000,000 children and young people under 25 years of age are entering American life without any religious training at all. Remembering the faith of Washington and Lincoln, do you think that America will continue to produce Washingtons and Lincolns if faith dies out of the hearts of its youth?

5 FOR THE CHURCH'S WORK ABROAD. Influence came first from the Orient thirty years ago; nearly all plagues are Oriental plagues. So long as China has only one physician to every 400,000 people the Orient will continue to be a menace. So long as one-third of the babies of India die before their second year our own babies are not safe. A Christian doctor or teacher sent abroad is working for America as truly as though he worked at home.

6 PREACHERS' SALARIES. The preacher is called the "forgotten man," and well he may be. Eight out of ten preachers are paid less than $20 a week!

Each denomination has its own detailed budget, and will administer its own funds. Your pastor has copies of the budget; examine them for yourself. In the week of April 25th-May 2nd you will be given your opportunity to help. You can do it with the full satisfaction of knowing that every dollar of your gift has its post assigned to it in advance.

Every dollar for better America and a better world. When your church calls on you give—and give with your heart as well as your pocket-book.

"SLANG" ROOT OF LANGUAGE

Idiom of Today In Correct Usage Tomorrow, Declares University Professor of English.

That the slang and idioms of today will be correct English tomorrow is the opinion of Prof. H. Glicksman of the English department, University of Wisconsin.

"Our language is made up of what was once slang, idiom, colloquialism, and jargon," he said lately, and warned that the most deplorable feature about slang was its tendency to produce mental slovenliness.

Professor Glicksman then referred to the word "mob" as slang of 200 years ago and as such denounced in the Spectator by Addison.

"It is an abbreviation of the word 'mobile.' Even so the word 'pep' is vital and virile and will survive with the word 'snappy.' But to gain recognition slang must be free from vulgarity and cheapness," said Professor Glicksman.

"The term 'How do you get that way?' is condemned because it is meaningless, but the term 'he has a pull' is approved as it is the opposite of 'push,' a word that has forged ahead through its own strength."—Outlook.

LITTLE CHANGE IN PHYSIQUE

Report That Average Stature of American Men Was Affected by War Declared Untrue.

The wholesale clothing manufacturers assert that there has not been any change in the size of their garments since the war. They are manufacturing more garments, but the proportion of larger sizes is no greater now than it was three years ago. In short, their size patterns have not changed. Yet changes would be necessary if the stature of American men had been affected in any appreciable way by the year and a half or two years of military training.

Manufacturers of ready-to-wear shirts and undergarments agree with the clothing manufacturers that there has been no change in their size patterns despite the reports of numerous individuals who take "a size larger" today than they did before the war. As one manufacturer put it, the proportion of soldiers who need larger sizes in shirts or suits today than they did two years ago is so small that it has no effect on wholesalers. Salesmen naturally remember certain individual cases of increased chest development, but, taking the country by and large, there has been no appreciable change in the physique of the male portion of the population, at least as far as their clothing is concerned.

Hoosier State Happenings

Washington.—Washington has a population of 8,705, an increase of 801, or 10.9 per cent over 1910.

Elkhart.—The Indiana Horseshoers' Protective association closed its annual meeting at Elkhart after selecting Fort Wayne as the meeting place next April.

Anderson.—The funeral of Austin Retherford of Anderson, Madison county state senator, attorney, banker and manufacturer, who died of apoplexy at Hot Springs, was held at the family home in Anderson.

Nashville.—The largest poplar tree in Brown county has been cut and hauled to a sawmill. The tree was on a farm four miles south of Nashville. It required five log wagons to take the logs to Helmsburg. The tree contained 3,800 feet of lumber.

Indianapolis.—One of the newest features to be added to the program for the annual Indiana state fair at Indianapolis next September will be a "better baby" contest, according to Charles F. Kennedy, secretary of the state board of agriculture.

Lafayette.—The board of trustees of Purdue university decided at a meeting to halt temporarily the entire program of building improvement and betterment at the institution and to devote the money thus gained to the increase of faculty salaries.

Indianapolis.—Governor Goodrich has appointed William H. Thompson, Republican, and W. H. Spencer, Democrat, as members of the 1920 state board of election commissioners. The appointments were made on the recommendation of the Republican and Democratic state central committees.

Anderson.—Potatoes are retailing at $1.35 a peck, the highest price ever known in Anderson, and dealers say that families are not buying. The grocers assert they are selling below cost, some saying they paid $11 a two-bushel bag, and that, with shrinkage, they have no margin left on potatoes at $5.40 a bushel.

Lafayette.—Lack of labor on farms in Indiana is attributed by the Purdue university agricultural extension department to high wages paid in cities, it being asserted that residents of the United States are showing that they demand automobiles, musical instruments, jewelry, fine clothing and other manufactured articles more than they wish food.

Indianapolis.—Members of the Housewives' league of Marion county pledged themselves to abstain from the use of potatoes for two weeks and to appeal to all consumers in the United States to do likewise, in a resolution passed at the monthly meeting. The resolution stated that the price of potatoes has become almost prohibitive to the average household, due largely to manipulation.

Shoals.—Fruit growers in this vicinity say thy peach crop has been killed by the continued cold weather. Apples seem to be standing the cold well and other fruit, it is said, will not be severely injured. In some parts of the county live stock is being turned out to shift for itself as feed is too high to buy. As a result much stock is reported dying. Pastures are too short to sustain animal life.

Indianapolis.—Recent reports that iron prospecting may be resumed in Greene county have aroused much interest in the state. According to reports on file in the division of geology of the state conservation department, the iron ore deposits of Greene county rank second in the state in extent and volume. Martin county has the greatest amount but its deposits are not as accessible as those of Greene county.

Greensburg.—John W. Craig, judge of the Decatur circuit court, in an opinion announced at Greensburg, held unconstitutional the law passed by the last legislature for the relief of road and bridge contractors. The ruling was on a petition of the Davis Construction company for relief from contracts for the construction of the Zurbrugg and Schulz roads. The case was sent from Johnson county on a change of venue.

East Chicago.—The Inland Steel company at East Chicago has started its home building project, the first unit of which will consist of 200 houses for employees, by obtaining vacation of all city streets which already have been laid out in the tract where the new houses will be erected. This is being done in order that the streets in the subdivision may be laid out in curves and circles, to allow for parks. The houses will be built double, each two stories in height, and with the interior arrangement of six rooms and bath the same in each house. Sales will be made to the employees of the company at about $3,000, on time.

Greensburg.—A pair of six-year-old mules sold at public sale near Milroy for $702.50.

Connersville.—The Connersville Canning company has been organized with a capital stock of $150,000.

Washington, D. C.—Census figures for 1920 include: Lebanon, 6,257, an increase of 783, or 14.3 per cent, and Tipton, 4,507, an increase of 432, or 10.6 per cent.

Indianapolis. — The Farmers and Truck Growers' Terminal Market company of Indianapolis filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The capital of the company is $1,500,000.

Indianapolis.—Church real estate which is being rented is not subject to exemption from taxation, Ele Stansbury, attorney general, held in an opinion submitted to the state board of tax commissioners.

Shelbyville.—Rev. E. H. Rankin of Aurora was elected moderator of the Whitewater presbytery for the coming year at the closing session of the 1920 meeting. The presbytery decided to hold its 1921 meeting at Lawrenceburg.

South Bend.—Notre Dame university students who neglect their studies an dattend dances in public halls in South Bend cannot "get by" at the university, as six young men learned when the faculty announced their suspension for 35 days.

Indianapolis. — Women cannot be delegates to state conventions of the political parties and cannot be candidates for county offices, according to interpretations of the election laws promulgated by the state board of election commissioners.

Indianapolis. — A salary schedule allowing a minimum salary of $1,200 and a maximum of $1,800 for grade school teachers and a minimum of 1,500 an dn maximum of $2,800 for high school teachers was adopted by the Indianapolis board of school commissioners.

Bedford.—Failure to reach a settlement in the strike of diamond sawyers, planesmen and stonecutters who walked out ten days ago, resulted in the closing of all stone mills in this district. The mills are closed for an indefinite period, it is said. Only a few gang saws had been in operation since the strike. The stone workers are demanding an increase in wages.

Evansville.—Evansville housewives opened a war on the high price of potatoes, following the action of members of the stationary engineers, who decided that they would not buy potatoes until the price fell to 75 cents a peck. The Home Economics club at its meeting passed resolutions to put a boycott on potatoes until the price gets sufficiently low that people can afford to buy them.

Shelbyville. — Eighteen minutes elapsed from the time attorneys started impaneling a jury until all evidence had been submitted, the jury instructed, and a verdict returned in the Shelby circuit court here one day recently. The action was in a trial of a complaint on an account. The jury found for the plaintiffs in the sum of $350. They asked payment of $375. The case was venued from Rush county.

Newcastle.—A movement was started among the farmers of Henry county to form a wool pool, the year's clip to be sold to one firm or person. It is estimated that the clip will be 80,000 pounds. Farmers say they have not received a fair price in former years. The plan is to hold it until a satisfactory price is obtained. Negotiations will be opened with wool buyers and offers will be received on the total clip.

Indianapolis. — Vice President Thomas R. Marshall will be the temporary chairman of the Democratic state convention in Indianapolis May 18-19, and will deliver the keynote address, acording to an announcement made following a meeting of a subcommittee of the state central committee. Former Gov. S. M. Ralston will be the permanent chairman and Claude G. Bowers, editor of the Fort Wayne Journal Gazette, will be the permanent secretary.

Indianapolis.—Conditions are favorable for nearly a maximum yield of cherries, peaches and apples in Indiana this year, according to reports received from all over the state by the entomology division of the state conservation commission. The division urges general spraying to kill insect pests which might reduce the yield. Green plant lice, which last spring attacked apple trees, likely will not bother the apples so much this year, said Frank N. Wallace, state entomologist. If they appear they should be sprayed with nicotine sulphate, Mr. Wallace said.

Hartford City.—The Hartford City school board has granted increases in teachers' salaries larger than those recommended by L. N. Hines, state superintendent of public instruction. Class B teachers will receive $5 a day; Class C, $5.50, and Class D, $6. The increases are approximately 50 per cent. The high school teachers will receive increases of 30 to 40 per cent and will receive from $5.60 to $9 p day.

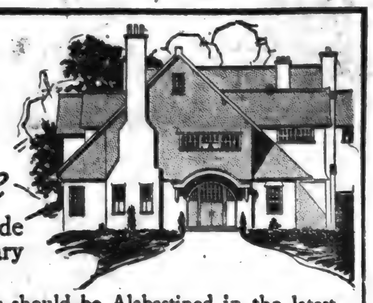
Chinese in Java.

The standard of living is probably higher in Java than any other Chinese community in the world. The houses are clean and well furnished, the people dress in European clothing, and every one has a great deal to say about dirt and sanitation. There are Chinese families in Java which have been there for five centuries, but the great majority of the 300,000 who live on the island have come there or are descended from those who came there in the last fifty years.

Character Revelation.

Not merely speeches prepared, orations delivered, sermons preached, but what a man says and how he says it to his neighbor, friend, to his acquaintance or customer, to his father or mother, his wife or child across the breakfast table; this is what counts, for it reveals him off his guard and taken unawares, not as he would wish to be, not even as he would wish to be thought to be, but as he actually is, and it marks him with an indelible mark.—Exchange.

Your New Home



should be made artistic, sanitary and livable.

These walls should be Alabastined in the latest, up-to-the-minute nature color tints. Each room should reflect your own individuality and the treatment throughout be a complete perfect harmony in colors.

The walls of the old home, whether mansion or cottage, can be made just as attractive, just as sanitary, through the intelligent use of

Alabastine

Instead of kalsomine or wallpaper

How much better, when you have a new home, to start right than to have to correct errors afterward from former treatment with other materials, when you come to the use of Alabastine, as does nearly every one sooner or later.

Once your walls are Alabastined you can use any material over it should you desire, but having used Alabastine you will have no desire for any other treatment.

Alabastine is so easy to mix and apply — so lasting in its results — so absolutely sanitary — and so generally recognised as the proper decorative material in a class by itself that it is becoming difficult to manufacture fast enough to supply the demand.

Alabastine is a dry powder, put up in five-pound packages, white and beautiful tints, ready to mix and use by the addition of cold water, and with full directions on each package. Every package of genuine Alabastine has cross and circle printed in red.

Harvest 20 to 45 Bushel to Acre Wheat in WESTERN CANADA

Think what that means to you in good hard dollars with the great demand for wheat at high prices. Many farmers in Western Canada have paid for their land from a single crop. The same success may still be yours, for you can buy on easy terms.

Farm Land at $15 to $30 an Acre located near thriving towns, good markets, railways—land of a kind which grows 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Good grazing lands at low prices convenient to your grain farm enable you to reap the profits from stock raising and dairying.

MARTHA JANE A DIPLOMAT

Even Stern Mamma Couldn't Deny She Had Obeyed the Strict Letter of the Law.

Martha Jane's sweet tooth had been indulged so much that her mother had issued the decree, "No more candy," and the raminder of the box had been relegated to the top shelf. A few days ago it was brought down and judiciously apportioned to Martha Jane, for whom a taste spelled more, and even a second taste did not satisfy. When her mother saw her about to take a third helping she remarked, emphatically:

"Now, don't let me see you take another piece."

Presently Mrs. S—— was called from the room, and when she returned she found her four-year-old daughter in the farthest corner of the couch, hastily making way with a nice, plump chocolate cream.

"Martha Jane," said her mother, in her sternest tones, "didn't I tell you not to let me see you take another piece of candy?"

"I know you did, mother," said the little diplomat, "but I took this one while you were gone."

A Need Omitted.

"I see the treaty of Versailles was taken back to the White House wrapped in brown paper."

"They should have added vinegar in consideration of its wounds."

CLOSE STUDENTS OF NATURE

Examination Papers Proved That Pupils Must Have Made Keen Observations of Their Subjects.

A nature study and biology teacher sent the Nature Study Review the following from her pupils' papers, regarding their observation and conclusions in the domain of nature:

"Organic matter is when you have something the matter with your organs."

"Five devices by which seeds are scattered are wind, water, explosion, torn up, taken out and thrown away."

"The peculiars of an insect are some of them bring diseases, others destroy food, suck the blood, spoil the flowers, lay eggs and kill babies."

"The grasshopper, when he walks, either jumps or hops."

"The jaws of a grasshopper move east and west."

"A larva is an unfinished animal."

His Interpretation.

Mortland Jones, the five-year-old son of Rev. Rhys Price Jones, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Franklin, refused to sing "America" with the rest of the members of the primary class in Sunday school. When questioned he gave as his reason the line of the song, "Land where my fathers died." "My father didn't die," he said, "and I won't sing it."—Indianapolis News.

Owe Their Health To

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—overshadowing indeed is the success of this great medicine. Compared with it, all other medicines for women's ills seem to be experiments.

Why is it so successful? Simply because of its sterling worth. For over forty years it has had no equal. Women for two generations have depended upon it with confidence.

Thousands of Their Letters are on our files, which prove these statements to be facts, not mere boasting.

Here Are Two Sample Letters:

Mother and Daughter Helped.

Middleburg, Pa.—"I am glad to state that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me much good when I was 35 years old. I was run down with female trouble and was not able to do anything, could not walk for a year and could not work. I had treatment from a physician but did not gain. I read in the papers and books about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. The first few bottles gave me relief and I kept on using it until I got better and was able to do my work. The Vegetable Compound also regulated my daughter when she was 15 years old. I can recommend Vegetable Compound as the best medicine I have ever used."—Mrs. W. YERGES, R. 3, Box 21, Middleburg, Pa.

Fall River, Mass.—"Three years ago I gave birth to a little girl and after she was born I did not pick up well. I doctored for two months and my condition remained the same. One day one of your little books was left at my door and my husband suggested that I try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I started it immediately and I felt better and could eat better after the first bottle, and I continued taking it for some time. Last year I gave birth to a baby boy and had a much easier time as I took the Vegetable Compound for four months before baby came. On getting up I had no pains like I had before, and no dizziness, and in two weeks felt about as well as ever."—Mrs. THOMAS WILKINSON, 363 Columbia Street, Fall River, Mass.

RUTH'S WISE CHOICE.

LESSON TEXT—Ruth 1.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God.—Ruth 1:16.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Ruth 1:1-4; 2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of Ruth.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Ruth and Naomi.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Life's Decisions.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Power of Personal Influence.

I. The Occasion of Ruth's Choice. (1:1-15).

On account of the famine in Bethlehem-Judea, Naomi with her husband and two sons sojourned in the land of Moab. After the death of her husband, her two sons married Moabitish women. After a time her sons died also. Upon the death of her sons she resolved to return to her homeland, having heard that the Lord had visited his people in giving them bread. Her family went to Moab to escape trouble, but they only got into more trouble. It was not till Naomi was thus chastised that she resolved to return. She had the good sense to recognize that the hand of the Lord was upon her for good. Ruth and Orpah accompanied her. This she permitted, but determined to place before them frankly the difficulties which would necessarily confront them. It was this frank presentation of the difficulties and her repeated urging them to go back that furnished the occasion for Ruth's wise choice.

II. The Trials of Ruth's Choice (vv. 16-18).

Much as Naomi loved her daughters-in-law, she would not have them go into this matter blindly. She wished them to know the cost of their undertaking. She told them the worst that could come upon them, then if hardships came they could only blame themselves.

Note the difficulties which confronted Ruth:

1. No chance to get married again. Naomi told her that she had no more sons for which she could wait. In that day to be unmarried was the greatest disgrace. Furthermore, it was against God's law for the Jews to marry outside of their own people.

2. She must renounce her gods. Her idolatrous worship could not be carried on in the land where God's people dwelt. This was delicately touched upon when Orpah went back (v. 15). Orpah went back when it was plain that there was no chance to get a husband. Now Naomi puts an additional test upon Ruth, that of giving up her religion. Naomi's very frankness in dealing with her caused Ruth to be more and more determined to cast her lot with her. No doubt she learned to love the true God through the life of this true woman. She was determined to share Naomi's journey, her home, her lodging, her lot in life and her grave in death, whatever that would be. To crown it all she would renounce her heathen gods and embrace Jehovah. When Naomi saw that Ruth's mind was fully made up she quit urging her.

III. The Glorious Issue of Ruth's Choice.

Ruth was never sorry for her choice, for:

1. She found the true God (v. 16).

2. She found human friends (ch. 2). As she went to glean in the fields she was led to the field of Boaz—a man of wealth and grace. The servants of Boaz treated her with consideration; even Boaz gave instruction for special consideration to be given her.

3. A good husband and a happy home (chaps. 3 and 4). She not only secured a husband, but a man of God, who had abundance of this world's goods.

4. An honored place in the Israelitish nation (4:18-17). Though she had to forsake her own people, she became one of a nobler people.

5. She became a link in the chain of Christ's ancestry (4:18-22; cf. Matt. 1:5). The one who fully decides for Christ and gives up all for him shall get a hundredfold in this life and in the world to come, eternal life.

This story is a fine exhibition of dispensational truth:

(1) The famine in the land indicates the testing of the Jews; (2) the going into Moab, the sojourn of the Israelites among the nations; (3) sickness and death in Moab, the chastisement of the Jews in this present age; (4) the return to the land, the gathering of Israel to their own land; (5) Ruth following, the gathering of the Gentiles through the influence of the Jews; (6) the marriage between Boaz and Ruth, the union of the church with Christ.

Faith in God.

If your faith in God is stronger for every humble task in which you need and get his aid, then that humble task is necessary to the fullness of your faith in God. It will make the music of your life more firm and solid.—Phillips Brooks.

COAL DUST LODGED IN MINER'S LUNGS

Tells how his cough was conquered and health restored.

"In November, 1916, I was working in a coal mine and the doctors said the coal dust had settled in my lungs. I couldn't lie down on my right side, coughed so I couldn't sleep and had constant pain in my right lung and under my shoulder blades. I coughed so hard the blood would spurt out of my nose. Finally the doctors had me change climate and live outdoors, but didn't improve.

"Then I came home and started on Milks Emulsion. Thank God I did, as it did me a lot of good right from the start, loosening up the coal dust in my right lung. In a few weeks my lungs were free. I could sleep like a baby, had an excellent appetite and my cough left me entirely. I gained back 30 pounds in weight and went back to work in the mines completely restored to health."—G. H. Bunn, 6th Ave. & No. 13th St., Terre Haute, Ind.

Thousands of victims of dust-filled air develop the same trouble that Mr. Bunn had. Milks Emulsion costs nothing to try, so why not at least try it?

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. It helps build flesh and strength, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream.

No matter how severe your case you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. Price 60c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Adv.

USES OF ASPIRIN

Bayer Company, who introduced Aspirin 18 years ago, give advice.

Aspirin created a sensation when introduced by Bayer over eighteen years ago. Physicians at once proved its wonderful efficiency in the relief of pain. The genuine, world-famous Aspirin, in "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" is safely taken by millions for Colds, Headache, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Earache, Toothache, Aching Joints, Neuritis, and Pain generally.

Be sure the "Bayer Cross," which is the mark of true "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," is on each genuine package and each genuine tablet.

Boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents and contain proper directions. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.—Adv.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Another Royal Suggestion

DOUGHNUTS and CRULLERS

From the NEW ROYAL COOK BOOK

DOUGHNUTS made the doughboy happy during the war and no wonder. There is nothing more wholesome and delightful than doughnuts or crullers rightly made. Their rich, golden color and appetizing aroma will create an appetite quicker than anything else in the world.

Here are the famous doughnut and cruller recipes from the New Royal Cook Book.

Doughnuts

3 tablespoons shortening
¾ cup sugar
1 egg
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon salt
3 cups flour
4 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder

Cream shortening; add sugar and well-beaten egg; stir in milk; add nutmeg, salt, flour and baking powder which have been sifted together and enough additional flour to make dough stiff enough to roll. Roll out on floured board to about ⅛ inch thick; cut out. Fry in deep fat hot enough to brown a piece of bread in 60 seconds. Drain on unglazed paper and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Afternoon Tea Doughnuts

2 eggs
6 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon grated nutmeg
2 tablespoons shortening
6 tablespoons milk
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder

Beat eggs until very light; add sugar, salt, nutmeg and melted shortening; add milk, and flour and baking powder which have been sifted together; mix well. Drop by teaspoons into deep hot fat and fry until brown. Drain well on unglazed paper and sprinkle lightly with powdered sugar.

Crullers

4 tablespoons shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
½ cup milk

Cream shortening; add sugar gradually and beaten eggs; sift together flour, cinnamon, salt and baking powder; add one-half and mix well; add milk and remainder of dry ingredients to make soft dough. Roll out on floured board to about ⅛ inch thick and cut into strips about 4 inches long and ½ inch wide; roll in hands and twist each strip and bring ends together. Fry in deep hot fat. Drain and roll in powdered sugar.

Obituary

Sunday evening at 10:30 o'clock W. E. Peterson died at his home here after a continued illness of nearly all winter. Early in the winter he with his wife went to Connellsville, Pa., and were guests of her sons, returning home just two weeks ago. He was born in the state of New York, September 5, 1853 and died at the age of 66 years, 7 months and 20 days. He leaves a wife and two children, Mrs. H. E. Suders, Mishawaka, Indiana, and L. C. Peterson of Plymouth, Ind., who arrived Monday afternoon. The two sons of Mrs. Peterson, Emmett and Beason Carson of Pennsylvania arrived Wednesday morning and will remain with their mother a few days. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson have been residents of St. Joe for about seven years moving here from Ft Wayne. Mr. Peterson followed the piano tuning business and was kept busy when his health permitted him to drive. The funeral service was conducted from the home at 1 o'clock with Rev. C. O. Johnson officiating. Burial was made in Riverside. E. R. Kinsey, director.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to thank our neighbors and friends in St. Joe for their kind assistance in the sickness and death of Mr. Peterson also for the floral offerings. Mrs. Peterson and Children.

Early Wednesday morning, Mrs. Peterson was stricken with a stroke of appoplexy and at the time of going to press she is in a very serious condition, with no hopes of her recovery.

Township Convention

The Spencer township S. S. Association held their spring convention on Monday afternoon and evening of this week in the M. E. Church. The afternoon session was not largely attended by the local folks but those present were those who had some part in the school's organization and the talk given by Mr. Hill, the state speaker was directed to the workers of this character. The officers elected were: President, Melvin Howey; Vice, Fred High; Sec-Treas., Harvey Kimes; Children's Division Mrs. Anna Henderson; Young People, Mrs. Frances Chapman; Adult Mrs. Saxe Hadsell; Educational, Clyde Hart; Administration, Geo. Beams. The evening session was well attended and the speaker dealt with the art of teaching, giving some practical ways by which the teacher might get the most from their labors.

They Were Banqueted.

On last Friday evening, the Lutheran Christian Endeavor Mission Band combined their regular monthly meeting with a banquet in honor of four of their number who graduate from the High School this week—Gaylon Markle, Margaret Lake, Henry Beams and George Doll. Covers were laid for 34; the table was decorated in the class colors, pink and green. The program on the subject of "Remaking America" took the form of toasts, as follows—"Our Graduates" Miss Marjorie Hollabaugh; "Eye Spy" Florence Beams; "Tomorrow" Herschel Zeis; "Heirs of Tomorrow", Doris Rhoades; "A Handful of New Friends", Maurice Hollabaugh; "Our Debt to Italy,,, Mrs. Mumma; "So much to Do", Miss Thornburgh. Miss Gaylon Markle in a few graceful words expressed the thanks of the class. The rest of the evening was spent in playing games in the spacious basement.

Ed Miser had a real experience of being stuck with his truck. He was going west on the stone road and just after he had passed the Burley home he turned out to allow a machine to pass him. He was heavy loaded and he got off the stone just a little too much and his truck went down. Two machines attempted to pull him out but they failed. Grover Curie was called with a tractor and he succeeded in pulling the truck out. The tractor left its marks in the stone road, all right.

RUSSIA'S LONG, BLACK NIGHT

Little Wonder People of That Unhappy Land Are Blinded by Freedom's Light After Four Centuries of Suffering.

Article XV

By FRANK COMERFORD.

For nearly four hundred years Russia waited for morning. It was a terrible night. Brutal dreams tortured her. She writhed in despair. Time moved slowly. The clock ticked agonies. The air was thick with groans. Motherhood bore slaves. The cradle was a coffin. Feast days were celebrated by massacres. Czars from Ivan the Terrible, 1544, to Nicholas, the last of the Romanoffs, executed in 1918, used the bodies and souls of human beings as manure to fertilize the soil in which the rank weed of imperialism grew. History calls them emperors, truth labels them brutes, torturers, murderers. They bore the brand of Cain.

It was a lightless day, a hopeless night, for Russia, which began with the curses of Ivan and ended with the execution of Nicholas. During this night of three hundred and seventy-five years they marched the treadmill. The world heard the endless tramp of feet. In the dark, great bodies swayed with weariness. Heavy shoulders were bent forward. Strong legs marked time on the treadmill steps. They kept time to the lash of the whip. It laid bare their backs, the backs of young and old, of women and children as well as men. Sweat formed into red froth as it mingled with their blood. They grew blind in the dungeon darkness. They stumbled and halted, only to be called back to the monotony and drudgery of the tramp by the lash and the bludgeon. Their legs rose and fell—they marched, but never forward. It was left, right, left, right; tramp, tramp, and always on the treadmill steps in the hopeless dark. They mumbled prayers, but God couldn't hear, the curses of their masters drowned out their petitionings. It was so dark in the treadmill that even God could not see, and so God forgot Russia. Forgotten, abandoned, they bent their great weary backs toward the sod, the grave offered rest—it was kind. The only thing they owned was their pains. They lived a communism of suffering, a socialism of slavery.

The revolution of 1917 battered down the door of the treadmill. Seized with wild joy, they madly rushed toward the light. When they got out in the open, saw the sky and sun, they were bewildered. In the fury of a new delight they rushed on. It isn't strange, it is pathetic, that eyes blinded by ages of darkness blinked in the light. It isn't surprising that they tried to reach the center of the sun. Suffering in the light is different from suffering in the black the Russians knew.

When their eyes became accustomed to the light they looked around them to see where they were—to learn what had been happening in the strange, beautiful world.

Tremendous Task Before Them.

They had a task before them, the building of a free man's house, a house in the light, a house without a dark corner. They knew little about freedom, except that they wanted it with all their hearts. Their experience had been with slavery. They knew little about the practical work of building a house in which freedom might live pure and secure.

They saw civilization with the eyes of a surgeon. They gasped when they saw that its body was covered with a malignant sore. It was an ugly, festering, running, growing sore. They learned its name. It was written in the loudest of chronicles—it was the incurable, horrible leprosy of the world. It was cancer—POVERTY. They were told that it was the cause of the nasty thing religion labeled sin, that poverty had transformed Christ images struck in clay into hunchbacked souls, that the sickening matter running from sores caused the red blotches on the world's body known as red-light districts; that other effects were the swollen blackish blue boils, the tenements and slums. They shuddered. Even the darkness of the treadmill had not produced worse.

They learned about poverty. They read its autobiography. In it they read how it had robbed children of their childhood, erased faith from the minds of men, mobilized women in dreadful traffic. They learned that much of the thing called crime was poverty's work, that normality and morality are matters of education. That to be good requires knowledge of right and wrong. They read that statesmen called poverty THE PROBLEM. Reformers called it a curse and became unpopular because of their persistent attacks upon it. In the verdict of a thoughtless world those who fought poverty were called long-haired men and short-haired women. People did not stop to remember that these long-haired men and short-haired women gave of their time and strength to the poor. These who were maligned for following in the footsteps of the first Lover of the Poor were those who cried out against the tenements, demanding for human beings the sunshine and air cattlemen give their stock. These unpopular ones were the same who brought ice to keep milk cool in the hot summer for the children of the slums; these were the crusaders against child labor, the protestants against compelling the women who bear the children of the race to work so many hours each day that exhaustion marred and marked the physical and mental strength of children.

So it was that these redeemed, freed children of Russia learned of the cancer and feared it as much as the thing they had escaped.

None Able to Check Disease.

They beheld old-school politicians acting as doctors to sick civilization. These doctors, miscalled statesmen, were agreed as to the cause of the disease and that the symptoms threatened death. Many prescriptions have been given the patient, but none seem to check the disease. These prescriptions had been various formulas of government, the constitutional monarchy, a democracy, a republic. The giving of these various treatments failed to effect a cure. Civilization continued to suffer. At times pain became unendurable and the doctors gave local anesthetics. These were the laws, included under the general designation "Social Welfare Legislation." They made the patient temporarily more easy. They allayed pain that might otherwise have produced convulsions—Revolution.

And then these Russian people, studying the new world into which they had so recently come, discovered that many of these political doctors were quacks, they were unreliable and dishonest. They were more interested in their own fortunes than the fate of the patient. They imposed upon the people who hired and trusted them. Their time and thought was taken up in holding their jobs, rather than in doing their work. That the schools of political medicine, called political parties, responsible for these doctors, were diploma mills, graft rings. That some of the people suspected these physicians of being interested in keeping the patient sick and were not making an honest effort to cure. It had even been rumored that there are people in the world who make profit out of poverty; that special privilege is the powerful profiteer of our day.

Turned to Old Theory.

Plato had spoken about another remedy way back in the fourth century before Christ. So had Marx. An untried remedy—a theory. Its object was to cure poverty. The Russians, seeing that the remedies in common use had failed, turned their thoughts to this old remedy which had never been tried. At least it had not failed; this was in its favor. It was an experiment, to be sure, but "Nothing ventured, nothing gained." Many argued that it could not more completely fail than the prescriptions at present in use.

And with the fall of imperialism there came into Russia one who had been exiled. For many years he had been a teacher and preacher of the untried remedy. Russia saw in him a savior. He came with a message. He said that communism would keep them free, make them happy. They listened, they believed. They were as little children, so great was their faith. To them a promise was a truth fulfilled, the word a covenant; and the promise was that peasants would have their own land, that working men would be their own bosses. It was the word they had waited for, the realization of the dreams they had dreamed in the dark treadmill. The Prophet had come. The new day awaited them. They rejoiced and cried, "Long live the new Messiah." No one sacrilegiously questioned the practicability of the dream. Every one forgot the common, controlling instinct of man—selfishness. Maybe in the intense general selfishness individual selfishness could not be seen.

The man was Lenine—the message Communism.

Food Smuggling in Germany.

Illicit trade in food, with its attendant evils of smuggling and usury, is on the increase throughout Germany, according to newspaper accounts.

The rationing system has never been abandoned even in the occupied areas of the Rhineland, and some of the newspapers contend that the average individual can not subsist on the amount of food issued. The authorities are making every effort to check the illegal traffic in foods of all kinds, and the courts are crowded day after day.

Smuggling of potatoes is being carried on this winter in all parts of Germany on a scale greater than in war time. Germany produced an excellent potato crop this year, and the authorities are trying to save it from falling into the hands of the speculators.

Industrial Italy Awakening.

One great stride toward freeing industrial Italy from its dependence upon its supplies of iron ore and steel is announced. This consists in the acquisition of the rights of a big Austrian mining company hitherto known as the Alpine Montan Gesellschaft. These rights comprise control of one of the largest steel-producing districts in Europe. From its foundries at Ersberg in Styria alone the annual prewar output exceeded 1,000,000 tons of finest quality steel. Experts estimate that the mine there can be worked advantageously for at least 200 years to come.

Common Sense Comments on Health, Happiness and Longevity

By GEORGE F. BUTLER, A. M., M. D.

Copyright, 1920, by International Press Bureau

BREATHING.

How do you breathe? You should learn to breathe properly. Many people have lazy lungs. Fresh air is a free gift, but it is like most of the gifts of heaven in that we must do our share of work to benefit by it. No one would expect to have a good fire just because a pair of bellows hangs on a nail by the chimney, but that is exactly what many people expect of their lungs, which are really only the bellows given us to keep the fire of life burning bright and clear within us. This trick of lazy lungs is a habit, and, like any other, may be overcome by persistent effort. Many persons, for example, are afflicted with a nervous habit of holding the breath unconsciously. Those are the people who, in spite of plenty of time spent out of doors catch cold easily, digest poorly, and are always more or less under the weather physically. Many other persons breathe only with the upper part of the lungs and, although they may breathe regularly, do not draw in sufficient air at a breath to fill the lungs. When the pernicious habit of poor, shallow breathing has been broken up, the health undergoes such marked improvement, there is such brightening of the spirit and improvement in appearance, that the luxury of deep breathing is not likely to be readily foregone.

Deep breathing means literally deep breathing, and not what some understand it to be—the mere lifting of the diaphragm, which may be done with the lungs not filled to their full capacity. The action of the mind enters largely into all physical exercise, especially into all forms of breathing which have the poising of the nerve centers in view. First fill your mind with pleasant thoughts and then concentrate your thought upon the breath. Breathe and think! Breathe and think! until the whole body becomes a living thing and your breath a vital life-sustaining element. In short, breathe to the toes, for if such a concept can be held long enough, the actual breathing capacity of the chest is increased to a great degree. Diaphragmatic breathing acts directly upon the liver, which in turn affects the stomach and digestive organs. Good digestion makes a healthful glow, brightens the eye, stimulates the entire being to radiate vibrations of harmony and health. There is no better way of strengthening the muscles, the lungs and heart, improving the appetite and digestion, banishing the "blues" and making you rejoice that you are alive, than to go out into the woods and meadows or city parks, where you can exercise and breathe good air, and thus develop new sinew and new strength, both of soul and body.

Work for health; insist on having it. It is yours if you but work for it. Its hints are in each growing tree, each breath of sun-kissed air, each thought of happiness, trustfulness and love. Get in touch with the purposes, plans and laws of the infinite intelligence, and mental, moral, and physical health is yours. And one of the best ways to "get in touch" is to take a daily long walk and breathe properly in "God's Out-of-Doors" under the great and infinite sky and among the trees where the winds are harping. If you will erect your head, expand your chest and walk away, as it is meant you should walk, on these fresh mornings when the world is enveloped in a golden halo from out of which, like angel voices from the quiet depths of heaven, the winds are singing their impromptu of praises, you will be full of life and joy and hope. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

CHEERFULNESS

A cheerful man extracts all the innocent joy he can out of the time as it passes, and does not worry. He does not fret and forbode, and spoil life's sunshine today, in the fear that there may be no sunshine tomorrow. He is not disturbed by small evils, for he knows that the chief secret of comfort lies in not suffering trifles to vex him, and in prudently cultivating an undergrowth of small pleasures, since great ones rarely come to any of us and never last long. It is the little, everyday pleasures and enjoyments that are the most satisfying. Live today, instead of living in anticipation of a good time tomorrow. Do not grumble, but use to the full resources of happiness that are available. Happiness depends upon the treatment of what we have, and not of what we have not; happiness is made, not found; it comes from within, and not from without. If we will to keep well and live long and be happy we must open our hearts to the healing influences of nature, and cease to despise simple pleasures. Adapt ourselves to existing circumstances and use the opportunities of enjoyment that come our way, cultivating small pleasures, making the most of our blessings and always trying to look on the bright side of things, and happiness will surprise us unawares. The world is like a looking-glass. Laugh at it, and it laughs back; frown at it, and it frowns back. "Each of us," says Ruskin, "as we travel the way of life, has the choice, according to our working, of turning all the voices of nature into one song of rejoicing; or of withering and quenching her sympathy into a fearful withdrawn silence of condemnation, or into a crying out of her stones, and a shaking of her dust against us." Nothing is better understood than that there is a connection between cheerfulness and good digestion. What an astonishing amount and variety of food can be disposed of and perfectly digested at one sitting of two or three hours by a company of cheerful and happy, not to say jolly and merry, old friends! This one fact is worth more than all else to show the dependence of the digestive powers on the state of mind. Emerson says: "The more of the cheerfulness or good temper that is spent, the more of it remains." Cheerfulness is helpful every day and every minute. It grows upon itself and is contagious. It gives elasticity to the spirit; specters fly before it, difficulties cause no despair, for they are encountered with hope, and the mind acquires that happy disposition to improve the opportunities which lead to success. Without cheerfulness you cannot enjoy perfect physical, mental or moral health. The best tonic in the world is that which is imparted to the body through the mentality. Just to be glad. This is the cry of the human heart. Gladness is the power to live in the present: to make the moment rich either with work or contemplation. To dwell on the care and vicissitudes of life is to court sorrow, ill health, despondency and death. The mind that considers too closely the evils of the world comes finally to partake of the character of those evils.

Learn to laugh. Cultivate the "nonsense" in you. Cultivate that part of your nature that is quick to see the mirthful side of things, to the end that thus you shall be enabled to shed many of life's troubles as the plumage of the bird sheds rain. Fun is better for a sick child than medicine; and after all, we are but grown-up children, and whether sick or well we should endeavor to be cheerful. So cheer up! Our misgivings may not be true, and remember that cheerfulness is one of the best tonics in the world. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

Health Notes

In hours which ought to be hours of rest we allow the mind to brood over grievances, to dwell on difficulties, to harass itself with cares, and grieve over suffering and sorrow, we shall find leisure even more exhausting than work.

* * *

Select thoughts of harmony, love, cheer, good-will, health, purity, and beauty, and just in proportion as you hold them they will displace and crowd out their opposites.

* * *

If meats are eaten—a debatable question between strict hygienists and "other people"—take them at the noonday meal, with or without vegetables, and in cold weather rather than warm.

* * *

The real world in which one lives is his thought world, and not the mere things that are about him. Just think of creating your own world!

* * *

There is something that every wise man needs to learn in these days more than how to get rich, if he wishes to be well and happy, and that is how to do without riches; how to live a simple, wholesome life.

* * *

Simplicity is the elimination of the non-essential in all things. It reduces life to its minimum of real needs; raises it to its maximum of power.

Vegetables and fruits are to be used most generously at that season of the year in which they naturally mature.

It is futile to expect a fretful, impatient and over-anxious frame of mind, continuing through the day and every day, will be suddenly replaced at night by the placid and comfortable mental state which shall insure a restful sleep.

The really poor man is he who, not content with necessities, hankers after superfluities which are beyond his means. To have learned the grand habit of doing without is worth a large income.

* * *

Light itself is a great corrective. A thousand wrongs and abuses that are grown in darkness disappear, like owls and bats before the light of daly.

* * *

The sun is the great origin of health, the sea is the great healer. The man who would live long should never shun the sunshine.

It is a fine discipline to give up for a week, or a month, or a year, some luxury which may be harmless in itself, but which is becoming too much of a necessity in our lives.

* * *

Vital strength in man is the greatest sustenance of his body, and the greater it is the less will he be afflicted by disease.

* * *

A strenuous life unaccompanied by a right proportion of rest and relaxation, is the inevitable forerunner of depleted nerves and broken health.

Flowered Orange Gown.

A gown of bright orange taffeta has big bunches of flowers in dull red and pale green, with pale green leaves strewn over the surface of the fabric. The full skirt is caught in wide folds up to the left hip, where the fillers are attached with small orange buttons. The underskirt is of plain orange taffeta. The waist is plain to the hip line, cut down to within three inches of the joining of waist and skirt, front and back, and the spaces are filled with pulled lemon taffeta. The sleeves are plain caps midway to the elbow. A little black ribbon bow is attached to the left shoulder at the top of the sleeve.

Three-Piece Gingham Frocks.

New gingham frocks for summer have coats of the same material. These frocks are of imported materials in rose, blue, orchid or red and white checks. Folds of white pique trim the frocks and form the long panels, collars, cuffs and banding on the pockets of the coats.

FASHIONS IN BRIEF

A frock of dull rose is girdled with dark blue taffeta.

There is a movement toward a circular cut in wraps.

Marabout is a much used trimming for the negligee.

A chemise frock with ruffled sides has straight panels back and front.

Chestnut brown straw, with pink quills, is a recent Paris idea for a hat.

In the lineup of coats for general wear, the three-quarter length model that is belted in front, leaving the back to hang loose, is a great favorite.

There are numerous white frocks among the crinkled silk materials, all breathing simplicity. Fabrics are so beautiful that they require little embellishment.

Evening gowns are elaborate. Rich brocades, embroidery, lace and spangles are most prominent among the trimmings used in a recent collection of imported models.

SIX MONTHS I COULD NOT WORK

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Me Strong and Able to Work—I Recommend It To All My Friends.

Bayonne, N. J.—"I had pains in back and legs so that I could not stand caused by female trouble. I felt so tired all the time, had bad headaches, and for six months I could not work. I was treated by a physician and took other remedies but got no relief. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has helped me very much. I am well and strong and now able to do my work. I cannot thank you enough and I recommend your medicine to my friends who are sick."—Mrs. SUSIE SACATANSEY, 25 East 17th St., Bayonne, N. J.

It must be admitted by every fair-minded, intelligent person, that a medicine could not live and grow in popularity for over forty years, and today hold a record for such wonderful success as does Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound without possessing great virtue and actual worth. Such medicines must be looked upon and termed both standard and dependable by every thinking person

Practical Persons.

"You never hear of anybody addressing a poem to his caddy."

"No."

"Still there must be bonds of sympathy and gratitude between many golf players and their faithful caddies."

"No doubt; but the average golf player has neither the time nor the ability to write poetry, and the average caddy would rather be presented with a dollar than a bound volume of eulogies."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

There is nothing more satisfactory after a day of hard work than a line full of snowy white clothes. For such results use Red Cross Ball Blue.

Woman Financial Expert.

LADY LARKSPUR

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons

GOOD NEWS—OR BAD.

Synopsis.—Richard Searles, successful American playwright, confides to his friend, Bob Singleton, the fact that, inspired by the genius of a young actress whom he had seen in London, he has written a play, "Lady Larkspur," solely with the thought that she should interpret the leading character. This girl, Violet Dewing, has disappeared and Searles refuses to allow the play to be produced with anyone else in the part. Singleton has just returned (invalided) from France, where he had been serving in the aviation corps. His uncle, Raymond Bashford, a wealthy man, had contracted a marriage a short time before his death, while on a visit to Japan. He left Singleton a comparatively small amount of money and the privilege of residence in the "garage" of his summer home, Barton-on-the-Sound, Connecticut. Mrs. Bashford is believed to be traveling in the Orient. The household at Barton is made up of elderly employees of the Tyringham, a New York hotel, where Bashford made his home. By the terms of his will these people are to have a home at Barton for the rest of their lives. Singleton goes to Barton, taking with him the manuscript of "Lady Larkspur." There he finds the household strangely upset, some of its members being suspected by their comrades of pro-Germanism. Antoine, head of the establishment, informs him that he has been perplexed by the somewhat mysterious visits of a stranger, apparently a foreigner, seeking Mrs. Bashford.

As I went about my unpacking I was sorry that I had discouraged Antoine's confidences. That these old hotel servants, flung upon a farm with little to do, should fall to quarreling was not surprising, but what he had said as to the inquiries for Mrs. Bashford had roused my curiosity. In spite of my legal right to live on the farm, I had no intention of remaining if my uncle's widow turned up. She could hardly fail to regard me as an intruding poor relation, no matter how strictly I kept to my own quarters.

I whistled myself into good humor as I dressed and started for the house along the driveway, which followed the shore, veering off for a look at the sunken garden, one of the few features of the place that had ever interested my uncle.

As I paused on the steps I caught sight of a man sitting dejectedly on a stone bench near a fountain whose jet tossed and caught a ball with languid iteration. I had identified him as an old Tyringham bell-hop, known familiarly as Dutch, before he heard my step and sprang to his feet, grabbing a pitchfork whose prongs he presented threateningly.

"Oh, it's you, sir," he faltered, dropping the implement. "Excuse me, sir!"

"What's your trouble, Dutch? You're not expecting burglars, are you?"

"Well, no, sir, but things on the place ain't what they wuz. It's my name, which ain't my name, not reg'lar, an' I'm campin' in the toolhouse. An' me born right there in New York an' American clean through. My grandpap came across when he wuz a kid, but it ain't my fault he wuz Golman. Mr. Singleton, I don't know no Golman except pretzel, sauerkraut, wiener wurst, and them kinds o' woids."

"Those belong to the universal language, Dutch," I answered consolingly. "What is your name, anyhow?"

"Augustus Schortemeier, and I say it ain't no worse'n Longfellow," he protested.

The point was delicate and not one that I felt myself qualified to discuss. I bade him cheer up and passed on.

As I reached the house I heard a sharp command in an authoritative voice and saw at a curve of the driveway a number of men in military formation performing evolutions in the most sprightly manner. They carried broomsticks, and at sight of me the commander brought his company to a very ragged "Present arms!" Their uniform was that of the Tyringham bell-hops and waiters, and it dawned upon me that this was an army of protest representing the Allied armies on the shores of Connecticut. There was a dozen of them, and the captain I recognized as Scotty, a hop who had long worn the Tyringham livery. I waved my hand to them and turned to find Antoine awaiting me at the door.

"It's the troops, sir," he explained. "It's to keep Dutch and Gretchen and Elsie—she's the wife of that Flynn—in proper order, sir."

"Troops" was a large term for the awkward squad of retired waiters and bell-hops, and it was with difficulty that I kept my face straight.

"It's most unfortunate, but we was forced to it. Dinner is served, sir."

From the dining table in the long dining-room I caught glimpses through the gathering dusk of Scotty's battalion at its evolutions.

"Antoine!" I said sharply, "what do you mean by these hints of trouble on the place? You're not silly enough to imagine that Dutch and a couple of women can do anything out here to aid America's enemies! And as for these inquiries about Mrs. Bashford, they couldn't possibly have anything to do with the war. Specifically, who are the persons who've asked for her?"

"There's the party I told you about, most persistent, who's motored here three times, and another person who seems to be looking for him, sir. It's most singular."

"It's singularly ridiculous; that's all. They're probably piano-tuners or rival agents for a rug house or something of that sort."

"They may be agents, but not that kind, sir." His lips quivered, either from fear or vexation at my refusal to take his story seriously.

"If anything tangible happens, Antoine," I said kindly, "anything we can really put our hands on, we'll certainly deal with it. But you mustn't get nervous or allow yourself to suspect everybody who turns up here of evil designs against the republic. I've come here for quiet, you know, and we can't have every passing stranger throwing the place into a panic."

I had no sooner reached the library, where he gave me coffee, than I heard a slow, measured tread on the broad brick terrace that ran along the house on the side toward the Sound. The windows were open and the guard was in plain view. I glanced at Antoine, whose attitude toward me was that of one benevolently tolerant of stupidity. He meant to save me in spite of myself. "Tell the picket to remove himself where I won't hear him, if you please, Antoine."

He disappeared through one of the French windows and in a moment I saw the guard patrolling a walk some distance from the house. I now made myself comfortable with a book and cigar, but I had hardly settled myself for a quiet hour before I heard a commotion from the direction of the gate, followed a few minutes later by a shout and a noisy colloquy, after which a roadster arrived in haste at the front door.

"The House Is in Order, I Judge."

"Mr. Torrence, sir," announced Antoine. "I'm sorry, sir, but he ran by the guard at the gate, and our man below the house stopped him. It's a precaution we've been taking, sir."

Torrence's sense of humor was always a little feeble, and I hastened into the hall to reassure him as to his welcome.

"For God's sake, Singleton, what's happened here? A band of pirates jumped on my running-board, and after I'd knocked them off a road-agent stopped me right there in sight of the house and poked the muzzle of a shotgun in my face."

"Mighty sorry you were annoyed, but there have been some queer characters about, tramps and that sort of thing and the people on the place are merely a little anxious. Have a cigar?"

"All I can say is that you'd better send your friends the password! That fool out there with the gun is likely to kill somebody. Antoine"—he turned to the butler, who was drawing the curtains at the windows—"if the property's been threatened, you should have informed me immediately."

"Yes, sir; but it's only been quite recent, and, knowing Mr. Singleton was coming, we didn't like to bother you."

"We can only apologize, Torry," I interposed. "The employees have been alarmed, but we're bound to commend their zeal."

"Humph!" he ejaculated, the wounds to his dignity still rankling.

I forced a cigar upon him and talked of the weather to cover Antoine's retreat. I resolved not to tell him the real cause of the servant's apprehensions, knowing his disposition to magnify trifles and fearing he might send the police to investigate. He lived only five miles from Barton, a fact to which he now referred.

"Hadn't heard of any tramps over my way," he said frowning. "These old lunatics your uncle left here are simply hipped; that's all. It's a wonder you didn't think of upsetting his will on the ground of mental unsoundness."

"Oh, chuck it! They're well-meaning helpless people, and it's bully that uncle Bash provided a home for them. There's nobody else to use the place."

His cigar had proved soothing, but my last remark caused him to sit up straight in his chair.

"By George! my hold-up almost made me forget what I came for. I have news for you, Singleton; good or bad, as you may take it; Mrs. Bashford is in America.

"Mrs. Bashford," I repeated faintly, "where do you get these pleasant tidings?"

"This," he answered, producing a telegram, "is all I know about it."

He seemed to sense my discomfiture. The message read:

"Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 20.

"J. B. Torrence,

"Bainbridge Trust Co., New York.

"Landed at Seattle a week ago, and have been motoring east from Chicago to see the country. Will reach Barton in four or five days. Please wire me at the Washington Inn, Lenox, whether house is in order for occupancy.

"Alice Bashford."

"Well, what do you say to that?" he demanded.

"I say it's taking unfair advantage," I answered savagely. "I've got to clear out; that's the first thing."

"Not necessarily. Your right to the garage is settled; she couldn't oust you if she wanted to. You've got to stay here anyhow till she comes; there's no ducking that. There are many little courtesies she would naturally expect from you."

"I'm delighted that you see my duty so clearly! If you hadn't assured me that she was safe at the end of the world I wouldn't have set foot here."

"The house is in order, I judge," he remarked, glancing about the room. "I've got to wire her that we're ready for her."

"You most certainly have! You might add that she's causing serious inconvenience to her late husband's only nephew."

"You really don't mean that?" he inquired anxiously.

"Oh, thunder, no!"

I had forgotten how trying Torrence could be. He now suggested that we summon Antoine and take a look at the house. Torrence is a conscientious fellow with an exact and orderly mind, and there was no corner of the place from cellar to garret that we didn't explore. It was highly creditable to the old Tyringham servants that the house was thoroughly habitable.

As we were on our way down-stairs the old fellow detained me a moment.

"Have you told him about the parties?"

I shook my head in angry rejection of the idea that I should tell Torrence about "the parties," and dismissed him as soon as we reached the hall.

"I suggest," said Torrence, "that when she comes you have flowers in all the rooms; the conservatory will supply enough. And it occurs to me that the more inconspicuous you make this bunch of lazy dependents the more agreeable it will be for Mrs. Bashford."

"You don't expect much of me! It was never in the contract that I should become the patriarch of these venerable relics. But I'll warn them to conceal themselves as much as possible. I fully expect to leave the reservation for good just one hour after the lady arrives."

"That's your affair, of course. As she's motoring, we can't just time her arrival, but when I get a wire that she's on the way I'll telephone you. And, of course, after she gets here I'll come at once to pay my respects."

"You can't come too soon!" I answered spitefully.

"Madame, the widow, has arrived, sir."

THIS isn't one of those fake free treatment offers you have seen so many times. We don't offer to give you something for nothing—but we do guarantee that you can try this wonderful treatment, entirely at our risk, and this guarantee is backed by your local druggist.

This makes the offer one which you can absolutely depend upon, because the druggist with whom you have been trading would not stand behind the guarantee if he did not know it to be an honest and legitimate one.

Hunt's Salve, formerly called Hunt's Cure, has been sold under absolute money back guarantee for more than thirty years. It is especially compounded for the treatment of Eczema, Itch, Ring Worm, Tetter, and other itching skin diseases.

Thousands of letters testify to its curative properties. M. Timerlin, a reputable dry goods dealer in Durant, Oklahoma, says: "I suffered with Eczema for ten years, and spent $1,000.00 for doctors' treatments, without result. One box of Hunt's Cure entirely cured me."

Don't fail to give Hunt's Salve a trial—price 75 cents, from your local druggist, or direct by mail if he does not handle it.

Monte L. Green

Seeks Nomination of County Treasurer

Keyser township presents as a candidate for one of the important county offices the name of Monte L. Green, President of the Garrett Savings Loan and Trust Co. Mr. Green for a number of years was the active Vice President of the Auburn Savings Loan and Trust Co. He is asking for the nomination subject to the primaries to be held May 4th. Mr. Green is a certified accountant, an expert book keeper and a member of the DeKalb County Bar. During the busy days of the McIntyre plants at Auburn he was the General Supt. was President of the DeKalb County business Men's Association and an Ex-president of the Auburn Commercial Club and has such experience as not only renders him a man well prepared for the responsibilities of the office but it is a privilege to secure men of his fitness in public office.

Mr. Green's parents were born in Indiana and his father a veteran of the Civil War. He had two sons to enlist in the World War, both earning commissions. He married the daughter of the late Jack Ralston of Auburn and his wife is the Democrat Woman County Chairman. Through Mr. Green's financial interests he is a large tax payer in addition to real estate which he owns in his own name, and would thus have the interests of the county at heart.

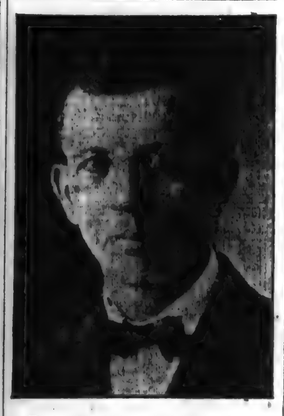
POLITICAL ANNOUNCE



Twite L. Hoodelmier, candidate for Sheriff of DeKalb County, subject to the decision of the voters at the primary May 4, 1920, was born on a farm in Union Township January 1875 and DeKalb County has always been my home. Graduated from the common schools, one term in Auburn High School and one year at Tri State Normal, Angola. I pay my debts and taxes. Have been a farmer and laborer all my life. In 1898 when President McKinley called for volunteers for the Spanish-American War, I left the farm, donned the uniform and volunteered in defense of our country, joining Co. K. 157 Ind. Vol. Inf., at Indianapolis and served during the war.

Born and raised a republican, serving as Precinct Committeeman and always aiding in any way for the good of the party. Two years ago when it looked hopeless I accepted the nomination against a second term man and from the showing made then I feel that I am entitled to the nomination May 4, 1920. Therefore I am asking the support of the voters at the coming Primary May 4.

Come now, be square, play fair, fall in and vote for Hoodelmier.

I await your decision,
Twite L. Hoodelmier.

FOR SHERIFF

I desire to make my announcement for the democratic nomination for Sheriff of DeKalb county and solicit the support of the voters at the primary.

O. W. FELL.

COMMISSIONER South-East

I desire to announce to the voters, thru the columns of The News, that I will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Commissioner southeast district, subject to the primary on May 4.

DON P. HINDMAN.

FOR SHERIFF

Editor News:—Announce my name as a candidate for the nomination of Sheriff on the Republican ticket subject to the primary on May 4th. The support of the voters will be appreciated.

How much should I give to make this a better world?

A CERTAIN man in New York filled out his income tax report.

It showed an income so large that his tax was 53%. And his total gifts to church and charity for the year were $148.

Think of it—thousands spent for luxuries and pleasure for himself; and $148 to leave the world a little better than he found it!

Most of us do better than that; but not so very much better.

Our average daily gift for all church causes is —less than we spend for daily papers

—less than a local telephone call
—less than a third of the day's car fare
—less than 3 cents a day

No wonder that 80% of the ministers of America are paid less than $20 a week. No wonder that the church hospitals turn away thousands of sick people a year. No wonder that China has only one doctor for every 400,000 people. No wonder that every church board and charity society is forever meeting deficits, forever passing the hat.

It isn't because we are selfish; it isn't because we don't want to help. It's just because no one has ever put up a great big program to us, and asked us to think of the work of the church in a systematic businesslike way.

The Interchurch World Movement represents the united program of thirty denominations. They have surveyed their whole task, no business could have done it better.

They have budgeted their needs; no business could have a more scientific budget. They have united to prevent the possibility of waste and duplication. At least a million dollars will be saved by the fact that thirty individual campaigns are joined in one united effort.

And they come to the men or women who love America —to you— this week asking you to use them as the channel through which a certain definite part of your income can be be applied to make this a better world.

Only you can determine what part of your income that should be.

It's a good time right now to answer that question. We're passing through the world just once; how much better will the world be because you passed through?

Headache

THOUSANDS OF WOMEN suffer miserably from periodic attacks of headache, never dreaming that a permanent cure may be had. Headache nearly always results from some disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will correct these disorders and there will be no more headache. Many have been permanently cured by Chamberlain's Tablets.

Prayed for Cure Finds it After 10 Years

Food Would Sour and Boil —Teeth Like Chalk

Mr. Herbert M. Gessner writes from his home in Berlin, N. H.:

"I had stomach trouble over ten years; kept getting worse. I tried everything for relief but it came back worse than ever. Last fall I got awfully bad; could only eat light loaf bread and tea. In January I got so bad that what I would eat would sour and boil; my teeth would be like chalk. I suffered terribly. I prayed every day for something to cure me. One day I read about EATONIC and told my wife to get me a box at the drug store as I was going to work at 4 p. m. I took one-third of it and began to feel relief; when it was three-fourths gone, I felt fine and when it was used up I had no pains. Wife got me another box but I have felt the pain but twice. I used five tablets out of the new box and I have no more stomach trouble. Now I write to tell you how thankful I am that I heard of EATONIC. I feel like a new man; I eat what I like, drink plenty of water, and it never hurts me at all."

Better be a fool and part with your money than be a miser and have your soul buried under it.

DEWS OF EVE

No More Gentle Than "Cascarets" for the Liver, Bowels

It is just as needless as it is dangerous to take violent or nasty cathartics. Nature provides no shock absorbers for your liver and bowels against calomel, harsh pills, sickening oil and salts. Cascarets give quick relief without injury from Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Gases and Sick Headache. Cascarets work while you sleep, removing the toxins, poisons and sour, indigestible waste without griping or inconvenience. Cascarets regulate by strengthening the bowel muscles. They cost so little too.—Adv.

Playing Safe.

Mr. Hardface—No, dear! I can't kiss you here; it's too light.

Miss Manchaser—But you kissed me on this very spot last night under the electric light.

Mr. Hardface—True, but this is daylight and some one might get a snapshot of me with a concealed camera.

Little Friends of the Liver

The liver is the regulator of health. If the liver is active and well, good health and happiness prevail; but once you allow your liver to get torpid and sluggish, life becomes a misery. Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Constipation, Headaches and Melancholy assail you, resulting in lack of energy, loss of memory and ill health; but remember Carter's Little Liver Pills touch the liver and correct all liver ills.

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs.

It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses.

It is not recommended for everything.

It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best. On sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to try this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

GOOD ROADS

ESSENTIALS OF GOOD ROADS

Rules Outlined for Construction of Stone Thoroughfares—Drainage Is Important.

The essential requirements of good stone road construction may be condensed into the following rules:

1. Cut the high places down to a grade not exceeding 1 to 20; fill up flats or low places so as to have a minimum grade of 1 to 200.

2. Construct subdrains to carry away all seepage water; also make enough cross-drains to dispose of surface-water. Fig. 1 shows a subdrain of drain-tile covered with stone. Fig. 2 shows a subdrain made of logs, and Fig. 3 shows one made of field stone.

3. Make the subgrade firm and solid and give it the same curvature as the surface of the finished road.

4. Spread the bottom course of stone evenly, then roll and add a little fine material for a binder, and continue the rolling until the stones cease to sink and creep in front of the roller.

5. Spread the second course and roll it with the addition of binder and water until the whole surface is hard and smooth, carefully filling with stone any depressions that may appear; then finish the whole with a course of three-quarter-inch stone and screenings. This must be soaked with water and rolled until the surface is hard and unyielding. Always be careful to commence the rolling at the sides and gradually work toward the center; by so doing the crown of the road will be preserved. If this work is well and thoroughly done the result will be a road that is smooth, hard and convenient for travel at all seasons of the year. Fig. 4 shows a cross-section of a macadam road, with layers of stone compacted in place.

For a farming community the width of macadam need not be greater than 10 or 12 feet. The width of stone surface should be sufficient to take care of all the travel on the road; but on the other hand it should not be so great as to require unnecessary expense in the construction or maintenance of the road.

When water has to be conveyed from one side of a road to the other it should be taken under the road by means of a culvert. A stone culvert is, of course, the best, but a vitrified tile pipe or a corrugated metal culvert may be used.

Lastly, give the road a good coat of suitable road oil to prevent dust and retard much damage to automobiles.

PROBLEM OF GOOD HIGHWAYS

Becoming One of Increasing Importance Because of Changes in Methods of Travel.

The road problem of the country is becoming one of ever-increasing importance, largely because of the changes in methods of travel which enable the city man to reach farther and farther into the country district. He does this first from a business or economic standpoint, and, second, from a pleasure-seeking standpoint. In an exactly similar manner, the farmer is getting fully aroused to the importance of better and better roads. They enable him to get to the city markets with his produce, whether that produce may be something requiring frequent trips, such as milk to a creamery, garden truck to market, or staple products to be hauled in their proper season. The better the roads, the cheaper he can haul his produce and the quicker he can do so, resulting in a saving of time, and the better choice he has of market conditions.

ESSENTIAL POINTS OF ROADS

Concrete Highways Reduce Pull, Increase the Load and Shorten Time of Delivery.

Concrete roads reduce the pull, increase the load and shorten the time—three essential points in modern road construction. With the quality of permanence added, the price paid becomes an investment instead of a loss.

BEST FOR MARKETING CROPS

Farmers Enabled to Haul Produce When Prices Are Highest if Highways Are Improved.

Good roads give a wider choice of time for marketing crops. If roads were kept in condition to permit travel and hauling at all times and in all kinds of weather, farmers would not have to rush their produce to market in seasons of good roads, but could haul it when prices were highest and when their crops did not demand attention.

COOKIES and SMALL CAKES

From the NEW ROYAL COOK BOOK

WHEN the children romp in hungry as young bears, here are some wholesome, economical delights that will not only be received with glee, but will satisfy the most ravenous appetite in a most wholesome manner.

Cookies

½ cup shortening
2 cups sugar
½ cup milk
2 eggs
¼ teaspoon grated nutmeg
1 teaspoon vanilla extract or grated rind of 1 lemon
4 cups flour
3 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder

Cream shortening and sugar together; add milk to beaten eggs and beat again; add slowly to creamed shortening and sugar; add nutmeg and flavoring; add 2 cups flour sifted with baking powder; add enough more flour to make stiff dough. Roll out very thin on floured board; cut with cookie cutter, sprinkle with sugar, or put a raisin or a piece of English walnut in the center of each. Bake about 12 minutes in hot oven.

Cocoa Drop Cakes

4 tablespoons shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg
½ cup milk
1¾ cups flour
2 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
½ cup cocoa
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Cream shortening; add sugar and well-beaten egg; beat well and add milk slowly; sift flour, baking powder, salt and cocoa into mixture; stir until smooth, add vanilla. Put one tablespoon of batter into each greased muffin tin and bake in moderate oven about 20 minutes. Cover with boiled icing.

Orange Cakes

4 tablespoons shortening
1 cup sugar
½ cup milk
1 egg
2 cups flour
3 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon orange extract
grated rind of 1 orange

Cream shortening; add sugar slowly, beating well; add milk a little at a time; then add well-beaten egg; sift flour, baking powder and salt together and add to mixture; add flavoring and grated orange rind; mix well. Bake in greased shallow tin, or individual cake tins, in hot oven 15 to 20 minutes. When cool cover with orange icing.

TEACHER SHORT OF SUPPLIES

Tommy's Excuse Rather a Poor One, but He Was in a Mighty Tight Corner.

The village schoolmaster had done very well with his war saving association. The scholars brought in their pennies regularly every week; some even had as much as a shilling to subscribe.

One Monday morning Mrs. Oates gave her son Tommy the sum of threepence to pay in. On his return for dinner the good lady asked to see his card.

"Look here, Tommy," she said sternly, "there's only twopence entered here! How is that?"

Tommy grew pale as he saw that his sin had found him out. But the taffee in the village shop had been so tempting. However, he did his best.

"Yes, mother," he stammered, "that's all the ink the teacher had."—London Answers.

NOTHING TO DO BUT WORK!

When One Thinks of It, It Is Rather a Foolish Way to Spend One's Lifetime.

The most common complaint we hear from everybody we know is that they can't keep up with all there is to be done. We make the same complaint. Like you all, we undertake to do seventeen thousand things more than the hours of the day will permit us to do.

It is an awful mistake. To be driven like a galley slave is the rule we have made for our lives. And, oh, to quit it all, or to quit all but the things we would like to do and are worth while!

To never catch up, to never know what it is not to be tired—it is a foolish way to spend a lifetime. This one and only little lifetime that is ours.

And what are we to do about it? Cut loose and run away; we guess it is the only thing to do.—Los Angeles Times.

Reckless Experiment.

"Friend," said Cactus Joe to the man who had just alighted from the bus, "could you tell us what a soviet is?"

"What do you want to know for?"

"Crimson Gulch has been getting so orderly and subdued that some of our most prominent citizens are talking about leaving. We need some excitement and we wouldn't mind a little trouble if it didn't last too long. From what I can hear a soviet, if it was managed right, would about fill the bill."

If it weren't for your friends ther'd be no fun in anything.

MUSIC OF ANCIENT GREECE

Bands That Marched to War With the Soldiers Played on Flutes, Pipes and Harps.

Poetry in ancient Greece was accompanied by the cithara and the lyre, while the flute was played by both men and women in furnishing martial music to the soldiers in time of war. Musical bands marched to war with the soldiers and played on flutes, pipes and harps.

The lyre and the harp were preferred by the Greeks for private use, for it was thought they did not prevent one from remaining master of himself, while the flute, pipe or clarinet put the man beside himself and obscured reason. There were extensive choirs whose music was distinctly connected with the religious life of the people. These choirs were composed of both men and women and were employed for public and private religious festivals.

The choirs celebrated victories in war, deaths, holy days, births and marriages. Alkman, who lived as early as 650 B. C., wrote a choir song for girls which was a dramatic part song.

There's no secret to success; anybody can achieve it who will work hard enough for it.

Ohio Folks Who Made a Discovery

Cleveland, Ohio.—"Through overwork and heavy lifting I developed a very bad case of woman's weakness. I became all run-down, weak and nervous. I seemed to suffer with pains and aches all through my body. I doctored for some time and was confined to my bed for seven weeks. Nothing seemed to give me any relief until I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Golden Medical Discovery, and the combined use of these medicines completely cured me and I have been strong and healthy ever since. I would say in conclusion that by the time I had taken two bottles I was able to get out of my bed. I am glad to lend my name to recommend these good medicines."—Mrs. M. M. I didn't get up again for two months. My limbs were stiff and weak—had to be helped to a chair. I was under the doctor's care all that time. He said I had lung trouble and would only last through the summer. My husband bought me Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, Pleasant Pellets and Golden Medical Discovery. They cured me sound and well."—Mrs. Flora D. Barnett, 218 Orange St.

A little girl had been naughty, and her mother told her she must have no pudding for dinner. Later, the others ate a nice jam pudding, while the culprit received only bread and butter.

Jeanie obeyed. Closing her eyes and her hands, she said, with emphasis:

"For what they have received may they be truly thankful."

LESSON FOR MAY 2

THE BOY SAMUEL.

LESSON TEXT—I Sam. 1:24-28; 2:1-21.

GOLDEN TEXT—My son, give me thine heart, and let thine eyes observe my ways.—Prov. 23:26.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—I Sam. 1:1-23; 2:1-36.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Child Samuel in God's House.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Boy Who Listened and Obeyed.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Training for Religious Leadership.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Religious Capacities in the Training of Children.

I. Samuel Given to the Lord (1:24-28).

Samuel was given to Hannah in answer to prayer. His name means "asked of God." For a time he was cared for by his mother in the home. In asking God for a son she vowed to dedicate him to the Lord. Accordingly at an early age she took him to the sanctuary and gave him over to the charge of Eli. Thus in his tender years he ministered to the Lord.

II. Features of Israel's History in This Period.

1. A demoralized priesthood. (1) The priests were actuated by greed (2:12-17). It was God's will that those who ministered at the altar should live of the things of the altar, but they broke through the divine regulations touching this matter and were securing their selfish ends by force. (2) The priests polluted the courts of God's house with the grossest immorality (2:22).

2. An alienated people. The only thing which separates people from God is sin.

3. A cessation of divine revelation (3:1). God was silent—"The word of God was precious in those days; there was no open vision." The message from the Lord was more a matter of memory than an active experience. The same thing in principle is true of the individual life today; some who once enjoyed fellowship with God no longer hear his voice speaking to them.

III. God Calls Samuel (3:2-10).

In striking contrast with the degeneracy of the nation we have brought before us the beautiful life of Samuel. We see God getting ready for the regeneration of the nation. Dwelling within the sacred courts and ministering before the Lord with Eli, is the innocent Samuel, who is to be the savior of his people. In Samuel we have a striking pattern of child religion. The Lord gave him in answer to Hannah's prayer. From his birth he was dedicated to the Lord. While quite young his mother took him to the sanctuary of the Lord where he served and slept. It is a good thing to have much sin forgiven, but it is better far to grow up without sin. Two traits in Samuel's character stand out in this call; namely, his cheerful obedience to the Lord's call and his surrendered will. It was no easy thing to respond cheerfully to the thrice repeated call. It may have seemed to him to be unreasonable, but each time he obeyed in simplicity.

IV. Samuel's First Prophetic Message (3:11-18).

Up to this time Samuel obeyed the one who was over him, but the time had now come when he must directly hear and obey the Lord. The first message entrusted to him is a most terrible one. To deliver it is a most trying task. He hesitated to tell it to Eli, but when pressed by him he manifested the true courage which was lying back of his fear. It must have been a bitter sting to Eli to see Samuel recognized and himself passed by, but he was submissive. He knew that the slight was just; he could not fail to interpret it thus in view of the appearance of the man of God to him (2:27-36). This fearful visitation upon Eli's house was due to the sins of his sons. He was held accountable for not restraining them. Parental laxity is most cruel. There is an age in which children may be restrained, but when passed over the power to restrain goes with it.

V. Samuel Established in the Prophetic Office (3:19-21).

"And Samuel grew, and the Lord was with him, and did let none of his words fall to the ground. And all Israel, from Dan even to Beersheba knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet of the Lord." This is a verification of the saying "Him that honors me I will honor." Little did Hannah realize that the boy who had been given in answer to her prayer would one day become the head of the nation. This new position brought great danger to the boy, but the God who raised him up was able to sustain him.

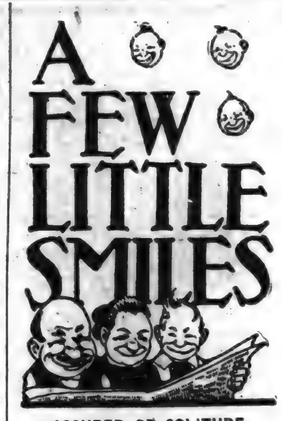
Faith and Waiting.

The most difficult business in the world is waiting. No one can do it without some kind of faith. It is a venture of triumphant faith. The great believers have been the unwearied waiters; faith meant to them, not controversial opinion, but sustaining power.—Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick.

Like Our Shadows.

False friends are like our shadows, keeping close to us while we walk in the sunshine, but leaving us the instant we cross into the shade.

A FEW LITTLE SMILES



ASSURED OF SOLITUDE.

"What do you think of this rich man providing himself with a handsome tomb to sleep in after he's dead?"

"He might have put the money into a hospital, a public park or a library."

"Yes?"

"People would naturally visit those places. It's a cinch they'll never resort to his tomb in large numbers."

Family Matters.

"I shall complain to the floorwalker about you," said the irate shopper.

"I have no doubt he will agree with everything you say," answered the saleslady, wearily.

"Ah! Then he is acquainted with your shortcomings?"

"He thinks he is. He's my husband."

A Sin of Omission.

"When I enlisted," explained the doughboy with an injured air, "I read the posters that said, 'Join the army and see the world.'"

"Yes" said the recruiting officer.

"But after I was in," the soldier continued, "I found that two words had been omitted on the poster."

"And what were they?"

"'On foot.'"—Home Sector.

They Bought Variety.

"What caused the Gadspurs to break off their friendly relations with the Grabcoins?"

"Incompatible ancestors."

"What do you mean?"

"The Gadspurs' ancestors are the real thing, but the Grabcoin outfit was purchased in the open market."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

A SMALL MATTER.

"Ouch! Didn't you take off a piece of my ear that time?"

"Don't be alarmed, sir; not enough to affect the hearing."

Unstability.

Ambition goes a restless way,
As history doth prove.
When any gets where he would stay,
Fate still says, "It's your move!"

Seeds and Berries.

"People have various names for money. One man will speak of 50 seeds, another of 50 berries."

"Yes, and some make money produce, while others merely consume it."

One Exception.

"Talk is cheap."

"Just you wait until congress begins to argue about spending the people's money."

Might Be a Mote.

Youth (eager to gain a place on the sofa)—Permit me to remove the mote, won't you?

Maiden—Thank you, I would, only—only——

Youth—Only what?

Maiden—Only I see such a beam in your eye!—Cartoons.

Tit for Tat.

Mabel—Here comes Charlie Dubb up the walk. That boy gives me the shivers.

Marie—Why don't you give him the shake?

So It Goes.

"Do you remember the old fashioned triangular shawls?"

"They'd look funny now."

"But the girls have 'em in a different shape, and they look nifty."

Nothing Left.

Judge—Have you anything to offer the court before sentence is passed on you?

Prisoner—No, your honor; my lawyer took my last dollar.

The Result.

"Somebody played a joke on Jim. Sent him a barrel of what he thought were fine oysters."

"Where was the joke?"

"When he went to shuck them, there weren't any oysters there."

"Then he must have been shell-shocked."

Oh, Fudge.

"I see no objection to a slush fund."

"Eh?"

"If it is used to clean up the streets."

DOESN'T NEED ANY LAXATIVES NOW

Mr. Becker says life is a joy, without constipation or stomach trouble.

"I had catarrh of the stomach and head for three years. My stomach was so bad that every time I ate anything sweet, such as fruit or pastry, the burning hot water would run out of my mouth. I took a laxative every night.

"Since taking Milks Emulsion my bowels move regularly. I have now taken ten bottles and have gained 10½ pounds. All my friends remark how fine I am looking, and it seems a pleasure to live again, without stomach trouble."—Bert Becker, Miami, Ohio.

Physics usually make slaves out of their users, and weaken the bowels instead of correcting them. Stomach trouble in many cases is directly due to constipation.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whom sickness has weakened, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream. Truly wonderful for weak, sickly children.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. Price 60c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

The Shady Sort.

"If you hire the right sort of a lawyer you can get out of this scrape."

"But how am I to know who is the right kind of a lawyer?"

"Pick out one who has a shabby office, although he could easily afford the best."

"What's the idea?"

"A lawyer of that kind is apt to be very successful in handling the affairs of clients who get fussed when they see mahogany furniture, thick carpets and elegant chandeliers."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

DON'T think that because your stomach can digest food you are proof against indigestion. The most important digestive work is done by the bowels, liver and kidneys. Unless these are active and work in harmony, you are in danger of self-poisoning.

Willing to Risk It.

One of the recent recruits to the army, a raw-boned Arkansan, was undergoing his examination by a lieutenant on the insignia worn by officers of various grades.

"What do two silver bars mean?" queried the lieutenant.

"Cap'n."

"One gold bar?"

"Second loot'nant."

"Silver eagle?"

The rookie scratched his head.

"Well, I ain't right sure about that one," he confessed, "but I reckon I'd take a chance and salute him, anyhow."—The Home Sector.

To know how to wait is the great secret of success.—De Maistre.

Strange Raise.

"Even brooms are going up."

"Yet you would expect to find a sweeping reduction in brooms."

Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills contain nothing but vegetable ingredients, which act gently as a tonic and purgative by stimulation and not by irritation.—Adv.

The Dear, Dead Days.

"Does your wife object to your going out with your men friends?" asked Jimkins.

"Not my married men friends," replied Sheard. "But she draws the line at bachelors."

"Why?"

"She says whenever I go out with a party of bachelors I always return home greatly depressed."

Commencement Services

Another milestone, and perhaps the greatest in the school life of any boy or girl, that of the high school graduation, has been passed. Last Saturday evening concluded a very busy week in the graduation exercises of the Concord Township High School.

The class of 1920 was one of the largest that has been given diplomas in many years. The members were as follows: Mary E. Armstrong, Carson M. Culler, Clara M. Donley, Geneva P. Martin, Kenneth J. Roberts, Pauline M. Barney, Charley H. Curie, Faye V. Hughes, Mary Lois Murphy, Correll G. Simanton, Edith M. Berry, Donald C. Davis, Gladys M. Layman, M. Marguerite Milliman, Garnett L. Wyatt.

The Class Day program was given on Tuesday evening at the opera house and a full house was in attendance. The program was of exceptional quality. The graduates taking part in the program had given their productions some hard thinking, giving the history of the class; the prophecy showed that we might expect something from the members as they were fitted for almost any walk of life. After the miscellaneous part of the evening's program the class put on a play entitled "The Heavenly Twins." This was the experiences of two college chums and it was well rendered by the class. The music and the numbers were all good showing that much work had been put on the affair to please the public.

Thursday evening a large crowd was present at the Commencement exercises. The stage was tastefully decorated with the class colors, old rose and gold. Across the front of the stage was a fence like effect from each side leading up to a gate way at the center. At each side of the gate was a large cluster of pink roses with ferns and plants on either side. Leading the procession to their seats on the stage was Little Miss Patrice Wineland, who carried a herald with large gold letters "1920" and she stood in the gate until the class was seated and she then marched off the stage. She was bedecked in roses and with her curls streaming down her back, she was a picture. Prof. H. B. Gough, of Greencastle, Ind., made the evening's address, the subject being "The Crowd."

The class desires to thank the public for their patronage and also the ones that assisted them in their week's work. The receipts for the week was $125 as reported by the treasurer of the class and they had sufficient to meet all their obligations.

Saturday evening, the Alumni banquet was held at the school house in honor of the class and a large crowd attended. The evening was spent pleasantly and over 100 tickets were sold for the event. The lunch was served cafeteria style.

Gray Woodcox, of Garrett, spent over Sunday at this place.

Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Gunder and two friends, of Ft. Wayne; Will Koch and wife, and Grover Ward and wife, spent Sunday afternoon with Clay Coburn and family.

Obituary

Maggie C. Peterson was born in Pennsylvania, May 1, 1848. She was first united in marriage to William L. Carson. To this union were born four children, three of whom, C. E. Carson, W. B. Carson and H. S. Carson of South Connellsville Pa., survive. The daughter having passed away at the age of fifteen. The husband died in 1893.

She was again united to Walter E. Peterson about ten years ago, and since that time has made her home in Indiana About five years ago she moved with her husband to St. Joe, and has made her home here since that time. Shortly after locating at St. Joe, she united with the M. P. Church and remained a faithful member. While her health did not permit her regular attendance, yet she was willing to do what she could.

One week ago, her late husband was laid to rest, and on April 28th, she was seised with the illness from which she never rallied. Interment will follow funeral services at South Connellsville on Thursday.

Short services were held at the home on Tuesday evening at 7:30, conducted by Rev. C. O. Johnson. The funeral party left on train No. 6, due at 9:45 P. M.

We Feel This Way Ourselves Sometimes

A certain buyer, upon receiving a request to send a check to cover his bill, sent the following letter:

"For the following reasons, I am unable to send you the check asked for: "I have been held up, held down, sandbagged, walked on, sat on, flattened out and squeesed: First, by the Government for Federal War Tax, Excess Profit Tax, Liberty Bonds, Thrift Stamps, Capital Stock Tax, Merchants' License and Auto Tax, and then by every society and organization that the inventive mind of man can invent to extract what I may, or may not, possess.

"I have been solicited by the Society of John the Baptist, the G. A. R., the Woman's Relief, the Navy League, the Red Cross, the Black Cross, the Double Cross, the Children's Home, the Dorcas Society, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Boy Scouts, the Jewish Relief and every hospital in town. Then, on top of it all came the Associated Charities and the Salvation Army."

"The government has so governed my business that I don't know who owns it. I am inspected, suspected, examined, and re-examined, informed, required and commanded, so I don't know who I am, where I am or why I am here. All I know is I am supposed to be an inexhaustible supply of money for every known need, desire or hope of the human race. And because I will not sell all I have and go out and beg, borrow or steal money to give away, I have been cussed, discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, lied about, held up, hung up, robbed and nearly ruined, and the only reason I am clinging to life is to see what is coming next."

ROADS HARD ON AUTO TIRES

Yearly Cost to Owners of Cars is Something Like $1,000,000,000 in Wear.

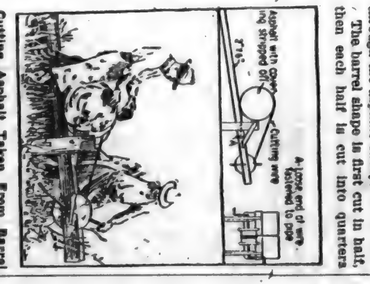
A great deal has been said and written, in discussing the roads and road building in the United States, about the wear and tear of automobiles on the roads, but a brand-new element seems to have been brought in by the director of roads of the American Automobile association, who says of construction of the nation's highways that "automobile traffic now wears out something like 40,000,000 tires a year, costing automobile owners something like $1,000,000,000; and on the roads as they now are, it can be argued, from data already accumulated, that the tractive resistance, otherwise wear and tear, varies from 20 pounds or more on one kind of road to 800 pounds or more on another. The consumption of gasoline also is said to vary with the character of the road on which an automobile is traveling. The fact is startling, but it appears that the cost of building a national system of roads that would produce the least possible wear and tear on automobiles would be balanced by the decreased expense for tires.

PLAN FOR CUTTING ASPHALT

Method Shown in Illustrations Is Time and Labor Saver—Wire Cuts Through Material.

Asphalt is usually shipped in tin barrels. The metal is stripped off and the asphalt rolled up to the stopping board; the wire shown, attached to the winding drum, is passed over and around the asphalt to a piece of pipe under and ahead of the stop board. When the drum is turned it tightens up on the wire and causes it to cut through the asphalt. Kerosene is poured on the wire to make it pass through the asphalt easily.

The barrel shape is first cut in half; then each half is cut into quarters which a man can handle easily. In warm weather asphalt is soft, therefore it cannot be cut or broken with an ax or other tool, so this machine is a time and labor saver.—George C. Peck, in Popular Science Monthly.



Cutting Asphalt Taken From Barrel With a Wire Drawn Through It With a Windlass.

KEEP ON URGING GOOD ROADS

Improved Highways Are Fundamentally Essential to Highest Advancement of Civilization.

We are doing well in acquiring and building roads at present, and our legislation is to be commended for starting this creditable work; but when we find a creditable road going past every farm, through every village, town and city, then will it be time enough to cease talking "good roads." They are fundamentally as essential to the highest advancement of our own civilization.

HELP APPEARANCE OF HOMES

Good Roads Stimulate Farmers to Improve Appearance of Farms and Buildings Thereon.

Along improved roads there is a visible tendency for farmers to improve the appearance of their homes. Here their outbuildings seem many times more comfortable, and their fences more practical expressions. There is no wonder that a bog of mud-high impassable mud before one's door should react unfavorably upon the entire family.

All Share in Good Roads.

Good roads benefit more people than any other public institution. Saint and sinner, man and woman and child, young and old, rich and poor—all have a share in the benefits of good roads.

Poor Roads Expensive.

Good roads help in transporting farm products. The farmers of this nation are annually losing $200,000,000 because of their inability to market their produce at certain times of the year.

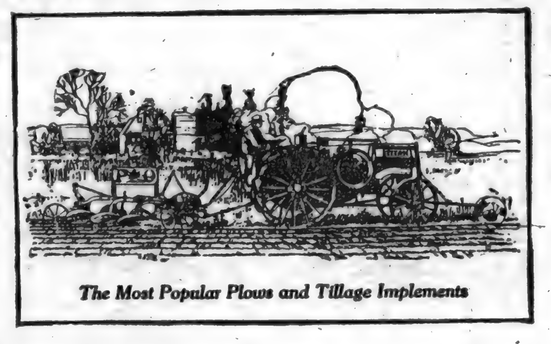
The Most Efficient Tractors and Power Machines



The Most Popular Plows and Tillage Implements

YOU know these trade names. Your father and grandfather knew three of them. They knew in their time, and you know today that these names stand for the highest quality farm machinery in the world. McCormick built the first practical reaper, Deering sold the first twine binder and was a good-twine pioneer, and William Parlin was one of the first steel plow pioneers. The lines of harvesting machines and plows started by these farm machine builders have been growing and developing ever since. Other machines have been invented and developed by the same manufacturers, and every new machine and implement has had built into it the years of manufacturing experience and farm knowledge accumulated by McCormick, Deering, Parlin and their successors. Now all of these machines and implements have been merged into one line—the International Harvester. The reputation of every machine and implement in this line is the same.

We Sell the International Line

What does this mean to you as a farmer? It means, first of all, that you can buy any farm machine or implement you may need, right here in this town, without taking chances on experiments or implements that might be "orphaned" one or two years after you buy them because of the manufacturer going out of business. You can always get repairs for any machine or implement in the International line because the Harvester Company will never go out of business. You are assured of reliable machines because every machine in the Harvester line is tried out and tested under actual farm conditions, before being offered for sale to the farmer. The Experimental Department of the Harvester Company is the most thorough and active institution of its kind.

It means, second, that you can get repairs and repair service on all of these machines through one concern—us. You don't have to go to the bother and inconvenience of trying to get repairs and service from half a dozen or more different companies. You won't be taking chances on expensive delays waiting for repairs during the busy seasons because we are going to carry a big stock of repairs on hand and any repairs that we might not have we can get for you in a hurry by a 'phone call to the International Harvester branch house.

Tack this advertisement up in your machine shed so that whenever you need repairs for any of your International machines you will know where to go. Also, you will know where to go when you are in the market for new machines or implements of real quality and the highest operating efficiency.

Nature's Color Scheme.

Imagine the effect if the food and the leaves of the trees were tinted a magenta or scarlet instead of green! Some specialists scientists think the foliage of the planet Mars is red, and that the people there are being red continually. It would not be difficult to believe that keeping the peace on this good green earth is not as hard as it would be had our planet been painted red in the beginning.—Minneapolis Journal.

Observations of Connecticut Naturalist.

There is a reason why cats, walk on a rope there they have a better chance to get the hay at the land. Thus, when the cat desires to return, it has traveled, its way home is then clear. A cat generally has a good reason for everything it does.—Farmingville Correspondence Ridgefield Press.

Wearing Time for Moose.

Moose drop their antlers from December 15 to January 15, as a rule, though a few aged ones may retain theirs until February. Old hunters say that they could go out in the woods to certain spots favored by the moose at horn-shedding time, and pick up a haystack of fine antlers in a forenoon 50 years ago, though they have not been so plentiful of late. The moose enters well keep for an hour or two after being immersed in water. Those shed in the winter soon rot away, but in the spring, a small borer gets into them and reduces them to a fine powder in a few weeks. Though thousands of antlers are dropped in the forests every winter, few hunters ever find one the next summer.

Why Breathe Through the Nose?

Reasons for breathing through the nose instead of the mouth are: (1) to warm the air; (2) to moisten the air; (3) to remove the dust and germs; (4) to produce more suction in the chest, which helps draw blood into the lungs as well as air; this helps the heart and puts only a slight extra strain on the heart.—Boston Transcript.

Show Volcanic Formation.

The whole of the west of Scotland and northeast Ireland is of volcanic formation. Look at the Giant causeway, with its great pipes of basalt, and the Dee of Skye, which is simply made of lava. Staffa consists of sheets of bedded basaltic lava, and the famous Fingal's cave is excavated from Pearl Fishing.

If pearls should ever become really common, nobody would exchange street car fare for them. Hence it is not a strange fact that a big pearl-fishing enterprise would be ruined if 10,000 pearls were suddenly put on the market. Even if the output were limited to 1,000 pearls a year, the industry would be ruined. Though a pearl necklace may be dissolved in vinegar, alcohol does not affect it. Unlike the diamond and many other precious gems, the pearl is not brittle and is not easily broken or chipped. One might hurl a pearl against a hard pavement without much danger of damage, except the possible scratching or the smooth, lustrous surface.

Reflection.

All the world used her ill, said this young person, and we may be pretty certain that persons whom all the world treats ill deserve the treatment they get. The world is a looking glass and gives back to every man the reflection of his own face. Frown at it, and it will in turn look sour upon you; deal unkindly with it, and it will treat you unkindly back.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

France Establishes 30 as Bachelor Age.

The time-honored question of the ages at which a man becomes a bachelor and a woman a spinster is about to be settled by France. The finance committee of the chamber of deputies intends to fix 30 years as the age at which an unmarried man in France becomes liable to the bachelor tax of 10 per cent. It is expected that this tax will become effective on June 1. The impending decision was said to have hastened many marriages during the Easter holidays.

BEDFAST EVERY WINTER; STOMACH TROUBLE GONE

Mrs. Mershon Found Speedy Relief After 18 Years' Suffering.

"I had suffered from stomach trouble for 18 years, and had spent hundreds of dollars doctoring. Every winter I was bedfast most of the time. I commenced taking Milks Emulsion last fall, and before I had taken six bottles my stomach trouble disappeared and I have had no return of it since. This is the first winter in 18 years that I have not been bedfast. I also give Milks Emulsion to the children for croup, with splendid results."—Mrs. W. G. Mershon, Brazil, Ind.

Thousands of people who have suffered for years from stomach and bowel troubles, as Mrs. Mershon did, have found the same wonderful relief and lasting benefit from Milks Emulsion.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whom sickness has weakened, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. Price 50c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. WATER WITH ASPIRIN

Bayer Company, who introduced Aspirin in 1900, give proper directions.

The Bayer Company, who introduced Aspirin, tell in their careful directions in each package of genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" that to get best results one or two glasses of water should be drank after taking tablets.

"Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" to be genuine must be marked with the safety "Bayer Cross." Then you are getting the genuine, world-famous Aspirin, prescribed by physicians for over eighteen years.

Each unbroken "Bayer" package contains proper directions for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Neuritis, and Pain generally.

Handy tin boxes of twelve tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.—Adv.

BELOVED GOLF CAME FIRST

Little Things Like Marital Ties and the Demands of Business Didn't Worry These Devotees.

A golfer's wife had just told her husband that she intended to leave him forever, not because he was a golfer, but for some other reason.

"Will nothing alter your decision? Will nothing induce you to stay?" he asked.

The wife was obdurate.

"Well, he said, "it is a terrible shock, but while you are packing, I think I will go out on the lawn and do a little putting!"

This is reminiscent of a story of one of the heroes of golf, an Edinburgh tinkeeper who lived a hundred years ago or thereabouts. He was so devoted to the game that he started playing at dawn and was seen at night putting on the greens by the light of a candle. At last his wife applied for a separation on the ground that her husband was not attending to his business.

He went to the court, admitted the impeachment, and said: "She can have all I got if she will give me so much a week to buy golf balls. She can look after the business!"

Do you recall anything that has more modestly appealed to the public than has Fletcher's Castoria: modest in all its claims, pleading at all times—and truthfully—for our babies?

The big splurg, the misleading claims may win for a time, but the honest truth-telling advertiser is like the old story of the tortoise that beat the hare.

Mothers everywhere, and their daughters, now mothers, speak frankly, glowingly, enthusiastically in praise of Fletcher's Castoria. Speak of it lovingly as a friend that has brought comfort, cheer and smiles to their little-one.

There are substitutes and imitations as there are for the diamond, for anything of value. One might almost say that that which is not copied has no value. So you have had the signature of Chas. H. MUFFINS and POPOVERS

From the NEW ROYAL COOK BOOK

BREAKFAST is too often eaten as a duty rather than a joy. The success of the day may depend upon the spirit of breakfast. The Royal Educational Department presents some breakfast dishes that will send the children to school with a hip hip hurrah and his majesty man to his daily duties with the "up and doing" feeling which knows no discouragement.

Muffins

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
2 eggs
1 tablespoon shortening

Sift together flour, baking powder, sugar and salt; add milk, well-beaten eggs and melted shortening; mix well. Grease muffin tins and put two tablespoons of batter into each. Bake in hot oven 30 to 35 minutes.

Eggless Muffins

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons shortening

Mix and sift dry ingredients, add milk and melted shortening and beat until smooth. Bake in greased muffin tins in hot oven 20 to 25 minutes.

Corn Muffins

¾ cup corn meal
1¼ cups flour
4 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons shortening
1 egg

Sift together corn meal, flour, baking powder, salt and sugar; add milk, melted shortening and well-beaten egg; mix well. Grease muffin tins and drop two tablespoons of mixture into each. Bake about 25 minutes in hot oven.

Popovers

2 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
2 cups milk

Sift together flour and salt. Make a well in flour, break eggs into well, add milk and stir until smooth. Pour into hot greased gem pans and bake 25 to 35 minutes in a very hot oven. If taken out of oven too soon they will fall.

TWO STORIES OF ST. GEORGE

One Recounts His Slaying of the Dragon and the Other Makes Him Christian Martyr.

St. George, a noble Christian youth of Cappadocia, so the legend runs, in the full panoply of a knight, with a red cross on his shield, was riding forth one day to join his legion when he came to a city the inhabitants of which were being gradually destroyed by a terrible monster. The king's daughter was about to be offered as a sacrifice to appease the creature and the princess was going weeping to her fate when St. George spurred his horse forward and pinned the dragon to the ground with his lance. This is the picture one usually sees of St. George and it decorates one of the coins of England. Legend aside, St. George is believed to have been a Christian martyr who suffered under Diocletian in the year 290. Old chronicles state that St. George helped the English forces in one of the crusades. Edward III was the first to invoke his aid when at the siege of Calais he cried, "Ha! St. Edward, Ha! St. George." As the result was a crushing victory St. George was adopted as the patron saint of England and the red cross on his shield was placed in the "union jack."

HANDSOME COAT OF VELOURS

There are many handsome coats of wool velours among the new spring models. Here is one in beige color decorated with inlays of satin and satin-covered buttons in a much darker shade, joined by narrow silk braid.

FOR SUMMER AFTERNOONS

For summertime and afternoons, here is a frock which may be worn with assurance on the promenade or anywhere else. Any of the sheer materials—georgette, voile, lawn, organdie, will serve to make it. Its new style features are apparent in the wide hem and girdle, the round neck and deep cuffs. A simple and smart braiding on the front of the blouse contributes to its success with just the right amount of decoration.

TO SAVE BABY CHICKS

Put this in the drinking water.

Most people lose half of every batch, and seem to expect it. Chick cholera, or white diarrhoea is the trouble.

This loss is needless and easily stopped, by putting Avicol in the drinking water. We prove it by this offer:—

Call at our store for a 25c or 50c package of Avicol. If you don't find that it promptly stops your chicks dying, cures white diarrhoea and all other bowel diseases of poultry, your money will be refunded.

Avicol revives the drooping chicks and helps them grow and develop rapidly. Shows positive results in 48 hours. Easily used and inexpensive.

CHEESE MAKING IS PROGRESSING

Car Loads Now Being Shipped From Mountain Districts Which Formerly Made None.

PRODUCT OF GOOD QUALITY

Recent Advanced Steps Have Been Perfecting of Marketing System Creating Much Interest and Enthusiasm in Production.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Previous to 1914 the South shipped no cheese. In 1915, $3,000 worth was manufactured and shipped from southern mountain districts, and during 1917 cheese to the value of $246,000 was manufactured. There are now 43 cheese factories in operation in the mountain sections of the South which ship carloads of good quality cheese to market periodically.

The rapid strides in the development of cheese factories in the mountain regions of the South, as the result of the efforts of the United States department of agriculture, co-operating with state agricultural colleges, is shown forcefully in reports of the progress of the work coming to the department. No cheese was shipped from the South previous to 1914. Although smaller lots were shipped earlier, the first carload of southern-produced cheese was shipped from North Carolina and Tennessee on July 24, 1918. This was a co-operative shipment from eight local factories and comprised about 16,000 pounds, the value of which was approximately 25 cents a pound.

Factories in Mountains.

Forty-three cheese factories now are in operation in the mountain regions of the South where cold springs of water on each farm provide excellent facilities for keeping the milk in such a condition that it produces a high quality of cheese. Abundant rainfall, luxuriant grass, high altitude, and a moderate temperature all combine to make this region especially adapted for the production of cheese which can compete on the market successfully with that produced in any other section of the country, say dairy specialists of the United States department of agriculture.

The most recent advanced steps in the progress of the cheese-making industry in the South have been the perfecting of the marketing system whereby one of the large packing companies sends a refrigerator car to a central shipping point periodically. Since the initial carload shipment from North Carolina and Tennessee, carloads have been going forward nearly every ten days. A representative of the packing company receives from the various factories the cheese which is brought in by wagon, and immediately issues a check on the local bank for all cheese received. The bank in turn promptly pays the patrons of the factories for the cheese.

Creating Interest.

The plan of marketing milk through cheese factories has increased the interest in cheese manufacturing throughout the southern mountain districts. The improved market service is not only creating much interest and enthusiasm for cheese production, but incidentally it is creating interest in other farm products. Recently one of the field men of the department of agriculture was at one of the factories and observed many farmers bringing in wagon loads of potatoes which were hauled to the cheese-shipping point for shipment in a refrigerator car.

In a number of counties arrangements have been made to obtain cheese boxes from local lumber concerns in order to relieve the extra cost of shipping these boxes long distances. On account of the war, men cheese makers are hard to get, so women are being trained for the work. Already five women have been engaged as cheese makers.

TURN ATTENTION TO RABBITS

Cheap Substitute for Ordinary Meats and Can Be Kept in Inexpensive Buildings.

The fact that rabbits are a cheap substitute for the ordinary meats is likely to turn the attention of many more persons to rearing them now, specialists of the United States department of agriculture believe. They can be kept in small and inexpensive pens and buildings and, like poultry, can be killed and prepared for the table on short notice.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Fordson Works 30 Days and Nights Without a Stop

For 721 1-4 hours a Fordson worked continuously at Wichita harvesting wheat and oats, plowing, discing, dragging roads, etc. In 30 days and nights, prior to the National Tractor show at Wichita last month, the Fordson motor was only idle 34 minutes.

What This Wonder Tractor Did

Cut 315 acres of wheat—cut 71 acres of oats—plowed 157 acres—disced 9 3-4 acres—dragged 61 miles of road.

Fuel Consumed in 30 Days

Kerosene 807 gallons, oil in motor 27 gallons, oil in transmission 7 gallons, water in air washer 112 1-2 gallons.

Wear on Tractor

One shim was removed from connecting rod bearings and new piston rings were placed in motor. These were the only new parts required and Kansas farmers are clamoring for a chance to purchase AT LIST PRICE the FORDSON that did this work.

This was no Special Tractor. It was a FORDSON, just like the one you can buy. They're all alike. Place your order today.

A remarkable plan for the wholesale removal of the capital of a country is being considered in Brazil. Beyond Expression.

An elderly lady was questioning the ex-artilleryman. "And what was the most terrible sight you witnessed in the war?"

"Well, it was like this," replied the soldier. "We had just spotted a German machine-gun nest with about 12 enemy gunners that were holding up our advance. We located the nest and put the first shot right in the middle of the Jerries."

"How dreadful!" interrupted the old lady, "did it kill them all?"

"No'm," replied the soldier sadly, "it was a dud."—American Legion Weekly.

LADY LARKSPUR

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

AUNT ALICE.

Synopsis.—Richard Searles, successful American playwright, confides to his friend, Bob Singleton, the fact that, inspired by the genius of a young actress whom he had seen in London, he has written a play, "Lady Larkspur," solely with the thought that she should interpret the leading character. This girl, Violet Dewing, has disappeared. Singleton, an aviator, has just returned (invalided) from France. His uncle, Raymond Bashford, a wealthy man, had contracted a marriage a short time before his death, while on a visit to Japan. He left Singleton a comparatively small amount of money and the privilege of residence in the "garage" of his summer home, Barton-on-the-Sound, Connecticut. Mrs. Bashford is believed to be traveling in the Orient. The household at Barton is made up of broken down employees of a New York hotel, where Bashford made his home. Singleton goes to Barton, taking with him the manuscript of "Lady Larkspur." There he finds the household strangely upset, some of its members being suspected by their comrades of pro-Germanism. Antoine, head of the establishment, informs him that he has been perplexed by the somewhat mysterious visits of a stranger, apparently a foreigner, seeking Mrs. Bashford. Antoine has formed the male members of the household into a guard for protection. Torrence, Bashford's lawyer, informs Singleton that Mrs. Bashford is in America and may be expected at Barton at any time. Singleton reads Searles' play and thinks highly of it.

CHAPTER II.

The Amazing Widow.

As soon as Torrence left I returned to the garage, feeling that with Mrs. Bashford on American soil my use of the residence even as a loafing-place was unbecoming. Mrs Bashford was not only in America, but with a motor at her command she might reach Barton at any hour. And the vigorous, dominating woman who had captured my uncle Bash, buried him in a far country, and then effected a hop, skip, and jump from Bangkok to Seattle, was likely to be a prodigal spender of gasoline. Her propensity for traveling encouraged the hope that she would quickly weary of Barton and pine for lands where the elephant and jinrickisha flourish.

I had brought with me the manuscript of Searles' play, and I fell upon it irritably and began reading the first act. The dialogue moved briskly, and I read on as though enfolded in the air of a crisp spring morning. My grouch over the upsetting of my plans yielded under the spell of his humor.

"Lady Larkspur" was the name assumed by the daughter of a recluse naturalist in the valley of Virginia. She had known no life but that of the open country, where she ran wild all summer, aiding her father in collecting plants and butterflies. He had educated the girl in such a manner that only the cheer and joy of life were known to her. Hating mankind, he had encouraged her in nature-worship. She knew no literature except the classics; all history, even the history of the storied valley in which she lived, was a sealed book to her.

The girl's curiosity is roused by the sudden appearance of strangers from the unknown world beyond, whom she mystifies by her quaint old-worldishness. Searles had taken an old theme and given a novel twist to it. The solution of the mystery of the father's exile and an amusing complication of lovers afforded a suspensive interest well sustained to the end. In the last act the girl appears at a ball at a country house in sophisticated raiment, and the story ends in the key of mirth in which it began.

It was a delightful blending and modernization of Diana, Atalanta, Cinderella, and Rosalind; but even in the typewritten page it was amazingly alive and well calculated to evoke tears and laughter. That a play so enthralling should be buried in a safety-vault was not to be thought of, and I sat down and wrote Searles a long letter demanding that he at once forget the lost star for whom he had written the piece, suggesting the names of several well-known actresses I thought worth considering for the difficult leading role. Not satisfied with this, I telephoned a telegram to the agent at Barton for transmission to Searles at the Ohio address he had given me.

The next day passed without incident, and on the second, hearing nothing from Torrence, I began to doubt Mrs. Bashford's proximity. On the third, still hearing nothing, I harkened to an invitation from friends at New London and drove in the runabout for dinner. It was midnight when I got back, and when I reached the gates several men dashed out of the lodge and halted me.

"She's come, sir," announced Antoine, emerging from the darkness, and speaking under stress of deep emotion; "madame the widow has arrived, sir!"

"Why not Cleopatra or the Queen of Sheba?" I exclaimed testily to cover my annoyance that my aunt had effected her descent in my absence. "Well, she was expected; the house is hers; what do you want me to do about it?" I ended with affected jocularity.

"We received her the best we could; but it was most unfortunate, your not being here, sir."

"Is that your idea, Antoine, or do you reflect the lady's sentiments? I'm properly humiliated either way. Tell me just what she said."

"Well, sir, she just laughed when I took the liberty of apologizing."

"The sneering laughter of outraged dignity! Go ahead and give me the rest of it."

"It was at ten she came, sir, and the guard held her up, not recognizing her, here at the gate, and when the car wouldn't stop the boys chased her and fired at the tires of her machine. It was very dreadful, sir. And at the house—at the door, sir—the guard was very harsh with her, sir, most regrettable."

"You certainly made a mess of it!" I ejaculated. "But you did let her in—into her own house, we must remember—you did grant her the courtesy of a lodging for the night?" I inquired ironically.

"She's retired, sir. There was a lady with her; maybe a maid; I can't exactly say; and we did everything, sir, to make her comfortable. She was not what you might say fussy, but quite human-like. I hope you'll pardon us, sir, which was due to not being warned."

"Oh, it's all right with me, but in the morning she'll probably bounce the whole lot of us. An old lady fatigued from a journey cross country and shot at on her own premises —its a very pretty story."

Drove Past the House.

Antoine was swallowing hard in his effort to continue the recital.

"You say an old lady, sir; the mistress is not really what you would call so old—not exactly, sir."

"Really a youngish party, I should say," volunteered Graves, the gardener.

Just what these veterans would call old was a matter of conjecture.

"Young or old, she would hardly relish her reception. There was a maid, and they came in a machine? Did you put up the chauffeur or did you shoot him on the spot?"

"It was a hired machine, sir; and madame sent it away. The driver was a good deal upset over the shooting. One of the rear tires was quite blown away."

"You're in luck if he doesn't have you all arrested to-morrow," I remarked consolingly.

"Mrs. Bashford seemed quite amused by the occurrence," Antoine continued. "'Wonderful America!' she kept saying after we'd got her inside. We gave her tea, which was all she asked for. We did our best to make her comfortable. And there was a dog, sir. I recall that the master was not fond of dogs."

Antoine spoke truly; if there was anything my uncle Bash detested it was a dog, but I reflected that a world-skipping widow who could corral so difficult a subject as my uncle would be quite capable of inspiring him with delight in the canine species. My respect for the woman's powers of persuasion was intensified by this disclosure.

To make sure nothing was required of me until morning, I drove past the house with the army hanging to the footboard. The lower rooms were dark, but lights twinkled through the second-story shutters. My aunt was established on the premises, and her coming and the circumstances of her advent constituted a good joke of which I and not she was the victim. When I reached my quarters in the garage I sat down and laughed until Flynn appeared, frightened by my noisy mirth that had penetrated to his quarters.

I wakened early, rang a bell connecting my rooms with the chauffeur's end of the garage as a warning to the Flynns to prepare breakfast, and was dressed when the Irishman came in with the tray. In the absence of a morning paper I clung to him for company.

"I trust you will not be leaving, sorr," he remarked, eyeing my half-packed trunk.

"Very soon, Flynn."

"Then Elsie and I will be going too, sorr. It's most uncomfortable they're making us—Dutch and the rest. That Antoine and his army keep pesterin' us and callin' us Huns.

"It's most disagreeable we find it, the wife and me."

"Suffer and be strong—that's the watchword! We will hope that Mrs. Bashford is a woman of sound sense and tact who will exert herself to restore peace on her property. When I call to pay my respects and make my adieus I shall speak to her of the situation and vouch for your loyalty. You haven't, I suppose, seen the widow yet—she's probably sleeping late."

"Quite the contrary, sorr. She's been up and around for an hour an' more. She's been all over the place and stopped for a squint at the garage, her and the pup."

"She been here, inspecting the garage?" I asked, glancing at my watch. It was not yet eight o'clock. The banter died out of me; clearly it had been my duty to be on hand to pilot her over the estate, or at least to receive her at the garage. "Just what was the lady's frame of mind—as to things generally. Peeved, was she, over the row last night?"

"Oh, no, sorr; quite cheerful an' friendly. She's ordered a big car from New York and told me it would be coming up to-day and to make a place for it."

Here was news indeed, destroying all my hopes that she meditated only a brief sojourn. The purchase of a machine meant definitely that she would remain for some time, perhaps for the winter. I poured a second cup of coffee, swallowed it, grabbed my hat and stick, and asked enlightenment as to the course taken by Mrs. Bashford when she left the garage.

"She took the lower road, sorr, toward the Sound and stepped off quite brisk-like."

It was the serenest of September mornings, and I hurried away, thinking the cloudless blue arch, the twinkling sea, and the crisp air might serve to soften my aunt's displeasure at her hostile reception. From the conservatories I caught a glimpse of a woman on the beach—a slender, agile woman, throwing a ball for the amusement of a fox-terrier. The two were having no end of a good time. She laughed joyfully when the ball fell into her hands and the terrier barked his discomfiture and eagerness for a chance to redeem himself.

Antoine's equivocal statement as to Mrs. Bashford's age was ridiculous. Instead of the middle-aged woman whom I was prepared to meet, here was beyond question a vigorous, healthy being whose every movement spoke for youth and the joy of life. It might, after all, be the maid of whom Antoine had spoken. I reached a low stone wall that separated the lawn from the beach just as she effected a running pick-up of the ball. She turned swiftly and flung it straight at my head. Involuntarily I put up my hand and caught it just as she saw me and cried out—a cry of warning and contrition. I tossed the ball to the dog.

"What must you think of me!" she exclaimed. "I was blinded by the sunlight and I didn't see you—really I did not!"

"I had no business being in the way," I laughed, noting first her glowing color, her violet eyes—amazingly fine eyes they were—her fair hair with its golden glint, her plain black gown with lawn collar and wristbands. It was her age, however, that roused me to instant speculation. Twenty-five, I decided, was a maximum; more likely she was not more than twenty-two, and if I had been told that eighteen was the total of her years I shouldn't have had the heart to dispute it.

"Bob Singleton," I said and stupidly added, "and you are Mrs. Bashford?" unable for the life of me to avoid turning the statement into an inquiry.

"I am your aunt Alice," she said with a smile, putting out her hand. "Down, Rex!" she commanded the dancing terrier; "lie down; school's over now"; whereupon Rex obediently sprawled in the sand and began trying to swallow the ball.

"Wasn't that silly of me to try to kill you the first time we met?" Her eyes danced with merriment. "I didn't know of course that any one was about. But you made a very nice catch of it! I had expected to receive you most formally in the drawing-room, but this really serves very well. That tree down yonder is inviting; suppose we stay out here and talk a bit."

"Can't we make it Alice and Bob?"

Frantic With Pain

A Physical Wreck From Kidney Trouble, But DOAN'S Made Her Well.

"Kidney trouble made a complete wreck of me," says Mrs. Wm. Harvey, 621 N. Eighth St., Grants Pass, Ore. "I was so despondent and miserable it seemed I had nothing left to live for. Death would have been a welcome relief. For six months I was in bed and never expected to leave it alive. I was too weak to move without the help of my nurse and so nervous I screamed when she touched me. My back and head hurt like a throbbing toothache. I had awful dizzy spells, my eyesight failed, my hands and feet felt dead. I was pain-racked all over. The kidney secretions looked like thick, black coffee and burned terribly. They almost stopped passing and then my feet bloated like bags of water. I was frantic with pain, and thought I would lose my reason.

Mrs. Harvey

"I had lost all faith in medicine and tried Doan's Kidney Pills only because a dear friend asked me. Right from the start I began to feel better. Doan's cured me."

BIG ULCER ALL HEALED

"Here is another letter that makes me happy," says Peterson, of Buffalo. "One that I would rather have than a thousand dollars.

"Money isn't everything in this world. There is many a big hearted, rich man who would give all he has on earth to be able to produce a remedy with such mighty healing power as Peterson's Ointment, to sell at all druggists for 35 cents a large box."

Dear Sirs:—

"I was an untold sufferer from old running sore and ulcers. I had tried most everything without any relief from pain. A friend told me of your wonderful ointment and the first box took away the pain that had not left me before in years, and after using just nine dollars' worth of the salve I am cured. The ulcer was 9 inches by 6¼ inches, is all healed and I can walk. Never, never will I be without Peterson's again.

"You may use this to recommend your ointment, if you wish. I cannot say enough to praise it." Yours truly, Mrs. Albert Southcott, Medina, N. Y. Mail orders filled by Peterson Ointment Co., Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

LIFE WAS A MISERY TO HER

Says this Woman Until Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Carrollton, Ky.—"I suffered almost two years with female weakness. I could not walk any distance, ride or take any exercise at all without resting. If I swept the floor or did any kind of work it would bring my sickness on. I was weak and languid, had no energy, and life was a misery to me. I was under the care of a good physician for several months and tried other remedies. I had read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking twelve bottles I found myself much improved and I took six more. I have never had any more trouble in that respect since. I have done all kinds of work and at present am an attendant at a State Hospital and am feeling fine. I have recommended your Vegetable Compound to dozens of my friends and shall always recommend it."—LILLIAN THARP, 824 S. 6th St., Carrollton, Ky.

If you have any symptom about which you would like to know write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for helpful advice given free of charge.

On Detail.

Private Napoleon Booker Washington Simpson had obtained leave of absence to visit his buddy, who had been wounded and was in a nearby field hospital. He was stopped at the entrance by an army nurse, who asked him what he wanted.

"Has you got a dark complected man named Johnson what's been shot in dis hospital?" he inquired.

The nurse replied that there was such a person there, adding, "But he's convalescing now."

"Ah beg yo' pardon?" said Nappleplexedly, scratching his wool.

"He's convalescing now," she repeated.

"Well," said Napoleon, "if yo' don't mind, I'll set right here and wait till he gets through."—The Home Sector.

Ten miles used to be a long way

WHAT a difference in these motor-car days, when every point in the county is hardly more than "just around the corner."

People's ideas are changing, too.

They're beginning to figure out how much it is costing them to keep a car. And the man who is doing the greatest amount of figuring is the man with the moderate-price car.

II

There still seems to be a notion in some quarters that any tire is good enough for a small car.

That's not what the man who owns it thinks.

In recommending and selling U. S. Tires we are trying to see his side of the proposition—finding out what he wants in a tire and giving him that.

III

Large or small, U. S. Tires are built to only one standard of quality—the standard that produced the first straight side automobile tire, the first pneumatic truck tire.

Every tire that bears the name "U. S." is built the best way its makers know how. It isn't the car, but the man who owns the car, that counts with the oldest and largest rubber concern in the world.

IV

As representatives of U. S. Tires in this town, we offer you the benefit of our experience and advice in settling your tire problem.

Select your tires according to the roads they have to travel:

In sandy or hilly country, wherever the going is apt to be heavy—The U. S. Nobby.

For ordinary country roads—The U. S. Chain or Usco.

For front wheels—The U. S. Plain.

For best results—everywhere—U. S. Royal Cords.

THE WIND DECIDES.

In Sumatra the wind decides the length of time a widow shall remain single. Just after her husband's death she plants a flagstaff at her door, upon which a flag is raised. While the flag remains untorn by the wind the etiquette of Sumatra forbids her to marry; but at the first rent, however small, she can lay aside her mourning, assume her most bewitching smile and accept the first man who presents himself.

Secret of Leadership.

The secret of the world's leadership is right in our keeping. To understand men we look at ourselves. To know what is without, we must study what is within. To lead others we must lead ourselves. Our power will soon grow. So will our influence.—Exchange.

Comparative Values.

"My husband has a very expensive bulldog."

"I'll wager it isn't half as expensive as my husband's kitty."

Lovers' Communication.

When the petals of the great laurel magnolia are touched, however lightly, the result is a brown spot, which develops in a few hours. This fact is taken advantage of by the South American lover, who pulls a magnolia flower, and on one of its pure white petals writes a motto or message. Then he sends the flower, the young lady puts it in a vase of water, and in three or four hours the message written on the leaf becomes perfectly visible, and remains so.

But Not a Prim One.

Young Man.—I thought I'd drop in, sir, and tell you that since you refused to allow your daughter to marry me because I was poor, I have acquired half a million dollars.

Old Roxley—Thasso? Whom did you marry?—Boston Transcript.

Garnet Is January Stone.

The garnet is the birthstone for January. Consequently it is the luck stone for all born in that month. According to old authorities "the garnet exercises a calming influence and takes away anger and discord. It is likewise a sovereign remedy for hemorrhages and protects the traveler from all dangers when traveling. When the figure of a lion is engraved upon a garnet, it will protect and preserve the health of the wearer and cure him of all diseases."

One Thing.

The secret of success still lies in the same old word, "drudgery." For drudgery is the doing of the one thing, one thing, one thing, long after it ceases to be amusing; and it is this "one thing I do" that gathers me together from my chaos, that concentrates me from possibilities to powers. . . . "One thing I do," said Paul; and even apart from what his one thing was, in that phrase he gave the watchword of salvation.—W. C. Gannett.

Nation's "Balance of Trade."

"Balance of trade" is an expression used by political economists to indicate the difference between the value of the exports and imports of a country. This theory of the balance of trade grew out of the mercantile theory, which considers the possession of gold to be the chief object of trade. Hence, there rose the belief that a nation increases in wealth to the extent that the money value of its exports exceeds that of imports.

The Dog Autocrat.

Nowhere in the world has the dog such unrestricted right of way as in Alaska. In winter dogs are almost the sole means of getting from place to place. The aristocrats of arctic dog life are the mail teams in the service of the United States government.

Or a Hive of Bees.

Suggestion for propaganda by moving pictures. Show film of a colony of ants, for the encouragement of industry by example.—Boston Transcript.

Baboons Prefer Cooked Food.

It is somewhat remarkable that, although a baboon in captivity will not eat raw meat unless extremely hungry, it will eat with avidity meat which has been cooked. Since the large extension of sheep farming and the consequent restriction of their natural food supplies, baboons in some parts have developed the habit of raiding flocks in the lambing season and tearing open the stomachs of the lambs for the sake of the milk which these contain. This practice has led to the virtual extermination of baboons over large areas. However, in justice to the raiders it should be noted that it is only when food is very scarce indeed that this criminal practice is indulged in.—Atlantic Monthly.

New Guinea Love Tokens.

When a New Guinea woman falls in love with a man she sends a piece of string to his sister, or, if he has no sister, to his mother. Then the lady who receives the string tells the favored man the particular woman is in love with him.

China's Grand Canal.

The Grand canal of China is the longest canal in the world. It reaches from Hangchow to Tientsin and covers a distance of 1,000 miles, crossing two of the world's largest rivers, the Hwang and the Yangtze.

Blast by Electricity.

South African gold mines are experimenting with blasting by electricity with a view to minimizing the fine dust, which is thought to be the chief cause of miners' phthisis.

Happiness and Interests.

Personal happiness is almost synonymous with personal interests; the wider the range of the latter the higher is the degree of happiness.—Lilian Whiting.

Nothing New.

"All the world's a stage"—and yet some people look upon the revolving stage as a modern idea.—Boston Transcript.

Keeperless Lighthouse.

Along the coast of Alaska, where it would be difficult to maintain reliable lighthouse keepers, there have been established many automatically flashing beacons, each of which can operate for nearly five months on one charge of gas. A lighthouse with its keeper, alone among the wildest of scenery, is always a romantically interesting mark of progress. A lighthouse without a keeper, however, is, perhaps, a still greater sign of progress, in that it frees many a man from the temporary necessity of staying where he might not want to be. At first some navigators were a bit slow in getting used to the quickly flashing lights. Because of the rapidity of the flash, one might hardly know whether he was coming to, or going from such a light. In the end, though, these small beacons, which cost only about $1,800 each to install, have greatly aided navigation in Alaskan waters.

Relics of Long Ago.

A clothes chest of King Charles I, bearing the initials "C.R." and crown realized $260 at Rushbrooke hall, near Bury St., Edmunds, at a sale of the contents of this Elizabethan mansion. Two cambric day shirts and a nightcap worn by Charles I realised $52. A silk brocade suit, consisting of coat, waistcoat, with sleeves, and a pair of knee-breeches, also worn by King Charles, brought $185. A pair of silk stockings of the same period, with colored zigzag stripes, made $26, and a jester's coat of painted leather, $85.

Napoleon's Eagle Failed as Symbol.

When Prince Louis Napoleon made his theatrical attempt to usurp the throne of France from Louis Philippe, he carried with him from England a real live eagle, which it was intended to liberate on landing, in the hope that it would circle around the prince's head as a symbol of victory. It was bought at Gravesend for a pound from a boy who had kept it chained up as a pet. When the expedition landed at Boulogne the bird was set free, but instead of soaring around as a symbol of the Napoleonic dynasty, it flew straight away and sought shelter in the slaughterhouse of Boulogne.

Three Capital Crimes.

"When I was a boy," states Mr. Patch in Stockton Herald, "there were three capital crimes—murder, blasphemy, and lying abed in the morning. Of the three, murder and blasphemy might sometimes be forgiven, but late rising never. One of my grandfathers frequently got up at four o'clock on a winter morning, built a fire in the cook stove and then would sit down by it and go to sleep."—Kansas City Times.

Surety a Great Man.

Henry had just started to school and was filled with the patriotic spirit of the times, as well as kindergarten wisdom. "Was Francis Scott Key a great man?" he asked one day of the folks at home. "I think he was, why?" "'Cause I think a fellow that writes a song what everyone has to stand up to, must be a great man."

Simple Cure for Hiccoughs.

This is the method of treating obstinate hiccough that Dr. D. Francisco Vanegas employs. He describes it in the Revista de Medicinary Cirurgia Practicas (Madrid). The patient lies down and draws up his knees until his thighs are pressed tightly to his abdomen, the lower part of the legs being pressed against the thighs by bending the knees. The position is held for several minutes. The effect of this is to press the abdominal organs up against the diaphragm and to sustain the pressure until the diaphragm ceases its spasmodic contractions.

Thoreau's Love of the Outdoors.

Thoreau believed that he could not preserve either his health or spirits without spending at least four hours a day sauntering through the fields, woods and over the hills, "absolutely free from all worldly engagements." This lover of the outdoors, whose mind was continually fresh and whose senses were keenly alert to all the sights and sounds of nature, deplored the fact that so many persons sit indoors all day, working at their trades, and declared that they deserved credit for not having committed suicide wholesale long ago.

Remarkable Sight.

Little Marjorie, aged 4, was looking out of the window on a frosty morning and saw a horse and buggy passing, and called: "Oh, mamma, come quick and see the dust comin' out of the horse's mouth."

Quebracho Bark Valuable.

Quebracho bark, one of the chief exports of the Argentine, will tan leather at least three times as fast as the bark of the oak or the hemlock, and in less than ten years fortunes have been made by investing in quebracho lands. Nearly 1,000,000 tons of the wood, or the dry extract, are sent to the United States and Europe annually. The growth of the tree is of the slowest, and it is estimated that 1,000 years is required for it to reach maturity.

His Prescription.

His father has a pronounced partiality for Bill, and the latter is diplomat enough to work this feeling of his father's whenever an opportunity offers. Quite recently young William injured his hand severely, and when his father returned home he inquired: "Well, Bill, how's the hand?" Seeing his father was in a mellow mood, William answered: "I think some ice cream would help it."

Scheme to Foil Robbers.

A famous detective once said that whenever an effort was made by a robber to loot a bank, if any of the employees had presence of mind enough to hurl an inkstand through one of the plate glass windows the robber would, nine chances to ten, take to his heels, "for," said Detective Burns, "I have found in my experience that robbers are mortally afraid of the sound of splintering glass. It gets on their nerves."

Young People's Convention.

The first attempt of the kind in the township, a strictly Young People's Convention is planned for Concord township, to be held in the M. P. Church on Sunday afternoon, May 16, the session to begin at 2 o'clock and will be in charge of Forrest G. Harding, County Superintendent of Corunna, Ind. The full program has not been arranged for the afternoon but will be completed in a few days. The Township Superintendent, M. T. Bishop, will have charge of the meeting in conjunction with Mr. Harding. The young people are highly favored in having this opportunity and every school in the township should urge that the young folks attend. An evening session will be held at 7:30 at which time the public in general will be invited to attend. Rev. C. O. Johnson will deliver the evening address. Subject: "The three V's".

Elects County Chairman

Last Saturday at Auburn Finley A. Nash was selected to succeed E. W. Atkinson as the head of the Democratic organization of DeKalb county with vice chairman, L. G. Whitten of Auburn; secretary, Arthur G. Houser of Garrett and treasurer, Harry E. Wert of Garrett as his associates. The republicans re-elected all of their old officers as follows: Dr. U. G. Souder of Auburn, chairman; W. P. Endicott of Butler, vice chairman; H. M. Richey of Auburn, secretary and James Provines of Jackson township, treasurer.

Senior Party

On last Wednesday evening the Seniors of the St. Joe High School, were pleasantly entertained at the home of Pauline Barney. The evening was spent in playing games. At a late hour delicious refreshments were served by the hostess. Other guests present besides the Seniors were Dorthea Scholes of Fort Wayne and Russell Hathaway of Auburn.

State of Indiana,
County of DeKalb, ss:

I, Frank R. Bowman, cashier of the St. Joe Valley Bank, a state bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true.

FRANK R. BOWMAN, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 10th day of May 1920.

[L.S.] S. S. WIDNEY, N. P.

My commission expires Jan. 7, 1923.

Leaves For Napoleon

Another good citizen is about to leave St. Joe, Elmer Hart has accepted a position as head wire man for Homer Baker at Napoleon, O., who sells the Delco lights. Elmer leaves for to begin his work on next Monday and as soon as he can find a suitable house he will move his family there. Elmer starts in with a guarantee of $7.00 per day and an auto furnished to look after the work. He will superintend three gangs of men who are installing the farm systems. Elmer has had some practical experience taking charge of the work here. He also worked for E. R. Kinsey and there he made an excellent hand. We wish Elmer all the good luck possible in his work only we do not like the idea of them moving from our town.

Real Estate Changes

A number of real estate changes have taken place in this town and vicinity during the last few days. Martin Tustison has purchased the B. F. Terman home on Widney avenue now occupied by Mrs. Spencer. Reed Place of Coburntown has dealt for the Joseph Koch property. F. E. Rhoads of south of town disposed of 80 acres of land, one mile west of the Rhoads corners to Ray Harper of Van Wert County, Ohio, for a consideration of $19,000. This sale includes the portion where the buildings are of 40 acres and the same amount on the east side of the road. The location is ideal and wife will move in with his parents and assist in the farming.

Local Briefs

Mrs. Joe Harrod arrived last week to spend the summer here with her husband.

The cost of the primary election in DeKalb county is given at 80 cents per vote cast.

For good glasses see Griest at American Building Hicksville, Ohio.

Folks are busy this week getting their seeds in the ground. The wet weather made the work late and every minute will have to be used to get caught up.

You can't raise small chicks safely unless you have some of our galvanized coops. CURIE sells them from $2.50 to $3.50.

Karl Hart, Fred Ulm and Olen Waits were among the boys from DeKalb county to attend the Purdue Short Course this year, returning home Friday evening. In the essay contest written about "Fruit Growing In Indiana," DeLoss Franks of DeKalb county won honorable mention. There was much competition in this event.

Miss Edna Jackson is home again having been brought home Sunday afternoon. She was in the hospital four weeks and if nothing further developes she will be sitting up a little by next week. Her continued sickness was rather a conundrum to her doctors but two weeks ago typhoid germs made their appearance that settled the matter. She is improving nicely.

W. C. T. U. members of DeKalb county are looking forward with keen interest to the county meeting of the association to be held in Newville, May 25th. and 26., the program for which has just been completed. The sessions will be held in the morning, afternoon and evening and the county president, Mrs. L. E Lane of Auburn, is busy making final arrangements for the institute.

LAND QUESTION IN RUSSIA

Natural Desire of Peasants to Participate in Ownership of Soil They Till Is Root of the Revolution.

Article XVII

By FRANK COMERFORD.

In talking with people about Russia, I have discovered that most people in America have only a faint, uncertain, vague idea of the country. Czar Nicholas, the last of the self-proclaimed autocrats, was monarch of 8,600,000 square miles, one-sixth of the entire land surface of the earth. The great Russian empire is spread over part of two continents, Europe and Asia. It is almost entirely confined to the cold and temperate zones.

Three seas bound it on the north—White, Barents and Kara of the arctic; the seas of Bering, Okhotsh and Japan of the northern Pacific bound it on the east. The Baltic sea, the gulfs of Bothnia and Finland limit it on the northwest; two sinuous lines of land front separate it respectively from Sweden and Norway on the northwest, and from Prussia, Austria and Roumania on the west. On the south and east the frontier has changed frequently, according to the expansion and contraction of the empire under the pressure of political exigency and expediency. The Black sea is the principal demarcating feature on the south of European Russia. On the west side of that sea the south frontier touches the Danube for some 120 miles; on the east side of the same sea it zigzags from the Black sea to the Caspian, utilising the river Aras for part of the distance. As the Caspian is virtually a Russian sea, Persia may be said to form the next link in the southern boundary of the Russian empire, followed by Afghanistan. On the Pamirs, Russia has since 1885 been coterminous with British India, but the boundary then swings away north round Chinese Turkestan, and the north side of Mongolia, and since 1905 it has skirted the north of Manchuria, being separated from it by the river Amur.

The total length of the frontier line of the Russian empire by land is 2,800 miles in Europe and nearly 10,000 miles in Asia, and by sea, over 11,000 miles in Europe and between 19,000 and 20,000 miles in Asia—a frontier of 68,000 miles.

Empire's Vast Population.

The population of the empire, according to the 1915 census, was estimated at 182,182,600. According to the same census this population was distributed as follows: In European Russia, 131,796,800; in Poland, 12,125,000; in Caucasus, 18,125,000; in Siberia, 12,337,900; in the central Asian provinces, 11,125,000; Finland, 3,125,000.

Over 80 per cent of the people of Russia are peasants. The land is their problem. It means home to them—work, life. Their one dream has been to own the land. Land ownership is their definition of freedom, their idea of happiness.

The Russian peasant has been a stranger in his own country. The man who tills the soil and lives on the land and yet never owns an acre of it is a foreigner, even though his forbears may have been native to the country for centuries. The Russians have felt this; they are simple, home-loving people. From the conversations I have had with Russians of the peasant class I believe that they have suffered more because they never had a chance to own their own homes, their own farms, than from the denial to them of political freedom. The land question is a heart question, a hearth question to them.

Crime in Land Distribution.

Some idea of the land crime in Russia is told in the startling figures showing the actual distribution of arable land, forests and meadows in European Russia. The following table is only one count in the indictment:

European Russia.

	Acres	Percentage
Arable land	301,435,000	26
Meadows and pastures	185,498,000	16
Forests	452,152,000	39
Uncultivated	220,279,000	19
	1,159,364,000	100

This land in European Russia was divided among the different classes of owners as follows:

	Acres	Percentage
State and imperial family	400,816,000	35
Peasants	446,657,000	38½
Private owners, towns, etc.	245,835,000	21
Unfit for cultivation	66,056,000	5½
	1,159,364,000	100

The condition of the peasants prior to the revolution, according to official documents, appears to be as follows: "In the 12 central governments they grow, on the average, sufficient rye for bread for only 200 days in the year, often for only 180 and 100 days."

One-quarter of the people have received allotments of only 2.9 acres per male, one-half of them less than 8.5 to 11.4 acres—the normal size of the allotment necessary to feed and maintain a family being estimated at 28 to 42 acres. Therefore the peasants were compelled to rent land from the landlords at fabulous prices. The aggregate value of the redemption and land taxes often reached 185 to 254 per cent of the normal value of the allotment, not to speak of the taxes for recruiting, the churches, roads and local administration, chiefly levied from the peasants. The peasants have sunk deeper into debt every year. The scheme was a quicksand—the harder they worked and struggled the deeper into debt they fell. Increasing arrears have driven one-fifth of the inhabitants from their houses. Every year more than half the adult males (in some districts three-quarters of the men and one-third of the women) are forced to quit their homes and wander throughout Russia in search of work. In the governments of the black earth region the state of matters is hardly better.

The phrase "class distinction" was more than rhetoric in Russia—it was part of the chains, it handcuffed destiny, bolted the door of opportunity. The great mass of the people, 81.6 per cent peasants; 1.0 per cent made up the nobility; 9 per cent the clergy; 9.3 per cent the burghers and merchants; 6.1 per cent the military; thus 147,000,000 of the Russians were peasants.

The slavery in Russia consecrated by law in 1609 was partly abolished in 1861. The Act only pretended to liberate the serfs. Even under the best landlords conditions continued to be terrible. Household servants or dependents attached to the personal service of their masters were released. They joined the town proletariat. The peasants were given allotments of arable land. These allotments were not given to the individuals, they were given over to the rural commune called the Mir, which was made responsible as a whole for the payment of allotments. It was a sort of land communism, except that the title did not pass even to the Mirs. The enormous charge against the land made them tenant serfs. The Mir was a mortgaged community. The redemption charge was not calculated on the value of the land, but was considered as payment for the loss of the compulsory labor of the serfs. The enslavement of the peasant was recognized in the Act which pretended emancipation.

Peasants Systematically Cheated.

Many proprietors of land saw to it that the allotments did not give the peasants the needed pasture lands around their homes. This craftily calculated scheme compelled the peasants to rent pasture land from the landlords at any price. The landlords held them up.

It was only as late as 1904 that the landlord was forbidden by law to inflict corporal punishment on the peasant. Even this law was winked at and the practice of treating human slaves as brutes treat tired domestic animals, continued. The peasant was a chattel and the cheapest farm fixture. There were plenty of peasants. Notwithstanding the barbaric life in Russia, the population continued to grow.

The peasants' only participation in government was in the assembly called the Mir. With its quaint customs, it is of immemorial antiquity. The assembly of the Mir consisted of all the peasant householders of the village. These elected a head man and collector of local taxes. It was the nearest Russian peasants ever got to freedom. It was the clearing house for the troubles, a socialism of sorrows, a touch of local self government which gave no rights; it simply provided a means of co-operating in burden bearing.

HARD AT WORK IN BELGIUM

Coal Mining and Other Industries Are Being Rapidly Put on a Normal Basis.

The Belgian coal mines are now turning out about 80 per cent of the normal production. They supply nearly all the coal needed for the Belgian industries, while some 350,000 tons of coal a month are exported to France. Then the great glass industry of the country, which before the war gave work to many thousands, is rapidly regaining its former prosperity, and only quite recently the French ministry of reconstruction gave an order to a single Belgian firm for 2,000,000 square meters of window panes, to be utilized in the devastated regions. The result of all this is that whereas, at the time of the signing of the armistice, the French franc was worth 1.10 or even 1.15 francs in Belgium, it is now worth 95 centimes. Belgium, moreover, is very far from confining her efforts to France. Great Britain is already a considerable importer of Belgian goods, while the United States recently placed an order in Belgium for more than 300,000,000 francs' worth of glassware.

Large-Hearted Doughboys.

The children played a large part in the American army's Christmas in France. At the artillery camp at Mailly, for example, it was a top sergeant who said, ten days or so before the day:

"Say, fellows, these poor little village kids haven't had much Christmas in their lives, have they, now? What do you say we take up a collection and see what we can do?"

The idea took in a flash. And they did so well, giving as they always gave, with both hands, that the total sum was amazing.

"Why," some one hazarded, "I reckon we could hand those little shavers pretty near anything they want, with all this wad to spend."

Seen and Heard In Indiana

Indianapolis.—Following is a table of the complete vote cast by counties for Leonard Wood, Hiram W. Johnson, Frank O. Lowden and Warren G. Harding, who contested for Republican presidential preference in Indiana in primaries held the past week, showing a plurality for Wood of 6,107 over Johnson. The state contains 3,387 precincts ,and the returns were reported by coresponsdents and unofficially tabulated:

No Democrats entered Indiana's primaries to determine that party's choice in the state for the nomination for president.

Terre Haute.—The Indiana Bituminous Coal Operators' association, having its headquarters in this city, issued a statement to the effect that April was the most disastrous month in a financial way to Hoosier operators for many years, due to strikes of railroad switchmen and shortage of cars. Every mine in the state showed a loss for the month, it is said, except a few which received an assigned car supply.

Hammond.—Prohibition enforcement officers are claiming for the Calumet district the capture of the largest still in the country. It has a capacity of 100 gallons a day, netting operators $1,500 a day, and was discovered on the farm of V. Minishan, ten miles south of Hammond.

Indianapolis.—Little spring wheat was sown in Indiana this season, the total acreage being not more than one-fourth of what it was last year, says George C. Bryant, field agent for the co-operative crop reporting service, in his summary of Hoosier crop conditions.

Indianapolis.—May 22 and 23 will be the date of the state convention in Indianapolis of the Socialist party, according to Wilbur Sheran, state secretary, who has made arrangements for the sessions. State candidates will be named at that time.

Elkhart.—Elkhart now has a population of 24,277, an increase of 4,993, or 25.9 per cent.

Evansville.—Members of the Cigar Makers' union in Evansville, Boonville, Mount Vernon and Henderson, Ky., are on strike following the refusal of their demands for an increase in wages. The union workers are asking for an increase of $3 on the 1,000 cigars.

Evansville.—It is estimated that fully 1,600 Evansville furniture workers now are on strike. Most of the factories have been closed for several days. The union of furniture workers has a membership of more than 2,000 it is asserted.

Indianapolis.—Returns from all except 14 precincts in Switzerland county out of the 3,387 in the state show that Waren T. McCray gained a majority in the Republican nomination for governor contest, having 4,771 more votes than the combined total of James W. Fesler and Edward C. Toner. McCray's total was 108,817, Fesler had 63,257 and Toner 40,800. Carleton B. McCulloch won a plurality of 26,026 for the Democratic nomination for governor, according to unofficial tabulation of returns from all except ten precincts in Switzerland county. McCulloch had a total of 46,761, polling more than twice as many votes as Mason J. Niblack, his nearest opponent, who had 20,735. John Isenbarger was a close third with 18,905 and J. Kirby Risk obtained 14,880 votes.

Indianapolis. — That high sugar prices will cause many Indiana farmers, particularly in the south part of the state, to plant sugar cane, is the opinion of George C. Bryant, field agent for the co-operative crop reporting service. Sorghum molasses, made from sugar cane, is expected to command a good price this year. Sorghum molasses production in Indiana reached a peak in 1918 because of the war shortage of sugar. The production fell last year, but it is expected to rise again this year. May is the month for planting the seed.

Indianapolis.—Talk of a bonus for world war veterans is reviving memories in the minds of Civil war veterans. Many of the "old soldiers" are writing to Harry B. Smith, adjutant general of Indiana, inquiring about a bonus they say they are entitled to but never received. Mr. Smith has taken up the question with Ele Stansbury, attorney general, but inasmuch as the bonus proposition in those days seems to have been a strictly county matter, little progress has been made.

Lafayette.—The horseless age is a long way off in Indiana, according to the annual report of the state stallion enrollment board issued at Purdue university. The report for the year 1919-20 shows a slight decrease in the number of stallions and jacks enrolled in the state, but the figures indicate that in general there is an improvement in the quality of sires offered for service and no likelihood of a marked falling off in the use of draft horses and mules.

Indianapolis.—A call was issued by John G. Brown of Monon, president of the Indiana Federation of Farmers' Associations, for a state-wide meeting of presidents of county organizations of farmers to be held at Indianapolis on Monday, May 17. The conference will be the first of its kind since the federation was formed a year ago, and will be for the purpose of getting together on state issues, exchange of ideas and for adopting uniform policies.

Muncie.—Clerks, bookkeepers and other so-called salaried men are not marrying here these days, but those engaged in mechanical work are, according to figures taken from the marriage license records for the first three months of 1920. Of 170 marriage licenses issued, 127 were obtained by mechanics, farmers and laborers. The laborers lead, with 75 licenses, and the mechanics are next, with 71. The farmers number 24.

East Chicago.—In order to protect the street pavements of the city from mutilation by excessive loads such as contractors have been hauling through East Chicago, the city council has passed an ordinance prohibiting a total load of more than 28,000 pounds. The load of any truck is to be figured at the rate of 800 pounds an inch width of tire, and not more than 22,400 pounds may be carried over any one axle.

New Albany.—Returning from the polls where he had worked all day in the interest of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for congress from the Third congressional district of Indiana, Jacob L. O'Bannon, aged sixty, died of heart disease at his home here. Mr. O'Bannon at one time represented Harrison county in the legislature.

Vincennes.—All arrangements have been completed for the opening of the Indiana state meeting of Christian churches, which convenes at Vincennes May 17 and continues until May 20. More than 500 ministers, Sunday school superintendents and various officials and their wives are expected to attend the four days' session.

Shelbyville.—The school enumeration in Shelby county, recently completed, shows a loss of 161 boys and girls of school age since the last enumeration. The loss in Shelbyville was 40 and 121 in the county. The total number of persons in the county of school age is 6,554. The enumeration for Shelbyville is 2,260.

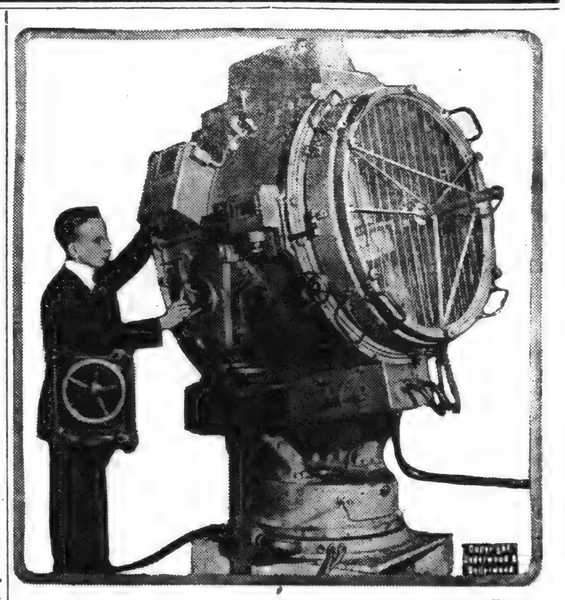
Anderson. — George Cookson, age sixty-six, grand secretary and treasurer of the Sons of St. George of Indiana and Ohio, is dead of heart disease at his home here following a brief illness. He was widely known throughout the state.

Richmond. — Miss Esther Griffin White, Wayne county chairman of the Republican woman's organization, will be a delegate to the Republican state convention. She was elected from the Fourth ward of Richmond.

Vincennes.—Fire destroyed the Niblack Bros.' general merchandise store at Wheatland, the loss being estimated at $35,000. Sparks from a fire which destroyed the James Smith restaurant set fire to the Niblack establishment.

Connersville. — Miss Norvilla DeHaven, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. DeHaven of this city, won the Connersville high school oratorical contest for the third consecutive year.

Hammond.—The census bureau reports Hammond's population as 86,004, an increase of 15,070, or 72.1 per cent.



This, the largest searchlight in the world, is the invention of Elmer A. Sperry. It has 1,280,000,000 beam candle power, and is so powerful that its rays will light cigarettes and melt lead at a distance of 12 feet.

GOB WHO MADE GOOD GOES TO ANNAPOLIS

Every year one hundred men from the enlisted ranks of the United States navy are selected for training at the naval academy at Annapolis, preparing them for posts as commissioned officers. This photograph shows Commander J. P. Lannon, executive officer of the U. S. S. New Mexico, handing one of the lucky sailormen of his ship an appointment to the academy.

SCRAPS

One of the very first to sign petitions for woman suffrage in England was Charles Darwin, the eminent naturalist.

The new republic of Czecho-Slovakia has an area of between 50,000 and 60,000 square miles and a population of 12,500,000.

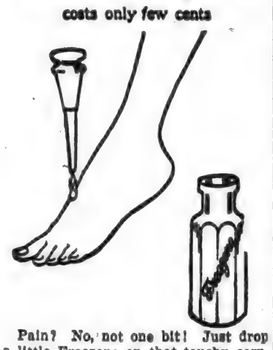
LIFT CORNS OFF IT DOESN'T HURT

With fingers! Corns lift out and costs only few cents



Pain? No, not one bit! Just drop a little Freezone on that touchy corn, instantly it stops aching, then you lift that bothersome corn right off. Yes, magic! Costs only a few cents.

Try Freezone! Your druggist sells a tiny bottle, sufficient to rid your feet of every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and calluses, without one particle of pain, soreness or irritation. Freezone is the mysterious ether discovery of a Cincinnati genius. —Adv.

COUGHED FOR 2 YEARS ORDERED TO DENVER

Doctor said she couldn't get well in Illinois, but she did.

"I had a very bad cough for two years, all the time, day and night. Could sleep but little. I tried everything but got no relief. Finally my doctor said he could do no more for me, that I had better go to Denver, as I couldn't live in Illinois. Then I tried Milks Emulsion. From the very first it helped me. By the time I had taken 15 bottles my cough left me entirely. I have gained in strength and flesh and am now in perfect health." —Mrs. Alice M. Huntley, 122 No. Pearl St., Galesburg, Ill.

Build up your system and give it a chance to fight off disease. Milks Emulsion costs nothing to try and it has done the work for thousands of others.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whom sickness has weakened, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream. Truly wonderful for weak, sickly children.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. Price 50c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

LADY LARKSPUR

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

MRS. FARNSWORTH.

Synopsis.—Richard Searles, successful American playwright, confides to his friend, Bob Singleton, the fact that, inspired by the genius of a young actress whom he had seen in London, he has written a play, "Lady Larkspur," solely with the thought that she should interpret the leading character. This girl, Violet Dewing, has disappeared. Singleton, an aviator, has just returned (invalided) from France. His uncle, Raymond Bashford, a wealthy man, had contracted a marriage a short time before his death, while on a visit to Japan. He left Singleton a comparatively small amount of money and the privilege of residence in the "garage" of his summer home, Barton-on-the-Sound, Connecticut. Mrs. Bashford is believed to be traveling in the Orient. The household at Barton is made up of broken down employees of a New York hotel, where Bashford made his home. Singleton goes to Barton, taking with him the manuscript of "Lady Larkspur." There he finds the household strangely upset, some of its members being suspected by their comrades of pro-Germanism. Antoine, head of the establishment, informs him that he has been perplexed by the somewhat mysterious visits of a stranger, apparently a foreigner, seeking Mrs. Bashford. Antoine has formed the male members of the household into a guard for protection. Torrence, Bashford's lawyer, informs Singleton that Mrs. Bashford is in America and may be expected at Barton at any time. Singleton reads Searles' play and thinks highly of it. "Aunt Alice" arrives unexpectedly and meets with an unusual reception. Bob is mystified to find her a young and attractive woman.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

This struck me as the pleasantest thing imaginable, though I was still dazed and my tongue seemed to have died in my mouth. This girl, this wholly charming and delightful young woman, was the monstrous being I had conjectured as the globe-trotting widow who had kidnaped and married my uncle! Not only had she married my uncle Bash and in due course buried him; she had been a widow when she married him. The thing was staggering, bewildering. She was clearly anxious to be friendly, but nothing that I had thought of saying to her fitted the situation.

"In the first place," I finally began, "I must apologize most humbly for the earnest efforts of the servants to murder you last night. Mr. Torrence had promised to let me know when you would reach here, but he must have forgotten it. I had motored to a friend's house to dine and didn't get back until the mischief was done. I'm very sorry."

"Not for the world would I have missed that," she exclaimed with a merry laugh. "It was perfectly delicious! And it was all my fault. I meant to remain a day at Hartford, you know, and send a message to Mr. Torrence from there, but I found that by pushing on I could reach here yesterday. And you know we English always expect strange things to happen in America. I don't understand yet why those people at the gates were so jolly anxious to kill us; but it doesn't matter; you would spoil the joke by explaining it."

However, I did my best—it was a weak attempt—to explain the nervousness of the veteran servants and their display of violence. Her arrival made it likely that we should soon know more about the "parties" whose visits and inquiries had so alarmed Antoine and his comrades. I told her with all the humor I could throw into the recital of the drilling of the bell-hops and of the uncomfortable relations between the Allied forces and the Teutonic minority on the estate.

"It was dear of Mr. Bashford to provide a home for these people; wasn't he really the kindest soul that ever lived?" she said softly.

She gazed wistfully seaward, and I saw the gleam of tears on her long lashes. My uncle had, then, meant something to her! No one, in speech or manner, could have suggested the adventuress less; uncle Bash was a gentleman, a man of esthetic tastes, and the girl was adorable. More remarkable things had happened in the history of love and marriage than that two such persons, meeting in a far corner of the world, would honestly care for each other.

"You stopped at Hartford," I began, breaking a long silence. "You have friends there——?"

"Not one! I had made a pious pilgrimage to Mark Twain's last home at Redding, and hearing that he had lived at Hartford, I came through there to render my fullest homage. He has always been one of my heroes, you knew."

"Our introduction is complete," I said reverently. "Let's consider ourselves old friends."

"I rather thought we understand each other," she said in her even, mellow tones. "You know, we had your photograph out East—a very good one, it seems—so I had an idea of what you looked like.

"He was very fond of you. He was very proud that you had gone into the war."

"I am glad to hear that; I thought he disapproved of me for refusing to go into business. He offered me a substantial interest before he sold out."

"I know that; but I think he liked you rather better for refusing it. Business with him was merely a means to an end. And it was doubly sad that he should die just when he was free to enjoy the beautiful things he loved."

It was at the tip of my tongue to say that the loss of her companionship was even more grievous; but nothing in her manner invited such a comment. She talked for some time of Uncle Bash's life in the East, of his short illness and quite unexpected death.

"But I'm keeping you," she exclaimed suddenly, jumping down from the wall. "And I must finish my unpacking."

As we walked to the house I answered her questions about the neighborhood, and promised to telephone Torrence immediately of her arrival.

"You will have luncheon with us—or maybe dinner would be better—or both? I shall think you resent my coming if you don't dine at the house every day. Mrs. Farnsworth—my friend and companion—is a very interesting woman. I am sure you will like her."

The information that she was protected in her youthful widowhood by a companion was imparted neatly.

"It was really much nicer, meeting this way," she said, giving me her hand. "We shall expect you at seven."

I found them on the veranda. She came toward me, a slender figure in white. She seemed taller in white; as she took a few steps toward me, I was aware of a stateliness I had missed at the shore. A queenly young person, but as unaffectedly cordial and friendly as in the bright morning sunlight.

"I Might Even Boast of It!" My Aunt Replied.

"Mrs. Farnsworth, Mr. Singleton."

Mrs. Farnsworth was a pleasant-faced, white-haired woman with remarkably fine, dark eyes. If the positions had been changed—if Mrs. Farnsworth had been my uncle's choice of a wife, the situation would have been much more real. I instantly liked Mrs. Farnsworth. She uttered a few commonplaces in an uncommonplace tone without pausing in her knitting. Mrs. Bashford had been knitting too, and as she sat down she took up her yarn and needles. Her manner of knitting was charming. She knew that I was watching her hands and remarked with a graceful turn of the head:

"For an English boy somewhere! I began by knitting for my brother and cousins, but"—her head bent lower—"that isn't for me to do any more." Her eyes, turned upon me for a moment, were bright with tears.

It had been years since the house had known a woman's hand, and it was astonishing how humanized it had become in a few hours. The long dining-room, always a bare, forbidding place, had been reduced to cosy proportions by screens, and a small round table replaced the massive, oblong affair that always looked as though it had been built into the house by the carpenters.

"I found those lovely screens in the garret and thought we might as well enjoy them, and that Lang Yao jar you see on the sideboard oughtn't to be hidden in the vault."

"I am sure Uncle Bash would be happy to know you care for these things so much," I said, noting that the white roses she had chosen for the jar—I knew the choice was hers—served to emphasize the deep red of its exquisite glaze.

"I am among the unelect," remarked Mrs. Farnsworth. "When I am told that such things are beautiful I am immediately convinced. I say they are beautiful, and that is enough."

"That has always been enough for me," I replied, "My uncle used to try to interest me, but he gave it up when he found that my pagan soul was aroused by nothing but pottery idols. I am a heathen!"

"I am gratified that you make the admission so frankly," said Mrs. Farnsworth. "I have always been a great admirer of the heathen. But, you know, Mr. Singleton, Alice and I never can agree as to just what a heathen is. All our squabbles have been about that. I am disposed to include all who believe in fairies good, or bad, and persons who honestly believe in signs, omens, and lucky stones and all who have the receipt of fern-seed and walk invisible—there's Shakespeare for that."

"I think," said Mrs. Bashford soberly, "that I have always believed in witches; and if I keep on believing I shall see one some day. We shall find anything in this world that we believe in hard enough."

She was talking very gravely, as though witches were the commonest topic of conversation, but finding my eyes turned upon her in frank wonder, she laughed at my amazement.

"Let us be honest with you, Mr. Singleton," Mrs. Farnsworth explained, "and tell you that we are just testing you. It may be a breach of hospitality, and you are but a stranger, but we are curious to know whether you are of that small company of the favored of heaven who can play at being foolish without becoming idiotic. Alice is sometimes very near idiocy. You admit that, Alice!"

"I not only admit it, but I might even boast of it!" my aunt replied.

At the mention of witches I had caught Antoine crossing himself as he turned to the sideboard. I confess that I myself had been startled by the drift of the talk. Mrs. Farnsworth and my aunt treated each other as though they were contemporaries, and it was Alice and Constance between them. As the talk ran exhaustively through the lore of witches and goblins I had hoped that one or the other would drop some clue as to the previous history of my amazing aunt. It was as plain as day that she and Mrs. Farnsworth indulged in whims for the joy of it, and her zest in the discussion of witches, carried on while Antoine served the table, lips tightly compressed, and with an exaggeration of his stately tread, was the more startling from the fact that my aunt's companion was a woman of years, a handsome woman with a high-bred air who did not look at all like a person who would discuss witches as though they had been made the topic of the day by the afternoon newspapers. And when the shape of a witch's chin became the immediate point of discussion I knew it was in Antoine's mind that such conversation was unbecoming, an offense to the memory of Raymond Bashford. Mrs. Farnsworth's brown eyes sparkled, and the color deepened in my aunt's cheeks as we discoursed upon witches and the chins thereof. I had a friend in college who used to indulge in the same sort of piffling, but that my uncle's widow and her elderly companion should delight in such absurdities bewildered me. I had been addressing my aunt as Mrs. Bashford—it seemed ridiculous to call her Aunt Alice—and in the heat of our argument as to whether witches are necessarily naughty and malign beings I had just uttered the "Mrs." when she bent toward me and said gravely and with no hint of archness: "Can't we make it Alice and Bob? I think that would be a lot friendlier."

I experienced a curious flutter of the heart the first time I tried it, but after that it came very easily. She was simply the jolliest, prettiest girl that had ever crossed my horizon, and to be talking to her across the table gave me thrills compared with which sliding out of clouds in an airplane is only a rocking-chair pastime for old men.

We had coffee on the veranda (Alice thought it would be nicer there), and as Antoine gave me my cup he edged close to my chair to whisper:

"That party, sir. If he should come—"

"Tell the troops not to attack any visitors," I said, loud enough for the others to hear. "Mr. Torrence will be here shortly, and it would be annoying to have him ushered in on a shutter."

"I know why this is the land of the free and the home of the brave," laughed Alice. "One has to be brave to live here."

"Those women are playing a trick."

Highway Improvement

KEEP ROADS IN GOOD REPAIR

Farmer Can Make Much Improvement by Dragging Highway in Front of His Property.

Every farmer should feel his dependence upon good roads. Whether or not one lives on a public highway he should take an interest in the nearest one to his farm or the road he must use to market his farm, orchard and garden products.

There are many times when a day's work can be spared on the road. After heavy rains the road may need certain repairs or improvements when the overseer is not ready to call out the hands. Why not individual farmers donate a day's work on the road at such time?

By keeping a road drag and dragging the road along one's land after heavy rains the road may be greatly improved. It is an easy matter to have an agreement so each farmer will drag the road in front of his farm. This would maintain the road till the regular hands could be called out at stated intervals or till the commissioner could make the necessary repairs.

The time has come when we must consider the roads an asset, indispensable to the well-being of the farmer and his family. This being true, is it not every man's duty to do all he can to keep the roads in good condition? The individual as well as the county is responsible.

RECORDS PROMISED IN 1920

Millions to Be Spent in Improving Public Highways and Transportation Facilities.

The year 1920 promises to develop a revolution in America's two great problems—highways and transportation.

All over the country great interest is being manifested in better roads and improved transportation facilities.

The coming of the pneumatic-tired motortruck has given an impetus to the movement for a national highway system that is sweeping everything before it.

State after state has passed, without noticeable opposition, appropriations for millions of dollars to build and improve main market and inter-county highways.

What these activities portend can be visualized in some measure when it is said that of the 2,000,000 miles of roads in this country only 200,000 miles are improved.

Motor transports work at highest efficiency on good roads, although the pneumatic truck tire is rendering conspicuous service in transporting heavy loads over swamp ground and the sandy soil of fruit groves.

GOOD ROADS AID APPEARANCE

Farmstead Buildings on Improved Highways Found in Better Shape and Fences Kept Up.

Have you ever compared the farmstead on an improved highway with one on a dirt road? Why in the former are the buildings in so much better shape, the fences up and in a state of repair, the fields spick and span, the house grounds well kept and hedges trimmed, while in the latter the buildings are unpainted? Strange as it may seem, the difference is caused by the road.

VARIOUS KINDS OF HIGHWAYS

Each Community Should Select Type That Can Be Built and Maintained at Lowest Cost.

There are various types of roads that last, and each community should choose the type that can be built and maintained at the least expense. For some communities it may be gravel, for others concrete, for others sand-clay roads. But in every community there should be good roads every day in the year.

FROM FORTY-FIVE TO SIXTY

A Word of Help to Women of Middle Age From Mrs. Raney.

Morse, Okla.—"When I was 45 years old Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound carried me through the critical period of the Change of Life in safety. I am over 60 and have raised a family of eight children and am in fine health. My daughter and daughters-in-law recommend your Vegetable Compound and I still take it occasionally myself. You are at liberty to use my name if you wish."—Mrs. ALICE RANEY, Morse, Oklahoma.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. This good old-fashioned root and herb remedy may be relied upon to overcome the distressing symptoms which accompany it and women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to carry women so successfully through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

For Age Computation.

To compute the age and birth month of a person ask the person to think of his age, multiply by 10, add 25, multiply by 10, add the number of the month in which he was born, subtract 250. The first two numerals will be the person's age and the last two the month in which he was born.

Not Hungry.

"What I have to say will give you food for thought, my son."

"I guess I won't feed my thinker, pa."

Get Back Your Health

Are you dragging around day after day with a dull backache? Are you tired, and lame mornings—subject to headaches, dizzy spells, and sharp, stabbing pains. Then there's surely something wrong. Probably it's kidney weakness! Don't wait for more serious kidney trouble. Get back your health and keep it. For quick relief get plenty sleep and exercise and use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor!

An Indiana Case

Acid Stomach

Makes the Body Sour

Nine Out of Ten People Suffer From It

It sends its harmful acids and gases all over the body, instead of health and strength. Day and night this ceaseless damage goes on. No matter how strong, its victim cannot long withstand the health-destroying effects of an acid stomach.

Good news for millions of sufferers. Chemists have found a sure remedy—one that takes the acid up and carries it out of the body; of course, when the cause is removed, the sufferer gets well.

Bloating, indigestion, sour, acid, gassy stomach miseries all removed. This is proven by over half a million ailing folks who have taken EATONIC with wonderful benefits. It can be obtained from any druggist, who will cheerfully refund its trifling cost if not entirely satisfactory. Everyone should enjoy its benefits. Frequently the first tablet gives relief.

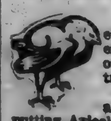
TO SAVE BABY CHICKS

Put this in the drinking water.



Most people lose half of every hatch, and seem to expect it. Chick cholera or white diarrhoea is the trouble.

This loss is needless and easily stopped, by putting Avicol in the drinking water. We prove it by this offer:—

Call at our store for a 35c or 50c package of Avicol. If you don't find that it promptly stops your chicks dying, cures white diarrhoea and all other bowel diseases of poultry, your money will be refunded.

Avicol revives the drooping chicks and helps them grow and develop rapidly. Shows positive results in 48 hours. Easily used and inexpensive.

IN WORDS THAT APPEALED

Poetically Expressed Offer of Needed Assistance Touched Elderly Spinster's Romantic Heart.

After the "personally conducted" tour abroad a band of English travelers were crossing the channel home. It was very rough, and most of the ladies retired to the cabin. Only one—an elderly little spinster—stayed on deck.

As the vessel pitched and tossed, and heavy showers of spray drenched everything, a fellow tourist came to her.

"Excuse me, Miss Black, but I thought perhaps you feel the need of a strong arm to lean on—something to support you, you know."

"Oh, Mr. Binks!" sighed the lady, as she lurched toward him and landed her head on his shoulder. "How sweetly and romantically you have expressed it!"

Machine Handles Peanuts Properly.

The operation of blanching peanut kernels is now taken care of by a machine which has a capacity of 1,000 pounds per day. It requires the services of but one operator and heretofore this work has been done by hand and one worker could not do more than from 65 to 80 pounds in the course of a day's work.

Real Proof.

"They say that Dobbs is madly in love with his wife, but I don't see any sign of it. He doesn't pay her any special attention, doesn't make any lover-like speeches or any particular fuss over her."

"Maybe not; but whenever she asks him for money he gives it to her without asking what she wants it for."

Whatever a derby hat does, it never lops down over the ear.

GIVEN PRIVILEGE IN WAR

Channel Islanders for Centuries Were Not Forced to Take Part in Britain's Conflicts.

For over two centuries the Channel islands were allowed to remain neutral in any war that England might undertake. This singular privilege was granted to them by Edward IV, and was not revoked till the reign of William and Mary. It was granted as a reward for the loyalty of the islanders, whose commerce with the neighboring coasts of Brittany and Normandy was constantly being interrupted by the numerous wars. Even the pope joined in enforcing the right, and by a bull dated 1488 Sextus IV threatened to excommunicate any one who violated the order. On the whole, it was fairly rigidly observed, and when a Guernsey vessel was taken in the channel by a privateer of Morlaix, the islanders with their boat were released, but a few Englishmen on board, with their merchandise, were captured. The privilege does not seem to have been of any great commercial value, for when it was withdrawn the islanders made more money than before by fitting their vessels out as privateers.

HOW TO LIVE

Common Sense Comments on Health, Happiness and Longevity

By GEORGE F. BUTLER, A. M., M. D.

Copyright 1925, by International Press Bureau

OLD AGE.

We should welcome the advancing years as did Fleming in Longfellow's "Hyperion" when he says: "For my part I am happier as I grow older. When I compare my sensations and enjoyments now with what they were ten years ago, the comparison is vastly in favor of the present. Much of the fever and fretfulness of life is over. The world and I look each other more calmly in the face. My mind is more self-possessed. It has done me good to be somewhat parched by the heat and drenched by the rain of life."

"Take heed unto thyself," may be addressed to the old man with scarcely less force of application than to the young man. An old man should avoid all sudden and extreme changes in occupation or modes of life. Regularity and moderation must be observed. Discipline is very important. Spasmodic industry prevents that development of a self-regulating automatic generation of energy which saves the brain so much. He needs to know the importance of proper exercise, and of sleep, rest and recreation. He should live simply, being temperate in eating and drinking. Too much attention cannot be paid to the matter of feeding, as to the quantity, kind and quality of the food taken. Eat moderately, not too heartily.

Nothing is more desirable than to keep the brain active. Don't be a "has been." Keep in the game and live in this living age, drawing fresh mental vigor from your daily intercourse with the young thought of the acting world.

As we grow old, we need to know that we will remain young if we keep the heart young, and this we can do by mingling with the young. Nothing will contribute more toward protracting the period of old age and rendering it healthy than the possession of a contented, cheerful and hopeful state of mind. Cultivate the habit of looking for the best side of things and keeping your attention fixed on it. It is astonishing how much good there is in the world if you look for it resolutely. Your own mind will keep sweet and serene and your friends will welcome you with a smile. The man who has sought the good all his days has stored up enough virtue to help him out of his hole. Such a man does not stop to bewail his failure—he does not know the world. Optimism is the foundation and crown of all success. As you grow old, cultivate a sympathy for the world at large, for its weakness, for the young, and the return in health and happiness will come to you a hundredfold.

Old age and decline may be as gentle and sweet and grateful as the sequence of blossom and fruit and harvest. Old age is the harvest of life of which youth and early manhood are the spring and seedtime, the fruitage of other years; the storehouse in which is gathered up the product and result of our past labors, experience and trials.

It is possible for a man with winter on his head to have eternal spring in his heart; to have no hate, no grouch, no prejudice; to have a breath sweet as a baby's, muscles that do the bidding of the brain, and nerves that never go on a strike; to become old in years yet have the freshness of perpetual prime; to so live that when he drops the debris of the past he will breathe the ether of immortality and his cheek mantle with eternal bloom. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

VACATIONS.

Take a vacation! When I think of all the good times there are in this world which you and I might be in if we only had the good sense to avail ourselves of our opportunities, I am inclined to think we are not to be commiserated so much after all if we fail to have our good time oftener. Don't think you haven't time to take a short vacation. You have. Don't wait for the opportunity to present itself, take the opportunity. If one sat on shore and waited for some trig little boat from off the sea to sail up to the strand, draw one into it by some method of affinity unknown to science and carry one off to Spain, don't you think one would grow gray-headed and wan before the voyage commenced? It is just as silly and just as hopeless to wait for some full-rigged opportunity to draw near and force you on board. Without some effort on your part you will never set sail. You will never go anywhere if you do not arise and go. Leave your work for a while; leave things undone if need be. Bother the duties! Shoo the obligations! Just you get up and go!

What one needs to be well and happy is out-of-door exercise—to get in touch with nature and forget oneself. The open air is not only a cure for the body, but for the mind as well. Nature is not only a fairy godmother, not only a revelation of beauty, but a guide and a teacher. We are told that Buddha went into the forest to look for truth. He left mankind and went to nature for help. And you will be helped spiritually and physically by going into God's sanatorium of out-of-doors.

All nature teems with joy and peace on summer days, seeming to laugh and chatter and whisper to us of health and happiness. There is motion in the ground. Each rill and trunk of tree and stem of flower and blade of grass feels the thrill of life. Health and energy are abroad in the land. And yet some of us are discontented and feel ourselves misused because we happen to be a little short of money now and then, and it is hard to find the plums in our pudding; or we are sick, or think we are, and are despondent and hopeless. These thoughts are only the transient reign of winter in the heart, and are due largely to the need of change—a vacation. Get out of doors! Rejoice with the trees, the flowers and the birds. It is an exhilarating, healthful and sublime uplift that they will give you if you will but go to them.

What has not quitting the crowded city for a change of air effected! How many has it not snatched from the jaws of death! How many has it not saved from sickness! How many consumptives, melancholy hypochondriacs and waning and harassed dyspeptics has it not restored to former healthfulness and joy. Go to Nature! It will strengthen your bodies, uplift your souls and help you to forget how tired and troubled you are. And the slips of health and contentment you will gather you should plant in the neglected garden of your soul. "Remember, it is not always youth time any more than it is always May; and grafts and shoots that grow readily in spring will take no root in bleak November. Cultivate your smiles and your simple services of love now and old age shall be but an afternoon trellis, hung deep with perfumed roses, as beautiful in the sunset glow as in the dawn." LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

Health Notes

It should be your aim to make of your life a journey toward the ideal; to live with gratitude, with devoutness, with gentleness and courage. Then add to it the humility which kneels, and the charity which gives, and you have the whole wisdom of the children of God.

• • •

Anyone who is anxious to live long and preserve his youth should spend as much time as possible in the open air. After the day's work is finished we should always get out into the air, in the park or in the woods, if possible.

• • •

Fruit stimulates and improves appetite and digestion, relieves thirst, and introduces water into the system; acts as a laxative or astringent, stimulates the kidneys and supplies the organic salts necessary to proper nutriment.

• • •

Many people are so accustomed to loading the stomach beyond its normal capacity that they are never content to leave the table until the stomach is stretched by a large quantity of food and drink.

• • •

It is our duty to so order our habits with reference to the maintenance of a high degree of effectiveness, to so utilize all means, material and spiritual, which make for soundness, that we shall be up to the mark in physical health.

Some of us perhaps at the present day do not sufficiently appreciate the importance of leisure and securing opportunities for meditation. We make life too much of a rush and bustle; even our games we turn into a business.

The way of health lies through obedience to law, and the discernment of laws determining health lies in man's recognition of the fact that he is a complex being, a conscious spark of divinity embodied in matter and that no part of his nature can be neglected or ignored without making the whole man sick.

We are walking along the paths of a very beautiful world. It is a perpetual panorama, passing by us every day; and we shall add greatly to the happiness of life, and to the elevation and purification of all our faculties, if we acquire the habit of working for its beauties.

• • •

Fruits and vegetables should not, as a rule, be eaten together, that is, at the same meal; if they are so eaten persons with feeble digestive organs will usually suffer.

• • •

Plenty of sunlight is one of the important factors in the preservation of bodily renewal. Enjoy the influence of the sun to the greatest possible extent.

• • •

The way to grow old gracefully is the way of self-control, the way of sympathy, the way of unselfishness. The grand essentials of happiness in every stage of life, but particularly in the last, are having something to do, something to love and something to hope for.

• • •

To absorb as much of the active rays of the sun as possible it is best to wear light or light blue or light gray clothing, which allows the sun's rays to pass, whereas dark cloth does not.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcels Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

Bill's Capacity.

Prison Superintendent Rattigan was talking at Sing Sing about the capacity for strong drink possessed by convicts.

"Two convicts were talking one day," he said, "and the first remarked:

"'Yes, Bill done that carpenterin' job for 'em in return for what beer he drunk while he was at work.'

"'I see,' said the second convict. 'Ordinary union rate wasn't good enough for Bill, eh?'"

Constipation generally indicates disordered stomach, liver and bowels. Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills restore regularity without griping.—Adv.

Keeping Up With H. C. L.

Bert asked his grandpa for a job and was told he could throw down hay for the horses. For this chore he had always received a nickel; but as the candy bar he was in the habit of buying had advanced in price, he coolly informed his grandparent that he would have to have a raise in wages.

"How much?" asked grandpa, amused.

"Oh," replied the little laborer, "enough to keep up with the high cost of candy."

Sea Otters.

Prohibition of the killing of sea otters in Alaskan waters has been extended by the secretary of commerce to November 1, 1925. It is hoped that in the meantime this valuable fur-bearing species, which was pursued almost to extermination, will gain somewhat in numbers.

The fur of the sea otter is the most beautiful and most costly of all peltries. Long before the discovery of America the mighty tycoons of Japan clothed themselves with its shimmering velvet. Early explorers found the natives of the Aleutian islands and the Puget sound region commonly wearing sea otter cloaks, which they parted with for a trifle.

HE REMEMBERED THE LAW

Boy Scout's Explanation Somewhat Disconcerting in That It Implied So Much.

The boy scouts were telling their scoutmaster of some of the good turns they had done during the last week. He was having this done for the benefit of one of the city school teachers who was visiting the meeting. One of the little scouts said, "I helped an old lady across the street."

The next little scout looked at the visiting teacher, who happened to be his teacher, and who also was in the early thirties. "I brought my teacher a pitcher of well water when she was not feeling well," he told the scoutmaster.

The teacher smiled, "Why didn't you say you helped another old lady?" she asked.

The retort that came back staggered her. The little scout said sweetly, "A scout is courteous."—Indianapolis News.

NOVEL HOUSES OF WORSHIP

One Missionary to Eskimos Made Use of Sealskins and Another Employed Only Snow.

One of the queerest churches ever known was built by a missionary on Blackhead island, in Cumberland sound. Finding that the Eskimos had no place in which they could meet for religious services, the missionary started to build a church of the skins of seals, no wood being available. The skins were sewn together and stretched over "girders" of whalebone, empty provision tins serving as seats.

The cold at one time became so severe that for many days the Eskimos of Blackhead island were unable to procure food for themselves or for their animals. One night dogs made their way to the strange church edifice and began consuming it, with the result that when morning came there was not a skin left, the whalebone ribs alone remaining to show that there had ever been a church.

Another missionary in charge of the spiritual welfare of the Eskimo tribe, built his church entirely of snow. Seat, pulpit, altar and interior equipment were made of snow, and in the matter of warmth no stone-built church could beat it.

LESSON FOR MAY 16

VICTORY UNDER SAMUEL.

LESSON TEXT—I Sam. 7:3-14.
GOLDEN TEXT—Prepare your hearts unto the Lord and serve him.—I Sam. 7:3.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—I Sam. 6:19-7:1; 8:1-3.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Boy Who Became a Useful Man.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Great Leader Praying.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Victory Through Prayer.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Qualifications for Leadership.

In our last lesson we saw Israel's overwhelming defeat and the capture of the ark by the Philistines. While they triumphed over Israel, they did not triumph over Israel's God. Through the presence of the ark God was working among the Philistines. Note:

1. The ark at Ashdod (5:1-6). It was placed in the heathen temple alongside of Dagon, with the expectation that the ark would be destroyed, showing that Dagon was mightier than God, but Dagon was humiliated and broken. Besides this the people were afflicted with emerods, or hemorrhoids, showing the hand of the living God upon them in judgment.

2. The ark at Gath (5:7-9). Here immediately the same dreadful disease broke out that had afflicted the Ashdodites, accompanied with great mortality. They then carried the ark to Ekron.

3. The ark at Ekron (5:10-12). At Ekron the destruction was still more awful. Many were slain and the rest were smitten with emerods so that their cry went up to heaven. The contest was decisively in favor of God. Upon the advice of the lords of the Philistines the ark was returned to Israel. This was done in such a way as to show conclusively that the hand of God was upon them in judgment.

I. Samuel Calls Israel to Repentance (7:2-4).

Some twenty years have now elapsed since Israel was humiliated by the Philistines, during which time Israel "lamented after the Lord." We know not why Samuel has not been heard from through all these years. Doubtless he continued to exercise the prophetic office during this time, but now he is appointed to the office of judge, also. He asked the people to turn to the Lord with all their hearts, the proof of which would be:

1. To put away their idolatrous worship. This was really gross licentiousness under the guise of religion.

2. To direct their hearts unto the Lord and serve him only. He assures them that deliverance would come as soon as this was sincerely complied with.

II. Israel Assembled at Mizpeh (vv. 5, 6).

This was for the purpose of confessing their sins.

1. They poured water before the Lord. This symbolized their need of cleansing and the pouring out of their hearts in penitence before the Lord.

2. They fasted and publicly confessed their sins.

III. The Philistines Attack Israel. (v. 7).

The assembly of Israel at Mizpeh alarmed the Philistines. They interpreted the gathering as a preparation to attack them, so they thought to frustrate Israel's attack upon them by attacking them first; or perhaps they recognized that the return of the people to the Lord meant a return to power and decided to attack them while unprepared.

IV. The Intercession of Samuel. (vv. 8, 9).

The Israelites urged Samuel to pray to God for them. Instead of trusting to the ark for deliverance they now looked to God. Samuel accompanied his intercession with a burnt offering, showing that he looked for acceptance in the sacrifice of another, even Christ, through whose offering a way of access was opened unto God.

V. The Victory Over the Philistines (vv. 10, 11).

This was the result of God's interposition. "The Lord thundered with a great thunder on that day and discomfited them." The men of Israel followed up this advantage to such complete victory that the Philistines did not come back to power during the days of Samuel. The Lord will fight our battles if we put our trust in him; no enemy can stand before the Almighty.

VI. A Memorial of Deliverance (vv. 12-14).

Samuel set up a stone between Mizpeh and Shen and called it Ebenezer, which means "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." Since God has interposed in our behalf and wrought deliverance for us, it is proper that a memorial be set up which will commemorate it.

Our Conduct.

"Conduct is three-fourths of life." What we have to do, as Christian men, is to bring the great principles of the gospel to bear upon our small duties, and day by day to feel that, because we say we have faith in Jesus Christ, therefore we are bound to cultivate all manner of holiness and purity.—Dr. Maclaren.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the Mucous Surfaces.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE.

ASPIRIN

Introduced by "Bayer" to Physicians in 1900

You want genuine Aspirin—the Aspirin prescribed by physicians for nineteen years. The name "Bayer" means the true, world-famous Aspirin, proved safe by millions of people.

Each unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" contains proper directions for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Neuritis and for Pain generally.

Always say "Bayer" when buying Aspirin. Then look for the safety "Bayer Cross" on the package and on the tablets.

Handy tin boxes of twelve tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists also sell larger packages.

Aspirin is trade mark of Bayer Manufacture Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

ITCH!

HERE is an offer backed by one of your personal friends—a man whom you have known for a long time, and in whose honesty you have implicit confidence. This man is your local druggist. He will tell you that he has been selling Hunt's Salve, formerly called Hunt's Cure ever since he has been in business, under the strict guarantee to promptly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied user.

He will say to you "Take home a box of Hunt's Salve and if it is not successful in the treatment of itching skin diseases, I will promptly refund to you your 75 cents."

Hunt's Salve is especially compounded for the treatment of Itch, Eczema, Ringworm, Tetter, and other itching skin diseases.

The General Manager of the Lida Valley Railway Co., Goldfield, Nevada, A. D. Goodenough, writes: "At one time I had a very bad case of Eczema, which troubled me for seven or eight years, and although I tried all kinds of medicine and several doctors, I got no relief until I used Hunt's Salve. It finally cured me.

Thousands of such letters have been received, testifying as to the curative merits of this wonderful remedy.

Don't fail to ask your druggist about Hunt's Salve, formerly called Hunt's Cure. Show him this ad, and ask him if the statements herein made are not correct.

Sold by all reputable druggists everywhere at 75 cents per box, or sent direct on receipt of stamps or money order.

CARRIES WEIGHT ALMOST EQUAL TO ITS OWN

View of the Thomas Morse mail plane which recently accomplished a feat long the dream of aviation pioneers, when with a useful weight almost equal to its own, it gracefully left the snow and slush at Ithaca, N. Y. The craft is a biplane evolved and produced by the Thomas Morse Aircraft corporation. Its weight empty is 2,890 pounds. Its weight loaded is 5,500 pounds. Thus its useful load is 2,610 pounds, or only 280 pounds less than the weight of the craft. Many planes carry less than half their weight.

USE FOR CELLARETTE

When prohibition came on, Mr. E. J. McMullin, a Philadelphia artist, found a very good and antique cellarette on his hands. He purchased necessary parts of a phonograph and converted the cellarette into an excellent talking machine which now dispenses grand opera or jassy music instead of wine.

Easy for Autoists.

Keeping the radiator of his parked car from freezing is the least of troubles to the autoist of London, Ontario, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. By paying a fat fee for the season he obtains a key which unlocks the covers of electric sockets attached to terminal boxes, mounted on posts at frequent intervals along the streets of the city. A small electric heater with a long cord is carried in the car and connected to the street box by simply inserting a plug. Not only is the car's circulatory system safeguarded, but its interior is kept comfortable during the owner's absence.

The One Real Remedy

It would be amusing, if the matter involved were not so important, to observe how some so-called "experts on economics," in seeking a new remedy for the high cost of living, really get away from the main issue.

A lot of talk is heard on the part of the public against high prices, and somebody or other insists on telling us all the time that prices must come down or something will happen—just what, they don't attempt to say. There are those who are constantly decrying what they call the "era of extravagance"—the craze for automobiles, silk shirts, or this or that luxury, and who ask: "What is it all coming to?" These same people seem to forget that all these automobiles—all these luxuries, in fact—are manufactured to meet a popular demand and that this very demand exists only because the public want what they want.

Not only that—in the past few years a thousand and one different articles have come into general use that before were known to only an "exclusive few," and all the while these new demands were springing up, production facilities were grossly inadequate. In the face of this great demand, there has been the vast under-production resulting from the war—a situation that it is only reasonable to suppose would require years to remedy, even with the hardest efforts towards greater production.

Experts may theorize to their hearts' content, but they must always come back (if they are truthful with themselves) to the great natural law of supply and demand—as sure in its operation as the law of gravitation in influencing the fall of an apple. It is clearly no remedy to try to tell the public what they want, but it is a remedy to give them more than they want, and as the supply gradually overtakes the demand—which it is far from having done at the present time—then we can look for a gradual return of low prices.

For a long time we have been told that people simply wouldn't buy inferior goods — that they would no longer go after the "bargains," that they wanted the best and were ready to pay the price even though grumbling while doing so. We hear that a portion of the public is getting tired of paying high prices and is refusing to do so, but if I know anything about human nature, most of the people who have acquired tastes for the "best," will continue to satisfy these tastes as long as they have the money.

Now, while we all want to see low prices, the prosecution of a few retail merchants as "profiteers," will not bring this about, and the sooner we discard theory and get down to production, the quicker we will see prices on the down scale. What we need right now is more goods, and just as soon as we have enough to supply the demand we will not be bothered with profiteers.

For several years it has not been a question of what will I buy, but of what can I buy, and as long as this condition prevails, we are bound to have profiteers. Speed up production and increase the supplies and it will not take long to restore competition. When the public finds it can buy what it wants here, there and everywhere, it will be the merchant with the lowest prices who attracks the crowd, and the arrogant shopkeeper with his "take it or leave it" look, will be a thing of the past.

The only way to get rid of weeds is by pulling them out by the roots, and the same thing applies to profiteers, only in this case the roots must be eradicated by increased production.

Born

To the Lutheran Sunday School, St. Joe, Ind., May 2, 1920, a very fine organized class of young men.

The proud parent, having much faith in its youngest off-spring, permitted it to name itself "Tri Mu." It has been placed under the guardianship of J. P. Buckingham, the teacher, who is quite ably assisted in conducting the affairs of its life by his efficient corps of Staff Officers, Carl Perkins, President, a most energetic and progressive leader; Ferm Simanton a very industrious Vice President always on the job; Lawrence Pflaumer, brisk wielder of the pen, ready at all times to write down the names of all desirous of joining the ranks; and Albert Wade, to whom has been entrusted the responsible position of looking after the finances, both actual and potential, that comes into the treasury.

Into this class has been instilled the spirit of pep and activeness which always spells success, and with the shoulders of all pushing willingly behind the leaders, the future holds forth promises of profitable results.

Realizing that companionship and comradism are the main assets toward helping our friends, these young men have appointed three committees to look after the social, religious and visiting phases of their activities.

They solicit the aid and right-hand assistance of all the people of the community. If you have anything that you want "Put Over" tell them about it. They'll do it; If you know of any sick, let them know, and they will visit them with flowers and cheerfulness.

Now for a little secret. You must promise not to tell if it is made known to you. The boys have "something up their sleeves" which will require considerable time to bring about, but with the co-operation of their parents and friends, it can easily be carried to a successful culmination, and is guaranteed to be a great asset to the community at large.

Help them grow—watch them go! They're off!

POOR POLICY TO KEEP STOCK "AS GOOD AS AVERAGE" WHEN AVERAGE IS LOW

A Piney Woods Rooter and an Example of What the Use of Purebred Sires Can Accomplish in Two Generations.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"What is the use of all this noise about 'Better Sires and Better Stock?'" It was one of the well-to-do farmers of the county who was talking. "Look at those steers over yonder. No purebred sires among their ancestors so far as I know. But they are good enough for me. I tell you, Bascom," he said earnestly, coming over to the fence beyond which the county agent sat in his flivver, 'I'll admit we've got a lot of help in a scientific way from the information you've brought us, but on this stock proposition it's different. I believe in good stock, of course, and take a reasonable pride in my animals, but what is the use of overdoing it? We better move along the way we have been for the past 20 years, I say. Sometimes we get some poor animals, of course, but the creatures on my place suit me pretty well. My father, on the old farm back East, never worried about purebred sires and he made a fair living. What was good enough for father is good enough for me."

"Hold on a minute," said the county agent, stopping his motor and coming over to the fence. "You've always listened to what I have had to say in the past and I want you to listen to me now, for the simple reason that it means dollars and cents to you. It's nothing in my pocket, but it will mean more profits for you when you sell your live-stock products.

"Now here is the dope, as the boys say: United States department of agriculture men, other animal husbandry specialists, poultry specialists, and all the rest have figured this thing out on a broad basis. There are no two ways about it. Better sires mean better stock; that means better marketable products, and that means better profits!"

Boy Converts His Father.

For an hour Bascom, the county agent, and Sam, the farmer, talked over the better-sires campaign, the county agent skillfully citing examples from his own personal knowledge and from reports he had read. He told, for instance, of a New Jersey boy who was influenced to buy a high-grade cow for $155, quite to the disgust of his "practical" father who owned five cows, which he claimed, and truthfully, were "as good as the average in the neighborhood." On freshening, the boy's cow gave 24 quarts of milk, and kept it up for a long period, while none of the father's cows was able to make any such record. Finally the father saw the point and confessed that it was a deal more profitable to expend his labor and feed on well-bred animals than on his so-called average cow.

The incident set the county agent's friend to thinking, and the former lost no opportunity to press his point home.

Breeding Counted.

"Sam," he went on, "you don't begin to realize what this thing will mean on your place. Right breeding counts every time. The United States department of agriculture tells of an Oklahoma farmer who owned two registered Shorthorn yearling bulls that he prized highly for breeding purposes. A butcher saw those bulls and on asking the price learned that they were registered and that it would take $200 to buy the two. What did he do but pay the $200, and when he killed them he said they were the cheapest cattle he had bought for a long time, because they cut the better kinds of beef, and more of it. My private opinion is it was too bad to deprive the community of the use of those purebreds, even though the butcher was willing to pay the price. But this is the big point: Breeding counted in dollars and cents in that case, and it does every time."

Hogs Pay Despite High Price.

Turning from the subject of cattle to hogs, the county agent told of what North Carolina boys had been doing. "Even though hogs had never been so high," he said, "hundreds of boys bought pure-bred pigs with the expectation of selling their offspring. Those lads were not disappointed. Through their county agents, the pigs were sold at splendid prices and more than one of their dads was converted by the experience to the use of pure-bred sires."

"See here," said the county agent, pulling two photographs from his pocket, "these were taken down in Mississippi. This one here"—indicating one of the photographs—"shows a typical Piney Woods rooter. You know this kind of razorback, Sam. Now look at this picture," handing over the second photograph. "Here is what two generations of breeding with purebred sires brought. There's some pretty good Berkshires. Believe me, when the owner, standing back there, takes those hogs to market, he'll appreciate the money value of the 'Better Sires—Better Stock' campaign."

The county agent paused a minute as if to let the thought sink in.

"Sam, you better sign up. This thing will mean a lot to you—even more next year than this—because you'll have more good animals on your place."

"You win again, Bascom. Times have changed. We have got to progress or we lose out. Count on me in the campaign."

TWO BIG FACTORS IN EDUCATION OF HORSE

Future Value and Usefulness Depend on Training.

Broken Colt Is One That Is Safe to Handle in Stable or on Road and Will Promptly Obey Orders of Driver or Rider.

The breaking and training of colts is of prime importance, says the United States department of agriculture, because their future value and usefulness depend to a great extent on whether or not they are well broken. By a broken colt is meant one that is safe to handle in the stable or on the road and that will promptly obey the orders of the driver or rider.

Memory and habit are the two main factors with which we have to deal in training horses. A horse acts through instinct and habit, and one of its greatest characteristics is uniformity of conduct. What a horse is once trained to do he will nearly always do under like conditions.

The first thing in training a horse is to get his attention. The second is to make him understand what is wanted. The education of the horse is based on reward and punishment. The reward, a pat on the neck, etc., should immediately follow the act of obedience. The punishment, to be effective, must immediately follow the act of disobedience.

Few horses are inherently vicious. Many horses are made vicious and unreliable by the carelessness or unnecessary brutality of their trainers. If a horse kicks because the harness hurts him, or shies at something of which he is afraid, punishment is not justifiable. If, however, after being stopped, a horse starts before receiving the command to do so, he should be punished. Horses are naturally obedient, and when thoroughly trained their conduct is uniformly good.

A horse should be trained so that he thinks there is no limit to his power to do the things required of him, and believes that he has no power to do that which is against the wishes of his driver. Above all, never ask of a horse something he is unable to perform and then punish him because it cannot be done. If during the first year of his work a colt is hitched only to loads he can pull, he will develop into a good work horse, while if he is overloaded a few times he may become balky and worthless.

LIFE'S LITTLE JESTS

ON SECOND THOUGHT.

"I've got a scheme," said Farmer Corntossel. "When it's time to get busy on the farm, I'll get a camera and have photographs made of how farmin' is done. That'll put the hired men an' the farmerettes and everybody on their mettle. They'll all imagine they're moving picture stars."

"It's a fine idea," answered the wife. "Only think of the salaries they'll demand!"

Getting Information.

"Sometimes," said Senator Sorghum, "I am tempted to believe in this ouija board business."

"Getting superstitious?"

"Not exactly. But there must be some supernatural way for all these orators to have found out exactly what George Washington would have said under these circumstances."

Clever Idea.

Transportation Manager —, What's the idea of raising that brakeman's pay? What did he do?

President—Invented a burglar alarm for every freight car.

Transportation Manager — Burglar alarm?

President—Yep; puts a bar of soap in each freight car.

Dressing Up.

Mrs. Lastcry—My good man, is that outer garment you are wearing an exclusive design?

The Plumber—You mean my overalls, ma'am? No'm. Buy 'em any where.

Mrs. Lastcry—Then you won't mind my copying the bodice for a new evening gown I'm having made?

FREE FOR ALL.

"My apartment house is very noisy. I suffer in silence."

"You don't have to do that. Get a graphophone yourself."

Any Chump Can Do It.

For him who needlessly complains
I do not care a feather;
I've found it doesn't call for brains
To criticize the weather.

The Kind.

"I am looking for a place where I can fill a temporary vacancy."

"There's a restaurant just over the way, sir, where a number of people are doing it."

The Reason.

"Don't go into this spelling bee."

"Why not?"

"Because with your limitations, you will find yourself in a hornet's nest."

No Smoking Allowed.

"Did you tell her that smoking isn't allowed?"

"Yes."

"Did you point out the notice?"

"Yes."

"Well, what did she do?"

"Lit her cigarette with it."—Tit-Bits.

Shakespearian Citation.

Professor of English Literature—Can you cite any passage from Shakespeare which presages the coming of the automobile?

Freshman—Yes, sir. "Curses not loud, but deep."

It Depends.

Prospective Lodger—What's the rent of this room, including the use of the piano?

Landlady—I can't say off-hand. You must play me something first.

Accounting for It.

He—Statistics show that more bachelors are criminals than married men.

She—That is because the bachelors have nobody to blame it on.

Great Carryings On.

Mrs. Newbride—My dear, I'm so worried. Our cook is carrying on something awful.

Mrs. Oldbride—Mine did the same thing. Carried away enough to start a small grocery store.

Literal Improvement.

"When she was taxed with her want of neatness, she swept out the room with disdain."

"It would have been more to the purpose if she swept it out with a broom."

LESSON FOR MAY 23

ISRAEL'S FIRST KING.

LESSON TEXT—I Sam. 9:15-10:24.
GOLDEN TEXT—Only fear the Lord, and serve him in truth with all your heart.—I Sam. 12:24.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—I Sam. 8:4; 9:14; 10:25-28.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Saul Visits Samuel.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Saul Chosen as King.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Kingly Qualities in Saul.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Selection of Leaders.

I. The People Demand a King (vv. 8:1-9).

1. Their reasons for this demand. (1) Samuel was incapacitated by old age; (2) the unfaithfulness of his sons whom he had appointed as his successors; (3) the desire to be like other nations. The surrounding nations had a king as leader. They wanted a king who would go out and fight their battles (see v. 20). The desire to be like others causes many to depart from the Lord.

2. Samuel's behavior under this trial (vv. 6-9). He took the matter to the Lord in prayer. The Lord comforted him by assuring him that this rejection was not merely his rejection, but the rejection of the kingship of God.

II. Samuel Tells of the Manner of the Kings (vv. 10-18).

He shows them that the king will be very exacting and arbitrary in his dealing with them.

1. He will take their sons and make them to serve in the army and do all kinds of hard work on his farm and in his house. He will make slaves of their daughters, also.

2. He will take their lands, even those inherited from their fathers and give them to his favorite officers and servants. Not content with that he will take the tenth part of the produce that remains and give to them.

III. Samuel's Protest Disregarded by the People (vv. 19-22).

Having made up their minds they deliberately shut their eyes to the truth and rushed madly into the experiment. Men today just as deliberately are turning from God's King, going after the lusts of their own hearts, but God makes the wrath of men to praise him.

IV. The King Providentially Pointed Out (1-10:16).

Saul was sent by his father to search for the asses that had wandered away. While Saul and his father were acting freely in this matter, at the same time God's sovereign purpose was being carried out. Although difficult to understand, God carries forth his sovereign purpose without interfering with man's freedom.

V. The King Chosen at Mizpeh (10:17-27).

The Lord had already pointed out to Samuel who should be king and Saul had been anointed. Let us observe:

1. Why Saul was chosen. If they would have a king the Lord would give them the one best suited to fill the place. He was from Benjamin, a small tribe, which would prevent undue rivalry between Ephraim and Judah, the leading tribes of Israel. He was also chosen because of his personal fitness (v. 24). He had the natural qualifications for his work, namely, self-control, modesty, and a military instinct.

2. How Saul was chosen. The method was by lot. Samuel called them together before the Lord, and before the lot was cast he again remonstrated with them against such action. He showed them the base ingratitude of their rejection of God as their King.

3. How the king was received by the people. Saul knew that the Lord had chosen him, but through modesty and fear he shrank from the responsibility. By inquiry of the Lord his hiding place was made known. When he was brought forth Samuel presented him to the people, assuring them that Saul was the Lord's choice. Some were enthusiastic in their reception and shouted, "God save the king!" Others mocked and refused him allegiance.

VI. The King Confirmed at Gilgal (ch. 11).

Soon after the election at Mizpeh the Ammonites made a desperate demand upon the men of Jabesh-gilead. Saul hearing of it, hastily summoned the tribes together for war and won a remarkable victory. As he thus proved his ability the people wished to punish the sons of Belial, but Saul forbade them. Samuel took advantage of this auspicious situation and called all the people together at Gilgal where they formally crowned him their king.

Growth.

All fruits grow—whether they grow in soil or in the soul. No man can make things grow. He can get them to grow by arranging all the circumstances and fulfilling all the conditions. But the growing is done by God.

The Most Insignificant.

The most insignificant people are the most apt to sneer at others. They are safe from reprisals, and have no hope of rising in their own esteem but by lowering their neighbors.—Hazlitt.

Hubby Had No Difficulty at All in Classifying His Wife as Species of Tree.

They are a husband and wife who have many quarrels. And she is not a fair antagonist, because she always weeps during every quarrel in order to win her point. The other night she brought home a new fur hat which she proudly exhibited to her husband, who did not like it, and proceeded to say so. "Why, it looks queer to even the dog," he ended. "Look how he's barking at it. He thinks it is a coon in a tree."

"Don't you call me a tree," she stormed, and then began to cry. "I suppose you're going to say next that I'm either a quince or persimmon tree."

"No," he smiled blandly. "I should think a weeping willow would be a more appropriate name."

ACTOR ALSO PHILOSOPHER

Sir Herbert Tree Put on Record as Author of Two Really Witty Observations.

Apropos of two funny imitations, Sir Herbert Tree once said: "A man never knows what a big fool he is until he sees himself imitated by one." He disliked flattery, and said so in these words: "Flattery makes the great little, and the little great."

In presenting his portrait to a critic, he wrote on the margin: "To the worst of critics and the best of friends." His friend the critic was rather surprised with this curious inscription, and asked Sir Herbert for a little explanation. Tree quickly replied:

"When you put more butter into your criticisms, I'll say you are the best of critics and the worst of friends."

REMARKABLE RECOVERY

Extraordinary Curative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I want to let you know what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I had organic troubles and am going through the Change of Life. I was taken with a pain in my side and a bad headache. I could not lie down, could not eat or sleep. I suffered something terrible and the doctor's medicine did me no good at all—my pains got worse instead of better.

I began taking the Vegetable Compound and felt a change from the first. Now I feel fine and advise any one going through the Change of Life to try it, for it cured me after I had given up all hopes of getting better. You can publish this and I will tell any one who writes to me the good it has done me."—Mrs. MARGARET DANZ, 743 N. 25th Street, Phila., Pa.

It hardly seems possible that there is a woman in this country who will continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, proving beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine in the world.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the Mucous Surfaces.

Easily Passed Examination Although Previously Told Condition Was Hopeless

"I was so bad off with kidney trouble I had to give up my work as engineer," says J. E. Eagless, 210 West 60th Street, Chicago, Ill. "My back gave out completely. It was as weak as if it were broken. Often I tossed and turned the whole night long. I became dizzy and would have to grab the nearest object to keep from falling. At times the kidney secretions hardly passed at all, while again they would be profuse and oblige me to arise time and time again. The urine burned cruelly. I lost twenty-five pounds in weight; and I had taken so many things without relief I became discouraged; in fact, I was told there was no help for me.

Mr. Eagless

"At last I began with Doan's Kidney Pills, and they made a new man of me. It wasn't any time before I was back to normal weight and had passed a life insurance examination, without any trouble. Over twelve years have since gone by and my cure is still permanent."

Food Would Sour and Boil —Teeth Like Chalk

Mr. Herbert M. Gessner writes from his home in Berlin, N. H.:

I had stomach trouble over ten years; kept getting worse. I tried everything for relief but it came back worse than ever. Last fall I got awfully bad; could only eat light loaf bread and tea. In January I got so bad that what I would eat would sour and boil; my teeth would be like chalk. I suffered terribly. I prayed every day for something to cure me. One day, I read about EATONIC and told my wife to get me a box at the drug store as I was going to work at 4 p. m. I took one-third of it and began to feel relief; when it was three-fourths gone, I felt fine and when it was used up I had no pains. Wife got me another box but I have felt the pain it twice. I used five tablets out of the box and I have no more stomach trouble. Now I write to tell you how thankful I am that I heard of EATONIC. I feel like a new man; I eat what I like, drink plenty of water, and it never hurts me at all.

INDIANA STATE NEWS

South Bend.—A potato shortage is predicted for St. Joseph county next fall by the county agricultural agent. He says the scarcity of seed potatoes, strike troubles on the railroads and weather conditions are responsible for the situation. Realizing the serious condition which faces the consumer, the Chamber of Commerce is making an effort to co-operate with the county agent in finding seed potatoes and bringing them into the county for planting. So far, he has been unsuccessful in finding seed. "The price of potatoes is so high," he said, "that the average farmer does not care to take a chance on planting them. The average yield in this vicinity is 75 bushels to the acre, but last year the yield did not average over 25 bushels." It is also said that under present conditions it will cost a farmer $114 to produce 100 bushels of potatoes.

Seymour.—Much land in Jackson county will not be under cultivation this year because of the shortage of farm labor. The backward spring delayed plowing for corn and other work, and land owners are unable to find enough help now to break the ground which they intended to plant in corn. Several large farms are idle this year, as the tenants moved early in the spring to industrial centers to take work in factories, and the owners have been unable to find tenants. The labor shortage has resulted in an increased demand for tractors and other modern farming machinery.

Terre Haute.—The Indiana Bituminous Coal Operators' association, which held a special meeting here, refused to change the wage scale for shot firers in mines, although an effort was made by several members to increase the pay. The present scale fixes a maximum of $8 a day for shot firers. Nineteen mines in the Clinton field were shut down the past week because the men refused to work for this scale. Some have been closed for several days on account of the controversy but the number is now increased.

Evansville.—The final roundup of the 80 local people indicted by the federal grand jury at Indianapolis for conspiracy in the alleged "whisky ring" that operated for the purpose of bringing in liquor from Kentucky cities was made by Louis Bender, deputy United States marshal. In the list of those arrested were Edgar Schmitt, chief of police; Herbert Males, sheriff of Vanderburg county, and several other prominent city officials and detectives.

Fort Wayne.—Several cases of poisoning, from what was sold as "pure castile soap" by house-to-house peddlers, were recently found here by the police and health authorities. Those who used the soap suffered from a malignant eruptive poisoning. A sample of the soap was sent to the laboratories of the state board of health at Indianapolis to be analyzed.

Crawfordsville.—The tentative program for the state convention of the Indiana Sunday School association, which will be held here June 21, 22, 23 and 24, includes addresses by many prominent Sunday school workers. Hundreds of Sunday school workers from all parts of the state are expected to attend the convention.

Indianapolis.—The bureau of industry of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce announced that the Dueschberg Automobile and Motors company, Inc., incorporated under the laws of Delaware with a capitalization of $5,000,000 to manufacture pleasure cars and motors, has bought a site of 10½ acres in the city.

Brownstown.—Probably the best of the few covered wooden bridges still standing in Indiana is the one across White river near Ewing, in Jackson county. It has withstood the ravages of time and travel for half a century, and is almost as good as the day it was completed.

Rushville.—Cecil B. Collins of Shelbyville, former clerk of the Shelby circuit court, was found guilty of embezzlement of funds while in office by the jury here and was sentenced to serve a term in the state prison of not less than one year nor more than five years.

New Albany.—The school enumeration for Floyd county has been completed, and shows a total of 8,970 persons of school age, a loss of 308, compared to last year. The total for the city of New Albany is 6,778, a loss of 305.

Alexandria.—Automobile spotlights are in demand here. Farmers are making up for lost time. Tractors are being fitted up with the lights and the hum of the tractor motor can be heard at all hours of the night.

Indianapolis.—An increase of 6,073 in the number of children attending the public schools in Marion county this year over last year, is shown in the annual report of the county school superintendent, sent to the state superintendent of public instruction.

Anderson.—After a discussion that lasted for hours the city board of works decided to construct the proposed $1,000,000 trunk sewer and to advertise for bids. Petitions with 2,000 signatures opposing the sewer were presented.

South Bend.—Articles of incorporation for the Indiana Tavern company, which proposes to erect a hotel here at a cost of $1,500,000, were filed with the county recorder.

Warsaw.—The Warsaw Military band has been mustered out of the Indiana state militia.

Indianapolis.—Indiana will send ten delegates to the Republican national convention at Chicago next month instructed for General Wood, four instructed for Senator Johnson and 16 uninstructed. This was one of the net results of the recent Republican state convention. The only contest came over the adoption of a qualified resolution instructing the "big four" to support General Wood, who won the plurality vote in the primary, "as long as there is a fair chance for him to get the presidential nomination." The convention named United States Senators Watson and New and Governor Goodrich and former Senator Beveridge as delegates at large. The state ticket includes: For United States senator, James E. Watson, Rushville, incumbent, unopposed; for governor, Warren T. McCoy, Kentland; for lieutenant governor, Emmett F. Branch, Martinsville; for secretary of state, Ed Jackson, Lafayette; for auditor of state, W. G. Oliver, Franklin; for treasurer of state, Ora J. Davies, Kokomo.

Jeffersonville.—The completion of a week's test for Model Segis Erica, member of the Holstein herd of Otho H. Wathen, east of this city, showed a yield of 622 pounds of milk for the seven days and a total of 30.34 pounds of butterfat during that period. The test was made by L. H. Russell of Purdue and is official. The yield of butterfat is close to 5 per cent. The cow was milked four times each 24 hours during the test and ate ordinary diet. It is said that the yield is the highest ever shown for any cow tested in the state of Indiana. A yield of 1,000 pounds of milk and 40 pounds of butter fat a month is normally regarded first-class production for a cow.

Indianapolis.—Of the 1,060,000 acres of wheat seeded last fall in Indiana approximately 255,000 acres have been abandoned, according to the monthly crop report. This is considerably greater than usual on such a small acreage and is due principally to the ravages of the Hessian fly. A severe winter and ice storms this spring also did considerable damage. The condition of the remaining acreage was 85 per cent of normal on May 1, and indicates a crop of 21,511,000 bushels.

Indianapolis.—Officers were elected at the close of the annual convention of the Indiana Institute of Homeopathy at Indianapolis as follows: Dr. C. E. Canady, Newcastle, president; Dr. Oscar E. Jones, Indianapolis, and Dr. George E. Lowe, Indianapolis, vice presidents; Dr. John B. Talmage, Crawfordsville, secretary, and Dr. J. S. Slabaugh, Nappanee, treasurer.

Indianapolis.—Harry C. Moore of Marion was chosen grand commander of the grand commandery, Knights Templars of Indiana, at the closing session of the sixty-sixth annual conclave at Indianapolis. He succeeds Henri T. Conde, Raper commandery No. 1, Indianapolis, who retires. Eugene Vatet of Muncie became deputy grand commander and George A. Newhouse of New Albany grand generalissimo.

Indianapolis. — The vehicle-taking law of 1917 does not supersede the grand larceny law, the supreme court held in affirming the conviction of George Leap of grand larceny in the Marion county criminal court. The appeal was based on the ground that since the passage of the vehicle-taking law a person could not be convicted of larceny for an automobile theft.

Indianapolis.—A dissenting opinion in which he holds that the right to file mechanics' liens on property is not based on any contract between the owner of the property and the mechanic making improvements, but is governed by Indiana statutes, has been handed down by Judge Lairy of the state supreme court.

Gary.—Gary and the circumjacent towns are now the scene of quite a spirited competition among employers to get ordinary unskilled labor. Some of the shops are not only paying a bonus over the regular scale for common laborers, but are throwing in meals and beds to boot—$4.80 to $5.20 a day and "keep."

Vincennes.—Fire of undetermined origin caused $40,000 loss at Oaktown. Fire departments from Carlisle, Shelburn and Dugger assisted in putting out the fire. The losses are said to be covered by insurance.

Indianapolis.—General orders have been issued by the headquarters department of the Indiana G. A. R. relative to the forty-first annual encampment of the organization to be held in Bloomington May 25 to 27.

Terre Haute.—Enumeration of persons of school age for the city of Terre Haute for 1920 shows 7,754 white boys, 7,724 white girls, 434 colored boys and 465 colored girls, a total of 16,377.

Kendallville.—An enumeration of persons of school age shows a total of 1,188 persons in that class in Kendallville, a gain of forty-four over last year.

Laporte.—Bank deposits in Laporte have reached $10,085,000, a new record. Laporte's population is approximately 15,000.

Evansville.—The census report gives the population of Evansville at 85,264, an increase of 15,617, or 22.4 per cent.

Valparaiso.—Thomas and Albert Batchelor, Harry (Red) Parker and Nicholas Trkulja, once sentenced to die in the electric chair at the state prison at Michigan City, but who later won a new trial on an appeal to the Indiana supreme court, must go back to Lake county to be reindicted before their new trial will be legal.

Hartford City.—One thousand nine hundred and thirty-one persons of school age, fixed by law at from six to twenty-one, were listed in here this year. This is an increase of nine over last year.

COUGHING, WEAK AND RUN-DOWN AFTER FLU

Regained flesh and strength quickly, and tells how.

"I nearly died from 'flu' last October, and it left me with a terrible cough. The doctor gave me one bottle of medicine after another, but it did me no good. Went to Charlotte, N. C., and took treatment of a specialist without any permanent benefit.

"I saw Milks Emulsion advertised and started using it. It helped me right from the start. I had no appetite and my stomach was in bad shape. But 12 bottles have straightened me out entirely. I eat anything without distress, my cough is gone, and I have gained back my strength and flesh."—Emma Withers, Box 50, Belmont, N. C.

Don't trifle with a weak, run-down condition. It leaves you open to serious diseases. Get your strength back. Milks Emulsion costs nothing to try.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whom sickness has weakened, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. Price 60c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Common sense is none too common.

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

There is only one medicine that really stands out pre-eminent as a medicine for curable ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proven to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of distressing cases. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing vegetable compound.

Start treatment at once. Sold at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Cultivate a cheery disposition.

IN BUYING ASPIRIN ALWAYS SAY "BAYER"

Look for the name "Bayer" on tablets, then you need never worry.

"Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," can be taken safely for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Joint Pains, Neuritis, and Pain generally.

To get quick relief follow carefully the safe and proper directions in each unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin." This package is plainly stamped with the safety "Bayer Cross."

The "Bayer Cross" means the genuine, world-famous Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over eighteen years.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.—Adv.

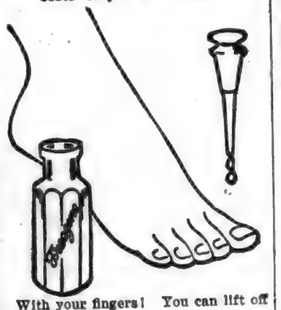
Lift off Corns!

Doesn't hurt a bit and Freezone costs only a few cents.



With your fingers! You can lift off any hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the hard skin calluses from bottom of feet.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs little at any drug store; apply a few drops upon the corn or callous. Instantly it stops hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callous right off, root and all, without one bit of pain or soreness. Truly! No humbug!—Adv.

FRECKLES

Now is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

William Watson of near Spencerville, thought it better to pay a $5 fine for having a gill net in his possession than attempt to fight the evidence supplied by Game Warden Fleming of Allen county. So, instead of waiting until May 24th, when the case was set for trial, he plead guilty before Justice of the Peace T. C. Ford Saturday afternoon and left $19.05 with the justice to go pay the charges. Watson was arraigned with his son, Harry for having gill nets in use at Cedar lake in Smithfield township. His son paid a fine of $5 and costs but the father plead not guilty and the case was to have been heard May 24th.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

LAND QUESTION IN RUSSIA

Natural Desire of Peasants to Participate in Ownership of Soil They Till Is Root of the Revolution.

Article XVII

By FRANK COMERFORD.

In talking with people about Russia, I have discovered that most people in America have only a faint, uncertain, vague idea of the country. Czar Nicholas, the last of the self-proclaimed autocrats, was monarch of 8,660,000 square miles, one-sixth of the entire land surface of the earth. The great Russian empire is spread over part of two continents, Europe and Asia. It is almost entirely confined to the cold and temperate zones.

Three seas bound it on the north—White, Barents and Kara of the arctic; the seas of Bering, Okhotsh and Japan of the northern Pacific bound it on the east. The Baltic sea, the gulfs of Bothnia and Finland limit it on the northwest; two sinuous lines of land front separate it respectively from Sweden and Norway on the northwest, and from Prussia, Austria and Roumania on the west. On the south and east the frontier has changed frequently, according to the expansion and contraction of the empire under the pressure of political exigency and expediency. The Black sea is the principal demarcating feature on the south of European Russia. On the west side of that sea the south frontier touches the Danube for some 120 miles; on the east side of the same sea it zigzags from the Black sea to the Caspian, utilizing the river Aras for part of the distance. As the Caspian is virtually a Russian sea, Persia may be said to form the next link in the southern boundary of the Russian empire, followed by Afghanistan. On the Pamirs, Russia has since 1885 been coterminous with British India, but the boundary then swings away north round Chinese Turkestan, and the north side of Mongolia, and since 1905 it has skirted the north of Manchuria, being separated from it by the river Amur.

The total length of the frontier line of the Russian empire by land is 2,800 miles in Europe and nearly 10,000 miles in Asia, and by sea, over 11,000 miles in Europe and between 19,000 and 20,000 miles in Asia—a frontier of 68,000 miles.

Empire's Vast Population.

The population of the empire, according to the 1915 census, was estimated at 182,182,600. According to the same census this population was distributed as follows: In European Russia, 131,796,800; in Poland, 12,125,000; in Caucasus, 18,125,000; in Siberia, 12,837,900; in the central Asian provinces, 11,125,000; Finland, 3,125,000.

Over 80 per cent of the people of Russia are peasants. The land is their problem. It means home to them—work, life. Their one dream has been to own the land. Land ownership is their definition of freedom, their idea of happiness.

The Russian peasant has been a stranger in his own country. The man who tills the soil and lives on the land and yet never owns an acre of it is a foreigner, even though his forbears may have been native to the country for centuries. The Russians have felt this; they are simple, home-loving people. From the conversations I have had with Russians of the peasant class I believe that they have suffered more because they never had a chance to own their own homes, their own farms, than from the denial to them of political freedom. The land question is a heart question, a hearth question to them.

Crime in Land Distribution.

Some idea of the land crime in Russia is told in the startling figures showing the actual distribution of arable land, forests and meadows in European Russia. The following table is only one count in the indictment:

European Russia.

	Acres	Percentage
Arable land	991,496,000	86
Meadows and pastures	135,494,000	12
Forests	423,122,000	36
Uncultivated	230,879,000	19
	1,159,994,000	100

This land in European Russia was divided among the different classes of owners as follows:

	Acres	Percentage
State and imperial family	400,816,000	35
Peasants	446,657,000	38½
Private owners, towns, etc.	946,525,000	81
Unfit for cultivation	98,056,000	8½
	1,159,994,000	100

The condition of the peasants prior to the revolution, according to official documents, appears to be as follows: "In the 12 central governments they grow, on the average, sufficient rye for bread for only 200 days in the year, often for only 180 and 100 days."

One-quarter of the people have received allotments of only 2.9 acres per male, one-half of them less than 8.5 to 11.4 acres—the normal size of the allotment necessary to feed and maintain a family being estimated at 28 to 42 acres. Therefore the peasants were compelled to rent land from the landlords at fabulous prices. The aggregate value of the redemption and land taxes often reached 185 to 250 per cent of the normal value of the allotment, not to speak of the taxes for recruiting, the churches, roads and local administration, chiefly levied from the peasants. The peasants have sunk deeper into debt every year. The scheme was a quicksand—the harder they worked and struggled the deeper into debt they fell. Increasing arrears have driven one-fifth of the inhabitants from their houses. Every year more than half the adult males (in some districts three-quarters of the men and one-third of the women) are forced to quit their homes and wander throughout Russia in search of work. In the governments of the black earth region the state of matters is hardly better.

The phrase "class distinction" was more than rhetoric in Russia—it was part of the chains, it handcuffed destiny, bolted the door of opportunity. The great mass of the people, 81.6 per cent peasants; 1.0 per cent made up the nobility; 9 per cent the clergy; 9.3 per cent the burghers and merchants; 6.1 per cent the military; thus 147,000,000 of the Russians were peasants.

The slavery in Russia consecrated by law in 1609 was partly abolished in 1861. The Act only pretended to liberate the serfs. Even under the best landlords conditions continued to be terrible. Household servants or dependents attached to the personal service of their masters were released. They joined the town proletariat. The peasants were given allotments of arable land. These allotments were not given to the individuals, they were given over to the rural commune called the Mir, which was made responsible as a whole for the payment of allotments. It was a sort of land communism, except that the title did not pass even to the Mirs. The enormous charge against the land made them tenant serfs. The Mir was a mortgaged community. The redemption charge was not calculated on the value of the land, but was considered as payment for the loss of the compulsory labor of the serfs. The enslavement of the peasant was recognized in the Act which pretended emancipation.

Peasants Systematically Cheated.

Many proprietors of land saw to it that the allotments did not give the peasants the needed pasture lands around their homes. This craftily calculated scheme compelled the peasants to rent pasture land from the landlords at any price. The landlords held them up.

It was only as late as 1904 that the landlord was forbidden by law to inflict corporal punishment on the peasant. Even this law was winked at and the practice of treating human slaves as brutes treat tired domestic animals, continued. The peasant was a chattel and the cheapest farm fixture. There were plenty of peasants. Notwithstanding the barbaric life in Russia, the population continued to grow.

The peasants' only participation in government was in the assembly called the Mir. With its quaint customs, it is of immemorial antiquity. The assembly of the Mir consisted of all the peasant householders of the village. These elected a head man and collector of local taxes. It was the nearest Russian peasants ever got to freedom. It was the clearing house for the troubles, a socialism of sorrows, a touch of local self government which gave no rights; it simply provided a means of co-operating in burden bearing.

HARD AT WORK IN BELGIUM

Coal Mining and Other Industries Are Being Rapidly Put on a Normal Basis.

The Belgian coal mines are now turning out about 80 per cent of the normal production. They supply nearly all the coal needed for the Belgian industries, while some 350,000 tons of coal a month are exported to France. Then the great glass industry of the country, which before the war gave work to many thousands, is rapidly regaining its former prosperity, and only quite recently the French ministry of reconstruction gave an order to a single Belgian firm for 2,000,000 square meters of window panes, to be utilized in the devastated regions. The result of all this is that whereas, at the time of the signing of the armistice, the French franc was worth 1.10 or even 1.15 francs in Belgium, it is now worth 95 centimes. Belgium, moreover, is very far from confining her efforts to France. Great Britain is already a considerable importer of Belgian goods, while the United States recently placed an order in Belgium for more than 800,000,000 francs' worth of glassware.

Large-Hearted Doughboys.

The children played a large part in the American army's Christmas in France. At the artillery camp at Manly, for example, it was a top sergeant who said, ten days or so before the day:

"Say, fellows, these poor little village kids haven't had much Christmas in their lives, have they, now? What do you say we take up a collection and see what we can do?"

The idea took in a flash. And they did so well, giving as they always gave, with both hands, that the total sum was amazing.

"Why," some one hazarded, "I reckon we could hand those little shavers pretty near anything they want, with all this wad to spend."

CLOTHING.

Good clothing is the cheapest, whatever the price may be. To be too warmly clad is far safer than to be too thinly clad.

Clothing ought to be suited to the climate. Custom has a great influence in the matter of dress; but no custom can ever change the nature of things so far as to render the same clothing fit for inhabitants of Greenland and also those of Panama.

In youth, while the blood is hot and the perspiration free, it is less necessary to cover the body with a great quantity of clothes; but in the middle and decline of life the clothing should be increased. The clothing ought likewise to be suited to the period of the year. Clothing may be warm enough for summer which is by no means sufficient for winter. The greatest caution, however, is necessary in making these changes. We ought neither to put off our winter clothes too soon nor to wear our summer ones too long. It would likewise be prudent not to make the change all at once, but to do it gradually. Many "bad colds" are due to imprudence in changing clothes.

Clothes often become hurtful to the wearer by their being made subservient to the purposes of pride and vanity. Even the human shape is often attempted to be mended by dress. All attempts of this nature are highly pernicious. Clothing should be loose about the trunk and the feet should not suffer by pressure. How a small foot not of nature's making came to be considered genteel I will not pretend to say; but certain it is that this notion has made many persons lame. Corns are universal and this painful excrescence is seldom occasioned but by tight shoes. Corns are not only very troublesome, but, by rendering people unable to walk, they may likewise be considered as the remote cause of other diseases. The size and figure of the shoe ought to be adapted to the foot. In children the feet are as well-shaped as the hands, and the motion of the toes as free and easy as that of the fingers; yet few persons in advanced life are able to make any use of their toes; they are generally squeezed all of a heap by narrow shoes, and often laid one over another in such a manner as to be rendered incapable of motion. Nor is the high heel less hurtful than the narrow toe. A lady may seem taller for walking on her tiptoes, but she will never walk well in this manner. It strains her joints, distorts her limbs, makes her stoop and utterly destroys all her ease and gracefulness of motion.

After the age of thirty-five it may be better to exceed rather than be deficient in clothing. Habit or custom merits great attention. If persons have been accustomed to warm clothing there will be hazard in sudden changes of every kind. Persons of delicate constitutions, whose powers are weak and circulation poor, are apt to have the perspiration checked by very slight causes. This also happens to invalids, whose complaints are thereby much increased. Until the constitution, therefore, has been permanently strengthened and, indeed, hardened, by being gradually habituated to air and exercise, they ought rather to exceed than be deficient in the quantity of clothing. Such addition to the clothing ought to be made to it in cold and damp weather as to protect the body against the sudden and severe impressions of either.

Permeability of air is an important factor in clothing. Permeability favors conduction and, prima facie, lessens heat-conserving capacity. But contact of air with the skin induces more thorough oxidation of the blood and better elimination of poisonous refuse; hence, it increases heat production and indirectly diminishes heat loss. If the sole object of nutrition were the production of heat and the chief object of clothing to prevent heat loss, the subject of best materials for clothing would be much simplified. But this is not the case.

Some author has spoken of the "fatal invention of clothes," implying that the human race would be better off if the habit and fashion of wearing apparel had never overtaken the race. Like other extreme views, it is an overstatement of the case. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

CHEWING FOOD.

It has long been recognized that the mouth constitutes an important factor in the physiology of digestion, and this importance is increased by the knowledge that many chronic diseases are directly dependent upon absorption of pus from pus pockets at the roots of the teeth, or upon auto-intoxication, poisons originating in the intestinal tract. The part which the mouth and its accessory structures play in digestion is in fact of equal value with that assumed by the remaining portions of the alimentary canal, and is of particular significance, because it is here, in the mouth, that the only part of the digestive process resides which is under voluntary control. You have control over your mouth, and the oral cavity is concerned with the grinding of the food to the proper fineness; it regulates the temperature of the food, and provides an admixture of saliva which, aside from moistening and lubricating functions, affords a means by which the organs of taste are excited and the digestion of the carbohydrates begun. The sensation of palatability conveyed by this means has an important effect on the mind, increasing the potential energy of the entire nervous system, besides stimulating the flow of gastric juice, thereby improving the digestion in the stomach and rendering even small quantities of food more efficient and sustaining. If you chew your food well, your appetite will improve, and appetite is necessary to good digestion. Systematic mastication, therefore, is of particular value in "dyspepsia" and autointoxication; certain nervous disorders and chronic joint troubles which are believed to depend on faulty digestion will be especially benefited. Even when the diet is limited to fluids, the suggestion also holds good in a way, for in this case the liquid food should be taken in small quantities at a time, in order to gain the same advantage in the way of gradual introduction into the stomach and mixture with saliva which would otherwise be produced by the act of chewing.

I have intimated here that food must be relished to do good. Food taken without relish is really a clog and a hindrance to the body rather than a nourishment. Appetite is necessary to the digestion of food, because, if the food is not relished, the saliva and gastric juices will not be freely secreted. The more you chew your food, the greater will be the flow of saliva; the more saliva mixed with the food and swallowed, the greater will be the flow of gastric juice. If you do not like a certain food, but force yourself to eat it because it is recommended as a health food, you will probably do yourself positive injury. No matter what the food is, how plain, how simple, if it is relished and thoroughly chewed and mixed with saliva, it will do far more good in building up health and vitality than the most highly recommended health food that is so unpalatable that one must force himself to eat it. Appetite is generally the best guide as to what we shall eat. I do not mean an appetite that has been perverted by all sorts of highly seasoned, rich and indigestible foods, but a natural, healthy appetite. Don't abuse your digestive system. Do not clog the system by an oversupply of food. If you wish to keep well, eat moderately and only when hungry, chew up completely every mouthful of food, drink at least eight glassfuls of water every day and no intoxicants, and take as much exercise as possible in the open air. Be cheerful and don't fret. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

Health Notes

It might be well to arrange a compromise between men and women on the clothes question. If man would wear less heavy things, and women more sensible outfits, we all might live to a greater age and be more comfortable en route to our ultimate destination.

• • •

Although cheerfulness of disposition is very much a matter of inborn temperament, it is also capable of being trained and cultivated like any other habit.

• • •

Three-fourths of all our ailments occur, or are kept in continuance, by improper eating, and by preventing the daily food, which is eaten, from passing out of the body, after its substance has been extracted by the living machinery, for the purpose of renovation and growth.

A hat so tight that it makes a red line on the forehead prevents proper circulation of blood through the scalp. Air, sunshine and moisture are necessary to the cultivation of luxuriant hair.

When a man eats too fast the food is not chewed well enough. It is passed into the stomach in such large pieces that so much time is required for the gastric juice to dissolve it from without inwards that that it begins to rot, to turn sour, causing a long list of physical and mental maladies.

If a meal is eaten with great deliberation, an expanding, heating, liquefying process begins and keeps pace with the meal, and the man does not feel like a gorged anaconda.

• • •

That we all eat more than we can assimilate is unquestionable. How can we determine the right quantity? Instinct should guide us, but an abnormal appetite often leads us astray. Nature's plans are perfect if her laws are obeyed. Disease follows disobedience.

Be regular at meals. All functions of life occur in regular cycles, and are never performed well when these cycles are disturbed. Whatever the interval or number of meals regularity should be preserved.

He and a companion were rowing across a lake when a huge moose plunged into the water and started to swim across. St. John leaped onto the back of the animal and stuck there and the other guide snapped this picture of the strange ride.

LADY LARKSPUR

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons

"DON'T BE A FOOL!"

Synopsis.—Richard Searles, successful American playwright, confides to his friend, Bob Singleton, the fact that, inspired by the genius of a young actress whom he had seen in London, he has written a play, "Lady Larkspur," solely with the thought that she should interpret the leading character. This girl, Violet Dewing, has disappeared and Searles refuses to allow the play to be produced with anyone else in the part. Singleton has just returned (invalided) from France, where he had been serving in the aviation corps. His uncle, Raymond Bashford, a wealthy man, had contracted a marriage a short time before his death, while on a visit to Japan. He left Singleton a comparatively small amount of money and the privilege of residence in the "garage" of his summer home, Barton-on-the-Sound, Connecticut. Mrs. Bashford is believed to be traveling in the Orient. The household at Barton is made up of elderly employees of the Tyringham, a New York hotel, where Bashford made his home. By the terms of his will these people are to have a home at Barton for the rest of their lives. Singleton goes to Barton, taking with him the manuscript of "Lady Larkspur." There he finds the household strangely upset, some of its members being suspected by their comrades of pro-Germanism. Antoine, head of the establishment, informs him that he has been perplexed by the somewhat mysterious visits of a stranger, apparently a foreigner, seeking Mrs. Bashford. Antoine has formed the male members of the household into a guard for protection. Singleton reads "Lady Larkspur" with approval. "Aunt Alice" arrives unexpectedly, meets with a lively reception and turns out to be young and charming. Mrs. Farnsworth is her traveling companion.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

Antoine departed with a resentful twist of the shoulders, and I decided to meet squarely the matter of the visitors who had so troubled him.

"Please don't be frightened," I said as lightly as possible, "but these old fellows haven't enough to do, and they are full of apprehensions. They have been alarmed by an agent of some sort who wants to welcome you to America by selling you a piano on easy payments."

Antoine had been hovering inside, and my remark brought him to the door.

"Beg pardon, Mr. Singleton, but that party is not an agent, but quite different, sir. He came to the house, quite like a gentleman, several times, and asked if Mrs. Bashford had arrived. He came in a big car, and seemed disappointed, madame, that you were not here and not expected. A very well-spoken gentleman, and we'd have thought nothing of it except that a few days later I caught a man I was sure was the same party, but dressed in rough clothes, sneaking across the veranda right there where you're sitting. When I called to him he ran as hard as he could, and Graves—he's the vegetable gardener—saw him leaving the property by the back way."

"It's hardly possible that a man who impressed you as a gentleman when you saw him at the door should have returned in disguise and tried to break into the house."

"Oh," exclaimed Mrs. Farnsworth, "it would be so much more delightful if that were true! Any one in disguise is bound to be interesting. A disguise suggests most beautiful possibilities."

I could not be sure in the dim light of the veranda, but I thought I detected a white slipper cautiously reach out and touch a black one. At any rate, Mrs. Farnsworth lapsed into silence.

"Thank you very much, Antoine," said Alice. "It is very proper for you to tell me anything of any stranger on the property, but I see nothing here to be alarmed about. If the same gentleman calls again, let me know instantly."

"Very good, madame." And then, turning as though conferring upon me a part of his responsibility for the security of the premises: "It's a party with a limp; just a trifling limp, sir; you'd hardly notice it. A smallish man, rather dark, with a little mustache turned up at the ends."

"I have noted all these details, Antoine," I replied; and again I thought there was a telegraphic exchange between the ladies though this time a black slipper was the means of communication.

Torrence arrived in a moment, and nothing has ever given me keener joy than his shock of surprise at beholding Mrs. Bashford. I was devoutly grateful that he had not been present at the dinner-table, for my own efforts to interest Torrence in anything but the most practical matters had always been highly unsuccessful, and the discussion of ghosts and witches would hardly have amused him. As Mrs. Farnsworth and I took up the recent movements on the western front I overheard Torrence putting all the machinery of the trust company at Mrs. Bashford's disposal. It seemed almost a blasphemy to be talking of income and like matters to a woman like Alice Bashford!

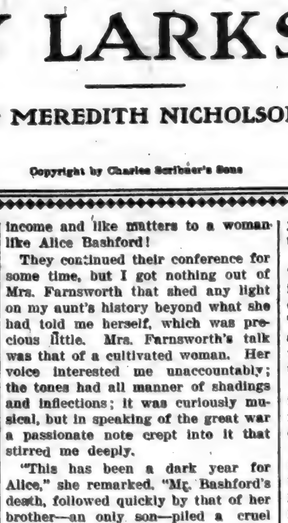
They continued their conference for some time, but I got nothing out of Mrs. Farnsworth that shed any light on my aunt's history beyond what she had told me herself, which was precious little. Mrs. Farnsworth's talk was that of a cultivated woman. Her voice interested me unaccountably; the tones had all manner of shadings and inflections; it was curiously musical, but in speaking of the great war a passionate note crept into it that stirred me deeply.

"This has been a dark year for Alice," she remarked. "Mr. Bashford's death, followed quickly by that of her brother—an only son—piled a cruel burden of grief upon the dear child. She wants to go back to England to nurse the wounded, to do anything for our dear country, but I want to keep her here a little while until she can readjust herself. It is my task to encourage her in frivolity and the make-believe she loves—hence our absurdities at the table. She's the dreliest child, but with wonderful understanding. And at times it's not easy to keep the divine spark of play alive in her heart."

The light of one of the porch lamps fell upon Alice's face as she patiently gave heed to Torrence's account of his stewardship. One of her hands gently stroked the terrier that lay quietly in a chair beside her. I was sure that his painstaking description of assets and market values was boring her. Once her voice rose in expostulation. Torrence, I judged, was suggesting that legal means could be found to expel the old Tyringham employees from the Barton property.

"Oh, never in the world! It was quite like Mr. Bashford to want to care for these people in their old age. And—"she laughed and turned toward me—"they can't be dislodged while Bob lives; and we don't want to part with him just yet."

I was glad to have him hear her address me in this intimate fashion. Tor-



"Those Women Are Under Suspicion."

ry always inspired in me a desire to shock him.

"I shall help Alice to break them in, Torry," I said, lingering upon her name for his special edification.

"Of course, Singleton," he replied. "I wasn't sure you meant to stay on. Pardon me, but I didn't—"

"Oh, it isn't that Bob hasn't a right to stay," said Alice quickly; "Mrs. Farnsworth and I are hoping that he will like us well enough to share our exile on other accounts."

"I am engaging Mr. Singleton to explain American jokes to me," announced Mrs. Farnsworth. "Alice seems to get them, but I'm never sure."

It is a part of Torrence's business to counsel widows, which he does like the honorable man he is, but as he rose to go presently, remarking that his wife would motor down to call shortly, I caught a glimpse of his face that indicated deep perplexity. I left when he did.

"I want to talk to you," he said nervously when we were outside. "I'll send the car ahead to the gate."

When the shrubbery cut us off from the house he stopped abruptly and seized my arm. "What do you make of it?" he demanded.

"Make of what?" I asked.

"That girl!" he exclaimed testily.

"If you insist, I must avow that she's adorable, nothing else."

"Don't be a fool! You knew Raymond Bashford much better than I did, and you know perfectly well he never married a young girl of that sort! Those women are playing a trick, and I'm surprised that you don't see through it."

"My uncle was a man of taste and a gentleman," I answered deliberately. "There's nothing in the least improbable in his being infatuated with a young woman of charm and wit like this girl."

"I tell you it won't do," he insisted. "If either of those women at the house is Raymond Bashford's widow, it's the one who calls herself Farnsworth. They're playing a game of some kind and it's no laughing matter, but it won't take long to find out what they're up to."

"You'll hardly go the length of having them arrested as imposters, Torrence—not without some data to work on!"

"Certainly not. You seem to be hitting it off with both of them, but I advise you to be on guard. Are you sure your uncle never sent you his wife's photograph? That would have been a perfectly natural thing to do."

"If I'd got a photograph, I should have headed for Japan, not for France," I laughed, but I was thinking deeply. His line of reasoning as to the incongruity of the marriage was not so different from my own that I could sneer at his suspicions. I shrank from telling him that I didn't care a hang whether the widow was a fraud or not. If the two women who had settled themselves on the Barton estate were imposters, they were extraordinarily daring and clever.

We were nearing a gateway where his car waited, and I saw several of the guard hanging about at a discreet distance. "Look here, Singleton," he said angrily, "you don't seem to take this business very seriously. You don't want to make the mistake of letting a pretty girl pull the wool over your eyes." He lowered his voice and added tensely: "Those women are under suspicion of something more serious than an attempt to rob an estate. An agent of the state department called on me yesterday and asked embarrassing questions about Mrs. Bashford. Not a secret service man, you understand, or anything of that kind, but an important man in the state department."

"Of course you knew nothing to tell," I suggested.

"I took a chance at lying to him about her expected arrival. I thought it only decent to have a look at the woman first. He told me nothing except that the British embassy had made inquiries and that the matter was delicate and must be handled carefully."

"Was this inquirer lame—a small dark man with a black mustache?" I asked, suddenly interested. "Such a person has been hanging about here, so the boys tell me?"

"Not at all! I may as well tell you it was Raynor—you probably remember him. He's a specialist in international law, and they took him into the state department just after the Lusitania business. He's a gentleman and a good fellow—I've played golf with him a good deal—and I hated to lie to him, but I thought I'd see this woman before telling him she had reached America."

"I confess that I was a trifle dismayed by this. Raynor I knew slightly. Professionally and socially he stood high, and even without the prestige of his official position he was not a chap to sneeze at; but I didn't want Torrence to know I had any doubts as to the perfect authenticity of my uncle's widow.

"Oh, every transcontinental pilgrim is probably scrutinized closely these days," I remarked carelessly. "Mrs. Bashford has lost a brother in the war, and I haven't heard anyone talk more bitterly against Germany. And her companion certainly has no illusions about the kaiser."

"I don't like the business," he declared stubbornly.

"Let's do nothing foolish," I insisted. "If Raynor has reason to suspect either or both of these women, we'll hear further from him."

"I've put myself in a hole," he said, angrily. "Of course I've got to advise him immediately that Mrs. Bashford is here."

"Just wait a few days; I undertake to keep them under surveillance; you can put the whole responsibility on me. If they attempt to leave, I'll warn you and Raynor instantly, but they have settled themselves as though they expected to spend the rest of their lives here."

I told him of Mrs. Bashford's adventures in reaching the house without convincing him that there was anything funny in her experiences, and he left on my promise to report to him daily at a given hour and instantly if anything unusual occurred. I was on my way back through the grounds when Antoine arrested me.

"Pardon me, but I'd like to ask what you think of it, sir?" he asked hoarsely, falling into step.

"If you mean what do I think of Mrs. Bashford," I replied sharply, "I think she's quite charming and delightful and all any one could ask in every way."

"The guard's set, sir; front and rear."

STANDARDS HELP FARM PROBLEMS

Lesson Taught by Denmark's Success in Butter Business Is Emphasized.

OF BENEFIT IN HOME TRADE

Recent Importations Bearing Well-Known Foreign Brand Call Attention to Value of Recognized Grades in Marketing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It was no less a person than Shakespeare's Hamlet who asserted that there was something rotten in Denmark. But whatever truth there may have been in that assertion, American butter interests today readily acknowledge that there is nothing impure in Denmark's butter.

Danish butter usually is of very good quality. That, in fact, is the reason that dairy and butter interests in the United States have been looking with a suggestion of concern—more than is deserved, perhaps—on the importation of Danish butter which has been taking place at New York recently at the rate of several hundred casks weekly, each cask weighing 112 pounds. Experts use this incident to emphasize the lesson which Denmark's success in the butter business teaches with respect to standardization. While perhaps the greatest value resulting from the application of standards in Denmark lies in its benefit to that country's export butter trade, in America a corresponding benefit could be enjoyed in domestic trade, since our home butter consumption normally far exceeds our exports.

A Recognized Brand.

The Danish government has a brand which the law provides can be placed on all butter meeting certain rather exacting requirements. This is the brand to be found on the casks which have been arriving at New York and which is recognized the world over as a guaranty of good quality. Experts in American dairy marketing problems point to the value of the Danish official mark not with the idea of advocating that this government adopt a similar plan of officially branding butter, but to emphasize the value which results from adopting recognized standards. They call attention to the fact that America is producing much butter which scores as high or higher than the Danish importations.

In some cases private brands are well enough known to profit fully by the high grade maintained. But this can not be said of all American butter of fine quality. Today no uniform grades are universally adhered to and consequently much butter has to be marketed at lower prices than it would otherwise bring because it bears no brand or score indicating its real value.

Apply Grades More Widely.

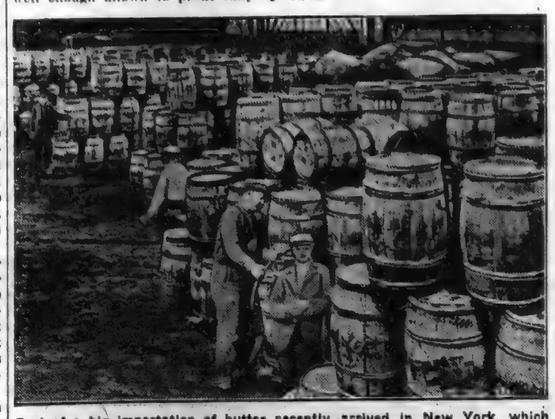
The government has established standards for scoring butter and anyone who will get in touch with one of the five principal butter markets where inspectors are maintained—Minneapolis, Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Boston—can have his butter inspected at small cost. What is needed, it is claimed, is that the federal grades be more generally applied. Not only would high-grade butter more generally command the price it deserves, but many producers now more or less indifferent to grading would be induced to improve the quality of their output.

A few weeks ago perishable food inspectors representing the Bureau of Markets, United States Department of Agriculture, were called on to inspect 4,000,000 pounds of butter intended for export to a European country. The bureau was able to certify that most of the butter came up to the standard required by the exporting house. Having received federal certificates to this effect the exporters could safely proceed with their shipments to Europe. The incident is considered of special interest because the house exporting the 4,000,000 pounds had previously had trouble with an uninspected shipment abroad because it did not come up to specifications. By utilizing the federal inspection service it was possible for these exporters to be sure that butter accepted for shipment was up to a certain standard.

Standardization Promotes Efficiency.

Since the inauguration of federal food inspection by the Bureau of Markets in 1917, an increasing number of producers, buyers, and sellers have come to appreciate its value, as is indicated by the demand for inspection of perishable fruits and vegetables and butter. This is a big advance in the right direction, market experts say, but immeasurably greater benefits can be enjoyed when producers and dealers generally come to understand the grades which inspectors apply, and constantly work with them in view. Standardization will promote efficiency, not only in the butter industry, but in handling most perishable fruits and vegetables.

With a wide acceptance of federal grades and standards, production could be carried on far more profitably and distribution far more economically than at present. Anyone interested in this question can secure full information by writing the Bureau of Markets, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.



Part of a big importation of butter recently arrived in New York, which furnishes an object lesson in the value of standards and grades for food products.

PROFIT FROM STOCK AND VARIOUS CROPS

Enterprises Should Be Adopted That Are General.

Limited Demand for Some Product Not Generally Grown Will Sometimes Afford Few Farms Opportunity for Expansion.

Are the crops and live stock the farm is producing for sale to the nonproducers of the community or for export to other communities such as can be made profitable when produced and sold locally or exported?

The best guide here, says the United States department of agriculture, is the practice of the community; enterprises should be adopted that are found generally on its farms. A limited demand from the nonproducers of the community for some product not generally grown locally, and for which many local farms are not adapted, will sometimes afford a few farms opportunity for expansion.

For instance, the plan suggested by the department for providing dairy products should, if followed, produce enough surplus calves to develop here and there cattle-raising and cattle-feeding farms. Some farms will be specially adapted to this purpose by having an abundance of suitable but unsalable by-products, cheap pasture, or pasture land unadapted to cropping. Other farms may develop a considerable business in the production of pork, or of pigs for supplying farms where brood sows are not kept.

"BETTER SIRES" FOR RABBITS

Official Emblem of Recognition Is Granted to Florida Man—Animals Not Officially Listed.

The first person in the United States whose "live stock" consists entirely of rabbits, and who applied for enrollment in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" movement, is Hamilton Coleman of Bay county, Florida. Rabbits are not officially listed among the classes of animals for whose improvement the better sires campaign is being conducted. However, in response to the spirit of co-operation shown and considering that the breeds of rabbits listed are raised for meat, the official emblem of recognition has been granted to Mr. Coleman. The rabbits listed include Flemish Giants, Spotted Giants, New Zealands and Belgian hares.

St. Joe Boy Dies In St. Louis.

Edward L. Coburn, 59 years of age, 5603 Maple avenue, supervisor of music of the Board of Education, died at St. Luke's Hospital at 5:45 o'clock Monday afternoon following an attack of stomach trouble.

Coburn has been suffering from an ulcer of the stomach and at 4 p. m. he fainted while in the bathroom of his home. The fall is believed to have hastened his death by causing a hemorrhage. He was taken to the hospital and died less than an hour later.

Coburn has been supervisor of music of the Board of Education for fifteen years. He was prominent in musical circles throughout the United States, having recently been president of the National Conference of Music Supervisors of the United States.

He had just finished directing a series of concerts in the public high schools of the city, which attracted a great deal of attention.

Coburn was taken ill last Friday, while conducting a musical entertainment at Soldan High School. He remained at the school through out the concert. His condition at that time was not considered serious

Coburn came to St. Louis from Boone, Ia., where he was supervisor of music in the public schools in that city. He was born in St. Joe, Indiana and was graduated from the Drake University. He completed his musical education in Chicago and for many years taught summer classes at Northwestern University.

During the war Coburn enlisted in the services of the United States and supervised the establishment of community singing societies in the army camps in the south, making his headquarters at Asheville, N. C.

Coburn is survived by his widow and two children—Mary, 15 years old, and William Coburn, 13.

Funeral services were held at Solden High School at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Burial at Jefferson, Ia. Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, officiated.

Dell Coburn of Hicksville and Mrs. Nellie Perry left immediately upon receipt of telegram.

Services At Coburntown

Sunday at about the hour of eleven o'clock the Coburntown folks will have their memorial services at the church and then go to the cemetery for the decoration of the graves. J. M. Life of Auburn will deliver the address of the day and all the community are asked to be present of both the Civil War and World War.

Dr. William McKeever, who will be one of the headliners of this meeting, is at the head of Child's Welfare Work for the State of Kansas, and occupies the Chair of Moral Welfare in Kansas University. Dr. McKeever is also author of "Man and the New Democracy" "Training the Boy," "Training the Girl," "Farm Boys and Girls," "Outlines of Child Study," "The Efficient Sunday School Teacher," "Psychology of Higher Life," "Psychologic Method in Teaching" "The Industrial Training of the Boy," "The Industrial Training of the Girl," etc, and is, perhaps, the most voluminous writer on child's life, in America. The County Association was only able to obtain Dr. McKeever's services after some eight months of effort, as his time is taken for nearly a year in advance.

Mr. E. T. Albertson, State General Secretary, will be a rare treat to DeKalb County Workers. Several years ago he was one of the State Field Workers, and the older members of the Association remember him with delight. Mr. Albertson has made a wonderful success of the same work for the state of Colorado, and comes well worthy of his advancement to entire charge of the work in Indiana.

Mrs. J. L. Stacy, who will have charge of the Childaen's Division portion of the program, is known in Indianapolis, her home city, as being one of the city's livest wires in this work. Mrs. Stacy comes to us, recommended by the state, as being one of the very best workers anowhere.

Memorial Services

The Memorial Day services for St. Joe will be held on Sunday afternoon from the Lutheran Church at 2 o'clock. The officers for this year held a session last Thursday evening and completed the arrangements and appointed the following committees:

Decoration of Church:-Ed Leighty and F. R. Bowman.

Music:—Ada Bassett, Esther Bowman and Lora Leighty.

Preparation of Wreathes:—Mesdames Kate Leighty, Mary Buchanan and Catherine Hamilton.

Rev. C. O. Johnson to deliver the address.

Marshall of the Day:—Grover Curie.

Both the K. of P. and I. O. O. F. lodges will affiliate with the citizens in this service.

Line of march will be formed at the close of the services at the church headed by the children of the community carrying flags. The Old Veterans and the World War Soldiers are asked to participate in this service by attending.

The officers for 1921 as elected at the meeting were: Chairman, F. B. Leighty; Secretary, E. R. Kinsey; Treasurer, F. R. Bowman.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

RUSSIA OUT OF BALANCE

That Its Industrial Life Has Not Kept Pace With Its Agricultural Has Been Fatal to Country's Prosperity.

Article XVIII.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Less than 10 per cent of the people of Russia "permanently" live in cities or towns. I write the word "permanently" to call attention to the fact that a number of peasants and villagers come to the cities and towns to work for a part of the year in the industries. They retain their peasant status and their domiciles in the villages. In 1910 there were only forty cities in the Russian empire with a population of from 50,000 to 100,000; only four cities with a population of over 100,000.

Poverty forced upon the Russian people the co-operative spirit. In a great, long strain people can stand up together better than alone. It is the idea of consolation in companionship. It is a principle of mass psychology that a group of men will dare to do a thing, to stand a suffering or a danger that no individual in the crowd would undertake alone. The Russians have suffered from the dawn of history, and one of the oldest institutions of Russian life is the Artel. The Artel very much resembles the co-operative society of western Europe, with this difference, that the co-operative society in Europe and America is the outgrowth of an economic trend. In Russia it was the unpremeditated result of necessity. It is the difference between one who is hungry because he is dieting and one who is starving because he is without food.

The workers of Russia have suffered the same slavery the peasants have endured. The maximum wage has been a starvation pay. So when the working men from a province come to a city to work in the textile industries or as carpenters, masons, etc., they at once unite in groups of from ten to fifty persons, rent a house, keep a common table, elect an elder of the Artel, to whom each one pays his share of the expense. All over Russia one finds the Artel—in the cities, in the lumber camps, even in the prisons. When a building is to be put up an Artel is organized. When a railroad is being built an Artel is formed. In some instances the Artel resembles a labor union, in that the arrangement of the terms of employment is made by a delegate or committee appointed by the Artel.

Live in Squalor and Misery.

Village life is primitive. The villagers live out of the world. The villages are very small, particularly in the extreme north. The houses are generally cheap wooden shanties. Owing to the great danger of fire, the villages generally cover a large area of ground. The houses are scattered and straggling. The conveniences found even in the American tenements are unknown. There is no chance for cleanliness. They live and sleep in crowded, smoky, unfinished houses. Furniture—they haven't what we call furniture, even what the poorest farm tenant in America would call furnishings. A board for a table; a shakedown for a bed.

Russia's industrial life has always been out of balance with her agricultural life. Notwithstanding her riches of raw material and her great possibilities for a successful industrial life, Russia has continued to be a nation with 81 per cent farmers, 7 or 8 per cent permanently engaged in industry, and 3 or 4 per cent of peasants who devoted part of the time to work in the industries. It has been said repeatedly that the imperial Russian government from the time of Peter the Great has been unceasing in its efforts for the creation and development of home manufactures. All of the evidence I have examined refutes this statement. There never has been any security to the worker in Russia. The only protection he has had has been his interest in the family allotment. He could go back there and be hungry; in the city starvation was the danger.

The czars put every obstacle in the way of education and of course this prevented the growth of industry.

In 1902 the principal industries in Russia, representing all of the factories throughout the empire, of which the annual production was valued at more than $1,000, were: textiles, food products, animal products, wood, paper, chemical products, ceramics, mining, metal goods, miscellaneous; and all of these employed only 2,259,773 workers.

Led Up to Bolshevik Problem.

This dwarfed, stunted, paralyzed side of Russia—its industrial side—has a direct bearing upon conditions in Russia today and is an important part of the problem of the bolshevik government.

A nation to be economically normal must have balanced agricultural, manufacturing and commercial sides. If these three departments of activity are not proportionately developed the nation is economically a cripple. Russia has been and is in this sense an economic cripple. Her body is gross and powerful; the physical constitution is strong. One arm, agriculture is overdeveloped, and its overdevelopment has been at the sacrifice of the other arm. Russia, economically, in one physical respect, reminds me of Wilhelm Hohenzollern, late of Prussia, now living in Holland. I refer to his withered, undeveloped baby arm. Russia's undeveloped industrial arm is just such a crippled, useless arm. Reference to the ex-emperor, who is now sawing wood in Holland, suggests to my mind the words of a great German economist, List:

"A nation cannot promote and further its civilization, its prosperity and its social progress equally as well by exchanging agricultural products for manufactured goods as by establishing a manufacturing power of its own. A merely agricultural nation can never develop to any extent a home or a foreign commerce, with inland means of transport and foreign navigation, increase its population in due proportion to their wellbeing, or make notable progress in its moral, intellectual, social and political development; it will never acquire important political power or be placed in a position to influence the cultivation and progress of less advanced nations and to form colonies of its own. A mere agricultural state is infinitely less powerful than an agricultural-manufacturing state. The former is always economically and politically dependent on those foreign nations which take from it agriculture in exchange for manufactured goods. It cannot determine how much it will produce, it must wait and see how much others will buy from it. The agricultural-manufacturing states on the contrary produce for themselves large quantities of raw materials and provisions and supply merely the deficiency from importation. The purely agricultural nations are thus dependent for the power of effecting sales on the chances of a more or less bountiful harvest in the agricultural-manufacturing nations. They have, moreover, to compete in their sales with other purely agricultural nations, whereby the power of sale in itself is uncertain; they are exposed to the danger of ruin in their trading with agricultural-manufacturing nations by war or new tariffs, whereby they suffer the double disadvantage of finding no buyers for their surplus agricultural products and of failing to obtain supplies of the manufactured goods they require. An agricultural nation is a man with one arm who makes use of an arm belonging to another person but cannot, of course, be sure of having it always available. An agricultural-manufacturing nation is a man who has two good arms of his own at his disposal.

Poland Cited as an Example.

List further points out that the relative cultivation of the agricultural and manufacturing arms of a country possessed of an ample and fertile territory will give that country a population twice to three times as large as it could secure by the development of the agricultural arm alone, and maintain this vastly increased population in a much higher degree of comfort. Surplus agricultural produce is not necessarily capital in an agricultural country. Countries which produce such a surplus and remain dependent upon manufacturing countries are often obliged to purchase these manufactured goods at an enhanced price. He points to Poland as an example. She exported the fruits of her soil to obtain the goods which she could have manufactured from it. As a consequence she fell like a house of cards when organized nations attacked her. List considers that had Poland developed her manufacturing arm, besides retaining her national independence she would have exceeded any other European country in prosperity. To use List's words: "Go to fallen Poland and ask its hapless people now whether it is advisable for a nation to buy the fabrics of a foreign country so long as its native manufacturers are not sufficiently strengthened to be able to compete in price and quality with the foreigners."

Bolshevism has set out to socialize political, agricultural and industrial Russia, and as I expect to examine the effects of communism in each of these departments of Russian life I have set down some historical and economical truths which must be kept in mind when examining the Lenine panacea.

France Needs Raw Materials.

Economic disturbances in France during the period of readjustment of wages to high prices were predicted by Leon Jouhaux, chief labor representative on the French delegation to the international labor conference at Washington. "The lack of raw materials is the only thing that prevents the French workingman from going back to his job," said M. Jouhaux.

"We must have cotton and coal from the United States, for it will be from three to five years before the French coal mines can be operated. Of course, wages must go up in France on account of the increased cost of living, and it is probable that before the workman gets this increase there will be more or less economic disturbance."

Japanese Miners Strike.

Miners of Japan are beginning to demand higher wages and fewer hours of employment. Seven thousand copper miners at Ashio, near Nikko, went on strike recently and in view of the gravity of the situation a detachment of infantry and a strong contingent of police were hurried to the district from Utsunomiya. The miners formed a funeral procession, some of them carrying large funeral streamers and white lanterns.

Another strike has broken out at an iron mine near Sendai.

NUTRITION IN ITS RELATION TO HEALTH.

Ordinarily when we speak of a person being well nourished we merely think of one or two important factors in the workings of the organism. One may think that the digestive process as pertaining to the stomach must be in good condition, or perhaps he may become experienced enough to consider that perfection of the whole digestive system, of which the stomach is only a part, is requisite to the best nutrition of the body. It is barely possible, however, that one might only consider the food supply of the body as the all-important element in the end to be obtained. Hence the oft-repeated question, "What shall I eat?" or, "If I could only get my stomach to work I would become strong."

I do not say that these special queries are not important, for indeed they are. The only trouble is that they are only a limited part of the process. The study of nutrition is not merely the study of what we shall eat or how the stomach will handle it, but rather the study of the whole organism, and the making of it. The study of nutrition begins with the preparation of food for the body and the partaking of it. Next the work of the digestive organs, as they reduce it to that condition so that the nutritive element can be absorbed and taken into the circulation. During its course in the blood channels some of the vital organs, especially the liver, produce certain changes in the newly formed products, which prepare some portions of it for the tissues' assimilation, and other parts to supply energy and force to the activities of the body.

The lungs bear an important relation to the same work, as they supply material which is of equal importance to the building and repairing process. The final and all-important step is the actual assimilation by each tissue of the element appropriate for its own use. It is success in all these steps that furnishes the members of the body with tissue and force; and a weak place at any point will interfere with the work and cause malnutrition, which may mean the loss of strength and flesh, or it may mean the deposit of an abnormal amount of fat, or other local or general morbid growths.

In the hygiene of nutrition one must study all these functions. In the preparation of food simplicity and taste are points to be emphasized. The more simple the diet of nutritive food the better it can be adapted to the uses of the body. The cooking of food is only to put it in the best condition to be handled by the digestive organs. Taste is an important factor, as it is the main active stimulus in the digestive work. Care should be taken, however, not to pervert it, as then it becomes unsafe as a guide. The hygiene of the stomach is simple. When the right foods have been properly prepared and properly eaten it passes our guardianship. The greatest point to be urged relative to the stomach is non-interference. Give it is proper share of the nerve force—that is not actively using the nerve force of the body in other work while the digestive processes are being started and also not exhausting them before taking a hearty meal. If this precaution is taken it will take care of its own work, provided its work be not in excess of the needs of body.

The other part of the digestive apparatus is alike faithful and capable. For the best action of the liver and the lungs a good circulation is essential. The latter should not be impeded by clothing that prevents the free flow of blood.

Overwork or underwork will interfere with the trophic nerves, and prevent their properly regulating tissue nutrition. Mental worry or constant overstrain by excessive work will exhaust nervous vitality and force and incapacitate the nerves to preside over the function of nutrition or any other function of the body.

Of course, it is not necessary to say that all dissipating habits, as the use of liquor and tobacco and all other like poisons, come first in power to undermine the nervous system.

From these suggestions we conclude that for the best nutrition strict regard should be paid to the laws of hygiene of the nervous system, the circulation with its vital organ, and also the digestive system, and last but not least, the hygiene of the diet. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

HARDENING THE BODY.

Beginning with personal cleanliness the whole body should be bathed daily with cool or tepid water, and then rubbed thoroughly dry with a rough towel. The least one can do with any attention to cleanliness or health is to sponge the face, chest and back with water and dry rub the rest of the body at least once every day. For a thorough wash of the hands use warm water, and before soaping them steep them well in the water for a minute or two, rubbing them a while, then use soap and a nail brush. End by holding the hands under a tap of cold water and give them a shower bath—it is refreshing and strengthening to the fingers; or dip them into cold water and rub them briskly.

The first thing in the morning the following procedure is beneficial: Immerse the feet in a foot bath of cold water enough to cover the ankles. Begin, according as the reaction of the individual is weaker or stronger, with water at 77 degrees, or even at 81 degrees and 86 degrees Fahrenheit, and use colder water gradually in the course of weeks to 68 degrees and only exceptionally to lower temperature. In all cases the cold foot bath, lasting only a few seconds, must be followed by quickly warming the feet. This can be done in a few minutes by returning to the warm bed; it is not necessary to rub them; the more quickly the bed is regained the easier it will be to bear the cold foot bath. Only when the temperature is too low will it take more than ten minutes before they get well warmed.

To harden the skin of the whole body I recommend the following procedure: First wash or spray the body with cold water—or the temperature recommended for foot bath. The throat, chest and back of the neck especially should be treated. Such an ablution with foot bath will take only a few minutes. A few moments only should be given to douching the body. This should be followed by vigorous rubbing with a coarse towel.

Never sit down to breakfast without going out into the open air for a while. A brisk walk taken half an hour before breakfast in the early morning air, especially when accompanied by deep breathing, is a wonderful health promoter. The expansion of the lungs, quickening of the circulation and oxygenation of the blood give one a keen appetite for breakfast, and the man who can eat a good breakfast with relish has something to sustain him in his work and is more fit to cope with difficulties than the unfed man, the man who breaks his fast with nothing more substantial than a roll and coffee. Aerate and redistribute your blood by means of a walk before breakfast, then you will be able to eat and digest that meal without trouble. Such a preparation for the days' work is invaluable.

A good general massage, with resistive exercises twice a week will prove a great benefit in making one strong and vigorous.

Sports in moderation improve our physical condition, but they may prove disastrous if reason be not exercised and they are indulged in to excess. The advantages of the various kinds of sport in hardening the body are that with them can be combined the very important agencies of fresh air and sunshine. No better example of what training and a resolute purpose can do toward hardening the body can be found than in the history of Theodore Roosevelt. His advice to the American boy is as applicable to the American man. "He must work hard and play hard. He must be clean-minded and clean-lived. . . . In life as in a football game the principle to follow is: Hit the line hard; don't foul and don't shirk, but hit the line hard." LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

Health Notes

As a man eateth, so he thinketh.

* * *

It is just as reasonable to feed a dog on dry grains and grass alone as for a man to subsist on a similar dietary.

* * *

Our dependence upon surrounding circumstances increases with our physical weakness, and on the other hand in health there is liberty. Work for health.

* * *

Do not clog the system by an oversupply of food. Never eat unless hungry. Never force yourself to eat a food because it has been recommended as a health food. Eat only such food as is relished. Be temperate in eating and there will be little cause for worry as to the effect of what you have eaten.

* * *

To the brave and strong hand, the capacious lungs and vigorous frame fall, and always fall, the heavy burdens; and where the heavy burdens fall the great prizes fall too.

While we are all deadly afraid of microbes, bacteria, etc., we live in such a way that our bodies become deficient in resisting power to the same germs, and when they are present we expect in some miraculous manner to have them expelled.

* * *

It is a law that as much will-power must be consciously expended in curing a habit, as unconsciously has been employed in acquiring it.

* * *

It is almost inconceivable that today, in our civilized nation there are still so many otherwise sensible women who are willing to maim and cripple their feet and suffer pain for the sake of wearing shoes just a little too small, or which are, as they imagine falsely, prettier or more fashionable.

* * *

While we all want to enjoy life with all its comforts, pleasures and happiness, we are apt to forget that upon health these all depend, and that health is the vital principle of bliss and exercise of health.

Important to all Women Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Adv.

LADY LARKSPUR

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons

COUNT MONTANI.

Synopsis.—Richard Searles, successful American playwright, confides to his friend, Bob Singleton, the fact that, inspired by the genius of a young actress whom he had seen in London, he has written a play, "Lady Larkspur," solely with the thought that she should interpret the leading character. This girl, Violet Dewing, has disappeared and Searles refuses to allow the play to be produced with anyone else in the part. Singleton has just returned (invalided) from France, where he had been serving in the aviation corps. His uncle, Raymond Bashford, a wealthy man, had contracted a marriage a short time before his death, while on a visit to Japan. He left Singleton a comparatively small amount of money and the privilege of residence in the "garage" of his summer home, Barton-on-the-Sound, Connecticut. Mrs. Bashford is believed to be traveling in the Orient. The household at Barton is made up of elderly employees of the Tyringham, a New York hotel, where Bashford made his home. By the terms of his will these people are to have a home at Barton for the rest of their lives. Singleton goes to Barton, taking with him the manuscript of "Lady Larkspur." There he finds the household strangely upset, some of its members being suspected by their comrades of pro-Germanism. Antonio, head of the establishment, informs him that he has been perplexed by the somewhat mysterious visits of a stranger, apparently a foreigner, seeking Mrs. Bashford. Antoine has formed the male members of the household into a guard for protection. Singleton reads "Lady Larkspur" with approval. "Aunt Alice" arrives unexpectedly, meets with a lively reception and turns out to be young and charming. Mrs. Farnsworth is her traveling companion. Torrence, Bashford's lawyer, suspects the two women and warns Singleton "Aunt Alice" may be an impostor.

"It's her manner of speaking of spookish things, Mr. Singleton. It doesn't seem fitting in a widow and her so lately bereaved. And the older lady's quite as bad, sir. The maids tell me they keep talking all day about fairies and pretending they're queens and such like, and talking poetry to each other. The late master never indulged in such things, sir."

"He would have lived longer if he had! It was probably the poetry and fairies that attracted him to Mrs. Bashford."

"Yes, sir," he acquiesced with a gulp. "I suppose you're right, sir."

"You should be grateful to Mrs. Bashford for not bouncing you all for the row you made last night. It could be done; in fact, Mr. Torrence has suggested that legal means could be found for getting rid of you."

"That would be very sad, sir," he said humbly.

"Isn't Mrs. Bashford kind to you? Hasn't she taken pains to make you all feel at home?"

"Well, yes, sir. But she's taken Elsie back into the house, and there's no work for her, there being two women in the laundry already; and she's told me Dutch must be given his old place in charge of the poultry; and both being Germans, you will recall."

"It's just her kind heart, you idiot! You've all been spoiled; that's what's the matter with you."

"It causes feeling; that's all, sir."

"It needn't cause it if you brace up and act like a man," I retorted. Then, sorry I had been so harsh, I added: 'We must take good care of Mrs. Bashford, Antoine. It would be your old master's wish. It would be wise to keep a guard at the house for the present in case your mysterious stranger turns up again."

He couldn't have failed to note my change of tone about the unknown visitor, but he made no comment.

"The guard's set, sir; front and rear."

"While there's no danger whatever it's just as well to take no chances. Please tell the boys to send for me immediately at any hour of the night if they see any prowlers about."

"Very good, sir. But if you please, sir"—he had reached the garage and he lingered, fingering his hat nervously—"if it wasn't for the ladies talking about spirits, we'd all feel better, sir."

"You're far from being a fool, Antoine. Those ladies just play at believing in such rubbish. If they really believed in ghosts, you may be sure they wouldn't talk about it at table before strangers like you and me."

Though this seemed to impress him, a moment later, as I was drawing down the shades in my bedroom, I saw him running across the lawn like a frightened rabbit.

CHAPTER III.

A Fan.

The morning mail brought a letter from Searles acknowledging my congratulations on his play. While my enthusiastic praise pleased him, he was very scornful of my suggestions, seeming even more depressed than when he talked to me.

"It's impossible for me to plan other work. 'Lady Larkspur' ate the soul out of me. I'm done; finished, clean out of the running. There's only this to report. I had a letter from Dalton saying that some time ago he asked at the hotel where he sent the script of 'Lady Larkspur' to know whether Miss Dewing had sent a forwarding address. Her accumulated mail had been called for by some one whose identity was not disclosed. Of course this isn't much to hang a rope on, but if that play is what I think it is and Miss Violet Dewing ever reads it she's going to jump for the telegraph office the moment she finishes the last act. I have no plans for returning East; the folks at home let me do as I please, and it's a relief to be in seclusion where I hear nothing of the doings of Broadway. I hope your ancient globe-trotting aunt still lingers in the far East! Keep the ink flowing, son. That novel ought to be well under way when I get back."

The tale I had begun seemed utter trash in comparison with the story of Alice Bashford, in which, much against my will, I had become a minor character. I had rather prided myself on my ability to see through a plot in the first chapter of the most complicated mystery story, but there were points in this unwritten tale that baffled me.

I kept away from the house until dinner-time, when I was received quite as an old friend by Alice and Mrs. Farnsworth. The table talk was of Celtic poetry, and proved less disturbing to Antoine than the previous night's discussion of ghosts.

Their day had been spent, they explained, in a further examination of my uncle's Japanese loot, and they had taken a long walk beyond the estate's boundaries and were enthusiastic about the landscape.

"It's so beautifully peaceful all about here," Alice murmured. "I feel that I never want to move again."

"That's a real tribute to America," Mrs. Farnsworth remarked; "for Alice dearly loves new scenes. She inherited a taste for travel from her father, who put some new places on the maps, you know."

I didn't know and I wanted to ask questions about Alice's father, but as though anxious to frustrate such inquiries my aunt asked how close we were to the place made famous by Israel Putnam's spectacular escape from the British. She had read the story and would motor to the scene, she declared. It was quite clear that there were chapters in her life that were not to be opened for my perusal. No sooner had I caught a glimpse of a promising page than the book was politely closed. A curtain hung between the immediate present at Barton-on-the-Sound and other scenes and incidents of the girl's life; and Mrs. Farnsworth was equally detached from any tangible background. It seemed that I might meet them daily for the rest of my life in this same friendly fashion without adding a particle to my knowledge of them.

"The Mystery Is Solved!"

I became alert immediately when, as we rose from the table, Alice said, with the air of asking an unimportant favor:

"We were speaking last night of a man who has been asking for us here. His visits have alarmed the servants, but there is nothing to fear from him. You know"—she smiled at Mrs. Farnsworth—"it's rather he who seems to fear us; that, at least, is our impression, though we have no idea why he should do so. Still, it's rather good fun to find yourself an object of special attention and to be followed, even pursued. We've even led him on a little, haven't we, Constance?"

Mrs. Farnsworth laughingly admitted that they had led the gentleman on a trifle, "but with all circumspection," she protested.

"We met him here and there in Tokyo, and later were surprised to find him crossing on our steamer. We threw him off in the Canadian Rockies, where we stopped for a day, and eluded him in Chicago, where he was evidently lying in wait for us."

"Delightful!" I exclaimed.

"But please don't get the idea that the man annoys us," interposed Mrs. Farnsworth.

"Far from it!" cried Alice.

"You've seen enough of us perhaps to understand that we enjoy little adventures," said Mrs. Farnsworth. "The man pretends to be interested in Mr. Bashford's art treasures. Antoine's story about the disguise is rather against that; but we will give him the benefit of the doubt. What we are hoping is that something really amusing may come of his persistent pursuit. With you and the army of servants here we feel perfectly safe; so we're for giving him every chance to show his hand."

"He is the Count Giuseppe Montani," said my aunt, "who represents himself as a connoisseur—a lover of the beautiful."

"The mystery is solved! It is easy to understand why he has haunted the place."

"Yes; quite easy. Count Montani is very anxious to see the porcelains."

"I wasn't referring to the pottery; but I shan't press the matter."

"I advise you not to; your remark was highly improper from a nephew to an aunt! I have told you about all I know of this Italian gentleman. I am going to ask a favor. He telephoned from Stamford this afternoon to know whether we had arrived, and I bade him call tonight. I should be glad if you would remain until he leaves. I should like to know what you make of him."

"Certainly," I assented, pleased that she had taken me into her confidence and deeply curious as to the Italian connoisseur. What she had told me so frankly and plausibly did not, however, touch upon the matter of the interest shown by the American state department in my aunt's arrival at Barton, which troubled me much more than the antics of the Italian who had followed the women across the Pacific.

Count Montani arrived shortly and was received in the drawing room. The ladies greeted him with the greatest cordiality. As he crossed the room I verified the limp and other points of Antoine's description. His bearing was that of a gentleman; and in his very correct evening dress he hardly looked like a man who would disguise himself and attempt to rob a house. He spoke English all but perfectly and proceeded at once to talk a great deal.

"I was sad when I found I had so narrowly missed you at Seattle, and again at Chicago. You travel far too rapidly for one of my age!"

His age might have been thirty. He was a suave, polished, sophisticated person. Nothing was more natural than that he should pause in his travels to call upon two agreeable women he had met on a Pacific steamer. Possibly he was in love with Alice Bashford; this was not a difficult state of heart and mind for a man to argue himself into. She was even more strikingly beautiful tonight than I had thought her before. She was again in white—it was only in daytime that she wore black—and white was exceedingly becoming to her. As we talked she plied listlessly a fan—a handsome trinket of ostrich plumes. A pretty woman and a fan are the happiest possible combination.

There is no severer test of grace than a woman's manner of using a fan. A clumsy woman makes an implement of this plaything, flourishing it to emphasize her talk, or, what is worse, pointing with it like an instructor before a blackboard. But in graceful hands it is unobtrusive, a mere bit of decoration that, tenses and fascinates the beholder's eye.

With all his poise and equanimity I was distinctly conscious that Montani's dark eyes were intent upon the idly swaying fan. I thought at first it was her hands that interested him as they unfailingly interested me, but when, from time to time, she put down the fan his gaze still followed it. And yet there was nothing novel in the delicate combination of ivory and feathers. I had seen many fans that to all appearances were just like it. Once, as she picked it up and lazily opened it, I saw him bend forward eagerly, then, finding that I had noted his eagerness, he rose, pretending that a brass screen before the fireplace had caught his eye, and asked whether it was not a Florentine production, which shook my faith in his connoisseurship, as I had bought the thing myself from a New York brassworker who had made it to my order.

Count Montani and Aunt Alice's ostrich-plume fan.

built first and the ditch dug afterward. If an old ditch is to be bridged, the fill may be made for the time being and later removed. The concrete is mixed in the right proportions and laid on the rounding surface to the proper thickness, and with suitable reenforcing. Trenches should be dug at either side to make a good footing to hold the culvert rigid and to take the weight of loads passing over it.

Many concrete bridges fail to stand the test of high waters. If the footing is too shallow, they undermine during a flood, and either crumble or are made unsafe. A simple remedy for this is to provide a shallow wall running across the upstream side of the opening, and a part of the bridge. This should extend to the bottom of the side walls and should not be over five or six inches above the low water level. This checks any tendency toward undermining and prevents debris from wedging in the bridge.

GOOD ROADS INDISPENSABLE

Highway Improvement Is a Business Proposition With Farmer and City Dweller.

When it takes four horses to pull an empty wagon to town and wheat is going off in price each day; when the mail carrier gives up in despair, and the children cannot get to school, the farmer cannot help wondering how much this condition is costing him each day.

Figure as he may, he cannot get away from the fact that good roads are indispensable to agricultural prosperity.

The city dweller is alike concerned. The farm on a good road has scores of possibilities for the development of its resources to every one open to the farm on a poor road. Increased expenditures—greater buying powers.

In the early days of poverty many a county bonded itself for hundreds of thousands of dollars to secure railroads to promote agricultural development. Three-fourths of all the freight the railroads haul sooner or later move over the public highways, and every ton so moved is costing at an average rate of 23 cents per mile.

Verily, road improvement is a business proposition—a matter of dollars and cents.

PENNSYLVANIA NOW LEADING

Keystone State Led Nation in 1919 in Mileage of Contracts Let for Road Building.

Pennsylvania led the nation in 1919 in mileage of contracts let for road construction, according to the state highway department. Up to January 1 the state awarded contracts for the building of 670.26 miles of durable highways. Its nearest competitor was Illinois, which contracted for 510.70 miles.

Pennsylvania's 1920 program calls for the construction of approximately 800 miles of roads. The department says that Pennsylvania is far ahead of other states in the organization it has perfected to build durable highways.

BETTER SCHOOL ADVANTAGES

Average of School Year Is 180 Days in Five States Having Best Road Systems.

Good roads make it possible to have better school advantages. In the five states of the Union which have the best system of public highways the average length of school year is 180 days. In the five states that have given the least attention to road improvements the school year is less than half that long.

Youth Out on Probation Redeems Himself.

San Francisco Boy Makes Good Serving in War as Army Captain.

San Francisco.—Three years ago Thomas J. Ford, a youth of 19 years, walked out of Superior Judge Franklin Griffin's courtroom, grateful for a chance and vowing he would make good.

Three charges of grand larceny were against his name. Judge Griffin placed the lad on probation on one charge and carried the other two on the reserve calendar.

Recently Captain Thomas J. Ford of the Canadian army walked into Judge Griffin's courtroom.

"I've made good," he told Griffin, simply, "and I came back just to thank you for having given me the chance."

Then he told his story:

"After you permitted me to go I joined the Canadian forces as a private. I went to France and into action. It was real action, too. My regiment fought in some of the biggest engagements. I wanted to make good and to show you I could, and that carried me through some tight places. I rose in the ranks, surprising myself at the way I forged ahead. I even won distinction for bravery under fire."

"You have earned more praise than this court can bestow on you," said Griffin. "Besides doing our country an honor you are one of the many men that have convinced me that the probation law is successful."

Then Griffin directed that the two remaining charges against Ford be erased from the calendar.

Ford was arrested three years ago because of his practice of taking automobiles that did not belong to him to take women friends joyriding.

Resolutions are being prepared by the Tippecanoe County Farmers' Association to be presented at the next meeting which will ask the State Legislature to change the state automobile law. The farmers are asking that all moneys received for state licenses be refunded to the counties from which it was received, instead of being divided pro rata by the secretary of state as is now the law. Let the DeKalb County Association follow suit.

There are many issues in the Democratic State platform and in fact there are twenty-two as outlined. The party has pledged itself to repeal the present primary law. A reduction of income and sur-taxes is favored. The Woman's Suffrage plank was adopted and also a Farmers plank. Nothing is said concerning the wet plank, although the representatives spoke for it but the matter was considered as a National question and they passed it up.

REMARK CHANGE IN GHETTO

New Yorkers Note Revived Interest in City of Zion Since Jewish Soldiers' Return.

The street scenes in oriental New York just now are most interesting. Since the local Jewish doughboys have returned from the war a new interest is shown in Jerusalem, the City of Zion, for which they actually fought and helped to free, writes the correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune. The penny peep-show man has put in a new line of Palestine views and does a flourishing business. Then there is the Hebrew "Morgendavit" or "Star of David," which appears for the first time in the stock of the vender of emblems of all nations. All around these East side streets surges the busy, cheerful, bargaining life of the Jewish people strangely marked and modified by New World customs, but still holding in its heart the ancient law and the prophets. There is the rotary kitchen man who sells potatoes and pancakes, but no "hot dog." Then there is a bewhiskered curbstone apothecary who sells unpatented medicines and hot water bags; the rugman, who carries an entire shop on his ancient shoulders, and the young Yiddish merchant, who exchanges new pots and pans for old clothes.

MINERAL OUTPUT OF ONTARIO.

The Canadian government's report on the mineral output in the province of Ontario says that the cessation of hostilities affected mining the first quarter of 1919. The output of nickel matte, the most important of all Ontario's mineral wealth for war purposes, reached in the first three months of 1918 a total of 9,677 tons, but in the corresponding months of 1919 it had dropped to 5,610 tons, while the value of the output fell from $5,806,200 to $2,692,000. The falling off was not confined to the nickel mines, however, for copper, gold and silver show a reduction, both in production and in value. Small increases are shown in some of the secondary minerals, but the aggregate for the quarter of all metalliferous mines is over $4,000,000 below the 1918 figures. During the war exceptionally high prices for molybdenite used in the manufacture of high speed tool machinery encouraged its production in Ontario.

FAINTING AND DIZZY SPELLS

The Cause of such Symptoms and Remedy Told in This Letter.

Syracuse, N. Y.—"When I commenced the Change of Life I was poorly, had no appetite and had fainting spells. I suffered for two or three years before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the Liver Pills which I saw advertised in the papers and in your little books. I took about twelve bottles of your Vegetable Compound and found it a wonderful remedy. I commenced to pick up at once and my suffering was relieved. I have told others about your medicine and know of some who have taken it. I am glad to help others all I can."—Mrs. R. E. DEMING, 437 W. Lafayette Ave., Syracuse, N. Y.

While Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, the annoying symptoms which accompany it may be controlled, and normal health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Moreover this reliable remedy contains no narcotics or harmful drugs and owes its efficiency to the medicinal extractives of the native roots and herbs which it contains.

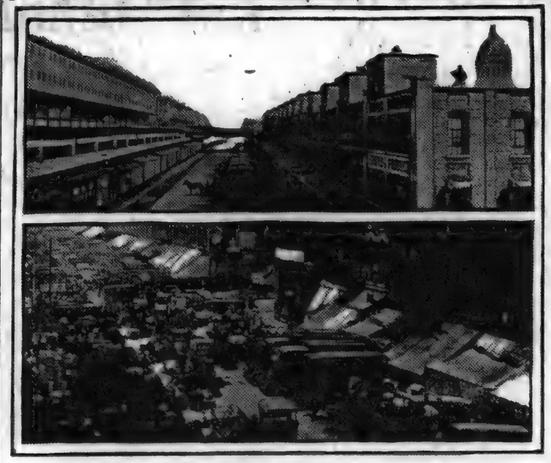
CITY MARKETS HELP LOWER FOOD COSTS



Above: Atlanta's Modern Wholesale Food Terminal—Cars Are Unloaded Directly Into Warehouses. Below: Costly Congestion in Chicago's Produce Center.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

High food prices likely would receive a severe jolt if every city with a population of 100,000 or more would establish a city food terminal for its wholesale trade, the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture believes.

All large European cities have such markets and they have proved very helpful in keeping down the cost of food distribution. The cities of this country have been slow in adopting any kind of a unified terminal system. Most of them are getting along as best they can with no plan. All but those of the smallest size usually have several scattered terminals at which food products are unloaded from train, boat or truck. Frequently the wholesale houses are located at some distance from the freight depots. This necessitates loading the products into a truck or wagon, carting them across the city, and unloading them again at the wholesale house.

All these expenses add to the price the consumer eventually pays for his food. A city terminal market eliminates this unnecessary handling and cartage, for under such an arrangement the wholesale district and the terminal are brought together, and the contents of cars or boats are unloaded directly into the wholesale houses.

Delayed Planning Costly.

In recent years both New York and Chicago have worked on the problem of establishing a central terminal market, but the size of those cities makes it a difficult problem and as yet no practical solution has been found. The situation in these cities has awakened some of the smaller municipalities—now growing at an amazing rate—to the value of a unified terminal system, and the necessity of installing one before congestion increases. Los Angeles and Atlanta, through private capital, have been provided with unified terminal markets, and Seattle has a wholesale municipal market. Other cities, in addition to Chicago and New York, which are working on this problem are Indianapolis, Memphis, Tenn., and Washington, D. C.

The idea of a terminal food market is simple. Under the plan which it involves all wholesale houses are built in a locality which is convenient to all transportation lines. It is not necessary or even desirable to have them in the heart of the city, where land values are high. The incoming cargo of food is unloaded directly from the car or boat into a wholesale house and is taken away by retail truck or wagon from the other side of the house. There is no intermediate handling or cartage. Cold-storage plants and auction rooms are also a part of a good terminal food market.

Buying Simplified for Retailer.

This system of food distribution expedites the unloading of cars. Under present terminal conditions unloading is often slow and every week in the year many cars of perishable products spoil before they reach the wholesaler or even get inside the railroad yards. A well-planned city terminal food market has adequate trackage, switches and platforms, which facilitate the unloading of the cars and prevent congestion inside and outside the yards. Quick release of cars is important if crops are to be moved before they perish. Furthermore, the retailer finds his buying simplified when all the food products are concentrated in one place, and the work of the food, inspector, too, becomes easier.

The biggest saving in money, however, comes in lessened cartage and less handling and deterioration of the food. Where the wholesale district of a city is remote from transportation lines, the cartage of the food products from the freight house to the wholesaler mounts into hundreds of thousands of dollars every year, all of which is added to the bill the consumer pays. This includes the cost and upkeep of the trucks and wagons and the wages paid the men who load and unload them and drive.

Food Spoilage Costly.

To cartage cost must also be added the loss caused by the deterioration of the food products during the trip. Extremes of temperature can do considerable damage to perishable products in a short trip. The cost of the food which spoils in transportation is added to the cost of the food that is salable when it reaches the retailer and the price the consumer pays goes up another notch.

Farmers who ship on a consignment basis are able to get their remittances quicker under a terminal system than they can where the wholesale district is scattered.

In some cities the food terminals are owned by the municipality, in others they are built by the railroads or by private individuals, but in every instance central food terminals have proved their worth.

The bureau of markets in the United States department of agriculture has made a study of terminal food markets and is prepared to advise any municipality on the right ways of conducting one.

DOUBTFUL WORTH OF PROLIFIC JACK BEAN

Scientists Find Little to Favor West Indian Plant.

In Southern Sections It Has Some Value as Green Manure Crop—Cattle Do Not Make Profitable Gains on Ground Seed.

Savage disciples of Voodoo worship in the American tropics ascribe supernatural powers to the jack bean. These tribesmen plant a row of the seed around their rude gardens in the belief that the plant will punish trespassers. This custom was doubtless brought by negro slaves from Africa, where the very similar sword or fetich bean is thus worshiped. But the bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, fails to support this weird belief concerning the bean. Nor do these scientists find much else to recommend this plant stranger from the West Indies.

The jack bean, it appears from abundant experiments, is a prolific plant. It is not unusual for the seeds in the 14-inch pods of a jack-bean plant to outweigh its own herbage; and the herbage, if cut green, frequently crops at the rate of 16 to 20 tons per acre. This wonderful productiveness makes the bean a favorite of the get-rich-quick gentry who seek to introduce a new and marvelous commercial plant. This popularity among unscrupulous promoters accounts in part, at least, for the numerous aliases under which the jack bean is known. "Pearson bean," "wonder bean," "Wataka bean," "Gotani bean," "South American coffee bean," etc., are only a few of the names in which the jack bean has been rechristened.

It has some value in the south as a green-manure crop, and there is evidence to show that it may be a good silage crop when cut green.

Cattle do not relish the jack bean hay, nor do they make gains upon the ground seed, which product they must be taught to eat.

The bean is eaten by natives of Mexico, but most experimenters describe it as flat and coarse in flavor.

The seed contains a large proportion of a material known as urease, and used in medicines, but the demand for this product is extremely limited.

After all, the scientists warn the prospective buyer of "wonder beans" to have a specimen identified, or else confine the first plantings to small areas until the doubtful values of the bean are better established and a better market provided than seems to exist at present.

NEW SOUTH WALES

Facilitates Farming by Giving Ample Agricultural Training.

Not only does the farmer of New South Wales enjoy the unparalleled advantages afforded by nature in the gift of a mild climate, where it never freezes except in the highest mountains, where fodder grows the year around, and shelter is not necessary to protect the stock, but he is also provided by the State with every opportunity for learning the scientific and practical side of farming. The Government of New South Wales has a large number of Experiment Farms established for the purpose of aiding the beginner, and of advancing knowledge in an industry upon which the world's advancement depends.

A dozen or more of these State Farms are open to students, one of the best known being the Hawkesbury Agricultural College, at Richmond, thirty-eight miles from Sydney, which has an experiment farm of 3,500 acres, supplied with all the most modern farm equipment. Its 300 students, taking a two-year course, not only acquire a theoretical knowledge of agriculture through a study of chemistry, botany, bacteriology, etc., and their application to farm work, but also get the most practical kind of training in the various branches of farming—horticulture, beekeeping, poultry farming, carpentry, blacksmithing, harness making, engine driving and the use of electricity. At Grafton, on the Clarence River, special work is done in sheep and dairy farming, and in the culture of grasses and other fodder plants. Others of these Experiment Farms specialize in various subjects, such as irrigation farming, fruit and vine culture, wheat breeding, pig raising, etc., in an effort to ascertain the most suitable economic plants and animals to be grown in particular districts in which these farms are situated.

Farming is coming to be recognized as a profession calling for the best brain power a man has, and the best training he can bring to it. New South Wales, realizing this fact, is offering by means of these numerous Experiment Farms, a splendid opportunity to the farmers to secure scientific training, and to reap the benefits of the latest experimental work in agriculture. STOMACH GOOD AS NEW. FOUR DOCTORS GAVE HER UP

Mrs. Hendricks, Bedfast Five Months, Was Able to Work in Two Weeks.

"I was sick last winter for five months with stomach and bowel trouble. Could not turn myself in bed without help. I was under the care of four doctors, and they gave me up. Then Mr. Mills, the druggist, persuaded my husband to try a bottle of Milks Emulsion. I had only taken it two days until I was sitting up in bed, and in two weeks I was doing my own work. When I began taking it I weighed only 70 pounds; now I weigh 120 pounds."—Mrs. Mary Hendricks, 900 Litchfield Road, Owensboro, Ky.

Thousands of people who have suffered for years from stomach and bowel troubles have found relief almost from the first dose of Milks Emulsion. And it is real, lasting benefit.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whom sickness has weakened and is a powerful aid in assisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results your money will be promptly refunded. Price 60c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Not Forgotten.

It is rather hard to decide which is the more maddening in a certain New Jersey town not far from New York, the taxi service or the telephone. One day, having waited almost up to train time for the taxi he had ordered, a prominent townsman picked up the telephone in a great rage and asked for the number of the dilatory taxi man.

"Hello, this is Mr. Henry," he said loudly and sternly, when he got his connection. "Have you forgotten me?"

"No, I haven't forgotten you, Mr. Henry," said the mild feminine voice at the other end of the wire. "This is Mrs. Brown."

Kind Offer.

GOT CHARACTERS MIXED UP

According to English Actor, History Is Not a Strong Point With Theatergoers.

The late H. B. Irving once told in Philadelphia a story about his father's performance of Sardou's "Robespierre." He said:

"Two dear old ladies sat in their stalls at the Lyceum, waiting for 'Robespierre' to begin.

"'By the way, who was Robespierre?' said the first old lady.

"'Why, don't you know?' said the second old lady. 'He's the man who was murdered in his bath by Marie Corelli.'

"'Oh, no, my dear!' said the first old lady. 'That can't be right, for Marie Corelli is still alive. I remember who it was, now. It was Charlotte Bronte.'"

Then, at the end of the story Mr. Irving added:

"I once told this anecdote to a duchess. When I finished the duchess gave a kind of puzzled laugh and said:

"'Poor Shakespeare!'"

METHOD IN THAT MADNESS

Why Dad Could Not Bring Himself to Make Serious Objections to Gerald's Smoking.

"Henry!"

Mrs. Brown's voice was stern. Mr. Brown recognized the signs of a coming storm, so he prepared to listen.

"I saw Gerald—our boy—smoking a pipe today—actually, a dirty, smelly pipe!" the poor woman ended with a sob.

"Well, what can we do?" exclaimed her husband. "The boy's seventeen, and has two dollars a week pocket money. I don't see—"

"You mean to say that you will allow him to smoke? Why, it's sheer madness!"

Henry nodded. Then, after witnessing the unique spectacle of his wife speechless for once, he strolled off into the garden, where he came across Gerald in a corner with the pipe going full blast.

"Hello, my boy!" he cried. "This is something new, isn't it? Er—by the way, I've left my pouch in the house. Can you give me a fill?"

Then he, as he walked away puffing happily, murmured:

"It may be madness, but there's method in it. I can see Gerald's pouch being quite a money saver to poor old dad."—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Body Found Last Friday.

The body of the late William A. Spencer, the Baltimore & Ohio fireman whose body was lost in the St. Joe river, March 7 and was recovered Friday, was shipped from Garrett, Saturday morning, to the home of his mother at Fort Mitchell, Va.

The body was found by four members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen, George Iler, Earl M. Alley, Charles Lower and Claude N. McCully. They had gone to the river from Garrett, Friday morning for the purpose of making a search for the body. Mr. Iler and Mr. Alley were in one rowboat and Mr. McCully and Mr. Lower were in another. Starting at the Baltimore & Ohio bridge, they rowed down stream, one boat on each side of the river.

At a point about 1,000 feet south of the bridge and 20 feet from the shore, Mr. Iler and Mr. Alley found the body. It was lying on top of a small willow tree that had fallen into the stream. The body was caught in driftwood and about half of it was above the surface of the water. The brush was cut away and the body was placed on a raft and towed to St. Joe. There it was placed in Mr. Iler's hearse and taken to his morgue in Garrett.

When Fireman Spencer was knocked from the locomotive, he fell headfirst. His head struck the bridge and the top of his skull was torn off. Both of his legs were broken, also.

There was ice in the river at the time and the current was swift. Employes of the railroad used dynamite in an effort to locate the body, but without avail. After searching for several days, the quest was temporarily abandoned. It was decided to wait until the ice was gone and the river had receded.

The body when found was considerably decomposed and it was not possible to remove the clothing. Two gold rings that Spencer had worn remained on his fingers. The finding of the body has relieved the anxiety of his relatives and the members of the brotherhood, as there was a fear it would never be found. Spencer was not married.

An inquest over Spencer's body was held at Mr. Iler's morgue Friday evening by Coroner William E. Byers, of Waterloo. Albert Shafer, engineer on the train with Spencer, testified that the train was eastbound. After they left St. Joe, Spencer got out onto the step of the engine and was looking back. Mr. Shafer said he called to him to look out for the bridge. Just then the fireman was struck by the bridge beam.

Mr. Shafer rushed to that side of the engine, but Spencer had let loose. As the train was running about thirty miles an hour, Mr. Shafer could not see what had become of his fireman.

Mr. Shafer stopped his train as quickly as possible. He ran back to the bridge and told the other members of the crew what had happened. They found part of Spencer's brains on the bridge, but the body had disappeared. The train was backed up to St. Joe and a report was made to the superintendent's office at Garrett. A search crew was then sent out.

Mr. Shafer testified that he did not know why Spencer had gotten onto the engine step.

Memorial services were held at St. Joe Lutheran church Sunday afternoon, a good crowd in attendance, with both the K. of P. and I. O. O. F. lodges attending in a body. Rev. C. O. Johnson delivered the talk. Wm. Curie acted as chairman of the day. Following the service at the church the crowd marched to the cemetery where the graves of the soldiers and members of the orders were decorated. A large crowd had assembled at the cemetery for the final service. The day was beautiful and the cemetery was in its prime condition, with many flowers upon the graves and the lawn being made tidy by the workers.

June First Wedding.

Cupid arrived on the job early in this vicinity to harvest his crop of June brides and grooms for 1920. On the first day of June, at 4 p. m., last Tuesday, a very pleasant wedding took place. The lucky young man was Mr. Lloyd J. Miller, son of C. W. Miller of Hicksville, and the fortunate young lady was Miss Pauline May Andress, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall H. Andress, of this place.

Mr. Miller served two years and three months in overseas military service. Miss Andress is a graduate of the St. Joe High school, class of 1919. Mr. Miller is at present engaged in the employment of the Ford Motor Co., of Detroit, where they will make their future home. Mr. and Mrs. Miller invite each and all of their friends to visit them at their new abode, Highland Park, Detroit, Mich. They will remain in our midst until Saturday, June 5.

Those in attendance at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Monroe, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kinsey, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Northrup of St. Joe; Mrs. David Furnish of Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Hursh and Miss Mary Lantz of Garrett. After the wedding a six o'clock dinner was served.

The News joins their many friends in congratulations.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

RUSSIA'S GRAVE MORAL ERROR

Forcible Seizure of Land Understandable, but to Be Regretted as Making a Precedent to Justify Dishonesty.

Article XIX.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

An examination of Russia, the patient, just before the treatment was started, reveals several findings which are necessary to complete the history and physical examination.

Russia was 78 per cent illiterate. This means that nearly four-fifths of the people in Russia could not read or write. It does not mean that they could not think. There is as great a difference between illiteracy and intelligence as there is between illiteracy and ignorance. I have met many Russian peasants who could not read or write, who had good native minds, genuine power of reasoning—homespun thinkers. The head of Russia had not been trained, but it was not empty.

There are many reasons for the illiteracy of the great majority of Russian people. The autocratic state was the principal conspirator against the Russian people getting an education. The autocrats knew that ignorance is the greatest insurance against uprisings, the greatest sedative to keep the slave from complaining. The Church in Russia, the Orthodox Church, was used to keep the light from the people. The czar was the "Little Father," the divine agent of God on earth, and the "Unholy Synod" of the Russian Church bowed, not before the Christ, but bent low before the czar. They betrayed Christ, even as they betrayed the sons and daughters of men, their own blood, the Russian peasants and toilers.

Religion Their Only Solace.

The people of Russia held firmly to their faith in God. The rest and ease their faith gave them was the only comfort they had. In moments of intense religious communion they were lifted out of themselves and for seconds forgot their burdens. These seconds were long spaces of relief, green spots in the endless desert waste of life.

How Christ must have wept when he witnessed the "Holy Synod," the monkish rascals, with their sacrilegious icons, silencing the protests of souls, throttling the cry for freedom, by quoting in his name that those who suffered most here would be highest in heaven. A blasphemy, a corruption of the Lowly One, who used the word brotherhood to define equality, and the fatherhood of God to express the justice that man owed to man.

It was agreed by and between the Holy Synod and the czars that the Russian worshipers of God must not know how to read or write his name. So it was that the orthodox church of Russia used religion to insult God and hold his creatures in bondage. It was the only great church in the world that did not provide prayer books for its members. It was argued that if the people had prayer books they would learn to read, and if they read the Christ message on the Sabbath they might read other strange and dangerous books on Monday and Tuesday and the other days of the week. They might misuse their ability to read, and read things like the American Declaration of Independence. The churches of the Byzantine painted the story of religion on the side of its walls. They gave the people an education by the picture book method we use for children before they have reached the kindergarten age.

Bolshevism Officially Launched.

The birth certificate of bolshevism was issued on November 10, 1917.

"The All-Russian Congress of the Councils of Workingmen's, Soldiers' and Peasants' Deputies decrees the form of the administration of the country, PENDING THE MEETING OF THE CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY. The provisional workers' and peasants' government is to be called the Council of People's Commissioners. The administration of the individual branches of state life is to be entrusted to boards, the composition of which is to secure the carrying out of the program proclaimed by the congress in close contact with the organizations of workers, sailors, soldiers, peasants and employees. The government authority belongs to the board and chairmen of these commissioners, that is, to the people's commissioners, and the right of systematizing them belongs to the All-Russian Congress of the Councils of Workmen's and Peasants' and Soldiers' Delegates and its Central Executive Committee."

The government of the czar was autocratic, not because it was a bad government and misgoverned the people. It was autocratic because the people did not have a voice in it. A good government that denied the people a voice would be equally as autocratic. With the fall of the Kerensky regime Lenine and Trotzky, and their bolshevik followers, did not have time and it was not expedient or possible to canvass the wish and will of the people at once, so they issued the promise I have quoted above. The words of promise are printed in capital letters.

It was their moral obligation to keep this promise made to the people. It was necessary to keep it, if there was to be a genuinely free Russia. Who could anticipate and who would dare write out and put into operation the plan of government without giving all of the people of Russia a chance to pass upon the plan and help formulate it through their own chosen representatives?

This was the first promise the bolshevik leaders made to the Russians. They broke it. It has never been fulfilled. In the constitution and decrees of the soviet government they have tried to explain, excuse and condone this breach of promise. Fairly interpreted, all they have said in defense of this abuse of power, this violation of trust, is in substance: "It was necessary to dissolve the Constituent Assembly; it might have interfered with our plans; it might have jeopardized soviet government." What right did they have to think, act, and decide for the people any more than the czar had?

In speeches and writings Lenine and Trotzky have since in a veiled way suggested that the peasants elected members of the middle class to represent them instead of peasants. What of it? If the peasants make mistakes they will learn and profit by their mistakes. They cannot become independent until they get a chance to exercise independence. No man can get muscle by letting another fellow use the dumbbells. The Russians—peasants, workers and bourgeoise—are all human beings, and a government, to be democratic, must be, as Lincoln put it, "of the people, for the people and by the people." A government that is afraid of the influence and power of three or four per cent of the people isn't able to live, and it doesn't deserve to.

Gladly Obeyed Lenine.

Lenine issued his famous order, "Peasants, seize the land." This command was obeyed with great enthusiasm. They forgot all about freedom and the constitutional convention. They understood what land meant, they had been taught that by being denied it. They knew little about political phrases and framework. The order to seize the land tore from the serfs their heaviest chains. Lenine became their liberator—his was the voice that said "seize the land." Probably the peasants would have done it anyway. Disorder and unrest had destroyed all respect for property rights. Property rights had a different meaning in Russia than elsewhere; property rights meant the right to beat human beings, to buy and sell serfs. Yet the fact that Lenine had uttered the words made them reverence and respect him, even as a man will be thankful to one who has told him to be careful of a hole in the sidewalk, notwithstanding the fact he has already seen it. Bolshevism started with great popularity. This was the secret of it.

Of course the order to seize the land, all land, was based on the idea that the owners of land held title by and through their own wrongful conduct. God had made the ground and sunshine, and those who had taken title to it had only moved on and forced others off. This is the way the bolsheviks reasoned, and from this point of view they were consistent. From the world's point of view it was confiscation. It was dishonest. Many people believe that acquiring property is frequently the result of industry and thrift; in some cases the title to property is based upon cunning, scheming and force. All of us know that there are some who are without any private property because they prefer to squander their time, dissipate their energy and live shiftless lives. After all, it is a matter of opinion, and from the point of view of the bolsheviks the order "Peasants, seize the land" may have been justified.

But when the order was given, the peasants seized it not for the community but to own it privately. On this point there can be no difference of opinion among honest, impartial, fair-minded men, and when the peasants seized the land to hold, use and own it as their private property they were guilty of taking title by the very means others had taken the land, and against whom they had complained and cried "Thief!"

The Russian people have the power to think. They realize that they have acquired property by the very methods they have always condemned in others. Their natural selfishness may constrain them to keep this property. The sufferings they have gone through may mitigate the offense, but one effect was inevitable, and that effect the most serious that could happen to a people on the threshold of a free future. I refer to the weakening of their moral nature, the making of a precedent justifying dishonesty. I have found the ill effects of this act on the patient, Russia, in every subsequent symptom.

To Do Away With "Slackers."

Eliminating the "work slacker" is the new job which the American legion has taken upon itself, acting in conjunction with the war department's chain of employment bureaus throughout the country. This type of ex-service man, while not numerous, is occasionally a serious detriment to the work of placing ex-soldiers and sailors in satisfactory jobs. Their attitude of shiftlessness after getting the place causes dissatisfaction among employers who are really trying to help and gives a black eye to other service men who still need work.

Common Sense Comments on Health, Happiness and Longevity

VARIETY IN DIET.

I do not believe in a great variety of food at one meal—a ten or twelve-course dinner, or anything of that sort. Neither do I think it is best to restrict the diet to one or two or three articles of food, eating the same thing day in and day out. The digestive organs get into a rut and become sluggish.

As a rule, the more civilized a man becomes, the greater becomes his variety in diet. As I have said, variety in food does not mean a great variety at any one meal, nor does it mean rich pastries and indigestible stuffs. I think that a meal of two or three articles is really better than a greater number, but each meal should be different from the others. Breakfast, dinner and supper should consist of different articles of food, and these be varied from day to day. A variety of wholesome foods well cooked. The sensible housewife is the one who does not serve to husband and children the same things day after day until their appetites are cloyed and their stomachs go on a strike. The food should vary from season to season, from day to day, from meal to meal.

Eat meat, eat fish, eat vegetables, eat fruits, eat cereals, but do not try to eat them all in one day. Remember your body is made up of many different elements, and it is best nourished by many different kinds of foods. There is no single food, not even milk, that will keep a man in health and vigor for any great length of time. Even the domestic animals are kept in better condition by slight changes in diet, or changing from one pasture to another. Nature has provided such a variety of products for food that it seeems only reasonable to conclude that they are of use in the nourishment of the body.

We may change our coat twice daily and substitute a new one as often as the fashion monthly leader dictates a new style; but, no variation in clothes alters the personality, whereas the food we eat may either improve or deteriorate the character of the body which is our soul-garment.

The fact that important changes in animal characteristics are produced by variation in food cannot be doubted by any observer of birds and animals in a state of domestication. Seeing then that the food plays so great a part in these cases, it may safely be inferred that its effects will be still more apparent in the civilization of mankind. This being found true, is it not highly desirable that we should seek to adopt a diet tending directly to improve the body, in order that it may become a more efficient vehicle for the mind, or, more correctly speaking, the ego?

A sickly, waning appetite can frequently be stimulated by some exceedingly simple change in the commonest articles of daily food. For example, slices of dry bread are particularly uninviting, but the same bread, lightly browned, with a delicately poached egg resting on the crisp toast, becomes altogether another item in the daily menu. There are some forty or fifty ways in which to prepare potatoes, yet how few are the tables where one sees the vegetable save in the stereotyped boiled, mashed, or fried! A great variety of delightful dishes can be made with apples at all seasons of the year. There is no need to enumerate the host of what are known as made dishes. It is always better to set on the family table, not courses of elaborate dishes, but a wholesome, agreeable, and yet economical diversity of food.

The best route to health in relation to food is by way of variety. Always variety! It need not necessarily cost any more than the deadly monotony, either in time, labor or money. In fact it should cost less in all directions. A little practice, a list of foods, for easy reference, and a sincere desire for health and comfort, these are enough to start the ball of strength and content rolling, a ball that will roll more and more smoothly as it gathers momentum with time and practice. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

ACTIVITY.

The four great forces at work in nature to keep us living and well, all merge into one great trunk or center; and that is activity. Life is like the great locomotive that goes screaming down our valleys and across our plains. The coal in the tender is like food to the man; both furnish the heat and are the source of power. The breeze that fans the spark in the firebox and which kindles the flame, that heats the water, that produces the steam, that turns the great drive-wheel, is like "flame or vitality in man." The drive-wheel, the puffing smokestack, the ringing bell, the rattling wheels; all telling us that glad tidings or friends are being brought to us—is cheerfulness. All good and useful things are active. The cheerful fire that warms us, or cooks our food, is roaring, cracking, dancing, leaping. The sparkling water that quenches our thirst comes trickling down over the pebbles, or falls in rain, penetrates the earth, until it strikes the bed rock, and then comes bubbling up again, ever moving. The light that comes to us from the sun is generated by vibration. The wind that blows is only the result of nature's activity. The air is only pure when in constant motion. A cessation of activity is succeeded by stagnation, and stagnation means disease and death.

Rest—yes, most assuredly, you must rest, but get tired first, and then enjoy every moment of your rest to the fullest extent possible. What is it to be tired? I'll tell you. There are two sources which supply the body with materials with which the blood is ever busily engaged in rebuilding or replacing the countless little cells which make up our body. The one is the food which is operated on by the digestive organs, and the other is the oxygen which is assimilated by the lungs. If our exercise is a little in excess of that which our bodies are accustomed to, the tissues of the body are broken down more rapidly than the blood can refurnish, and with the flat chest and undeveloped lungs, the blood is not furnished with enough oxygen, and thus the muscles and nerves are being starved and cry out for rest; or, in other words, that you cease to draw upon them until the blood has time and opportunity to renew itself. If proper food is furnished, rest will stop the destruction of tissue; the lungs will soon furnish sufficient oxygen and the normal condition will soon be established. Nature provided many helps to digestion, such as cleanliness, pure air, sunshine, and cheerful surroundings; but the only possible means of distribution, development, strength and health are by proper exercise.

Health, long life, education, progress, in short, everything of worth accomplished in life depends on mental and physical activity properly directed. If physical stamina, health, and intellectual culture are to be attained, mental and physical activity must be so regulated and systematized to not only symmetrically develop both brain and body, but to simultaneously develop one with the other. An unsymmetrically developed body will not have stamina or remain long in health, nor will a brain that is not all-round or symmetrically developed reason logically; nor, on the other hand, will a developed brain in a dwarfed body, or a dwarfed brain in a developed body, accomplish great things. All life is movement, it is its very essence. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

Health Notes

Have you ever noticed that the only grapes that become perfectly ripe and sweet, that the only peaches that take on those beautiful red cheeks and offer that luscious sweetness, are those that are on the outside, uncovered, and perfectly exposed to the sun? God's laws are the same in the animal world.

Have a variety of food, but eat moderately. No one can have good health and clear perceptions of right and a quick sense of wrong who indulges in over-eating.

Peace itself is a struggle, or rather, it is struggle and activity which are the law. We only find rest in effort, as the flame only finds existence in combustion.

* * *

Do not despise your situation; in it you must act, suffer, and conquer. From every point on earth, we are equally near to heaven and to the infinite.

* * *

With some people the question is not how much good is this food going to do me, but, how pleasant it will taste for an instant while it is passing.

All men desire happiness, but few know how to secure it. It is wise to seek for interests rather than pleasures.

The old man whose brain is sound, and who is not ashamed to keep on thinking and working, rejoices, even in the evening of life, in the world and people and the happiness of youth, and enjoys love and consideration instead of being the object of aversion or ridicule.

Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday. Start out with a clean sheet for today, and write upon it for sweet memory's sake only those things which are lovely and lovable.

* * *

The amount of abuse which the modern civilized stomach can withstand is an eternal monument to the perfecting powers of the evolutional survival of the fittest.

* * *

Keep mind and body active. Fight vigorously against worry and despondency. One great remedy is to take short views. It is no use trying to run away from difficulties, they are sure to overtake you. Face them bodily and they will often vanish.

* * *

Barring accidents or unhappy hereditary burdens or the overwork which sometimes seems inevitable, it lies within the power of a great number of us to be ready for service three hundred and sixty-five days in the year.

LADY LARKSPUR

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

"AND AS TO FANS—"

Synopsis.—Richard Searles, successful American playwright, confides to his friend, Bob Singleton, the fact that, inspired by the genius of a young actress whom he had seen in London, he has written a play, "Lady Larkspur," solely with the thought that she should interpret the leading character. This girl, Violet Dewing, has disappeared, Singleton, an aviator, has just returned (invalided) from France. His uncle, Raymond Bashford, a wealthy man, had contracted a marriage a short time before his death, while on a visit to Japan. He left Singleton a comparatively small amount of money and the privilege of residence in the "garage" of his summer home, Barton-on-the-Sound, Connecticut. Mrs. Bashford is believed to be traveling in the Orient. The household at Barton is made up of broken-down employees of a New York hotel, where Bashford made his home. Singleton goes to Barton, taking with him the manuscript of "Lady Larkspur." There he finds the household strangely upset, some of its members being suspected by their comrades of pro-Germanism. Antoine, head of the establishment, informs him that he has been perplexed by the somewhat mysterious visits of a stranger, apparently a foreigner, seeking Mrs. Bashford. Antoine has formed the male members of the household into a guard for protection. Singleton reads Searles' play and thinks highly of it. "Aunt Alice" arrives unexpectedly, meets with a lively reception and turns out to be young and charming. Mrs. Farnsworth is her traveling companion. Torrence, Bashford's lawyer, suspects the two women and warns Singleton "Aunt Alice" may be an impostor. The mysterious stranger, Count Montani, makes a call.

CHAPTER III—Continued.

Montani spoke of the porcelains. "Oh, to be sure! They don't show to best advantage in electric light, do they? But I can have a few of the prize pieces taken into the dining-room," said Alice.

Mrs. Farnsworth had excused herself to finish a letter, and from my chair I could see her head bent over the big desk in the library. Alice rang for Antoine, and I followed her into the hall to offer my aid.

"Oh, don't trouble," she said. "Antoine can do anything necessary. Yes; thanks; if you will turn on the dining-room lights."

I was gone hardly half a minute. When I reached the drawing-room door Montani had crossed the room to the table on which Alice had dropped the fan and was examining it closely. He faced the door, and the moment he detected me exclaimed carelessly: "An exquisite little bauble! I am always curious as to the source of such trifles. I was looking for the maker's imprimatur. I know a Parisian who is the leading manufacturer of the world. But it is not his, I see."

As we stood talking of other things he plied the fan carelessly as though for the pleasure of the faint scent it exhaled, and when Alice called us he put it down carefully where he had found it.

He really did seem to know something about ceramics and praised, with lively enthusiasm, the pieces that had been set out on the table. One piece, as to whose authenticity my uncle had entertained serious doubts, Montani unhesitatingly pronounced genuine and stated very plausible reasons for his opinion.

On the whole, he was an interesting fellow. When he had finished his inspections he lingered for only a few minutes and took his leave, saying that he was spending the night at an inn near Stamford.

"Well," said Alice when the whir of his machine had died away, "what do you think of him?"

"A very agreeable gentleman," I answered. "If he doesn't know porcelains, he fakes his talk admirably."

"And as to fans—" suggested Mrs. Farnsworth.

I had not intended to mention Montani's interest in Alice's fan, and the remark surprised me.

"Oh, I saw it all from the library," laughed Mrs. Farnsworth. "My back was to the door, but I was facing a mirror. The moment you and Alice went into the hall he pounced upon the fan—pounced is the only word that describes it. He concealed his interest in it very neatly when you caught him examining it."

"Fans are harmless things," said Alice, "and if there's any story attached to this one I'm not aware of it. My father bought it in Paris about three years ago, and it has never been out of my possession except to have it repaired. There's a Japanese jeweler who does wonderful things in the way of repairing trinkets of every kind. I left it with him for a few days. I can't tell now which panel was broken, he did his work so deftly."

I took it from her and balanced it in my fingers. It was a beautiful piece of workmanship with the simplest carvings on the ivory panels.

"He couldn't have seen it anywhere before tonight," observed Alice musingly. "In fact, I hadn't used it at all for a year. It was really by mistake that my maid put it into my trunk when I went to Japan. I didn't want to risk breaking it again, so I've been carrying it in a handbag. The last day we were in Tokio I think I had it in our sitting room in the hotel, to make sure it wasn't jammed into the trunk again. We had a good many callers—a number of people came in to bid us good-by, but I'm sure Count Montani was not among them, and it would have been impossible for him to see it at any other time."

"Oh, there is nothing disturbing in the count's interest in the thing," said Mrs. Farnsworth with an air of dismissing the matter. "If it were a jade trinket inscribed with Chinese mysteries, you might imagine that it would be sought by some one—I have heard of such things—but Alice's fan has no such history."

"We weren't very hospitable," said Alice. "I might have asked Count Montani to dine with us tomorrow; and we might even have put him up for the night in this vast house."

Not with Antoine on the premises!" I exclaimed. "Antoine is convinced that the man is what we call in America a crook. And Antoine takes his responsibilities very seriously."

While I was breakfasting at the garage the next morning Antoine appeared and, waiting until Flynn was out of hearing, handed me a slip of paper.

"That's a New York automobile number," he said. "It was on the tag of that machine the party came in last night. I heard him saying, sir, as how he had motored up from the Elkton inn at Stamford. Visitors from Stamford would hardly send in to the city for a machine."

Clung to the Sideboard Listening.

I bade him wait while I called the Elkton by telephone. No such person as Giuseppe Montani had spent the night there or had been a guest of the house within the memory of the clerk. Antoine's chest swelled at this confirmation of his suspicions.

"If the man returns, treat him as you did last night—as though he were entitled to the highest consideration."

"He won't come back—not the same way," said Antoine. "He mentioned the Elkton just to throw you off. The next you hear of him will be quite different."

"You mean he'll come as a burglar?"

"That's what's in my mind, Mr. Singleton. Everything seems very queer, sir."

"Such as what, Antoine?"

"The widow has been telegraphing and telephoning considerable, sir."

"There must be no spying upon these ladies!" I admonished severely. "All the people on the place must remember that Mrs. Bashford is mistress here, and entitled to fullest respect."

He had hardly gone before Torrence had me on the wire to hear my report and to say that Rayner had left Washington for a week-end in Virginia.

I assured him that nothing had occurred to encourage a suspicion that Mrs. Bashford was not all that she pretended to be. The day was marked by unusual activities on the part of the waiters and bell-hops. Instead of the company drills to which I had become accustomed they moved about in pairs along the shore and the lines of the fences. I learned that Antoine had ordered this, and the "troops" were obeying him with the utmost seriousness. The "service" on the estate was certainly abundant. It was only necessary to whistle and one of the Tyringham veterans would come running.

In spite of the complete satisfaction I had expressed to Torrence as to the perfect integrity and honest intentions of the two women, the curiosity of the American state department and the visit of Montani required elucidation beyond my powers. At dinner they were in the merriest humor. The performances of the little army throughout the day had amused them greatly.

"How delightfully feudal!" exclaimed Alice. "Really we should have a moat and drawbridge to make the thing perfect. Constance and I are the best protected women in the world!"

We extracted all the fun possible from the idea that the estate was under siege; that Alice was the chatelaine of a beleaguered castle, and that before help could reach us we were in danger of being starved out by the enemy. They called into play the poetry which had so roused Antoine's apprehensions, and their talk bristled with quotations. Alice rose after the salad and repeated at least a page of Malory, and the Knights of the Round Table having thus been introduced, Mrs. Farnsworth recited several sonorous passages from "The Idyls of the King." They flung lines from Browning's "In a Balcony" at each other as though they were improvising. The befuddlement of Antoine and the waiter who assisted him added to the general joy. They were undoubtedly thought the two women quite out of their heads, and it was plain that I suffered greatly in Antoine's estimation by my encouragement of this frivolity. Mrs. Farnsworth walked majestically round the table and addressed to me the lines from Macbeth beginning:

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be
What thou art promised,

while Antoine clung to the sideboard listening with mouth open and eyes rolling.

Later, in the living room, Alice sang some old ballads. She was more adorable than ever at the piano. It was a happiness beyond any in my experience of women to watch her, to note the play of light upon her golden head, to yield to the spell of her voice. Ballads had never been sung before with the charm and feeling she put into them; and after ending with "Douglas, Douglas," she responded to my importunity with "Ben Bolt," and then dashed into a sparkling thing of Chopin's, played it brilliantly and rose, laughingly mocking my applause.

I left the house like a man over whom an enchantment has been spoken and was not pleased when Antoine blocked my path: "Pardon me, sir."

"Bother my pardon; what's troubling you now?" I demanded.

"It's nothing troubling me, sir; not particularly. If you give me time, I think I'll grow used to the poetry talk and playing at being queens. It's like children in a family I served once; an English family, most respectable. But in a widow, sir—"

"God knows we ought to be glad when grownups have the heart to play at being children and can get away with it as beautifully as those women do! What else is on your mind?"

"It's about Elsie, sir." I groaned at the mention of Flynn's German wife. "I'm sorry, sir; but I thought I should report it. It was a man who came to see her this afternoon. You was out for your walk, and Flynn had taken the ladies for a drive, so Elsie was alone at the garage. This person rode in on the grocer's truck from the village, which is how he got by the gate. As it happened, Pierre—he was a waiter at the Tyringham, a Swiss, who understands German—had gone into the garage for a nap; he's quite old, sir, and has his snooze every afternoon."

"He's entitled to it," I remarked; "he must be a thousand years old."

"From what he heard Pierre thought the man a spy, sir. He wanted Elsie to steal something from the house, it was a fan he wanted her to take most particular, and it was to be done soon, today if she could manage. It was for the love of the Fatherland that he wanted her to do it. Did you notice, sir, that Mrs. Bashford didn't have the fan tonight? Not that one she carried last night."

Antoine's guard makes an exciting capture.

The "Punch" in Gasoline.

The genie that came out of the bottle in the "Arabian Nights" story became, when liberated, a monstrous power. The energy stored in a pint of gasoline is hardly less stupendous.

One pint of gasoline represents 12,000 "B. T. U.'s" of energy. A "B. T. U." (the abbreviation for British thermal unit) will lift 750 pounds one foot. Thus there is in that single pint of innocent looking fluid enough power to lift six tons 750 feet into the air—that is to say, 200 feet higher than the top of Washington monument.—Kansas City Star.

PUBLIC ROADS

TO JOIN WORLD'S CONGRESS

Secretary Meredith Favors Acceptance of Invitation of International Association.

That the United States should accept the invitation of foreign countries to join the Permanent International Association of Road Congresses is the recommendation of the executive committee of the American Association of State Highway Officials to the secretary of agriculture. The committee, which held a two-days' conference in Washington, D. C., considered at the suggestion of Secretary Meredith, the invitation to the United States which had been received through the state department from the American consul general at Paris. Secretary Meredith concurred in the action of the highway officials and told them he would recommend to the state department that congress be asked to authorize acceptance. The highway officials also recommended that the international association be invited to the United States for its next meeting.

In advising the secretary of the action of the state highway officials, Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the bureau of public roads, who is also a member of the executive committee, said that the United States is the only civilized nation not now a member of the international association. He saw many advantages in the United States becoming a member, and he believed the other nations in the association would welcome an invitation to meet in this country next year. The roads congress, he said, constituted an international tribunal for bringing together the best experience and results in highway construction and administration. Although meetings have been held each year, none has been called since the European war began. Before the war the congress had met in Brussels, Paris and London.

Secretary Meredith notified the highway officials that he would enlarge the advisory committee of state highway officials, which consults with the department on federal policies in road building. This committee, consisting of six members, will now include the entire executive committee of the American Association of State Highway Officials, increasing its membership to 12. The secretary said this step was taken so that the committee would more completely represent all parts of the United States. The enlarged membership will enable the advisory committee to work out a classification of roads for the entire country, thereby providing a basis for a more orderly national program of road building.

The executive committee inspected a signal device destined to prevent grade crossing disasters and accidents on dangerous curves. It met with the director of sales of the war department with reference to obtaining equipment which is seriously needed in road building and which the states have been unable to secure.

HAD CHRONIC BRONCHITIS FOR TWENTY-SIX YEARS NOW WELL AND HAPPY

THIS IS WORTH READING

The experience of Mr. E. J. Toupalik, 1438 Rose street, LaCrosse, Wisconsin, is chiefly remarkable on account of the length of time he was afflicted.

He writes: "I have been suffering with chronic bronchitis for twenty-six years and every winter I would catch cold and become so hoarse I could not speak for six or eight weeks. I could get only temporary relief.

"This winter I was taken with Grip and was in awful shape. A fellow workman advised me to take PE-RU-NA. By the time I had used three-fourths of a bottle, the hoarseness was gone, also that tired feeling. I am on my second bottle. Hereafter PE-RU-NA will be constantly in my house. It is the best medicine ever put up for the purpose."

For any disease due to catarrh or catarrhal conditions, PE-RU-NA is equally dependable. Coughs, colds, catarrh of the head, stomach trouble, constipation, rheumatism, pains in the back, side and loins, bloating, belching gas, indigestion, catarrh of the large and small intestines, are some of the troubles for which PE-RU-NA is especially recommended.

PE-RU-NA can be purchased anywhere in either tablet or liquid form.

SAVING ICE IN COOLING MILK

Insulation and Proper Size of Tanks Are Important Factors in Reducing Costs.

INSULATED TANKS FAVORED

About 80 Per Cent of Dairy Farms Producing Market Milk Use Some Sort of Cooling Tank—Concrete Favored by Many.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

By applying scientific tests to various methods of cooling milk dairy specialists of the United States department of agriculture have found the relative effectiveness and economy of methods in most common use. Between the best and relatively poor construction and location of milk-cooling tanks, each 5 feet long, 2½ feet wide, and 25 inches deep, the federal investigators found a difference in ice used of about 160 pounds of ice in a nine-hour day. At the moderate cost of 15 cents a hundredweight for ice, the extra expense of the inefficient method would be about $72 during a hot-weather period of 150 days.

All tests gave results strikingly in favor of insulated tanks as compared with solid walls of wood, concrete, or metal. In addition, building the proper size of tank and having it indoors were found to be important factors in cooling milk quickly and economically. From the experiments, it appears that a milk-cooling tank which holds three or four gallons of water for each gallon of milk results in a more efficient use of ice than a tank of larger size.

Cooling Tanks Largely Used.

The importance of these studies to practical dairymen is made evident by the knowledge that about 80 per cent of dairy farms producing milk use some sort of cooling tank. Not only must the milk be cooled low enough to keep it sweet and marketable, but the reduction in temperature must be secured as quickly as possible, so that the milk may be shipped promptly. In its investigation of these problems, the department found a combination method most practical. By this method the milk is first pre-cooled by means of a surface cooler; then the cans of milk are put in a tank of ice water. When the water passing through the surface cooler has a temperature of 55 degrees F. a ten-gallon can of milk can be properly chilled in about 20 minutes, or about one-third of the time necessary without pre-cooling.

Concrete Tank Favored.

The cooling tank which the experiments indicate to be best suited to the needs of a dairy farm producing market milk is made of concrete with a tight-fitting cover and all walls 8 or 10 inches thick including a 2-inch layer of insulating material. The tank is located in a milk house and is built partly under ground to reduce the labor of lifting the cans in and out. The same piping which supplies the tank with water may also conveniently supply the surface cooler which is installed in the same building.

When the quantity of milk produced varies much from season to season, it is best to construct a tank of two parts, making the larger part about twice the size of the smaller. Either part or both together may be used according to the amount of milk.

Value of Insulation.

In its studies of milk in railroad transit the department's investigators found that insulated cans or the use of felt jackets gave satisfactory results both in summer and winter. The beneficial results were especially noticeable when trips were of considerable length or involved transfer of milk at junction points where the cans were not sheltered. In summer the temperature of chilled milk in insulated or jacketed cans rose very slowly and in winter the same protection prevented the milk from freezing.

A felt jacket one-half inch thick was found to be almost as effective as one an inch thick in experiments made under typical milk-shipping conditions. Milk cooled to between 40 and 45 degrees F. on the farm, even in very hot weather, through the use of felt jackets or insulated cans arrived at the market with but a relatively small rise in temperature.

Detailed information on the construction of milk-cooling tanks and methods of shipping milk at low temperatures may be secured by application to the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture.

Most people lose half of every hatch, and seem to expect it. Chick cholera or white diarrhoea is the trouble.

This loss is needless and easily stopped, by putting Avicol in the drinking water. We prove it by this offer:—

Call at our store for a 25c or 50c package of Avicol. If you don't find that it promptly stops your chicks dying, cures white diarrhoea and all other bowel diseases of poultry, your money will be refunded.

Avicol revives the drooping chicks and helps them grow and develop rapidly. Shows positive results in 48 hours. Easily used and inexpensive.

THROUGH EYES OF PAINTER

Beauty of Things, as He Has Seen Them, Are Made Visible for All to Behold.

When we see the sunset's vaporous hills towering in purple and gold, or the gray road winding between the flaming furze, or the blue river rolling amid the green fields, where the sheep stand white on the bank and the red cattle graze, we feel we are part of the scene, and are included in the web of wonder. We behold a new world, whose horizon we cannot see, and whose messages we do not clearly understand. Most of us are too busy to wait and worship there, but ever the painter waits and worships. . . . Whatever he painted contained beauty already, but he alone perceived it and caressed it, and out of his love more beauty is unfolded, so that when we look at his achievement our eyes become brighter and brighter and more sensitive, ourselves greater, and we are able to glimpse that over-arching and inexpressible beauty of which we, and the picture, are only the outermost fringe. It is a triumphant trio, which will show us the promising vista. First the visible subject to be painted, then the painter, and lastly the beholder.—W. A. Sinclair, in Painting.

DRESSES FOR THE FLAPPER

More than ever the flapper has cause to rejoice in beautiful clothes. Great designers spend their time thinking of her and creating things to just suit those wonderful years beginning with twelve and ending with sixteen. Here is a dress that will make grown-ups envious. It is made of coarse linens and has a white waistcoat set in, and handsome flat pearl buttons.

Killing Power!

Anything that kills — from firearms to poison—is dangerous. The safety factor is an important consideration in manufacture.

The minute you detract from the killing power of Arsenate of Lead you are not getting what you pay for. Consequently—the first consideration in the making of Ansbacher's Arsenate of Lead has been quick, certain death to the insects. At the same time the amount of free arsenic has been so minimized that it won't injure a leaf of the most delicate foliage. It is death to bugs and harmless to plants. It's a safe insecticide.

It stays in suspension in the spray and does more without costing more.

The Ansbacher name is your guarantee of quality and under this brand comes also exceptionally effective Paris Green and Bordeaux Mixture.

PESTS THREATEN GARDEN SUCCESS

Specialists Advise Use of All Preventive Measures Possible as Best Plan.

HAVE SOIL DEEPLY PLOWED

Rotation of Crops Has Been Found by Many Farmers to Be Excellent Means of Controlling Disease and Harmful Insects.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

From the time the seeds are planted until the crop is harvested a series of insect enemies and diseases may appear that, unless they are controlled, will destroy much of the value of the garden. Garden and truck crop specialists of the United States department of agriculture have worked out a great many specific means for destroying insects or holding them in check. They point out the fact, however, that preventive measures are best.

It is important to have the soil deeply plowed or spaded and made loose and light with plenty of well-rotted manure or compost and to keep the ground cultivated so that the surface will not become hard or weedy. Use the best seed to be had and sow it liberally to get a good stand, but thin out the plants, as overcrowded plants are in much greater danger of becoming diseased than those that receive plenty of air and sunshine.

Rotate Crops If Possible.

Farmers have found that by rotating their crops they reduce the injury from plant diseases and insects and also increase the fertility of the soil. This principle applies to the home garden, where, if possible, it will be better to make a new plan each year, placing each vegetable where some other grew the year before—peas on the old tomato ground, beets and carrots after the corn, etc. The details of this rotation must vary in each case according to the climate, soil, and vegetables grown and the diseases and insects to be guarded against.

Avoid introducing insects and diseases on plants obtained for setting out. Practice clean cultivation. Employ fertilizers to stimulate plant growth. Work on the principle that a vigorous growing garden will produce a crop in spite of injurious insects and diseases.

Become familiar with the insects and diseases known to occur in your district on the crops you are growing. Equip yourself in advance with all necessary remedies and the means of applying them. Remember that the timely application of a remedy acts as an insurance against loss.

Watch constantly for the first appearance of a disease or insect. Inspect the garden at least every other day. Determine what is causing injury and apply the proper treatment promptly. Use combination treatments as often as necessary, keeping in mind the influence of weather conditions as well as the life history of the insect or fungus causing the disease.

Neighborhood Should Co-operate.

Use insecticides and fungicides in the proper dilution to accomplish the object without injuring the plants. Standard remedies are best. Test others experimentally before using them on a large scale.

Use the best sprayers. A thorough application is necessary for the best results. Adjust the sprayer so that all parts of the plant that are exposed to the air will be covered.

Work for co-operation in the neighborhood. One badly infected or infested garden may be the source of disease infection or insect infestation for several near-by gardens. Keep your own garden clean and it will be an object lesson for careless neighbors and will have a tendency to help clean up the neighborhood. This will make control easier and cheaper another year.

For garden insects there are several control methods that do not require the use of insecticides, but too much must not be expected from them. Of these hand picking is useful for large, comparatively inactive insects such as the potato beetle, cutworms and other caterpillars, and the squash bug. Another method is jarring or beating insects from low plants into large pans of water on which a thin scum of kerosene is floating. The water prevents the insects from escaping, and the kerosene, being on the surface, kills the insects with which it comes in contact. Collecting nests are valuable for some pests; for example, the tarnished plant bug. Brushing by different means is used to a considerable extent and consists in beating or brushing insects from the plants with pine boughs or similar brush. This method has proved of great value in combating the pea aphis. Covering with cloth is of use as a preventive for the striped cucumber beetle when the cucumbers are quite small, and for root-maggots. Trapping by different methods with old boards is useful for squash bugs and cutworms. Poisoned baits may be placed under such traps. Plowing, disking, and harrowing all can be done by hand and are of considerable service.

Spraying Methods.

To be successful in the control of insects and diseases, spraying must be done promptly and thoroughly. Spraying with bordeaux mixture should be done before rains rather than after, provided the spray has time to dry on the leaves. Intervals between spraying should depend on the weather. If it is rainy or muggy, with fogs or heavy dews, spray frequently to keep the foliage protected at all times. If dry, a longer time may be allowed.

The ideal spray is a fine mist, and the best work is done when the plant is throughly and evenly covered with fine drops. Stop spraying before the foliage is drenched.

The higher the pressure, the better the spray.

Clean all sprayers each time after using.

For delicate foliage, spray after this gets under shade. Hot sunlight is dangerous with many sprays, such as kerosene emulsion.

Get a copy—free by writing to the United States department of agriculture—of Farmers' Bulletin 856, "Control of Diseases and Insect Enemies of the Home Vegetable Garden." It discusses the whole subject in detail—the various garden insects and diseases, poisons and how to prepare and use them, spraying machinery, and the like.

DEPTH OF CORN CULTIVATION

Shallow Method Is Favored as Result of Many Comparative Experiments by Specialists.

Many comparative experiments of deep and shallow cultivation have been made, and on the whole the results are in favor of shallow cultivation, say specialists of the United States department of agriculture. The occasions when deep cultivation is preferable are few. If excessive rains have packed the soil and kept it water soaked, deep cultivation will help to dry and aerate it. Breaking the roots of the plants must be avoided so far as possible. If roots are broken the plants will rapidly produce other roots, but it will be at the expense of vitality and the food supply. After the plants have reached a height of 2 or 3 feet, the soil even in the middle of the rows should not be cultivated deeper than 4 inches, and usually a shallower cultivation will prove better. A loose soil mulch 2 or 3 inches in thickness should be maintained. It retains soil moisture and facilitates the penetration of rainfall.

"BETTER SIRES" LOCAL COLOR

Farmers Recognize Value of Improved Stock Even Though Living in Remote Sections.

That the value of improved live stock is recognized by farmers even though they are still far from reaching that goal on their farms is shown by correspondence reaching the United States department of agriculture from regions where the live stock industry is undeveloped. "This township," one farmer writes in pencil on a scrap of paper, "is interested in a better grade of cattle. There is a sawmill and a carriage shop and a blacksmith shop right by us, and I think these would be good places for your colored poster about better sires. If you will send me some I will post them up.

"We have several cows in our barn," he continues, "and will improve our cows with a pure-bred Holstein bull, which will soon be ready to head the herd."

LESSON FOR JUNE 6

SAUL'S FAILURE.

LESSON TEXT—I Sam. 15.

GOLDEN TEXT—For thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, and the Lord hath rejected thee.—I Sam. 15:26.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—I Sam. 14: 47-52.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A King Who Disobeyed God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How Saul Lost His Kingdom.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Saul Failed.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Strength and Weakness of Saul's Character.

This is one of the saddest pictures in Bible history. No one has had a brighter prospect before him than Saul, yet no one has made a greater failure. He possessed strong natural gifts, the qualities of a great king. He had a fine physique, which greatly favors one's success in life, other things being equal. He had the benefit of Samuel's advice and godly life, which was of inestimable value.

I. The Command to Saul (vv. 1-3).

He is commanded to utterly exterminate the Amalekites, leaving neither people nor booty. The reason assigned is their evil treatment of Israel as they came up out of Egypt (Ex. 17:8; Deut. 25:17). This command may seem cruel, but we must remember that it was given by the Lord, who has the right to kill or to make alive. The wickedness of this people was very great. Their judgment was only such as their sin deserved. It was not Israel's act, but God's, Israel only being the sword in his hand.

II. The Disobedience of Saul (vv. 4-9).

He renders a partial obedience. Agag, the king, is spared and the best of the goods is appropriated. The purpose of God's thoroughgoing command was to show that it was a warfare of judgment for wickedness, not for greed. Saul only obeyed as far as his inclinations led him. The obedience to God which is limited by the heart's inclination is the worst kind of obedience.

III. Saul Rebuked by Samuel (vv. 10-25).

1. Samuel cried to God (v. 11). The news of this disgraceful act greatly disturbed Samuel, causing him to cry to the Lord all night.

2. Saul's hypocritical pretense (vv. 15, 16). Saul met Samuel with the pretense of having executed the Lord's commandment. This pretense carried a lie upon its face. Those who are the most willing to speak of their obedience are the ones who are conscious of disobedience, and their consciences trouble them over it. Though disturbed by a guilty conscience he tried to conciliate Samuel, the prophet, but the very bleating of the sheep and the lowing of the herds betrayed him. Thus betrayed, he tried to shift the blame upon the people (v. 15). This is always the way. It matters not what the crime may be, some excuse can be made for it. He then played the hypocrite by trying to make it pass as an act of devotion to God (v. 15). He should have known that things gained by disobedience to God are an abomination to him. Offerings to God of ill-gotten gains can never atone for sins of disobedience and neglect. Saul tried to justify himself by pleading that he was keeping the spirit of the commandment, while not literally carrying out its requirements. He has many successors today who do not believe in the literal interpretation and practice of God's Word.

3. Samuel rehearses before Saul God's dealing with him (vv. 17-23).

Samuel met this hypocrisy by bringing him to squarely face his sin. God is more concerned in having his subjects render obedience unto his commandments than he is for them to offer unto him sacrifices. Such an act when the heart is in rebellion is as hateful to God as witchcraft and idolatry.

IV. The Judgment upon Saul (vv. 26-35).

For the presumptuous offering of sacrifice the dynasty passed from Saul's house, and for this act of flagrant disobedience the kingdom is rent from him. It is taken from Saul and given to his neighbor, who is better than he. He confessed his sin and begged Samuel to still honor him before the elders of the people. This further shows his self-centered life. His honor was more to him than the glory of God. Samuel forsook him and left him alone to suffer in disgrace. He refused to punish the Amalekite (II Sam. 1:10). Unless we slay our enemies they will slay us. Judgment shall come sooner or later upon those who sin, for "the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." (Rom. 6:23).

Great Deeds.

We all want to do some great thing—to do what prophets, saints, heroes, and martyrs have done. But the small thing, the commonplace thing, the little trivial duty, the thing that has to be done out of everybody's sight—in the routine of business, home or school—that seems poor work to do for God. But it is what he wants us to do.—C. J. Perry.

Knowledge.

Knowlege is folly unless grace guides.

Miss Alcott's Elms.

Among the trees in historic Concord are the two old elms in front of the Louisa May Alcott house, and the little grove of pines and spruces just beyond it. Under the shade of the elms once lived the author of "Little Women" and among the whispering pines Hawthorne walked, thought and wrote, or conversed with his friend, Thoreau. The elm at the left of the door as the visitor approaches the old house is 18 feet in circumference, and the one at the right is 15. The trees have been nominated for a place in the Hall of Fame for Trees being compiled by the American Forestry association of Washington, D. C.

"Well, madam, it's—er—hardly usual," demurred the proprietor. "But in the circumstances, perhaps—"

The customer's five-year-old daughter," who had stood silent during the long inspection, now tugged violently at her mother's skirt.

"Oh, mamma," she piped in her fatally clear treble, "hadn't you better warn him to be sure and get it there in time? Our party's tomorrow, you know."

Acid Stomach
Makes the Body Sour
Nine Out of Ten People Suffer From It

It sends its harmful acids and gases all over the body, instead of health and strength. Day and night this ceaseless damage goes on. No matter how strong, its victim cannot long withstand the health-destroying effects of an acid stomach.

Good news for millions of sufferers. Chemists have found a sure remedy—one that takes the acid up and carries it out of the body; of course, when the cause is removed, the sufferer gets well.

Bloating, indigestion, sour, acid, gassy stomach miseries all removed. This is proven by over half a million ailing folks who have taken EATONIC with wonderful benefits. PAINS NEARLY DOUBLED ME UP

Nothing Helped Me Until I Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wyandotte, Mich.—"For the last four years I have doctored off and on without help. I have had pains every month so bad that I would nearly double up. Sometimes I could not sweep a room without stopping to rest, and everything I ate upset my stomach. Three years ago I lost a child and suffered so badly that I was out of my head at times. My bowels did not move for days and I could not eat without suffering. The doctor could not help me and one day I told my husband that I could not stand the pain any longer and sent him to the drug-store to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and threw the doctor's medicine away. After taking three bottles of Vegetable Compound and using two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash I could do my own housework. If it had not been for your medicine I don't know where I would be today and I am never without a bottle of it in the house. You may publish this if you like that it may help some other woman."—MRS. MARY STENDER, 120 Orange St., Wyandotte, Mich.

DEATH WAS NEAR

Florida Woman in Critical Condition From Dropsy, But Doan's Brought Recovery

"Dropsy brought me right down to the shadow of the grave," says Mrs. Ida B. Atwell, 904 William St., Key West, Fla. "For fifteen years I was a hopeless wreck, struggling between life and death. The pains were so severe in my back I screamed in agony. My head ached so severely I thought my skull was being crushed. Black specks floated before my eyes, and I had to grasp the bed to keep from falling.

Mrs. Atwell

"The kidney secretions burned and scalded and I could pass only a few drops at a time. My body bloated. The pressure of so much water on my chest almost smothered me. My feet also swelled and large sacs of water hung beneath my eyes. My skin had a shiny, white appearance and anywhere I pressed a dent would remain for hours. I became a nervous wreck.

"A friend told me about Doan's Kidney Pills and oh! I felt so happy when I found they were helping me. Continued use of Doan's completely cured me." Sworn to before me.

INDIANA NEWS

Richmond.—Coal for the Wayne County courthouse, the County Infirmary, the Tuberculosis hospital and the jail cannot be obtained at the present time and dealers in Richmond will give no definite assurance as to when fuel may be obtained. Bids for 925 tons were advertised for, and the contract was to have been awarded a few days ago, but not a single bid was received. The commissioners were informed by dealers that next winter's supply of fuel for county institutions probably will have to be bought on the open market.

Muncie.—Of the 16,662 persons of school age in Delaware county, 11,001 live in the city of Muncie, according to the reports of school census enumerators. The city shows a gain of 342 over the preceding year. Lack of dwellings, which forces hundreds of men to keep their families elsewhere, prevents a greater gain in children, the school authorities say. School age is fixed by state law as from six to twenty-one.

Washington, D. C.—Adjt. Gen. Harry B. Smith has written to the Indiana senators that the National Guard officers of Indiana favor the house provisions of the army bill on the National Guard, which would leave the guard as it was before the war. He opposes the organization of the guard under the army clause of the Constitution on the ground that such action took too much power from the states.

Anderson.—Thirty-eight head of Shorthorn cattle sold by Dr. A. E. Harlan at his farm in the north part of Madison county, brought $15,500. The highest price paid was $1,000 for a four-year-old cow, bought by Morris E. Jones of Culver. Morris Wynn of Lucerne paid $800 for a two-year-old heifer. Another heifer of the same age sold for $750. The average for cows was $490 and for bulls, $800.

Indianapolis.—Otto A. Beyer of South Bend was nominated for grandmaster without opposition at the closing session of the eighty-fourth semi-annual meeting of the grand lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Indiana, held in Indianapolis. George E. Hershman of Crown Point was nominated for deputy grandmaster. Election of officers will be held at the November meeting of the grand lodge.

East Chicago.—Chauffeurs and assistant chauffeurs of the East Chicago police and fire departments, who are members of the Teamsters' union, have received a $25 a month increase in pay while other members of the department, who also petitioned for an increase, received none. The chauffeurs in the police department now receive $175 a month. Captains and desk seargents receive $160.

English—Floyd Weathers, age thirteen, was shot accidentally and instantly killed by Richard Weathers, his father, while the two were squirrel hunting north of Marengo. The youth had climbed into a tree to run down a squirrel and the father, who is about seventy years old, mistook the appearance of the boy's cap for a squirrel.

Terre Haute.—William Wood Parsons, president of Indiana State Normal school here, recently observed his seventieth birthday anniversary. Fifty years of his long life have been devoted to the institution of which he is the head. He was a student at the school when it was opened in January, 1870.

Lafayette.—Tippecanoe county business and professional men, acting as spokesmen for the citizens of the county generally, have volunteered to lay a substantial financial foundation for the $1,000,000 Purdue University Union memorial building, which it is proposed to erect on the university campus.

Indianapolis.—Clyde E. Titus of Indianapolis was elected president of the Indiana Funeral Directors' association at the closing session of its fortieth annual convention at Indianapolis. A resolution was passed declaring that the sentiment of the association is to discourage Sunday funerals.

Huntington.—Enumeration of persons of school age in Huntington county shows a gain of 44 persons over that of last year according to a report compiled by Clifford Funderburg, county superintendent of schools. The total in the townships is 4,304. In the cities the number is 3,558.

Gary.—"Sleeping influenza," as Gary physicians term it, caused the death of nine-year-old Ruth Harriet Windlad, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ephran Windlad. This is the third death from sleeping sickness in this city this year.

Fort Wayne.—Statistics recently compiled show that deposits in banks in Fort Wayne have increased nearly $4,500,000 in the last year.

Terre Haute.—William Franklin, age thirty-two, son of William B. Franklin, a farmer, living east of St. Marys, was shot and instantly killed by Benjamin Franklin, age twenty-eight, his brother. The tragedy occurred in a bedroom at the Franklin home, where Benjamin had gone to awaken another brother.

South Bend.—Fort Wayne was selected as the city in which to hold next year's convention at the closing session of the St. Joseph's State league here. Otto Kreusberger of Evansville was elected president.

Evansville.—The 1920 wheat crop of Vanderburg county will be stored in grain elevators at thrashing time and held by the farmers until a settled price has been reached, and not sold immediately after being thrashed, according to the decision of the officers and directors of the Vanderburg County Farmers' Improvement association. The farmers were urged not only to hold their new wheat, but to hold on to their present supply of grain until the price of $3 a bushel is offered. As the yield of wheat this year will be only about one-half of the usual crop, the farm officials pointed out that even should the farmers receive $3 a bushel they would not make much more than expenses because of the short crop.

Indianapolis.—County and township officials were urged to proceed slowly in authorizing public improvements that require bond issues at this time in a resolution adopted at the closing session of a convention in Indianapolis of county presidents and secretaries of organizations affiliated with the Indiana Federation of Farmers' Associations. It was the sense of the members that public improvement costs now are abnormal and that labor which would be used on the roads could be utilized more beneficially on the farms.

Seymour.—Roland P. Hofmann owner of a large orchard near Paoli, says indications are favorable for a bumper peach and apple crop in southern Indiana. He predicts a pack of 25,000 bushels of peaches in the Paoli district. He believes that the grape and small fruit crop in the southern part of the state will also be large, although the pear, cherry and plum prospects were cut short by recent freezes. In northern Indiana, he says, indications point to a heavy crop of apples, pears and cherries.

Newcastle.—An earthenware jar, which contained $1,325 in gold coins, was unearthed recently under the house on the John C. Hardin farm, near Greensboro. Workmen, who were excavating for a cellar, found the money, it being in denominations of $5, $10 and $20 pieces, there being $1,200 in $20 gold pieces. The coins are believed to have been buried under the house at least forty years ago by Mrs. Rachel Charlesworth, now dead, who was known as an eccentric woman.

Terre Haute.—The state convention of the Indiana Woman's Association of Commerce, in session here, elected the following officers: President, Miss Emma May, Terre Haute; first vice president, Mrs. Julia A. McAndrew, Vincennes; second vice president, Mrs. Mary Torrence, Muncie; recording secretary, Miss Ida O. Miller, Muncie; corresponding secretary, Miss Anna Steinmehl, Terre Haute; treasurer, Miss Snider, Muncie.

Danville.—Arthur W. Collett of Logansport, has been appointed by the board of managers of the National Soldiers' home as governor of the Danville branch, succeeding Col. Henry E. Rives of Paris, Ill., who resigned. Mr. Collett, who formerly was governor of the southern branch at Hampton Roads, will take charge July 1. He served in an Indiana regiment during the civil war.

Terre Haute.—An interurban car bound from Sullivan to Terre Haute was held up by two men who boarded the car six miles south of Terre Haute, and fled without obtaining any loot. The robbers are said to have been driven off by a passenger and the conductor of the car. They fired several shots into the interurban as they fled, but none took effect.

Logansport.—The members of the Housewives league of Logansport, in sympathy with the action of the league in Indianapolis and other cities of the state, have voted to cut off their list of purchases, candy, ice cream, soft drinks and other luxuries containing sugar, and to refrain from the purchase as long as the price of sugar remains prohibitive.

Logansport.—William Hopper, principal of the Star City schools, is held under $500 bond to answer to the charge of assault and battery with intent to kill, preferred by John McClure, father of William McClure, whom the teacher is charged with slashing with a razor. The alleged assault is said to have occurred over a girl of the town.

Jeffersonville.—For the first time in several years enumeration of persons of school age in the townships of Clark county, shows an increase of 73. The incorporated towns lost 61 and Jeffersonville 78, making a net loss of 66 in the county.

Fort Wayne.—F. G. Hughes of Kokomo was elected grand chancellor of the Indiana Grand Council of United Commercial Travelers at its annual convention held in Fort Wayne. He succeeds L. E. Karcher of Evansville.

Winamac.—Frank Busch and Earl Fritz killed seven wolf puppies southwest of Medaryville. They found no trace of the old wolves, but for the seven pelts received a bounty of $2.50 for each of them.

Columbia City.—The farmers of Whitley county have organized an association with Elmer E. Heimbach as president, to pick and prepare their own wool for shipping to a commission house.

Paoli.—Mr. and Mrs. David Hudleson celebrated their sixty-first wedding anniversary at Paoli. Mr. Hudleson is eighty-five and his wife is eighty years old.

South Bend.—Farmers of Elkhart, St. Joseph and Marshall counties are opposed to any more road improvements until the high cost of rusterial and labor show a decided increase.

Elkhart.—Indianapolis was selected as the 1921 meeting place of the Indiana conference of the Congregational church, which held its sixty-second yearly gathering in Elkhart.

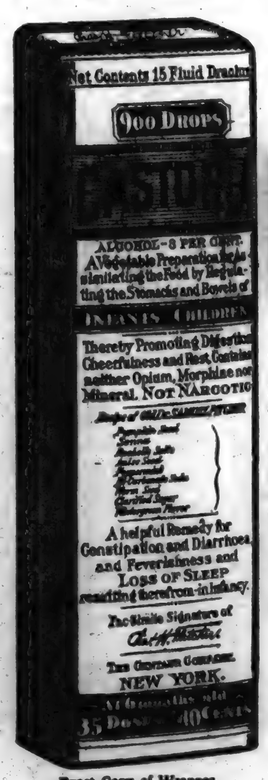
Are You Human?

A little baby. A little child. Don't they appeal to you? Doesn't your heart yearn to pick them up, to cuddle them close to you, to shield them from all harm? sure it does else you're not human. Being human you love them. Their very helplessness makes you reach out in all your strength to aid them. In health there's no flower so beautiful. In illness there's no night so black.

Save them then. Use every precaution. Take no chance.

When sickness comes, as sickness will, remember its just a baby, just a child and if the Physician isn't at hand don't try some remedy that you may have around the house for your own use.

Fletcher's Castoria was made especially for babies' ills and you can use it with perfect safety as any doctor will tell you. Keep it in the house.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Do the People Know?

Do you know why you are asked to call for Fletcher's Castoria when you want a child's remedy: why you must insist on Fletcher's?

For years we have been explaining how the popularity of Fletcher's Castoria has brought out innumerable imitations, substitutes and counterfeits.

To protect the babies: to shield the homes and in defense of generations to come we appeal to the better judgment of parents to insist on having Fletcher's Castoria when in need of a child's medicine. And remember above all things that a child's medicine is made for children—a medicine prepared for grown-ups is not interchangeable. A baby's food for a baby. And a baby's medicine is just as essential for the baby.

The Castoria Recipe (it's on every wrapper) has been prepared by the same hands in the same manner for so many years that the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and perfection in the product are synonymous.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

What's become of the prejudice against automobiles because they frightened the horses

NOW cars are everywhere. The horses have gotten used to them—and so has everybody else. Think of it! This year the American people will spend nearly a billion dollars on tires alone.

Tires are one of the biggest items on the car owner's bills.

II

Hardly a Saturday, when you motorists drop in to "tune up" for a Sunday trip, that one or more of you doesn't tell us something of value to our business. Sooner or later it comes back to you in Service.

Service is what the car owners of this community are looking for nowadays.

And especially the small car owners, who put service first in figuring their motoring expenditures.

III

Just because a man has a moderate-price car is no reason why he should get any less service out of his tires.

We believe that the man with the small car is entitled to just as good tire service as the man with the big car—and both are entitled to the best tire service they can get.

That's why we represent U. S. Tires in this community.

And why more car owners—large and small—are coming to us every day for U. S. Tires.

IV

Come in and talk to us about tires. We're here to help you get the kind of tires you want.

Select your tires according to the roads they have to travel:

In sandy or hilly country, wherever the going is apt to be heavy—The U. S. Nobby.

For ordinary country roads—The U. S. Chain or Usco.

For front wheels—The U. S. Plain.

For best results—everywhere—U. S. Royal Cords.

Ten Ways to beat the H. C. L.

—o—

1. BE A PRODUCER. Work and earn, to help increase the world's goods, and thereby decrease the cost of necessities.

2. MAKE A BUDGET. Plan how you will dispose of your income. Do not live from "hand to mouth."

3. RECORD YOUR EXPENSES. Keep track of where your money goes to see how you come out with respect to your estimates.

4. KEEP YOUR MONEY IN BANK. Pay bills by check and put your surplus regularly in savings. This keeps your money safe and helps you to save.

5. CARRY LIFE INSURANCE. It is an investment not an expense—a protection to your dependents after you are gone.

6. MAKE A WILL. Be sure your "house is in order" for you never know when you will be called to the "great beyond."

7. OWN YOUR OWN HOME. Even if you have to go into debt for it, your greatest satisfaction will come from living under your own roof.

8. PAY YOUR BILLS PROMPTLY. Don't obligate yourself beyond the limits of your budget allowances and protect your credit by meeting those obligations promptly.

9. INVEST YOUR SAVINGS. When your savings are sufficient to buy one or more good bonds, go to your banker and buy them.

10. SHARE WITH OTHERS. Remember the Golden Rule and do your full duty towards mankind; for therein lies contentment, without which you cannot be truly prosperous.

Mrs. ADA BERRY,

ST. JOE, IND.

Obituary

Not only St. Joe, but the entire community for miles around, was completely shocked at the sudden death of W. A. G. Smith, at his place of business on last Thursday evening at about 7:30. He had spent the day at his home doing some out door work about his premises and had gone to his store to help out during the evening.

As was his custom to operate his refrigerating plant each evening, he had gone to the back room to start the engine with J. L. Rhodenbaugh and F. W. Brodbeck accompanying him to see the operation.

Mr. Smith had labored hard to start the gasoline engine and had failed. His son, Earl, tried to start the engine and he failed. Mr. Smith made the second attempt and succeeded in getting it started after some hard work cranking the engine. He was nearly exhausted by this time. He had just been talking to the gentlemen who stood near by and after wiping the sweat from his brow, he remarked that it needed a little more gas, just turning around he stooped over to adjust the gasoline feed on the engine, he fell into the wall.

The men at his side thought that he had just fallen and seeing that he made no effort to get up they proceeded to pick him up and found that he was unconscious. They carried him out of doors and help was summonsed at once but of no avail. The suppontion is, and beyond any doubt, that he had eaten a hearty supper just shortly before beginning this operation of starting the ice plant, and that he was overcome by exhaustion.

He had frequently experienced a difficulty in starting the machine but it was not thought that it would mean his death.

Wm. A. G. Smith, son of Joseph and Mary Smith, was born in Concord township, November 9, 1860, and died in St. Joe, Thursday, June 3, 1920, at the age of 59 years, 6 months and 24 days. With the exception of only a few years of his early childhood which were spent in Kansas, he made this place his home all of his lifetime. He was united in marriage to Ella Walker November 24, 1881. To this union was born one son, Earl, who is left to be the support and stay of his mother by this untimely loss.

Besides the wife and son he leaves four brothers, John D., of St. Joe; Florence, of Garrett, Indiana; James, of Lucas, Ohio and Ed, of Fearland, Texas, and one sister, Mrs. Mattie Hart, St. Joe. Three brothers having preceded him in death.

About twenty years ago he joined the Lutheran Church. He was a member of the I. O. O. F., Rebekah and Encampment lodges and he was very devoted to his lodge duties and especially to his home.

"Bill," as he was called, was a friend to every one. The children loved him and the older ones loved his sterling qualities. His hand was ever open to the poor and his honesty and fair dealings in his store life have won him a place in the hearts of the community.

He was by vocation a carpenter, which trade he followed for many years, having built many of the homes in this place. For a few years he engaged in the Cement Block and Tile Industry and after he quit he moved from his home on Spencerville street into the Martha Walker home and then proceeded to repair it until now he and his wife were most comfortably located in a beautiful home.

Only a few years ago he entered into the butcher business purchasing the local market of Zonker Brothers, later he added a few groceries to his stock and a year or so ago he purchased the H. C. Hathaway business rooms and moved his stock into it. He had a fine business and trade was increasing fast. And again St. Joe has lost one of her good citizens.

The funeral service was held from the home on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. C. O. Johnson, officiating. E. R. Kinsey, Director. The Rebekah and I. O. O. F. lodges attended in a body. Burial was made at White City cemetery.

A large portion of the citizens turned out to pay their last respect. Forty-three automobiles were in the procession to the cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

Our sincere thanks is hereby expressed to those who administered to us in this our great bereavement in word, or deed and also those who expressed their sympathy with floral offerings.

Mrs. Ella Smith and Son.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, death has removed from our midst, brother Smith, Be It Therefore Resolved, that we, the members of the St. Joe Valley Rebekah Lodge extend to the bereaved family, our heartfelt sympathy. Resolved, that we, as a lodge deeply feel our loss, but realize that our loss is his gain.

BETTER CORN YIELDS MAY BE OBTAINED BY CULTIVATING PROMPTLY WHEN NEEDED

This Arrangement Requires the Labor of Two Men.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farm labor is scarce this year, and yields are likely to suffer unless available labor is utilized to the best advantage.

Unnecessary or misdirected cultivation is always a serious waste, but it is particularly so when man power is not adequate to crop requirements.

Make all labor count at full value. In cultivating the corn crop, say specialists, use a two-row cultivator if possible. It consumes only half as much man labor as a one-row cultivator and only one-fourth as much as the half-row cultivator or double shovel.

Cultivate when cultivation is needed, but refrain when it is not needed. Cultivation may be a waste of time or actually injurious under certain conditions. Cultivation by a hard-and-fast rule is likely to do more harm than good. Government corn specialists give the following general principles as to time and manner of cultivating corn:

Cultivation Has Three Objects.

There are three main purposes of cultivation—to store moisture, to destroy weeds, to warm the soil.

Keep the soil surface loose and open. This will let the rain soak in quickly and reduce waste. In fair weather it will prevent the subsoil from drying out. A properly cultivated surface soil will send moisture, laden with plant food, up through the corn roots and stalks to make ears.

Every weed in a cornfield is an enemy. It drinks up moisture and consumes plant food that should go to make corn kernels instead of weed seed. Destroy weeds when they appear. Attack them, if possible, in fair weather. You will then have the sun as a powerful ally.

Evaporation of moisture lowers temperature. A wet, evaporating soil surface is cold. A dry soil surface is warm. A loose soil surface dries quickly and the blanket of loose, dry soil then checks evaporation, drinks in sunshine, and becomes warm.

Watch your soil—its condition should determine when to cultivate. Do not let cracks form. They are holes through which valuable moisture escapes. Do not cultivate when your ground is dry or wet enough to form large clods. Clods tie up plant food so that the corn roots cannot use it.

Watch Soil and Plants.

Do not waste cultivation. Cultivation may be actually injurious when your soil is so dry and hard as to break into large dry clods.

Failure to cultivate promptly when it is needed to prevent the soil from becoming cracked, hard, or weedy will materially lessen the corn yield.

In addition to watching the soil, watch the plants. Their progress determines how you should cultivate.

While the plants are small, cultivate as deeply as the condition of the soil makes necessary. If your seed bed was not well prepared before planting, deep cultivation when the corn is small is desirable. Get your soil into open condition so that the corn roots can reach out for food.

After the plants become a foot high, shallow cultivation only should be given. The roots have spread out close under the surface of the soil and would be injured by deep cultivation. Never cultivate deeply close to corn plants after they are a foot high. Such cultivation will break feeding roots and cause injury to the plants.

Conserve Labor and Land.

Corn is the main support of the nation. Grown in every state of the Union, it exceeds any other crop in acreage, production, value, and multiplicity of uses.

When land and labor were abundant, production could be increased to meet increasing demands by planting more acres to corn. But the demand for corn is still increasing while available labor is decreasing. The only way to increase production is to make each acre yield more bushels of corn.

The average yield of corn per acre in the United States is about 27 bushels. With good seed, fair soil, and timely, careful cultivation, the yield can be doubled, the specialists say. That may be too much to strive for this year, but proper methods should enable you to obtain, with limited labor, as good yields as you formerly grew—unless, of course, you have always followed the best cultural methods.

MARKET REPORTS BY WIRE HELP FARMERS

Information Given Out by Government at Small Expense.

List of Telegraph Stations, Together With Other Valuable Information Will Be Sent to Those Desiring the Service.

Anyone desiring to secure market information issued by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, more quickly than is possible through the mails may have all or a part of any report sent by telegraph, charges collect, from the nearest stations maintained by the bureau. A list of these stations, together with a blank for entering the details of the desired telegraphic service will be furnished upon application to the United States department of agriculture.

Some of the phrases used in these reports may require explanation.

"Market excited," represents a condition of uncertainty and a decided bullish tendency on the part of the seller.

"Market stronger," represents a condition of increasing confidence on the part of the seller, with the likelihood that the present demand will consume present supplies.

"Market strong." This represents a condition of firm confidence on the part of the seller. There may be a good demand and supplies may be relatively light, so that the seller is likely to stiffen the price at the first opportunity.

"Market active." This represents a condition of quick sale, good demand, and a generally healthy condition. There may be no decided change in prices, although it often indicates an upward trend.

"Market firm." This represents condition of strong confidence in general conditions, resulting often in a strengthening of a price range, but seldom in actual price advances.

"Market steady." This represents normal movement, with steady, consistent trading showing no decided price changes one way or the other.

"Market unsettled." This represents a condition of uncertainty on the part of sellers and usually indicates a weaker tendency.

"Market dull." Represents light trading and suggests a condition of uncertainty and possible depression.

"Market weak." This may be used in describing a condition of actual price decline, with the possibility of further decline, and represents a decided lack of confidence on the part of the seller.

"Market demoralized." This term is to be used only in very unusual cases and represents a condition when stock can not be moved at any price.

As used in the official market news reports, "market" represents the views of the seller and "demand" those of the buyer.

BOLSHEVISM BUILT ON SAND

Movement Is Not Based on Equality, and Without Equality There Can Be No Freedom—Right of Might Unstable.

Article XX.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

On the tenth day of July, 1918, the bolshevik government adopted a constitution. They named the new nation the "Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic." They hung out a flag, a red cloth, in the left corner of which (on top, near the pole) are in golden letters "R. S. F. S. R." The coat of arms of the new Russian government consists of a scarlet background on which a golden scythe and a hammer are placed (crosswise, handles downward) in sun rays and surrounded by a wreath, inscribed: "Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic. Workers of the World, Unite."

The constitution of a country is its foundation. It must be solid and strong if liberty is to be secure. The whole superstructure depends upon the foundation. Government is a house made of laws. You cannot have peace, freedom and order without law. The people who live in the house, the great national family, have a vital interest in the house in which they live. It is their shelter, their security. It is the right of every free man to have a say in the kind of house he is to live in, a voice in the making of the laws he is called upon to obey and maintain. The house of Freedom is one citizen's house as much as it is another's. Without equality there cannot be freedom. Every Russian had an equal right to determine the kind of government that should prevail in his land. The bolshevik government started off by denying the people the right to a say in the form of government of their country. A minority, without consulting the people, without giving them a chance to express their views, forced upon the people a constitution. So the bolshevik government was built on the false foundation of minority rule. The principle that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed was sent to the scrap heap.

Government by Soviets.

The Russian constitution provides for a government of soviets. The word soviet means council. The soviet is a body of political officeholders who run the government. In our country, instead of calling these bodies soviets, we call them township commissioners, village trustees, city councils or the right to vote for delegates to the local rural soviet. This little body has about the same power in shaping the policy of Russia and making the laws that affect life, liberty and property as the township commissioners have in the United States. Their authority is confined to purely local matters. When the "poor peasant" has cast this one lonesome and meaningless vote for a representative in the local rural soviet he is through so far as any direct say in who shall govern him, and how.

Governed by Officeholders.

The "poor peasant," having cast his vote for the local rural soviet, leaves the task of government to the officeholders. The deputies elected to the local rural soviet meet and elect the deputies to the next higher governing unit, the rural soviet. Here we find the first governing body for which the "poor peasant" is denied a vote, but not the last.

The next unit of government in Russia is the county. The people do not have a vote for the delegates to the county soviets. These county commissioners are elected by the members of the city and village soviets and the members of the rural soviets. Here we have government one step removed from the people of the cities and two steps removed from the "poor peasants."

The provincial soviets are elected by the city soviets and the rural soviets. Again the people are without a direct voice in their own government.

The constitution says: "The All Russian congress is the supreme power." This body is the government of Russia takes the place of our congress, our president and the cabinet. It has the supreme legislative and executive power. Do the people have a vote for these all-powerful congressmen? Certainly not. The All-Russian congressmen are elected by the city soviets and by the soviets of the provinces, who were elected by the city and rural soviets, the rural soviets having been elected by the local rural soviets, whose members were elected by the people.

Congress Not Governing Body.

The All-Russian congress is a very large body. The first congress met in 1917. It numbered about 1,200 delegates. The eighth congress is now (January, 1920) in session and the present membership has grown to over two thousand. It is a big, cumbersome body, unfit for deliberative purposes. It is more of a mass meeting, a platform for the relief of those who have speeches burdening their chests. The congress never sits for more than a week. It was never intended to be an organ of government. The constitution tells the story.

Section 28 reads: The All-Russian congress shall elect a central executive committee of not more than 200 members." This takes the government another step from the people.

Section 30 says: "When the All-Russian congress is not in session, the central executive committee is the supreme power of the republic." But we have not reached the end of the journey from the people to the seat of power.

Section 35 reads: "The central executive committee shall select a council of people's commissars who shall manage the affairs of the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic."

But let us read on:

Section 37: "The council of people's commissars is intrusted with the general management of the affairs of the republic."

Section 38: "For the accomplishment of this task the people's commissars shall issue decrees, resolutions, orders, and in general take all steps necessary for the proper and rapid conduct of government affairs."

Section 40: "The central executive committee has the right to revoke or suspend all orders and resolutions of the council of people's commissars."

But a "note" to this section of the constitution reads: "Measures requiring immediate action may be enacted directly by the council of people's commissars."

Without Voice in Government.

The council of people's commissars is 17 in number. The people had no voice in selecting the people's commissars; they were not given a choice in picking the central executive committee; they were not allowed to vote for the All-Russian congressmen; in the rural districts the "poor peasants" were not even allowed to vote for the men who selected the men who in turn selected the congressmen.

At the head of the "Sacred Seventeen" is the chief of state, Lenine. At his right hand sits Trotsky, commissar of force in charge of the army and navy. When I think of the part the people play in this newest form of "free" government and the distance they are kept from their country's affairs, I cannot help but see them through this constitution as though I were looking at them through the wrong end of a pair of opera glasses.

Truly it is a long way from the people to the throne of Lenine. The people make only the first and shortest step. There are five long and important steps between the "poor peasants" and the power, and three between the city voters and the real government of Russia.

The bolshevik government is a government of officeholders, for officeholders and by officeholders. It is Lincoln's formula reversed. I have heard it said that democratic government is a failure because political officeholders do not truly represent the people. There is some truth in the statement, but the people have a remedy; the system is not at fault. I cannot understand the logic for the faith that a government which provides three or five additional sets of officeholders between the people and the government will make things better.

Title Conveys Much Meaning.

The title people's commissar is full of meaning. It is obese with power. The title is copyrighted in the constitution.

In December, 1918, Lenine addressed a letter to the American workingmen in which he said:

"Let incurable pedants, crammed full of bourgeois democratic and parliamentary prejudices, shake their heads gravely over our soviet; let them deplore the fact that we have no direct elections."

I suggest that Lenine put the soviet plan before organized labor in the United States and ask the union card carriers of America to give up direct elections in their labor unions and accept a scheme of government for their unions modeled after the bolshevik plan, and see how many followers he will get. The rank and file of the labor movement guard jealously their right to a voice and vote for measures and men.

Lenine is a master machinist. If he can prove that he designed and built the soviet steam roller I know where he can get a job when he quits Moscow.

What wouldn't Tammany give for the services of Lenine?

LESSON TEXT—I Sam. 16:1-13.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward. —I Sam. 16:13.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Ps. 2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of a Shepherd Boy.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Kingly Shepherd Boy.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC —The Possibilities of Youth.

I. The Lord Rebuked Samuel for Excessive Grief (v. 1).

It was a bitter experience for Samuel to pronounce God's judgment upon Saul. The cause of Samuel's grief was threefold:

1. The wreck of a promising life. In all history, perhaps, a life with greater promise cannot be found, and yet it affords no example of a more wretched failure.

2. A personal loss. No doubt as the spiritual adviser of the king, Samuel found many things in him to admire. His removal, therefore, Samuel most keenly felt.

3. Anxiety for the national welfare. Samuel knew quite well that a change of dynasty oftentimes meant severe war and the reign of anarchy. This would very seriously weaken the already weak kingdom. His concern for the people's good was therefore a part of his grief. One can readily see why Samuel should mourn, but as a prophet of God he should not have indulged to excess. The Lord's question "How long will thou mourn for Saul?" has in it a rebuke for Samuel. Grief for others is a sacred thing, but whenever it is carried so far as to interfere with one's duty it becomes sinful.

II. Samuel Sent to Bethlehem to Anoint Saul's Successor (vv. 1-5).

Though Saul failed, God is able to provide a successor who is better than he. Samuel is directed to go to Bethlehem and from among the sons of Jesse choose a successor. Samuel again showed his weakness in expressing his fear lest Saul should kill him. If God sends a man on an errand what matters it though a thousand Saul's be waiting to kill him? Even though it means death, if God sends, who dare refuse or offer excuse? God instructed him to avoid publicity by the concealment of his real purpose. Some may question the diplomacy of Samuel, but we must remember that no one is under obligation to tell all that he knows, especially to parties who have no moral right to know. To withhold truth which is necessary morally to tell is duplicity which dare not be practiced. God allowed Samuel to hide his true errand under the cloak of a sacrifice in order to shelter his weakness. The whole matter was already decided; the moral acts were already committed; the issues were already faced. The exposure of Samuel to the murderous hatred of Saul would have only made matters worse.

III. The Method of God's Choice (vv. 6-12).

The elders of Bethlehem were somewhat alarmed when Samuel came. He, in the exercise of his judgeship, went from place to place, and at times he doubtless had to deal in severity with the people. He calmed their fears by assuring them that he came peaceably, even to worship God. While the preparation for the sacrifice was being made, Samuel seems to have had the interview with Jesse and his sons. When the eldest of Jesse's sons passed before him he decided that this stalwart young man must be God's choice, but God told him that man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart. We should learn, like Samuel was obliged to do, that the qualifications in God's sight for workers are inward, not bodily. The one who does God's work must do it by leaning upon him, not through personal strength or endowments. To the utter surprise of Samuel and Jesse, David the shepherd boy, was chosen.

IV. Samuel Anoints David (v. 13).

When this stripling of a boy came before Samuel, the Lord indicated his choice. Samuel proceeded to anoint him. This anointing typified the endowment of the Holy Spirit, which is essential for any and all service for God. The preparation which David needed for the office of king was just what he got as a shepherd boy. God's choices are not arbitrary. As king, his responsibility was to defend, feed, and lead God's flock, and this he had learned to do as he attended his father's flock. This promotion of the shepherd boy should be an encouragement for boys of lowly station in life.

If You Want to Be Miserable.

"If you want to be miserable, you must think about yourself, about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay you, and then to you nothing will be pure. You will spoil everything you touch. You will make sin and misery out of everything which God sends you. You will be as wretched as you choose."

Mount McKinley, the Oregon mountain, is sinking with the weight of ages. Within the last several years, when the peak shrugged its rocky shoulders in earthquakes, the loftiest mountain in North America has subsided at least 500 feet from its original altitude of 20,400 feet. Such was the assertion of Herschel C. Parker, geologist and mining engineer, who first scaled Mount McKinley in 1912.

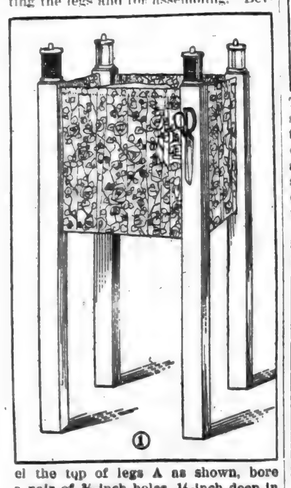
A SEWING-STAND AND A WASTE-BASKET.

The handy sewing-stand shown in Fig. 1 is a manual-training problem, well adapted to both home and school work. It requires little material, and the construction is so simple that the parts may be put together quickly. Four legs, 1¼ inches square, by 22 inches long (Fig. 2), eight carpenter's dowel sticks, ⅜-inch in diameter, and 10⅛ inches long for connecting crosspieces B, and four pegs ¾-inch in diameter and 2 inches long for spool spindles C, are all the wood that is required. For covering material, a square yard of cloth is needed.

For the legs I would suggest that you use oak, chestnut, ash, pine or cypress.

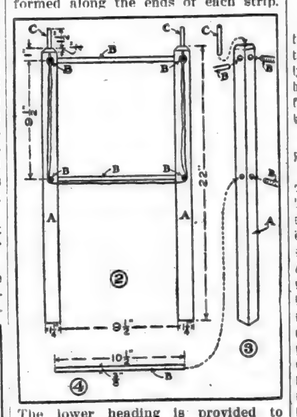
Fig. 2 shows a section through the sewing-stand, with dimensions for cutting the legs and for assembling. Bevel the top of legs A as shown, bore a pair of ⅜-inch holes, ½-inch deep in each of two sides, to receive the ends of the connecting dowel sticks B (Fig. 3), and bore a ¼-inch hole ½-inch deep in the top of each leg to receive the end of the spool spindle C. The holes must be bored carefully, so that they will be exactly at right angles.



With the parts prepared and sandpapered smooth, coat the ends of dowel sticks B with glue, and drive them into the holes in legs A. Also coat the lower end of the spool spindle pegs C with glue, and drive them into the tops of the legs.

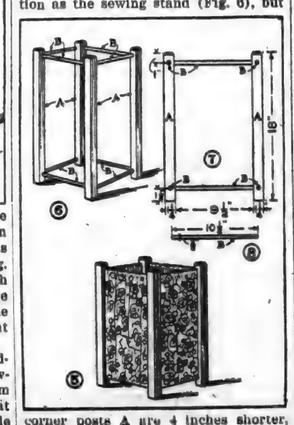
Before putting on the covering, the woodwork must be finished. I would suggest that you stain the wood, then wax it, or that you white enamel it.

Cretonne or denim is best for covering the sewing-basket sides. A square yard cut in half, making two strips 18 inches wide and 1 yard long is enough goods. A double heading should be formed along the ends of each strip.



The lower heading is provided to slip over an upper dowel B. Extend each strip from an upper dowel, down to and around the lower dowels and up to the upper dowel on the opposite side. As the strips cross one another, they form a double bottom to the sewing stand.

The waste basket illustrated in Fig. 5 has the same framework construction as the sewing stand (Fig. 6), but corner posts A are 4 inches shorter, and dowel crosspieces B are 15½ inches apart instead of 9½ inches (Fig. 7). The length of the dowel crosspieces is shown in Fig. 8.



For covering the waste basket, you will require half a yard more material than was used for the sewing stand.

PUPIL USED HIS HEAD.

The sergeant instructor was suspicious and angry. "Why aren't you working out the sum—you've got a pen and paper, haven't you?" he demanded.

The pupil replied that he supposed the only thing required was the answer, and he had furnished it, and so saved paper.

"Yes, but where did you get the answer from—who told you?" he was asked by the puzzled instructor. "I did it in my head," he was assured.

"Oh, that's simply swank!" retorted his master. But in course of time he found that his "pupil" did know something of the matter in hand—and promoted him. "You shall read out the sum to the rest," he said.—London Chronicle.

LADY LARKSPUR

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons

"YOU SCOUNDREL!"

Synopsis.—Richard Searles, successful American playwright, confides to his friend, Bob Singleton, the fact that, inspired by the genius of a young actress whom he had seen in London, he has written a play, "Lady Larkspur," solely with the thought that she should interpret the leading character. This girl, Violet Dewing, has disappeared. Singleton, an aviator, has just returned (invalided) from France. His uncle, Raymond Bashford, had contracted a marriage a short time before his death, while on a visit to Japan. He left Singleton a comparatively small amount of money and the privilege of residing in the "garage" of his summer home, Barton-on-the-Sound, Connecticut. Mrs. Bashford is believed to be traveling in the Orient. The household at Barton is made up of broken-down employees of a New York hotel, where Bashford made his home. Singleton goes to Barton, taking with him the manuscript of "Lady Larkspur." There he finds the household strangely upset, some of its members being suspected by their comrades of pro-Germanism. Antoine, head of the establishment, informs him that he has been perplexed by the somewhat mysterious visits of a stranger, apparently a foreigner, seeking Mrs. Bashford. Antoine has formed the male members of the household into a guard for protection. Singleton reads Searles' play with approval. "Aunt Alice" arrives unexpectedly, meets with a lively reception and turns out to be young and charming. Mrs. Farnsworth is her traveling companion. Torrence, Bashford's lawyer, suspects the two women and warns Singleton "Aunt Alice" may be an impostor. The mysterious stranger, Count Montani, makes a call and is seen to be very much interested in "Aunt Alice's" ostrich-plume fan, which has been repaired by a jeweler in Japan. Singleton is fascinated by "Aunt Alice." Antoine reports a "spy" has been tempting a woman servant to steal the fan.

I had noticed that she had substituted a tiny Japanese fan for the one that Montani had inspected so eagerly. When I spoke of the change she had said the other was too precious for everyday use, and she meant to keep it locked up.

"I hate to bother you, sir, knowing you—"

The mention of the fan had brought me to an abrupt halt. I resented having the thing thrust at me in the ecstatic mood in which I left the house, but the visit of the German-speaking stranger was serious, and Antoine knew that his story had startled me. He told me further that the man had carefully outlined to Elsie just how she could take advantage of her freedom of the house to appropriate the fan when the ladies were out and the servants off the second floor. She was to be paid for her assistance; two hundred dollars had been promised; even more had been suggested. Elsie and the stranger had left the garage and passed out of earshot before Elsie fully consented; but Pierre had given Antoine the impression that she would make the attempt.

"It was to be for the kaiser, for Germany," declared Antoine bitterly. "And she was to be careful about Flynn. I always thought Flynn was straight—I did indeed, sir!"

"I think Flynn and his wife are both honest, but we'll take no chance. Warn the guards to be on the alert. We don't want Elsie to get the idea that she's being watched; so tell the men to keep away from the garage. I'll keep an eye on the Flynns. You go home and go to bed. . . ."

The deep calm of the country night had settled upon the shore, and the Flynns' quarters were perfectly tranquil. It didn't seem possible that an international episode was in process of incubation in that quiet neighborhood. I began to think that the general distrust of the German woman by her associates might be responsible for Pierre's story. But, viewed in any light, I had a duty to perform. If Elsie had visited the house and purloined the fan, she would be very likely to get rid of it as quickly as possible, and I determined to keep watch. I drew the blinds, got into my dressing gown and, re-enforcing the lampshade with a newspaper to deaden the light, proceeded to read.

It was on toward one o'clock and I was dozing when a sound roused me. A door on the Flynn side of the hall creaked; there was silence, then I heard furtive steps on the stair. I snapped out my light and peered out of the window just as Elsie's robust figure disappeared into the shadows. I was about to follow when the creaking of the Flynn door was repeated. In a moment another peep through the shade showed me Flynn himself, and he, too, quickly vanished. Here was a situation indeed! If Elsie was keeping tryst with her co-conspirator of the afternoon and her husband was spying upon her, a row of large proportions was likely to result at any moment. I leaned from the window as far as I dared and saw the woman close to the wall at the farther end of the building. The scene was well set for trouble, and I was wondering what I could do to avert the disturbance and the exposure of the foolish woman when the whole matter was taken out of my hands.

"You fool! You scoundrel!" she bellowed in German. "That you should think me a plaything to commit a robbery for you! That I should steal from my mistress to satisfy you, you piece of swine-flesh!"

I had often heard Elsie vocally disciplining her Irish husband and knew the power of her lungs and the vigor of her invective, but she seemed bent upon apprising the whole commonwealth of Connecticut of the fact that she was vastly displeased with the person she was addressing, who was certainly not Flynn. Amid sounds of a scuffle and the continuous outpouring of billingsgate the light over the garage door flashed on suddenly and disclosed Flynn in the act of precipitating himself into the fray. Elsie had grasped, and was stoutly clinging to a tall man who was trying to free himself of her muscular embrace. Her cries meanwhile included some of the raciest terms in the German dictionary and others—mouthfuls of frightfulness—that I didn't recognize.

When I reached the open Flynn was dancing round the belligerents like an excited boxer, occasionally springing in to land a blow; and all the while Elsie continued to address her captive and the world at large in her native tongue. Flynn was rather more than sixty, and Elsie was not much his junior, while the invader was young and agile. The man had loosened one arm and drawn a revolver with which he was pounding Elsie in the face. I knocked the gun from his hand with my walking-stick and shouted to Elsie to let go of him. Her shouts had roused the guards and, hearing answering cries and the beat of hurrying feet on the walks, he redoubled his efforts to escape. I had hardly got my hands on him when with a twist of his body he wrenched himself free and sped away in the darkness.

I hadn't gone far in pursuit of him before I tripped over the skirts of my dressing gown and fell into a bed of cannas. This would have been less melancholy if Flynn, hard behind, hadn't stumbled over me and, believing he had captured the enemy, gripped my legs until I could persuade him to let go.

Flung Him Backward Over the Stone Curbing.

The lights now flared on all the walks and driveways, and Antoine was bellowing orders to the guards to surround the sunken garden. I surmised that the fugitive, surprised by the attack, had lost his bearings and was now far from the boundary wall back of the garage from which presumably he had entered the grounds. With the Sound cutting off his exit beyond the residence, there was a fair chance of catching him if Antoine's veterans were at all vigilant.

I found Antoine, armed with a club and swinging a lantern, majestically posed at the nearer entrance to the garden. With a swallow-tail coat over his nightshirt and his nightcap tipped over one ear, he was an enthralling figure. As he strode toward me his slippers flapped weirdly upon the brick walk. "There's somebody in the garden, sir," he whispered huskily. "The troops has it surrounded." No general in all history, reporting in some critical hour the disposition of his army, could have been more composed.

"You have done well, Antoine. Shall you dig in until morning or go over the top now?"

"As you say, sir. It's better you should take charge."

I walked round the garden and found his men well distributed, but the old fellows were exceedingly nervous. "It's a bit suspicious, sir, that he broke for the garden," remarked Antoine.

"He broke for the garden," I suggested, "because his line of retreat was cut off and he had to go somewhere."

"It's queer, though, sir, when Dutch has been sleeping on the long bench down there by the fountain. You know how we feel about him, sir, he being of that race."

"Dutch told me he was camping in the toolhouse," I answered.

"The boys drove him out, sir, and he took to the garden."

"Nasty of the boys, I should say. If that interloper should murder him—"

A yell rose from the midst of the garden, followed by a crash and an instant later by a splash that interrupted another yell. I snatched Antoine's lantern and ran down the steps toward the scene of commotion. When I reached the circular pool the jet was still playing gayly, but the waters on one side were in furious agitation. Two men were rolling and tumbling about as though bent upon drowning each other. I swung the lantern over them just as Dutch got upon his feet, gripping his antagonist by the collar. He flung him backward over the stone curbing of the pool and fell upon him in the walk with a swish of wet garments. The guards from the outer edges of the garden had clambered down and they gathered about us as I began questioning Dutch.

Dutch, undoubtedly enjoying his victorious encounter, was tearing open the prostrate captive's collar to give him air and with his knees clamping the man's body was disposed to delay the story of his adventures to increase its dramatic effect.

"It happens this evenin'," he began, spouting water, "that I seen Elsie, who's been sneakin' me meals to the old stables, an' she says to me: 'Dutch,' she says, 'they's all ag'in us here, callin' us Huns, an' we gotta show 'em we's good Americans,' she says. An' she tole me a feller been to see 'er 'at wanter 'er to rob the house fer 'im, he thinkin' 'er likely to do ut fer love o' the kaiser. She said as 'ow she'd nail 'im when he comes tonight to git a fan she's promised to lift fer 'im. She said that'd prove she wasn't no Dutchwoman and recommended if I got the chance to do the same. I thought nothin' wuz goin' to happen an' wuz sleepin' on me bench here in the garden when the hollerin' at the garage woke me up. I sits quiet, listenin' an' this guy drops into the garden an' wuz crawlin' past me bench an' I pinches 'im. He wuz fer havin' a fight an' we knocks over one of the big urns an' lit in the tank. He says it's a thousand bones an' ye turn me loose, he says, an' I soused 'im ag'in fer that."

The man was still choking from the sousing and Dutch turned him over and pounded him vigorously on the back, assisted by Zimmerman, the obliging valet, who had seized the occasion to show his hand on the side of the allies. "Shall I telephone for the Barton police, sir?" asked Antoine, with an extreme exaggeration of his professional manner.

This was obviously the thing to do, but I feigned not to hear the question while I debated the matter. It was plain that many things relating to the capture were veiled in mystery; that if Mrs. Bashford and her companion were involved in an international tangle and had in their possession something that vitally concerned the nations at war, common chivalry demanded that I handle the arrest of Montani's agent in such a manner as to shield them. I was thinking hard and in my perplexity even considered sending a messenger to Torrence; but he was already suspicious and would be very likely to summon Raynor immediately and precipitate a crisis I was not prepared to face. To invite the attention of the American state department to the increasingly complex situation would not be giving my aunt the chance I meant she should have to clear herself.

The captive had got upon his feet and stood dazedly staring at us. He refused to answer my questions, even when I suggested that if he could give a satisfactory account of himself he would be released. He only doggedly shook his head. When I asked if he had been hurt in his bout with Dutch he smiled and extended his arms in denial. He was a very decent-looking fellow, blue-eyed and smooth-shaven, who seemed to accept his plight with a degree of good humor.

I decided that as nothing would be gained by sending him to the Barton calaboose that night, I would assume the responsibility of detaining him until I had groped my way through the haze of suspicions and circumstances that enveloped him.

"Aunt Alice," Count Montani and the mysterious fan.

A LETTER FOR WOMEN

From a Woman Whose Serious Illness Was Overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Garnett, Kas.—"I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a complete nervous breakdown following the birth of my oldest child. I got up too soon which caused serious female trouble. I was so weak that I was not able to be on my feet but very little and could not do my housework at all. I had a bad pain in my left side and it would pain terribly if I stepped off a curb-stone. One day one of your booklets was thrown in the yard and I read every word in it. There were so many who had been helped by your medicine that I wanted to try it and my husband went to town and got me a bottle. It seemed as though I felt relief after the second dose, so I kept on until I had taken five bottles and by that time I was as well as I could wish. About a year later I gave birth to a ten pound boy, and have had two more children since and my health has been fine. If I ever have trouble of any kind I am going to take your medicine for I give it all the praise for my good health. I always recommend your medicine whenever I can."—Mrs. EVA E. SHAY, Garnett, Kansas.

Each Has Special Gift.

Degrees infinite of luster there must always be, but the weakest among us has a gift, however seemingly trivial, which is peculiar to him, and which, worthily used, will be a gift, also, to his race forever.—John Ruskin.

Both Had Fits.

Wife—I never had a better fit in a dress.

Husband—I never had a worse fit than when I saw the bill.—London Answers.

Backache Slowing You Up?

Are you dragging along with a dull, throbbing backache? Feel lame mornings, tired all day; suffer torturing twinges at every move? Often the kidneys are to blame. A cold, strain or overwork congests the kidneys; poisons accumulate and mysterious aches and pains result. You may have headaches and dizzy spells, too, with perhaps bladder irregularity. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor!

An Indiana Case

John Ostheimer, stationary engineer, 607 Milligan St., Crawfordsville, Ind., says: "My back was sore and lame and when I got up out of a chair the sharp pains that went through my kidneys would almost make me fall. At night I couldn't sleep for hours because of the dragging backache. This kept me in a worn-out, tired condition. I purchased Doan's Kidney Pills and after taking a few boxes I felt strong and well again."

Prayed for Cure
Finds it After 10 Years
Food Would Sour and Boil —Teeth Like Chalk

Mr. Herbert M. Gessner writes from his home in Berlin, N. H.:

I had stomach trouble over ten years; kept getting worse. I tried everything for relief but it came back worse than ever. Last fall I got awfully bad; could only eat light loaf bread and tea. In January I got so bad that what I would eat would sour and boil; my teeth would be like chalk. I suffered terribly. I prayed every day for something to cure me. One day I read about EATONIC and told my wife to get me a box at the drug store as I was going to work at 4 p. m. I took one-third of it and began to feel relief; when it was three-fourths gone, I felt fine and when it was used up I had no pains. Wife got me another box but I have felt the pain but twice. I used five tablets out of the new box and I have no more stomach trouble. Now I write to tell you how thankful I am that I heard of EATONIC. I feel like a new man; I eat what I like, drink plenty of water, and it never hurts me at all.

Killing Power!

Anything that kills — from fire-arms to poison—is dangerous. The safety factor is an important consideration in manufacture.

The minute you detract from the killing power of Arsenate of Lead you are not getting what you pay for. Consequently—the first consideration in the making of Ansbacher's Arsenate of Lead has been quick, certain death to the insects. At the same time the amount of free arsenic has been so minimized that it won't injure a leaf of the most delicate foliage. It is death to bugs and harmless to plants. It's a safe insecticide.

It stays in suspension in the spray and does more without costing more.

The Ansbacher name is your guarantee of quality and under this brand names those exceptionally effective Paris Green and Bordeaux Mixture.

BULL HAS MADE ROWAN COUNTY FAMOUS

Antoinette's Itchen Rose King, the $15,000 Guernsey Bull Owned by the Rowan County (N. C.) Bull Association.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Who discovered Rowan county?

Was it the county agent, the state and dairy division field men, or the farmers themselves? All of these people had a hand in putting Rowan county on the cattle breeders' map. Here is how it happened.

In January, 1918, two field men representing the state of North Carolina and the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture, held a series of meetings in North Carolina, going out from the towns to the country schoolhouses and talking about bull associations. The county agent of Rowan county became interested, and an association was organized at Salisbury, with a progressive and practical farmer as president, for the purpose of purchasing and owning high quality, purebred Guernsey bulls in common.

That bull association has made Rowan county famous; and the fame is based on actual beneficial results. At the beginning there were only 15 purebred Guernseys in the whole county; now there are 209. Over $75,000 worth of purebreds were brought into the county in 20 months. The membership of the association has gradually enlarged until now there are members in every township of the county. Their number now is 219, and they own 670 cows. These men are not experienced breeders, but the breeding operations are guided by a man who is perhaps the most experienced breeder in the community. The assessment per cow was at first $5. It was thought advisable to raise this to $7.50, but before doing so the fact was made public that up to a certain date new members would be accepted at the old rate; and at the time 45 persons joined the association.

Inquiries for Stock Pour In.

Before the association was started Rowan county had no wide reputation; it had no special reputation at all; but very soon after the organization was formed it began to get inquiries for stock. These came from many parts of the country, and it kept the county agent busy to take care of the correspondence. As this took place before any attempt had been made to advertise, it was apparent that the association in itself had a strong advertising value. The breeders when working singly undoubtedly had good surplus stock for sale, but they found difficulty in selling, because they had only the local market; but the bull association opened up the whole country as a market.

The reputation made for the county reached distant states. Five graduates of the college of agriculture in Arkansas are making inquiries with a view to going to Rowan county to live, because they want to live and farm in this progressive locality. A number of soldiers returning from the war are looking to Rowan county as a good place to engage in dairy farming.

Getting After T. B.

Tuberculosis, that bane of cattle raising, is being attacked in earnest. These farmers, with their fine stock and fine reputation, are not going to run the risk of losing both from this disease. Testing is going on according to the accredited herd plan, and the test for tuberculosis has been administered by the federal authorities to 1,600 animals. That the disease has not gained a foothold in that region is shown by the fact that only a fraction of 1 per cent reacted.

Last fall the association members exhibited 106 head of purebred Guernseys at the Salisbury fair. There were 16 heifers in one class. Breeders from various sections of the country who had herds of the same line of breeding as the herds in the association were invited to the fair.

Offered $15,000 for One Bull.

Among other visitors to the county was a prominent breeder from New York state, who was looking for a herd bull. He was interested in one of the association bulls, who was the son of a $20,000 bull, and, who had himself sired a number of good heifers. None of these heifers had as yet made a record, but their conformation indicated that they were of excellent quality. The visitor saw the bull and his daughters, and finally offered $15,000 for him. The association members thought this was a pretty good offer, and were inclined to accept it; but the county agent remonstrated. "North Carolina," he said, "needs for its own use the very best breeding stock it can get, and we ought not to part with this excellent animal." The price, however, was so attractive that it was hard to hold them back.

The New York breeder wanted the bull, and finally succeeded in securing the use of the animal for two years for a payment of $1,000. In addition to this he gave the association the use of his own herd bull for two years, presented the association with two young bulls aged seven and eighteen months, respectively, and insured the association bull for 30 days, to cover the period of transportation. He will insure it again for the return trip at the end of two years. He also paid the expenses of a man to go with the bull and the cost of transportation of all four bulls. The association still has other good bulls, including one for which they refused $2,000.

This exchange is an extension of the principle of saving tested bulls and using them on other herds. If this principle could be fully applied by individual farmers working separately, it would serve the purpose; but it is too difficult for the individual to find other individuals with whom to exchange.

Then, again, buyers apparently have more confidence in breeders selling through an association. The association is known; it has its reputation to protect, and the stranger feels safe in buying stock through an organization.

Too Late—The Butcher Got Him.

The success of the Rowan county association in exchanging and marketing its tried bulls is in marked contrast with the common experience of breeders who send their good bulls to the block because they do not know how good a bull's daughters are until he is dead. The following is a typical instance of such a loss: The son of one of the greatest breeding bulls in the country, and out of one of the greatest breeding cows, was sold for a large price at a recent annual sale. Later, a prospective buyer who was looking for a good herd bull found that another son of this great breeding bull, and out of the dam of the great breeding cow—that is, out of the grandam of the bull mentioned before—had been sold to a farmer in Kansas. Because of the extraordinary breeding ability of the sire and dam of this second bull, it was thought that their son should also become a great sire, and the buyer approached the Kansas farmer, but found, alas, that the farmer had sold him, and the latest owner of this promising young bull was a butcher, who did with him as butchers do—and that was the end of the matter.

There are numberless instances of this sort, but they do not occur in bull associations.

WEIGHT OF BUSHEL OF CORN

Most State Laws Recognize 70 Pounds of Ears or 56 Pounds of Shelled as Standard.

The laws of most of the states recognize 70 pounds of ears or 56 pounds of shelled corn as a bushel of corn. These weights are reliable, says the United States department of agriculture, when the ears or shelled corn contain only 15 per cent of water. About one-third the weight of ear corn as customarily harvested in the northern states is water, while that harvested in the drier sections of the South contains less than 15 per cent of water.

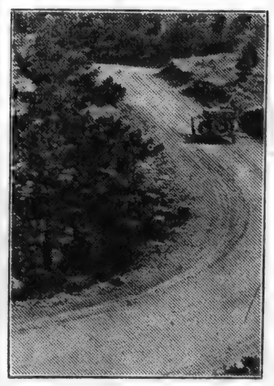
GOOD ROADS

ROADS IN NATIONAL FORESTS

Thirty Thousand Miles Will Be Needed in Next Ten Years for Proper Development.

Thirty thousand miles of road, estimated to cost not less than $150,000,000, will be needed for the proper protection and development of the national forests, and the near-by communities during the next ten years, according to comprehensive road plans which have been prepared. The secretary of agriculture has already approved the construction of 5,152 miles, estimated to cost $26,463,000, contingent upon federal and co-operative funds becoming available. Government expenditures of $15,740,000 have been authorized for this purpose.



On the Floyd Hill Road, Near Denver, Colo.

The roads comprised in the comprehensive road plans form the basis of the ultimate national forest road system. They are used as main highways, either in connection with through routes or to serve important local needs. The construction of feeder roads is being largely postponed until the primary road system of the national forests is completed. It is expected that the present estimate cost will be largely exceeded when surveys are made of the projects now on the list, since in many cases the only available estimates are based upon incomplete data.

FARMER AND GOOD HIGHWAYS

Has Become Hard Working and Voting Enthusiast for Improved Roads Because of Many Benefits.

The biggest booster for good roads in the country today is the farmer. A few years ago he felt that the portion of his taxes used in the construction of permanent highways represented a benefit only to the motoring tourist and the city automobile owner, writes H. W. Slauson in Leslie's. The farmer argued that he was paying for their pleasures, and the result was a superstition against the good roads movement.

Now, however, when the farmer finds that his land has trebled in value; when the merchandise for which he has telephoned in the morning can be delivered by noon of the same day; when the market for his own produce is brought hours nearer; when the winter and its following spring thaw possess no terrors for him—all this because of the improved highway which makes his farm only a suburb, as it were, of the nearest city—he naturally becomes a hardworking and hard-voting enthusiast for good roads.

GRAVEL GOOD FOR HIGHWAYS

When Properly Handled It Can Be Traveled Over All Year—Dirt Road Is Different.

While gravel, as a rule, does not make the best type of road, that is not so much the fault of the gravel as of the way it is put on. It is usually not evenly spread or leveled down, nor are the holes kept filled. If properly handled a gravel road can at least be traveled on any time of the year, which cannot be said of a dirt road.

FARM ROADS MADE OF EARTH

No Good Reason Why They Should Not Be Graded Up and Maintained in Good Condition.

The vast majority of the farm roads must necessarily be of earth. However, there is no reason why they cannot be graded up somewhat after the fashion of a public highway and maintained in that condition.

FARM ROADS ARE ESSENTIAL

Just as Important as Public Thoroughfares in Hauling Various Kinds of Crops.

Many of us know the value of good public roads, but how many of us know the value of good roads on the farm? Experience has taught that good roads on the private farm are just as essential and important as good public roads.

CURRENT WIT and HUMOR

HAD HIS DOUBT.

The Counsellor—What, you broke after having a hand in that big box job? I thought you fellows had a gentlemen's agreement to share the loot.

The Yegg—We had. But I suspect some of the parties to it were no gentlemen.

Her Reason.

"I wish I had psychic powers."

"Why so?"

"Because I am crazy for a car, and then I could give my husband auto suggestions."

Modest.

Ethel—I understand she was very modest at her birthday.

Helen—Well, I should say so; she didn't have half as many candles as she ought to have had on her cake.

Intelligence.

Doctor—Did you give the patient the insomnia medicine I ordered?

Amateur Nurse—Yes, doctor, but he got so mad whenever I woke him up to give it to him.

Where Mystery Reigns.

Biggs—What do you usually eat in this restaurant?

Higgs—Don't ask me; ask the cook. I simply order from the menu.

Natural Affinity.

"Why is it that widow seems to attract the horsey element?"

"Probably because she is a grass widow."

TEST OF NERVES.

First Doctor—How are that patient's nerves?

Second Doctor—Fine; he can read all the headlines in the daily paper now without a tremor.

Think of Others.

When on the slippery street you set
Your feet and get a twist,
Think of what fun the others get;
Just be an altruist.

An Agreement.

"The court gave that convicted rascal a suspended sentence."

"So did the lynching mob. They hanged him."

Not in the Race.

Belle—I wouldn't marry the best man on earth.

Nell—Of course, you wouldn't. Somebody else long ago beat you to it.

An Enthusiast.

"Cleanliness can be carried too far."

"Impossible."

"It can. If I don't stop her, my wife would scour the lettuce with soap."

One Assurance.

"Do you think the tale Miss Flirty told you was made up on the face of it?"

"Maybe not, but she was."

Often In One.

Heck—My wife has a great fondness for pets; has yours?

Peck—That depends on whether you refer to animals or the mood.

Its Financial State.

"That couple have just come back from their wedding trip dead broke."

"Ah! So the honeymoon has got to its last quarter."

Exact Locality.

Lawyer—Officer, did you catch the prisoner in flagrante delicto?

Policeman—No, sir; I caught him in the back alley.

Pertinent Illustration.

"What have you there?"

"A booklet entitled, 'Short Cuts to Riches.'"

"Ah! I see there's a mountain of dollars on the cover. To be consistent, there should be the picture of a penitentiary on the back."

Why He Was Sent to Bed.

"Pa, what is an anarchist?"

"One who thinks there should be no government and no authority, my son."

"Then, pa, is ma an anarchist?"

ITCH!

A WAR-TIME ILL THAT'S SPREADING HUNT'S SALVE CURES IT!

BRED in the war trenches of Europe, a wave of ordinary ITCH is spreading over the country. This skin disease, history shows, has always prevailed, following wars and the concentration of armies. It was common during the Civil War and following that conflict. There was an epidemic of the Itch after the Spanish-American War. Now history is repeating itself after the great European struggle.

Returned soldiers and those with whom they come in contact will find a recognized remedy for the Itch in Hunt's Salve, commonly known as "Hunt's Itch Cure." Many a veteran of the late '90's will testify to its merits.

If directions are followed HUNT'S SALVE will prove a never failing cure for all forms of the Itch, and your druggist will tell you so. He sells HUNT'S SALVE under a strict guarantee to refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied user.

A Medford, Oklahoma man, among thousands who praise HUNT'S SALVE, says:

"Some people dislike to call it the Itch, but candor compels me to admit I had it badly. Your Hunt's Salve, however, cured me after many other remedies had totally failed. One box completed the cure—the first application afforded wonderful relief. My advice to those who have to scratch, is to use Hunt's Salve."

Hunt's Salve is especially compounded for the treatment of Itch, Eczema, Ringworm, Tetter and other itching skin diseases and is sold on our guarantee by all reliable drug stores, or it will be sent direct by mail if your local druggist cannot supply. Price 75c per box.

One day her hat touched her nose; next week it rested on the back of her neck. Her last frock barely covered her shoe tops, her new ones huddled round her ankles. Oh, she was always "it!"

Her husband was no passive resister. Regularly he raised his voice in protest at each craving after fashion. But the one thing that really annoyed him was when she suddenly scraped her hair straight back from her forehead on top and trained it down like window curtains on each side of her face.

"Look here!" he said in exasperation. "Can't I induce you to stop wearing your hair over your ears?"

"Certainly!" she replied, with a charming smile. "Buy me diamond earrings."

WANTED IT AS A WARNING

Old Gentleman Had Particular Use for That Peculiarly Atrocious-Looking Beetle.

On the counter of the Christmas bazaar stood all the usual horrors which an unscrupulous world insists on giving the poor kiddies as "toys." There were animals, birds and insects which resembled nothing save the creatures of a particularly fierce nightmare.

The customer steadied himself by a chair and, after a careful selection, picked up one specially terrible beetle.

"I'll take that," he told the assistant.

"How much is it?"

"Half a dollar!" replied the girl. "Is it for your little boy?"

"No; I want to take it to a dinner party I have to attend."

"Whatever for?" exclaimed the girl, surprised out of her carefully acquired calm.

"Well, I'm going to stand it in front of me on the table when the drinks are going round and when I see two beetles—well, it's time to go home!"

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Womens' complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

HOW TO LIVE

Common Sense Comments on Health, Happiness and Longevity

By GEORGE F. BUTLER, A. M., M. D.

Copyright, 1920, by International Press Bureau

SUNSHINE.

There is no better medicine, no greater purifier, no better friend to good health, cleanliness and long life than sunshine. Sunshine costs nothing, is refreshing, invigorating, life-giving to both sick and well. People somehow have got the idea that nothing is valuable that does not cost something, and are apt to value all blessings by the money value they present. It is as well always to bear in mind that the three greatest blessings humanity receives—sunlight, pure air and water—are all free to all; they are everywhere and can be had without money and without price. If you would enjoy good health, see that you have pure air to breathe all the time, that you receive the direct benefit of the sunshine an hour or two every day, and that you quench your thirst with nothing but pure water. Houses should be so built that every room occupied for living or sleeping purposes shall receive the full benefit of direct sunlight at some time of the day. The sleeping rooms should be large and roomy, and, if possible, an eastern exposure to receive the benefit of the morning sun. Too many shade trees too close to the house are an injury rather than a benefit, and should be removed if they prevent free access of the sunlight to all the rooms. Let in the sunshine that is struggling with blinds, shades and awnings, and let it do its blessed work of purification.

Very intimate relations exist between the sun and digestion. Digestion and assimilation become weak and imperfect if the man or animal is not freely exposed to the direct rays of the sun. No plant or animal can digest in the dark. Plant a potato in your cellar. If there is a little light, that potato will sprout and try to grow. But surround it with the best manure, water it, do the best for it, only you shall keep it in the dark, it cannot digest and grow. See how slender and pale it is. Now open a window in another part of the cellar, and notice how the poor, hungry thing will stretch that way. Or give the stalk a little twist, and see how it will lie down. It can't raise itself again. No matter how much food and drink you give it, it can't digest. The process of digestion, the great function of assimilation, can't go on without sunshine. Did you ever notice that grain growing under trees is not so large and does not fill as well as that growing in the open where there is plenty of sunshine?

The white light of the sun is a most powerful inhibitory agent for the growth of all forms of microscopic life. Somehow the actinic rays of white light, the same that cause the change in the silver salts in photography, are able to initiate alterations in the chemical constituents of microbes that eventually lead to their complete destruction. The improvement in health among the poor of our large cities, as the result of letting the light into the tenements, shows how much good the great solar scavenger can accomplish even under unfavorable circumstances.

Lack of sunshine tends to mental depression. It is astonishing how our mental condition is improved; how we feel more inclined to work and take outdoor exercise, on sunny days. So great an authority as Dr. Arnold Lorand, physician to the baths, Carlsbad, Austria, says: "Let us be grateful for every ray of sunshine, and take advantage of it. Some ladies avoid the sun, but it would be wiser to seek it and, if possible, to expose our whole bodies to its rays. Let us remove all the curtains from the rooms in which we sleep or sit, especially from our workroom. In the train let us sit on the sunny side and not draw the curtain, unless we are reading; in short, let us seek the sunshine wherever it shines. We shall soon observe how much better we feel after a long sojourn in the sun. There is no denying that, as a rule, those who spend much time in the sun look better and healthier than those who live in dark rooms or offices." Particularly in old age is sunshine precious, and instinct tells old people that the sun is good for them, and they eagerly watch for it to shine. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

EATING TOO MUCH.

While certain classes, owing to the stress of poverty, cannot obtain the nutriment they really need, the majority of people eat too much. Fortunately a moderate degree of overeating does not appear to be markedly injurious. The digestive apparatus, though compelled to do more work than is really necessary, proves equal to the demand made upon it, and does not break down or get seriously out of order. This is but one illustration out of many that might be given, showing how the marvelous mechanism of the human body adapts itself to conditions more or less abnormal. It is lucky for the average man that physiological laws are not of Medio-Persic inflexibility. He can violate them to a limited extent without incurring the penalty, though he finds that, if he goes beyond that point the punishment is swift and sure. Careful investigations prove that the daily "detructive metabolism," or, in plain English, the inevitable waste and wear of the body, which is the measure of the work it does, varies but little for different occupations. A diet of from 12 to 14 ounces of chemically dry food, if the ingredients are in proper proportion and really digestible, is sufficient to keep the average worker in good health. One part of nitrogen to seven or eight parts of non-nitrogenous food is found to be a fair combination.

A very small addition of stimulants appear to increase the amount of possible work; but moderately free drinking diminishes it. Women eat less than men, after making allowances for differences in weight and work. Where a man eats 19 ounces a woman of the same weight and equally active habits eats only 14 or 15 ounces. This latter allowance, as will be seen from the figures above, is more than enough for a hard working man, even when all meat is excluded from the diet. It is no uncommon thing, however, for a man of average size and activity to eat double this amount, or from 25 to 27 ounces of chemically dry food in a day. In fact, I do not hesitate to say that the majority of people eat literally twice as much as they need.

If we do not "live to eat" we are very far from making it the law of our diet to "eat to live." The palate is tempted to intemperance by appetizing dishes when it would be fully satisfied with a normal amount of plain and wholesome food. Probably there are few people who will not have to confess that often the appearance of the pudding or pies revives the appetite which had been completely appeased by the meat and its concomitants in the preceding course at dinner. We feel that we have had enough, but the new and savory appeal to our love for the good things of the table is too much for us. We have been eating because we enjoy doing it. It is not necessary but it is "nice." Let us congratulate ourselves that, though gluttony and intemperance are bestial sins and cannot escape their punishment, moderate over-indulgence in eating is, as I have said, apparently a venial offense against the laws of health; but let us beware of presuming too much upon the mercy with which nature tempers justice in the enforcement of these laws.

The high cost of beef has revived the question: "Do we eat too much meat for our own good?" and incidentally do we eat too much food of all kinds? We are in the habit of smiling benignly when we speak of our friend the vegetarian, but scientific investigation and experiment is coming to his rescue and demonstrating that while possibly it may not be wise for all persons to cut meat out of their diet, it unquestionably would be a great benefit to the race, physically, if the quantity of meat consumed should be materially decreased, and, too, if considerably less food of all kinds were taken into the stomach. It is quite surprising to those who have never tried it before how well they can get along without flesh food. Nature never intended us to live as we do. She has provided simple food, in the shape of cereals, fruits, vegetables, and if we conform ourselves more closely to her established order of diet we should be a happier and hardier race. LEARN HOW TO LIVE.

Health Notes

It is not only the part of expediency but morally imperative for every one to do all that lies in his power to be well, steadily and joyously well.

* * *

Many diet reformers make the almost fatal mistake of overloading the stomach. Dilated stomach is due quite largely to overeating.

One of the principal benefits derived from a vacation at the seaside is the comparative freedom one may have in dress, which may be adapted to expose the body to the sun's rays.

We must learn our limits; we are all something, but not everything. We must not expect too much.

YOUR BIG LEFT FOOT.

Your left foot is larger than your right, in 99 cases out of 100. Science explains it in many ways; but we accept the easiest one, which is that we are a world of left-footed loungers. We lean against posts and door jambs and we do most of our leaning on our left foot; consequently, through the years it has grown to support the weight that the lazy foot doesn't. The next time you buy shoes, have your left foot measured first.

HOW GRAPHITE IS MINED.

The mining and purification of graphite used in lead pencils is not unlike the process of silver ore. It is generally found mixed with quartz, silica and mica. It is necessary to pulverize the rock with crushing machinery, which is followed by the extraction of the graphite. Before the graphite is mixed with the clay it is strained through very fine silk sieves so that all particles the least bit coarse may be removed.

Harnessing the Sun's Rays.

That the rays of the sun can be used for curing many skin diseases, and that sun baths are beneficial to those who are in perfect health, is well known. The problem of utilising this agency in northern countries where the hours of sunshine are few has been solved, he claims, by a British doctor, M. J. de Thezac.

His invention consists of a revolving cabin, combined with a huge lens for concentrating the rays on any part of the inclosed patient's body. This installation has just been tested in the neighborhood of Quimper, France.—Popular Science Monthly.

LEARNED LESSON OF THRIFT

Boys and Girls of New Jersey Town Have Made Record of Which They Are Proud.

If there has been less talk of the servant problem in Bridgeton, New Jersey, than elsewhere, it is quite explainable. Not to be outdone by their European sisters and brothers in matters of thrift and industry, 25 youngsters in that town have invested $1,000 in United States thrift stamps this year, thanks to their own hard work. Boys and girls alike have welcomed opportunities of doing remunerative dishwashing, sweeping, dusting, store clerking, baby-minding, errand-running, etc., with the goal of economy symbolized by government stamps ahead of them. The more ambitious have undertaken cutting weeds, carrying coal, sifting ashes, selling papers, raising chickens, cleaning pavements, and some have even won prizes to add to their savings. Having found that time can be converted into money it is doubtful whether these boys will again find the street corner a worthwhile place for spending idle hours, or the girls be content to waste periods in porch chatter.

King Governs Marriages.

Spanish diplomats are forbidden to marry without royal permission by a decree published in the Official Gazette. If this order is disregarded the offending person will be suspended from office and his wife will be excluded from diplomatic privileges.

The object of the decree is to prevent diplomats marrying women without means or of undesirable reputation. Similar rules are applied in the case of naval and military officers and noblemen.

NOBLE RELICS OF THE PAST

Triumphal Arch of Titus, at Rome, and the Colosseum, Are Splendid in Their Ruin.

The triumphal arch of Titus in Rome was built in 70 A. D., to commemorate the defeat of the Jews, and was dedicated to the Emperor Titus after his death. It is adorned with fine sculptures in relief. On the frieze outside is a sacrificial procession and on the inner side Titus is seen crowned by Victory in a quadriga driven by Roma. On another part of the arch is a triumphal procession of Jews, the Table of Shew Bread and the seven-branched candlestick. In the center of the vaulting the consecrated emperor is seen being carried to heaven by an eagle.

In 1882 the arch was a set of ruins, and some of the medieval additions were removed and it was partly reconstructed. The colosseum, with seats for 50,000 spectators, originally called the Flavian amphitheater, was completed by Titus in the year 80 A. D., and derives its later name, probably, from a colossal statue of Nero. The colosseum is now all in ruins.

The good intentions ground out by political machines ought to make excellent paving material.

Ten Ways to beat the H. C. L.

1. BE A PRODUCER. Work and earn, to help increase the world's goods, and thereby decrease the cost of necessities.

2. MAKE A BUDGET. Plan how you will dispose of your income. Do not live from "hand to mouth."

3. RECORD YOUR EXPENSES. Keep track of where your money goes to see how you come out with respect to your estimates.

4. KEEP YOUR MONEY IN BANK. Pay bills by check and put your surplus regularly in savings. This keeps your money safe and helps you to save.

5. CARRY LIFE INSURANCE. It is an investment not an expense—a protection to your dependents after you are gone.

6. MAKE A WILL. Be sure your "house is in order" for you never know when you will be called to the "great beyond."

7. OWN YOUR OWN HOME. Even if you have to go into debt for it, your greatest satisfaction will come from living under your own roof.

8. PAY YOUR BILLS PROMPTLY. Don't obligate yourself beyond the limits of your budget allowances and protect your credit by meeting those obligations promptly.

9. INVEST YOUR SAVINGS. When your savings are sufficient to buy one or more good bonds, go to your banker and buy them.

10. SHARE WITH OTHERS. Remember the Golden Rule and do your full duty towards mankind; for therein lies contentment, without which you cannot be truly prosperous.

Life-Chas. M. Coburn

Charles Marble Coburn, son of Ebenezer and Deliverance (Wilson) Coburn, was born in Trumbull county, Ohio, Nov 21, 1827. Died May 30, 1920, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Samuel Keesler, in St. Joe, Indiana, at the ripe age of 92 yrs., 6 mos., and 9 days. Was the last survivor of a family of eleven children. He moved with his parents to DeKalb county, Ind., in August 1838, where he assisted his father clear up the land upon which they lived. He was early inured to the privations and hardships incident to pioneer life.

He was married Nov. 15, 1846 to Almira Milliman, a native of New York, daughter of John and Mary (Warren) Milliman. To them were born eight children, four of whom are living, Emma A., William H. H., Charles Marcellus and Otis B.

The deceased are, Harriet E., Agnes B., Rosalie F. and Helen A. His first wife died Feb. 12, 1871. Feb. 5, 1874 he was again married, this time to Jane E. Allen, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Brownley) Allen. To this latter union were born seven children, all of whom are living: Allen E., Clarence A., E. Clay, C. Belle, John H., Harlan D., and Lester C. He leaves a wife, 11 children, 32 grand-children and 36 great grand-children.

In his lifetime he has witnessed the transition from ox-drawn sled to motor cars and air craft. There were no cities west of the Alleghenies. St. Louis, Indianapolis, Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville and Pittsburg were but settlements or Indian camps. The forests were unbroken save for Indian trails which later became the white man's roads.

In his early youth he made a profession of faith and was buried in baptism with his Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and has ever since been a consistent follower of Him. God's Word was his law, his greatest comfort. Uncle Charles, as he was familiarly called, needs no praise from us. His life was such that those who knew him best loved him most. He delighted in ministering to the comfort of the afflicted. His spirit is now in the hands of the Almighty Judge, Who doeth all things well, and Whose judgments none can gainsay.

"Blessed are the dead that died in the Lord from henceforth; Yea saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them.

CHARLES M. COBURN

Heavy Loss By Fire.

A person may labor for years to accumulate a little on which to live and may on the other hand lose it all in fifteen minutes. Wm. Brown, of this place, suffered quite a loss by fire at his farm home, 5 miles north east of St. Joe, last Saturday.

About three o'clock an alarm was sent in to the fire company that the Wm. Brown barn, in Wilmington township, was burning, and that they should come at once. As soon as the men assembled they made the run, but it being so great a distance, they were unable to do any good. Wall Wasson is the tenant.

Mrs. Wasson and children were at home alone, Mr. Wasson being away at work skidding logs at the saw mill east of town. When she noticed the blaze first it was in the hay at the double doors of the barn, running out to see what was up, she saw that it was fast spreading in the chaff to the hay mow and was beyond control in a few seconds time. Help was summoned at once, but they were unable to save anything. The barn was a dandy, being built just a few years ago by Mr. Brown, when his barn was burned in August, just after being filled with new hay.

The barn had a new spreader and loader stored away besides about ten tons of hay that was to be baled out this week. A good cow barn and hog house, built in connection with the barn, were destroyed. The granary, which stood north of the barn, was burned and a good quantity of oats and small tools. Besides the personal property mentioned, 9 good shoats, weighing about 40 pounds each, were burned. The loss to Mr. Brown is estimated at $3,000.00, with only $500.00 insurance. Mr. Wasson sustains a loss of $800.00.

The erection of a new barn will be started as soon as a contract can be let.

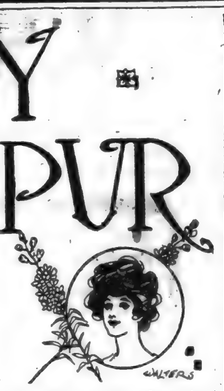
LADY LARKSPUR

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON



COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

TWO RUNAWAYS.

Synopsis.—Richard Searles, successful American playwright, confides to his friend, Bob Singleton, the fact that, inspired by the genius of a young actress whom he had seen in London, he has written a play, "Lady Larkspur," solely with the thought that she should interpret the leading character. This girl, Violet Dewing, has disappeared. Singleton, an aviator, has just returned (invalided) from France. His uncle, Raymond Bashford, had contracted a marriage a short time before his death, while on a visit to Japan. He left Singleton a comparatively small amount of money and the privilege of a residence in the "garage" of his summer home, Barton-on-the-Sound, Connecticut. Mrs. Bashford is believed to be traveling in the Orient. The household at Barton is made up of broken-down employees of a New York hotel, where Bashford made his home. Singleton goes to Barton, taking with him the manuscript of "Lady Larkspur." There he finds the household strangely upset, some of its members being suspected by their comrades of pro-Germanism. Antoine, head of the establishment, informs him that he has been perplexed by the somewhat mysterious visits of a stranger, apparently a foreigner, seeking Mrs. Bashford. Antoine has formed the male members of the household into a guard for protection. Singleton reads "Lady Larkspur" with approval. "Aunt Alice" arrives unexpectedly, meets with a lively reception and turns out to be young and charming. Mrs. Farnsworth is her traveling companion. Torrence, Bashford's lawyer, suspects the two women and warns Singleton "Aunt Alice" may be an impostor. The mysterious stranger, Count Montani, makes a call and is seen to be very much interested in "Aunt Alice's" ostrich-plume fan, which had been repaired by a jeweler in Japan. Singleton is fascinated by "Aunt Alice." Antoine reports that a "spy" has been tempting a woman servant to steal the fan! The "spy" is captured at night by the guard.

CHAPTER III—Continued.

"Get some dry clothes for this man and lock him up in the toolhouse. Be sure he has blankets, and you'd better give him some hot coffee."

The captive manifested relief at my decision and broke his silence to thank me, which he did in very good English. His submissiveness only deepened my perplexity, but I couldn't help laughing as he walked away surrounded by the "troops," with Dutch leading the way—Dutch fully conscious that he had vindicated himself and disposed to be rather disdainful of his comrades.

I hurried to the house, where I found Alice and Mrs. Farnsworth ministering to Elsie, who had been taken there by their order. Elsie, sharing with Dutch the honors of the night, lay on a davenport, where she had received first aid. Alice rose from her knees as I entered, gathering up strips of bandages, and turned to me laughingly.

"Elsie's injuries are not serious; only disagreeable bruises in the face. There will be no scars, I'm sure. We'll keep her at the house for a few days until she's quite fit again. Surely any one who has questioned Elsie's loyalty ought to be satisfied now."

"You certainly managed it very cleverly, Elsie. We're all very grateful."

Elsie, her face covered with bandages, acknowledged my thanks by wiggling her foot.

Mrs. Farnsworth said she would put Elsie to bed. Now, I thought, Alice would make some sign if she knew anything that would explain Montani and the prisoner in the toolhouse. But the whole affair only moved her to laughter and she seemed less a grown woman than ever in her white robe. My efforts to impress her with the seriousness of the attempt to secure the fan only added to her delight.

"How droll! How very droll! You couldn't possibly have arranged anything that would please me more! It's delicious! As you say in America, it's perfectly killing!"

I suggested that the holding of a prisoner without process of law might present embarrassments.

"I know," she cried, clapping her hands joyfully. "You mean we are likely to bump into dear old habeas corpus! The sheriff will come and read a solemn paper to you and you will have to hie you to court and produce the body of the prisoner. That will be splendid!"

"It won't be so funny if—"

"Constance and I so love the unusual—and it is so hard to find!" she continued. "And yet from the moment I reached the gates of these premises things have happened! Nothing is omitted! Strange visitors; fierce attacks upon our guards, and still the mystery depends in the wee sma' hours, with heroes and heroines at every turn! To think that that absurd little Dutch was asleep in the garden and really captured the spy or whatever he is! But you are a hero, too! You shall be decorated!"

She walked to a stand and pondered a moment before a vase of roses, chose a long-stemmed red one and struck me lightly across the shoulder with it.

"Arise, sir knight! You should have knelt, but to kneel in skirts requires practice; you could hardly have managed in that monk's robe."

I couldn't be sure whether she was mocking me or whether there was really liking under this nonsense. I was beyond the point of being impatient with her. I was helpless in her hands; she would do with me as she willed, and it was my business to laugh with her, to meet her as best I could in the realm of folly.

"You must go!" she exclaimed suddenly. "Constance will be calling down the stairs for me in a moment."

"Tomorrow—" I began. The wistful look she had at times came into her eyes as she stood in the center of the room, playing with the flower.

"Tomorrow," she repeated, "and then—tomorrow!"

"There must be endless tomorrows for you and me," I said, and took the flower from her hand. The revery died in her eyes, and they were awake with reproach and dismissal. At the door I looked back. She hadn't moved and she said, very quietly, but smiling a little: "Nothing must happen to make me sorry I came. Please remember!"

CHAPTER IV.

Pursuing Knights.

I didn't sleep until near daybreak, and was aroused at nine o'clock by Flynn, who appeared at the door in his chauffeur's togs, carrying a tray.

"The wife didn't come back, sorr, but I made coffee and toast. Sorry to waken you, but I'm takin' the new car into the city."

I sat up and rubbed my eyes.

"Who's going to the city?" I demanded.

"The ladies is goin' at once, sorr. They sent orders an hour ago to be ready with the new machine. I'm late and you'll have to excuse me, sorr."

"I'm Late and You'll Have to Excuse Me, Sorr."

I sprang out of bed and plied him with questions, most of which he was unable to answer. I did, however, extract from him the information that nothing had occurred after I retired for the night that could have alarmed the women at the residence and prompted this abrupt departure. There was no reason why Alice shouldn't run to town if it pleased her to do so, and yet it was odd that she hadn't mentioned the matter. Flynn hurried away, and from the window I followed the car's course to the house, and a moment later caught a glimpse of it on its way to the gates.

I called from the window to one of the gardeners who knew how to manage a machine and told him to be ready to drive me to the village in half an hour. There was an express at ten-forty, and by taking it I would at least have the satisfaction of being somewhere in New York when the runaways arrived. Antoine packed my suitcase; I am not sure that he didn't shed tears on my belongings. The old fellow was awed into silence by the rapidity with which history had been made in the past twenty-four hours, and clearly was not pleased by my desertion.

We drove past the tool-house, where I found the prisoner seated on a wheelbarrow smoking a cigarette. He was no more communicative than when I had questioned him after his capture. He smiled in a bored fashion when I asked if he wanted anything, and said he would be obliged for cigarettes and reading matter. He volunteered nothing as to his identity and the guards said that a thorough search of the captive's clothing had disclosed nothing incriminating. He had three hundred dollars in currency (this was to cover Elsie's bribe money I conjectured), a handkerchief, a cigarette case, and a box of matches. I directed that he be well fed and given all the reading matter he wanted, and hurried on to catch my train.

I took a room at the Thackeray club and pondered carefully whether, in spite of my misgivings, I hadn't better see Torrence and tell him all that had happened since his call on Mrs. Bashford. If there was any chance of doing the wrong thing in any matter not prescribed in the laws governing the administration of estates, he would be sure to do it; but I was far from satisfied with the results of my own management of affairs at Barton. I finally called up the trust company and learned that Torrence was in Albany attending the trial of a will case and might not be in town for a couple of days. His secretary said he had instructions to wire my daily report to Albany. I told him there had been no developments at Barton, and went out and walked. Inquiries at hotels large and small occupied me until seven o'clock. No one had heard of a Mrs. Bashford or a Mrs. Farnsworth. My inspection of the occupants of several thousand automobiles proved equally fruitless. I ate a lonely dinner at the club and resumed my search. Hanging about theater doors, staring at the crowd, is not a dignified occupation, and by nine o'clock, having seen the most belated theatergoers vanish, I was tired and footsore. The flaming sign of Searles' "Who Killed Cock Robin?" over the door of the "As You Like It" caught my eye. I sought a seat—the last in the rack—and squeezed into my place in the middle of the last row. As I had seen the piece at least a dozen times, its novelty was gone for me, but the laughter of the delighted audience was cheering. The first act was reaching its culmination, and I watched it with a glow of pride in Searles and his skillful craftsmanship.

As the curtain fell and the lights went up amid murmurs of pleasure and expectancy, I glanced across the rows of heads. The half-turned face of a man three rows in front of me suddenly caught my attention. There was something curiously familiar in his outlines and the gesture with which, at the moment, he was drawing his handkerchief across his forehead. It was Montani—beyond any question Montani—and I instinctively shrank in my seat and lifted my program as he turned round and swiftly surveyed the rows behind him.

I watched his black head intently until I remembered the superstition that by staring at a person in a public place you can make him look at you. Montani knew a great many things I wanted to know, but I must have time to adjust myself to the shock of his propinquity.

The house now took note of a stirring in the boxes. There was an excited buzz as the tall form and unmistakable features of Cecil Arrowsmith, the English actor, were recognized. I had read that day of his arrival in New York. With him were two women. My breath came hard and I clutched the iron frame of the seat in front of me so violently that its occupant turned and glared.

The trio settled into their places quickly, but not before I had satisfied myself that Arrowsmith's companions were Alice and Mrs. Farnsworth. As they fell into animated talk I saw that Alice was in her gayest humor. The distinguished tragedian seemed greatly amused by what she was saying to him.

"Must be members of Arrowsmith's company," one of my neighbors remarked. "They open in two weeks in Shakespearian repertoire."

Montani had half risen, the better to focus an opera-glass on the box. The gong solemnly announced the second act, and Alice moved her chair to face the stage. Once more Montani scanned the party with his glass. As the lights faded Alice, with the pretty languorous gesture I so well remembered, opened her fan—the fan of ostrich plumes, that became a blur of white that held my eye through the dusk after the curtain rose.

Alice, Montani, and the fan! To this combination I had now to add the new element introduced into the situation by the apparent familiar acquaintance of Alice and Mrs. Farnsworth with Cecil Arrowsmith. And yet, as the play proceeded on its swift-moving course, I reasoned that there was nothing extraordinary in their knowing the eminent actor. He had long been a personage in England and had lately been knighted. Their appearance with him at the theater really disposed of the idea that they might be impostors. The presence of Arrowsmith had put zest into the company, and I hadn't seen a better performance of Searles' play. The trio in the box joined in the prolonged applause at the end of the act.

Singleton finds "Aunt Alice" in New York and the mystery deepens.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Dubious Compliment.

"I saw Mrs. Cad on the street today," cried Mabel angrily, "and the horrid old snob refused to speak to me, just because she was with Mrs. Millions."

"How absurd!" cried Julia, sympathetically. "Just as if you were not her equal. Why, she's just a conceited idiot!"

1781—Oct. 15, received the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.
1788—Dec. 23, surrendered his commission to congress.
1789—April 30, inaugurated first president, aged fifty-seven.
1793—March 4, inaugurated a second time.
1796—September, Farewell address.
1797—March 4, retired.
1799—Dec. 14, died.

WASHINGTON was made of the same clay as most Americans who have won high leadership and, like them, he cut his teeth on the crust of poverty. Only four or five of our presidents came from poorer homes than our first president and he had less schooling than four-fifths of his successors. He was, in fact, the only president in the first forty years who was without a college education. Not starting to school until eight, he had to leave at fourteen to go to work. Thenceforth until the Revolution the woods and fields were his only schoolroom and life his only schoolmaster.

We never can truly understand this man if we start with the mistaken idea that he was the product of wealth and aristocracy. His people really were only a plain, though always highly respectable family, living on the outskirts of the cavalier castle which set up its manors in the James river region. George's own father, who at one time had been a sailing captain in the trade with the mother country, left his wife and children at his death five thousand acres of land, more or less unproductive; twenty-two slaves, a slender purse and a lean larder.

While at Mt. Vernon, which his oldest brother, Lawrence, had inherited, he learned the simple rudiments of surveying, and Lord Fairfax, who lived nearby, employed him to survey a vast estate in the Valley of Virginia.

In his young manhood Washington found his "inclinations strongly bent to arms." To softer arms than those of Mars the young militarist also was inclined.

Prying posterity finds him at sixteen pining for a mysterious "lowland beauty," who would not have the penniless surveyor. He received also by his own confession a "cruel sentence" from a "Miss Betsy," and afterward was rejected by Miss Phillipse of New York. At last the oft-disappointed wooer came to the White House on the Pamunkey, and once more he lost his heart. The mistress of the manor, Mrs. Martha Dandridge Custis, was wise enough to keep it, being a widow of seven years, the mother of two fatherless children, the owner of large estates.

When flying embers from the war fields of Europe ignited the savage forests of the New World, Washington was a militia major, and he was dispatched on a mission to the Ohio, a perilous journey of ten weeks through a wintry desolation. The next year he went again with a band of soldiers, for now the Seven Years' war had spread to America.

Now General Braddock came to scorn the colonial breed while he showed them how British regulars fought in proper, soldierly formation. The undrilled red children of the forest stubbornly refusing to fight on the European plan, Braddock fell amid his panic-stricken troops on the Monongahela. At the head of his grave in the wilderness the prayers for the dead were read by Colonel Washington.

Although Washington had won no battles, he had made a most important conquest. When the Seven Years' war came he was still an Englishman, and to him an island three thousand miles away still was home. In his contact with British officers he was shocked to find them aliens to him and his New World and himself only a colonial in their eyes. With native condescension they undertook to teach him his place, but with native independence he objected.

By the time the Seven Years' war was over the colonial colonel no longer was an Englishman. That illusion was gone and had left Washington an American.

THE choice of Washington to be commander in chief of the Revolution is one of the mysterious but happy accidents of history. Nothing in the deeds of this militia colonel, who had lost every fight that he had fought, pointed him out as the one and only man to meet the armies of the greatest empire in the world. Nothing in the words of this farmer, who never made a speech, inspired the congress at Philadelphia to turn to him by unanimous consent as the leader of the young nation. Yet Patrick Henry testified that this silent member was "the greatest man" in an assemblage which Lord Chatham declared never had its superior anywhere in history.

As he went to the front, he met a courier on a lathered horse, bearing the dreadful news of Bunker Hill. "Did the militia fight?" was all he wished to know. "Yes." "Then the liberties of the country are safe." Although it is said that Washington never in his life read but one book on the art of war, he knew that if the people would only stand up to the king's regulars, they could lose every battle and still defeat an enemy who was 3,000 miles from his base.

The Revolution was not won by the sword of Washington, but by his indomitable character. It was his character, slowly built up by poverty and struggle, which had given him from the start the leadership over men who talked more; yes, and who knew more.

The invincible fortitude of a people, heroically embodied in him, overthrew the king's army and navy and his Hessians. The unconquerable spirit of the 8,000 hunted, hungering, shivering, ragged Continentals of Valley Forge wrested from the British crown an empire greater than all the conquests made by Napoleon's grand army.

At the last, as the Americans leaped those last hurdles to independence, the British redoubts at Yorktown, Washington only said: "The work is done and well done. Bring me my horse."

The war was over, but the noblest victory was yet to come. Having received the surrender sword of Cornwallis, Washington surrendered his own, unstained by personal ambition, to the people who had entrusted it to him and went back to his farm, from which he was called to become the first president of the republic.

George Washington.

No president has been more bitterly abused than the first. His cabinet quarreled until Jefferson, his secretary of state, resigned, and his next secretary, Edmund Randolph, basely betrayed him. His vice president, John Adams, called him "an old mutton head," who had "not been found out only because he kept his mouth shut." "Treacherous in private friendship and a hypocrite in public life," Thomas Paine pronounced him. Because he refused to take the side of revolutionary France, "10,000 persons in the streets of Philadelphia"—then the capital—"threatened to drag Washington out of his house," John Adams tells us.

Notwithstanding the outbursts of partisanship, he retained the confidence of the country to the last, when the people at the inauguration of his successor followed the retiring president into the street and left the new president all but deserted. The long task of the homesick exile from Mount Vernon was done.

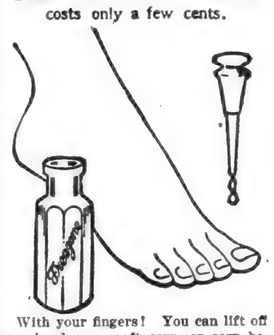
Lift off Corns!

Doesn't hurt a bit and Freezone costs only a few cents.



With your fingers! You can lift off any hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the hard skin calluses from bottom of feet.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs little at any drug store; apply a few drops upon the corn or callous. Instantly it stops hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callous right off, root and all, without one bit of pain or soreness. Truly! No humbug!—Adv.

A Feeling of Security

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs.

It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses.

It is not recommended for everything.

It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best. On sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to try this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Mrs. J. Christman Proved That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a Remedy for this Trouble.

Binghamton, N. Y.—"I was in a very nervous condition for over a year, my mind was gloomy, could see no light on anything, could not work and could not have anyone to see me. Doctor's medicine did not help me and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended. I took it and am now well. I recommend it to all afflicted with nervous prostration."—Mrs. J. CHRISTMAN, 193 Oak Street, Binghamton, New York.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from nervous prostration, displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion and dizziness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard remedy for female ills.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

LESSON FOR JUNE 20

THE LORD OUR SHEPHERD.

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 23.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want.—Ps. 23:1.
DEVOTIONAL READING — Ezek. 34: 11-16.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL — John 10: 1-18.
PRIMARY TOPIC—How God takes care of us.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Shepherd Psalm.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC —Trusting God for Everything.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC —Our Divine Shepherd.

This is a lesson so simple that a child of tender years can understand. The teacher's work will be mainly to point out the riches of its content, not to explain difficulties. The position of the Psalm determines its value. It is preceded by the Psalm of the Cross. Only those who are under the power of the cross can claim its promises. There are no green pastures to those who have not seen Christ on the cross.

The relationship of the Lord to his children is set forth in this Psalm as:

I. The Divine Shepherd (vv. 1-4).

The teacher should thoroughly familiarize himself with the life and service of a shepherd. As our shepherd,

1. He feeds his sheep (vv. 1, 2). The "green pastures" are for nourishment. The Lord always provides food for his own sheep, both temporal and spiritual. He gives us our daily bread, but our highest and best food is Christ, the Bread sent down from heaven for our souls (John 6:58), of which if we eat we shall live forever.

2. He gives rest (v. 2). He not only gives food, but he maketh his sheep to lie down. When the sheep have been satisfied with food they lie down to rest. Our finite natures require rest—we cannot go on forever, so the Divine Shepherd has arranged resting places on the way, two of which are night and the Sabbath. How sweet they both are to the Child of God! Sometimes he makes us to take enforced rest. It is most comforting to know that when he makes us lie down it is in the green pastures, not on the dusty road or the rocky mountain side. Our shepherd sometimes leads us over steep and rocky roads, but this is in order that we may reach the spots of green pasture.

3. He keeps the sheep in safety (v. 3). He restores our souls. The rest by the still water results in the restoration of bodily and spiritual strength. In the times of quiet he restores the spiritual life by the feeding upon God through his Word and means of grace. The restored soul is led into the paths of righteousness, that is, in the performance of labor for him. We have been saved not merely for our pleasure, but that we might do his good pleasure, that is, his work. We are saved to serve.

4. He guides the sheep in times of danger (v. 4). He goes with his own through danger and trials. There is no night so dark or sea so stormy but what we can hear the voice of the Divine Shepherd saying, "Be not afraid, it is I." May we have ears to hear!

5. He comforts his sheep in sorrow (v. 4). The rod was used by the shepherd to count his sheep. Passing under the shepherd's rod was the sign of ownership. Such acknowledgment would greatly comfort, even though the rod was the instrument which caused the sorrow. The consciousness that it was laid on by the loving shepherd's hand would turn the rod which smote to a staff to lean upon.

II. The Divine Host (vv. 5, 6).

1. He spreads a table in the sight of our enemies (v. 5). Though dangers are on every hand, the enemies plotting and scheming, the mighty shepherd provides a feast for his own in their sight. We can sit down to that feast with the assurance that no one can disturb us.

2. He anoints our heads with oil (v. 5). Oil is a symbol of joy. There should be no sad faces among Christ's own.

3. Goodness and mercy perpetually follow (v. 6). These are God's two angels which encamp round about those that fear him. They hold back the enemies from overtaking us; we can feast at God's banquet table. Even when the days seem dark and sorrows come thick and fast, God's goodness and mercy still follow.

4. Eternally dwelling with God (v. 6). They shall no more go out from his presence. He who hath begun a good work in us shall complete it unto the day of redemption. May every one take this Psalm for himself and make Christ his own personal shepherd!

Three Orders of Beings.

We have among mankind in general three orders of beings; the lowest, sordid and selfish, which neither sees nor feels. The second, noble and sympathetic, but which sees and feels without concluding and acting. The third and highest, which loses sight in resolution and feeling in work. For one who is blinded to the work of God by profound abstraction or lofty purpose, tens of thousands have their eyes sealed by vulgar selfishness, and their intelligence crushed by impious carelessness.—Ruskin.

ROAD BUILDING

WAR MATERIAL DISTRIBUTED

Equipment Turned Over Promises to Be Great Aid in Carrying Out Road Building Plan.

To date the war department has turned over to the United States department of agriculture approximately 24,000 motor vehicles, as provided in congressional legislation empowering the latter department to distribute this war material among the state highway commissioners for use in road building, allotments of the vehicles to be based on the amount of federal aid for roads which the states receive. This is practically all the vehicles which the war department has to release. Of this total 12,000 have been delivered to the states. The remainder will be distributed as fast as railway cars can be secured for their transportation. Representatives of the bureau of public roads, in charge of the matter, believe that within two or three months all of the vehicles will have been delivered to the states. This equipment promises to be a great aid in carrying the large road building program for 1920.

The state highway commissioners are also interested in securing allotments of tractors, steam shovels, locomotive cranes, automotive cranes, industrial railway track, dump cars and industrial locomotives which remain to be disposed of by the war department. A measure known as the Kahn bill, directing the secretary of war to release this material for the state highway commissioners, has passed the senate and has been reported out of committee in the house.

Type of Motortruck Turned Over to States to Aid in Road Building.

Until the secretary of war has been directed by congress to turn out this equipment it is not likely that it will be available for state distribution.

MAKING ROADS WITH BRAINS

Most of Heavy Work Incident to Highways Is Being Done by Machinery—Cost Is Less.

As help is scarce, and increasing traffic makes good roads a necessity, more and more of the heavy work incident to highways is being done by machinery.

At one time the work of leveling and road building had to be done largely with the pickax in the hands of workmen, and with shovels and teams. Now gasoline engines, motor trucks, and huge power-propelled cranes do all of the heavy work. In the new method the expense is less than by the old method, for machinery is always cheaper than human labor, in that a material saving of time is effected.

Good roads are an economy to any section of the country, as they permit produce to be hauled to market just when it will bring the most, and property is always worth more which borders well-constructed highways. Try to buy a farm along a concrete road and you will find the location makes a big difference in the price asked.

REDUCE COST OF MARKETING

It Can Be Brought About by Farmers Using More Trucks, Trailers and Automobiles.

The high cost of marketing that is such a factor in the cost of living will be reduced when the roads are improved and farmers use more trucks, trailers and automobiles in reaching city markets with their products.

UNPAVED ROADS UNCERTAIN

When Weather Is Good They May Be Passable If They Have Been Continuously Dragged.

Unpaved roads vary with the weather—paved roads are constant. When the weather is good, dirt roads may be passable if they have been continuously dragged, but they are not roads for truck and automobile traffic, so characteristic of the highways today when properly constructed.

INVESTMENTS

In the present period of the adjustment of the country's industrial and commercial affairs it is well for investors to exercise the utmost caution in the selection of investments.

Investors should scan these securities very carefully. Where there is the least doubt, caution will dictate looking a little farther for an investment where safety and peace of mind are absolutely assured. Preferring to sacrifice a part of big income to a greater degree of safety, the conservative investor prospers to a larger extent in the end than the investor whose first thought is income, the quality of the security being a minor consideration.

Certainly Youthful Swain's Income Didn't Run to Anything in Gold or Diamond Line.

A flashily dressed, effeminate young man entered a jeweler's shop, and in glib speech informed one of the immaculate assistants that he wished to purchase a birthday present for his sweetheart.

No, he remarked, he hadn't any idea as to what he really wanted, but whatever it might be, he declared emphatically, it must be a suitable token of his esteem, and at the same time come within the possibilities of his income.

"And what," inquired the assistant, "if I may ask the question, is your income?"

"Fifteen dollars a week," was the prompt reply.

"In that case," remarked the dispenser of gold and diamonds, in his most suave and charming voice, "I'm afraid you've come to the wrong place; you're more likely to be suited at the toy shop around the corner."

KEEP TROUBLES TO YOURSELF

The World, as a General Thing, Has Little Use for the Man Addicted to Self-Pity.

The trouble with the man in a little trouble is that he is inclined to pity himself and imagine that he is the only man who ever had a trouble.

All he can see in the moment of his irritation is his own burden. It seems not to occur to him that at the very moment he is wrestling with his difficulty thousands of people around him are fighting against far greater odds and in much greater danger.

Trouble, anyhow, is a part of the game of life. Nobody ever went anywhere or did anything worth while without meeting it in one form or another. Let others pity you if they will, but don't waste any time pitying yourself. The chances are that your next door neighbor would be tickled to death if such troubles as you have were all he had to worry about.—Exchange.

One of the features at the Christian Church Sunday morning at Bible School was the four piece Lawson orchestra, which was very much enjoyed by all. 83 scholars and an offering of $5.63 was the report. At morning worship the young people had charge of the music with H. C. Borthwick as leader of the devotional services.

Mrs. T. A. Northrup entertained the R. H. C., Thursday afternoon, at which time the following officers were elected to serve during the next term: President, Stella Baker; Vice president, Lela Northrup; Secretary, Pluma Hamilton; Treasurer, Blanch Hart. Refreshments were served. One guest Mrs. Kel Hart was present.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Bowman and daughter Eloise spent Sunday at Lake Hamilton with the former's mother, Mrs. Mary Bowman.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Woodcox and family, of near Auburn, spent part of Sunday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wash Woodcox. Mrs. Emma Abel, who has been here visiting for a few weeks, returned home with them.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. F. Abel and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. George O'Neal, of Petoskey, Mich., spent Monday afternoon in Hicksville.

Mrs. S. A. Abel returned home after a couple of weeks spent with her son Wallace Abel and family, near Newville, and with her brother, Mort Milliman, east of town, who is quite ill.

FROCKS OF SHEER FABRICS

What every woman knows—among other things—is, that nothing is quite so satisfying as a fine white frock for summertime. Embroidered voiles and swisses, beautiful and practical, are here to lend the charm and refinement of white to summer wardrobes. In the picture a plain and embroidered voile is shown made up into a short sleeved frock and finished off, with a girdle and full bow of narrow ribbon. The underskirt is made of the embroidered voile, showing a pattern in which bands run around the figure. A short underbodice of this has elbow sleeves and a drapery of plain voile which carries out the idea revealed in the long and full panniers of plain voile in the skirt.

GRACIOUS STYLES IN WRAPS

This wrap contrives to look so much like a cape that one must think twice before placing it as a coat. It is beautifully finished with rows of cloth-covered buttons for ornament, and two large dark pearl buttons that look equal to the responsibility of fastening it.

NOVEL SILKS IN SKIRTS

A new and fascinating chapter in the story of separate skirts has been offered by the employment of wonderful new weaves in silk for making them. The knitted weaves, in plain and mixed colors, heavy and very brilliant satins, tricolettes, are all produced in beautiful patterns of one or two colors showing huge checks, crossbars, plaids and mixtures. In the picture a blue and white, in a rough weave with brilliant luster, makes a skirt of utmost elegance.

OF FINE EMBROIDERED VOILE

A blouse that will look like new after each laundering, as long as it lasts, is made of fine white voile and embellished with dots and thread embroidery in blue silk. For durability and for daintiness nothing is superior to voile.

FARMING IN ALASKA IS NOW PROFITABLE

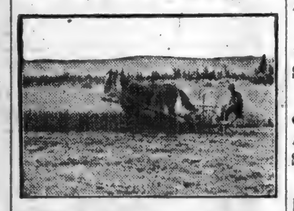
Experiment Stations Developing Important Feed Crops.

Strawberries Can Be Grown Successfully and Made to Bear Fruit Where Season Is Short—Potatoes Are Big Money Crop.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many Americans think of Alaska as a land of perpetual snow, comparable with "Greenland's icy mountains," and from an agricultural standpoint of little value. But the United States department of agriculture is demonstrating, through the agricultural experiment stations in Alaska, that many crops can be successfully and profitably grown in the territory.

Hardy hybrid strawberries, developed at the Sitka (Alaska) agricultural experiment station, can be grown successfully and made to bear fruit where the growing season is short.



Cutting Grain for Hay on the Tanana Bottoms, Alaska.

Several thousand plants resulting from crosses are now under observation at the station. At the experiment station at Fairbanks, last year, in spite of unfavorable weather conditions—a cold spring followed by severe drought—more than 1,200 bushels of spring wheat, oats, and barley were produced. Average yields of over 12 bushels an acre were obtained for spring wheat, the seed for which was obtained in 1914 from a Siberian experiment station. Other varieties yielded from 12 to 15 bushels an acre and yields of from 38 to 40 bushels of oats an acre are reported. Most of these grains were from pedigree strains developed from the Rampart station.

In an attempt to grow leguminous plants for forage or green manure, it has been found at the Fairbanks station that red clover, which winterkills badly, can be grown successfully as an annual crop when seeded early in May.

Potatoes are the principal money crop of the Tanana valley. Yields of 92 to 162 bushels an acre were produced at the experiment station.

The stations at Fairbanks and Rampart are giving special attention to the production of improved seed for Alaskan use. In addition to grains, seed of peas, turnips and other crops were grown in considerable quantity for 1918 planting.

VALUE OF SHUCK COVERING

By Improving Protection Ear Damage in Any Section Can Be Considerably Reduced.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Of all the ears of corn produced in the United States each year, comparatively few entirely escape damage. Most of them lose only a few kernels because of cutworms or other insects or are more or less reduced in value by molds or discoloration. This damage is usually passed without concern, but when it is considered that a loss of only one kernel per ear amounts to an annual loss for the United States of at least 5,000,000 bushels and that this amount must be multiplied several times to represent the total annual loss, it becomes apparent that these losses are worthy of attention. It seems that by improving the shuck protection ear damage in any section can be considerably reduced, but such protection can be made of the greatest value in sections infested with weevils.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

ANALYSIS OF SOVIET RULE

Cold Reasoning Easily Proves Fallacy on Which the Idea Is Based—Demagogism Its Foundation Stone.

Article XXI.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Lenine has frequently observed that representative government is a failure. He has insisted that the democratic form of government is debauched and destroyed by the political machine; that political corruption vetoes the will of the people. If Lenine is right in this conclusion, then the bolshevik government in Russia offers just from three to five times as much chance for political corruption as our own form of government. If it is dangerous for the American people to entrust their business to an agent whom they directly elect and who is directly responsible to them, how much more dangerous must it be to turn over the public business to 17 men appointed by a central executive committee, the members of which have been appointed by an All-Russian congress, which All-Russian congress is elected by soviets for whom the people did not vote? Applying this plan to our own government, our congress would be elected by the state legislatures and the aldermen of the cities, then this congress so elected would pick an executive committee of 200, and this committee would elect 17 commissioners to whom would be given the supreme power of the state, both legislative and executive power, the right to make laws, and the authority to enforce the laws.

Democracy or Autocracy?

All down through history two theories of government have been at war. One is that the majority shall rule—the other, that the minority shall rule. The people struggling for freedom have battled for the former; the few seeking special privileges have fought for the latter. The first is democratic, the second autocratic. No compromise is possible; there is no middle ground. These two antagonistic ideas have nothing in common; like parallel lines, they can never meet, in their nature they are separate and apart. The government of the late kaiser of Germany, the government of Nicholas, the autocrat of Russia, were founded on the idea that the minority shall rule. History shows that minority rule has always enslaved the majority. The rule of a minority over a majority means slavery for the many. It is human nature. The principle always works the same result. If it is a political meeting and the minority runs it, the result is a machine and a boss. When it is a nation, you have a bureaucracy and a dictator, deriving his power not from the consent of the governed, but from the bayonets of the army. There may be room for honest differences of opinion between honest men on many questions, but there is not any room for difference of opinion among honest free men on the proposition that minority rule is a menace.

In Article III of the bolshevik constitution we find incontrovertible evidence that the government of soviet Russia is built on the tyrant's stone, minority rule. Section 25 reads:

"The All-Russian congress is composed of representatives of city soviets in the ratio of one delegate for every 25,000 voters, and of representatives of the soviets of the provinces in the ratio of one delegate for every 125,000 inhabitants."

Discrimination Against Peasants.

No explanation is given for basing the representation in congress from the cities on the number of voters, while the representation in congress from the provinces is based on the number of inhabitants. The words are not synonyms, a voter is an inhabitant of certain age and possessing certain qualifications. An inhabitant is anyone who lives in the province, regardless of age or qualifications. If the word inhabitant is given the same meaning that the word voter is given, then it is apparent that the constitution unjustly discriminates against the "poor peasant." As they have had no general elections in Russia, it is impossible to give the official construction of these two words. If the word inhabitant means any man, woman or child living in the province, the discrimination against the "poor peasants" is just as obvious, although it does not go to the same length. As an illustration, if we read this important provision of the constitution giving to the word inhabitant the same meaning as we give to the word voter, then we see that the voters of the city have one congressman for every 25,000, while the "poor peasants" have one congressman for every 125,000. If we construe the word voter to mean the qualified legal voter, and the word inhabitant to mean any human being living in the provinces, we learn that the people of the city have one congressman for every 25,000 voters, while the people of the provinces have one congressman for every 62,500 voters. I reach this estimate in the following manner: In the United States we estimate that there is one voter in every five of the population. This calculation is based upon male suffrage alone, with the voting age fixed at twenty-one years. In Russia both men and women have the suffrage, and the age qualifying one to vote is eighteen years. I, therefore figure that there would be one voter for every two in population. There is no question about the discrimination against the "poor peasant" and the favoring of the city voter. It is only a question of how much.

Machine Politics.

Lenine may be the idealist some people say he is, but this section of the constitution proves him to be a practical machine politician in his methods. The provision was written to meet a situation. It has a purpose. Lenine has frequently written and spoken about the "poor peasants." He can be forgiven for overworking the phrase. The "poor peasants" make up the great bulk of the population of Russia. It is not bad politics, although it smacks of demagogy, to speak often and sympathetically of the "suffering poor," particularly when the "poor peasants" make up the majority of one's constituency. Many successful politicians owe their offices to this appeal. In Russia over 80 per cent of the people live on the land—over four-fifths of all the Russians are peasants. Less than one-fifth of the population live in the towns and cities. Measured by his words, Lenine is the friend of the "poor peasants;" by the constitution, their enemy.

As we have seen, the constitution specifically declares that the supreme power of the government is vested in the All-Russian congress. Of course this is true only in theory, for we have read how the All-Russian congress turns the supreme power over to the central executive committee, which in turn surrenders the power to the 17 people's commissars.

The discrimination against the "poor peasant" runs all through the constitution; the bolsheviks are at least consistent. Paragraph "B" of section 58 of the constitution furnishes additional evidence of the conspiracy against the peasants. It reads:

"The provincial soviets are composed of representatives of the city soviets and the rural soviets, one representative for 10,000 inhabitants of the rural districts, and one representative for 2,000 voters in the city."

In the regional congresses it is the same, one representative for 25,000 inhabitants of the country, and one representative for 5,000 voters of the city.

Aim at Disfranchising Peasants.

The governments of the nation, of the regions, of the provinces, are based on the disfranchisement of the "poor peasants." I am wondering if there is any significance in the fact that the people of the city have one representative for a certain number of votes, and the people of the country have one representative for just five times the number. You will note the ratio is always the same: For congressmen it is 25,000 in the city, as against 125,000 in the country; in the regional congress it is 5,000 voters of the city as against 25,000 inhabitants of the country, in the provincial congresses it is one representative for 2,000 voters in the city, one representative for 10,000 inhabitants from the rural districts. Why this five to one? I am wondering how Lenine hit upon the ratio of five to one; is there any connection between this five-to-one discrimination against the "poor peasants" and the ratio of population in Russia between city dwellers and "poor peasants," which is about five to one? It is not difficult to guess the reason for this action. Any American ward politician could furnish the explanation in a minute. All political experience proves that a political machine is best controlled, easiest organized in the cities. Political machines have never been popular in the country districts. The soviet form of government is a political machine. The control of the machine is insured by disfranchising the "poor peasants." The men who designed the bolshevik constitution knew one thing about practical politics, and knew that one thing thoroughly, and that is that cities are accessible to political control, amenable to political influence, ideal for the political machine.

The soldiers and sailors are generally stationed in cities. This gives them the power of city voters. They are not discriminating against, they are favored. Soldiers and sailors are not free agents in the sense the civilians usually are. Civilians have a freedom of thought and action that the military do not enjoy. The soldier's occupation prevents it. First, he is an employee of the government; second, he is under discipline; third, the people's commissars fix his pay, determine the quantity and quality of his food, arrange for the comforts of the barracks; the votes and the bayonets of the military sustain and support Lenine as truly as the military force held the czar on his throne.

Filipinos Want Independence.

The second Philippine mission seeking independence of the islands at the hands of the United States is now in this country. The delegation includes members of both houses of the Philippine legislature, affiliated with both political parties and representatives of labor and of the financial interests of the islands.

The mission, besides appealing to congress, will present the claims of the island people to independence before the national conventions of the Democratic and Republican parties. Pledges of Philippine independence in their platform will be sought.

INDIANA State News

Shelbyville.—An inspection of wheat fields in Shelby county, grown from seed given the hot-water treatment last year, was made by Doctor Reed, chief of the bureau of cereal investigation, United States department of agriculture; Doctor Jackson of the Purdue university experiment station; County Agent Russel G. East and about twenty farmers of the county. There are 93 demonstration plots in Shelby county, where treated wheat seed was sowed last fall. An inspection of these shows the treated wheat, with possibly two exceptions, to be free of all disease. A trace of "black heads" has appeared in two fields. In all others there is no smut or black heads, both of which are to be found in the untreated fields. Doctor Reed says that the department of agricultural work that is being conducted in this county, and says the method of the control of disease in wheat, which was first used in Shelby county, is being and will be recommended in other states through the wheat belt.

Kokomo.—The Indiana Association of Spiritualists at the closing session of the sixteenth annual session here, selected Newcastle as the 1921 convention city, and elected Dr. Frederick E. Crum of Indianapolis as president. Other officers elected were: Vice president, Ernest Benninghoffen, Anderson, and B. L. Hoepple, Evansville; secretary, T. V. Benbow, Kokomo; treasurer, Elmer E. Haas, Kokomo; board of trustees, B. A. Beamer, Richmond; Orrin H. Crum and William Laughlin, Indianapolis, and William Yonts, Frankfort. The association refused to recognize the camp at Chesterfield, near Anderson, and appointed a committee to investigate a tract of land at Economy, near Richmond, for the establishment of a new state camp grounds.

Terre Haute.—Degrees and honors were conferred on 70 young women at the seventy-ninth annual commencement of St. Mary-of-the-Woods academy and college, in the conservatory of music. Two continents and nine states were represented by the 16 graduates, to whom bachelor's degrees were conferred, and the graduating class of 42 from the academy included residents of 15 states and Washington, D. C. Certificates in art, music, secretarial work and Latin were awarded to 12 graduating pupils.

Petersburg.—The cutting of alfalfa has begun in Pike county. The first cutting is unusually heavy owing to favorable weather and some fields are averaging as much as two and a half tons to the acre. Clover will be cut in the next two weeks. Clover is rank and the yield will be large. There is much white top in timothy hay. The largest yield of apples and peaches in ten years is predicted by fruit growers. The trees are bending with the weight.

Shelbyville.—Ed Cummins, who lives north of Fairland, has reported to the officers that while he was away from his home, unknown persons entered his premises and destroyed 9,700 of a total of 10,000 tobacco plants which he had ready to be set out. The act was committed while Mr. Cummins was in Fairland, attempting to obtain men to aid him in putting out the plants. He says that he knows of no reason why the act was committed.

Winchester.—At a meeting at Union City, attended by more than fifty farmers from Jackson and Wayne townships, in Randolph county, and from nearby Ohio farms, the Farmers' Live Stock Shipping association was organized. Officers will be elected at once., and headquarters established. The association plans to do its own stock shipping to foreign markets and to eliminate the stock beuyers' profits.

Vincennes.—Forty head of purebred Shorthorn cattle, at a sale by the Vincennes Interstate Shorthorn Breeders' association, sold for an average of $254.37 a head. Thirty cows averaged $273.66 and ten bulls averaged $196.37. Master Rosebud, a bull consigned to the sale by Jack I. Lilly of Washington, brought the top price. Alfred Sims of Elnora paid $325 for him.

Franklin.—Thirty-seven members of the senior class at Franklin college here were graduated at the eighty-sixth annual commencement exercises. Eight members of the class will receive diplomas later. Eight more students were on the list this year than were graduates last spring, the class being one of the largest in recent years.

Richmond.—The house occupied by David M. Edwards, president of Earlham college, was given to the college by Joseph A. Goddard of Muncie, a member of the board of trustees. The property is valued at $10,000. Mr. Goddard also gave $10,000 to the college endowment fund.

Shelbyville. — Farmers of Shelby township, Shelby county, have decided to continue their wool pool, and not to turn the fleeces back to the individual farmers, to be disposed of by them at the best price obtainable. The county pool of wool will be maintained, although no bids for it were made recently when it was offered for sale.

Terre Haute.—George H. Fears, formerly city clerk here, entered a plea of guilty in the Vigo circuit court, to a charge of embezzling the city's money. Sentence was withheld by Judge Pulliam until June 21.

Indianapolis.—Representatives of about forty counties in which bids for the county wool clip were regarded as too low and were rejected, decided at the close of a meeting that Indiana farmers should combine forces with those in Illinois and Iowa to ascertain whether they can obtain a suitable market. Lewis Taylor, secretary of the Indiana Federation of Farmers' Associat ions, called the meeting, following complaints from farmers in several counties that bids for their wool clips were unusually low. The men who attended the meeting asserted that they believe the farmers in their counties would be willing to store their wool in a Chicago warehouse until a more favorable market is found. The plan will be referred to the county associations for action. Wool dealers spoke at the meeting on the condition of the wool market and the tightening of the money market, saying these made it impossible to submit better bids than had been offered.

Indianapolis.—Indiana crop prospects for the present season are described in a report of George C. Bryant, field agent of the co-operative crop reporting service for Indiana, which was made public. The report in part is as follows: "The June 1 condition figure for winter wheat indicates a crop of approximately 21,000,000 bushels. This is preliminary and subject to change later. The general appearance of the crop is fairly good and looks better than a month ago, but the Hessian fly ravages are beginning to show up. The spring wheat acreage has returned to about the usual acreage. The condition is only fair and on the June 1 figures a crop of about 42,000 bushels is indicated. The oats acreage for the state as a whole shows 2 per cent above last year and amounts to 1,862,000 acres. The condition June 1 was 84 per cent of normal and indicates a crop of approximately 61,000,000 bushels.

Petersburg.—Owing to the continued rains in Pike county, the crop conditions are the worst ever known for this time of the year, and only about 50 per cent of the corn acreage has been planted, while the wheat crop is far below the average. Less than 00 per cent of oats has been planted, and 50 per cent of potatoes. The rains caused cut worms to appear in large numbers and thousands of tomato plants were cut down. Fruit has escaped damage, and there will be the largest fruit crop this year ever harvested in southern Indiana.

Evansville.—Trinity Lutheran church in Evansville, the oldest church of this denomination in southern Indiana, recently celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary with elaborate ceremonies. Many out-of-town visitors were present. Since its founding Trinity church has had but three pastors and two of them are now serving the church. The founder of the church, the late A. Saupert, founded many Lutheran missions to southern Indiana.

Vincennes.—Knox county farmers say indications point to a bumper crop of blackberries. Wheat cutting in Knox county will start in the next few days in several localities. Crop experts who have visited other counties say that wheat in this county is in better in quality and quantity than that of nearby counties. Considerable acreage of early wheat was planted in Knox county.

Lafayette.—Every rural community in Tippecanoe county has a smaller population today than it had ten years ago, according to official census figures. The falling off in rural population is general throughout the county. Nearly every one of the 18 townships has lost from 50 to 100 inhabitants. The city of Lafayette is the only community in the county to show an increase.

New Albany.—After fighting a week to overcome the effects of 48 hours' exposure in the rain when he became entangled in a fence from which he could not extricate himself because of an injury and his advanced age, James Monroe Alstott, a prominent Harrison county farmer, is dead. Mr. Alstott was seventy-three years old and this fact handicapped him in his fight for life.

Evansville.—Following a dispute between mine officials and mine employees over the brand of powder used in blasting at the Epworth coal mine, east of Evansville, the miners went on strike. The miners requested that a certain brand of powder be used in the mine. When this was refused the men quit work. About seventy-five men were affected by the strike.

Lafayette.—Prof. C. G. Woodbury, director of the agricultural experiment station at Purdue university, has tendered his resignation to take effect July when he will go to Washington, D. C., to become chief of the bureau of raw products research of the National Canners' association.

Indianapolis.—A state conference on housing and home-owning will be held under the auspices of the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce in Indianapolis Thursday, July 8. Practical methods of financial community housing projects will be a feature of the conference.

Indianapolis.—More than 100 college men of Indiana left for Lake Geneva, Wis., to attend the annual Y. M. C. A. student conference, which will continue through June 20. The delegation is headed by W. W. Mendenhall, state student secretary. Indiana university sent 26 delegates, the largest from any school of the state.

Elwood.—The Elwood city council has found the treasury without money with less than half of the year gone and has voted to ask permission of the state tax board to borrow $10,000 for current expenses.

BEAN-BAG GAMES.

There are lots and lots of interesting games which can be played with bean-bags. A bag 6 inches square requires half a pound of beans to fill it, which is heavy enough. Cut a piece of cloth 7 inches wide and 14 inches long (Fig. 2), fold it in half, and stitch it several times around the two opposite open edges, then turn the bag inside out, and sew together the third open edge, with the exception of a small corner which must be left for filling (Fig. 1). Pour in the beans, sew up the opening, and reinforce the edges with additional stitching.

The ground target game (Fig. 3) is a good test of one's skill. Lay pieces of rope upon the ground to form three circles—a large circle, a small circle within it, and a circle halfway between the two. Twelve feet away from the target drop a rope for a line to toss from. Take turns in tossing, and count score in this way: 25 points when the bag lands in the center circle, 15 when in the second, and 5 when in the outside circle. If a bag touches a rope no score is counted.

Figure 4 shows the positions for eight girls to take for playing bean-bag goal (4 girls can play it just as well). Mark off a center line, with a goal 16 or 20 feet each side of it. Choose up into two sides, and station the players as shown, with a goalkeeper in each goal, and each goalkeeper's players standing on the side of the center line opposite to her. Each side's object is to throw the bean bag into the hands of its goalkeeper, which if done, counts 5 points. The bean-bag is tossed by the center players, alternately, and the opponents' object is to prevent the bag from reaching the goal, by catching it or turning its course. A catch by an opponent counts them 1 point. One hundred points is the game.

There should be six or more players in the bean-bag relay game (Fig. 5). Mark out two circles upon the ground, three feet in diameter and a few feet apart; divide the girls into two sides and stand them one behind another. Then have the first player in each line take three bean-bags and toss them at her circle. Each bag dropped within counts 5 points. After tossing the bags, each player must quickly run to the back of her line, and the second player must move up into her place and toss the bags; and so on, until the last player has tossed. Each side's object is to finish first, with the largest score.

Slip a barrel-hoop over a rope, fastened between two trees or posts (Fig. 6), and mark a line near each end for a player to stand back of. The object of the game is to drive the hoop, by throwing the bean-bag at it, to the opponent's goal.

A good bean-bag target may be made by strapping a fruitbasket to a tree (Fig. 7.)

PAYING ON THE NAIL.

An expression with which everyone is familiar is "paying on the nail," comes from the old method of settling accounts. In the early day of trade and commerce, merchants on change paid their debts by counting out their gold on to a copper "nail" or table, in the market-place. Written receipts are now almost universal, and these nails are no longer used; but two splendid specimens still remain among the most interesting treasures of the ancient port of Bristol. They are each about four feet high, shaped like a gigantic hour-glass. There they stand in the busy street, a lasting monument to the integrity of the old trading and merchant class, who paid on the nail and scorned a receipt.

JUNE

PLATFORM ON WHICH G. O. P. MAKES STAND

Party's Principles Enunciated by National Convention at Chicago.

"UNPREPAREDNESS" CHARGED

Plank Covering the League of Nations Is Considered in the Nature of a Compromise—Strong Stand on Mexico.

Here is the platform adopted by the Republican national convention in session at Chicago:

The Republican party, assembled in representative national convention, reaffirms its unyielding devotion to the Constitution of the United States and to the guarantees of civil, political, and religious liberty therein contained. It will resist all attempts to overthrow the foundations of the government or to weaken the force of its controlling principles and ideals, whether these attempts be made in the form of international policy or domestic agitation.

For seven years the national government has been controlled by the Democratic party. During that period a war of unparalleled magnitude has shaken the foundations of civilization, decimated the population of Europe, and left in its train economic misery and suffering second only to war itself.

Unpreparedness for War.

The outstanding features of the Democratic administration have been complete unpreparedness for war and complete unpreparedness for peace.

Inexcusable failure to make timely preparation is the chief indictment against the Democratic administration in the conduct of the war. Had not our associates protected us, both on land and sea, during the final twelve months of our participation, and furnished us to the very day of the armistice with munitions, planes, and artillery, this failure would have been punished with disaster. It directly resulted in unnecessary losses to our gallant troops, in the imperilment of victory itself, and in an enormous waste of public funds literally poured into the breach created by gross neglect. Today it is reflected in our huge tax burden and in the high cost of living.

Unpreparedness for Peace.

Peace found the administration as unprepared for peace as war found it unprepared for war. The vital needs of the country demanded an early and systematic return to a peace time basis. This called for vision, leadership and intelligent planning. All three have been lacking. While the country has been left to shift for itself, the government has continued on a war time basis.

The administration has not demobilized the army of place holders. It continued a method of financing which was indefensible during the period of reconstruction. It has used legislation passed to meet the emergency of war to continue its arbitrary and inquisitorial control over the life of the people in time of peace, and to carry confusion into industrial life.

"Flounders Hopelessly."

Under the despot's plea of necessity or superior wisdom, executive usurpation of legislation and judicial functions still undermines our institutions. Eighteen months after the armistice, with its war-time powers unabridged, its war-time departments undischarged, its war-time army of place holders still mobilized, the administration continues to flounder helplessly.

The demonstrated incapacity of the Democratic party has destroyed public confidence, weakened the authority of government, and produced a feeling of distrust and hesitation so universal as to increase enormously the difficulties of readjustment and to delay the return to normal conditions.

Never has our nation been confronted with graver problems. The people are entitled to know in definite terms how the parties purpose solving these problems. To that end, the Republican party declares its policies and program to be as follows:

Constitutional Government.

We undertake to end executive autocracy and to restore to the people the constitutional government.

The policies herein declared will be carried out by the federal and state governments, each acting within its constitutional powers.

Congress and Reconstruction.

Despite the unconstitutional and dictatorial course of the president and the partisan obstruction of the Democratic congressional minority, the Republican majority has enacted a program of constructive legislation which, in great part, however, has been nullified by the vindictive vetoes of the president.

The Republican congress has met the problems presented by the administration unprepared for peace. It has repealed the greater part of the vexatious war legislation. It has enacted a transportation act, making possible the rehabilitation of the railroad system of the country, the operation of which under the present Democratic administration has been extravagant and wasteful in the highest degree. The transportation act made provision for the peaceful settlement of wage disputes, partially nullified, however, by the president's delay in appointing the wage board created by the act. This delay precipitated the outlaw railroad strike.

We stopped the flood of public treasure recklessly poured into the lap of an inept shipping board, and laid the foundations for the creation of a great merchant marine. We took from the incompetent Democratic administration the administration of the telegraph and telephone lines of the country, and returned them to private ownership. We reduced the cost of postage and increased the pay of the postal employees—the poorest paid of all public servants. We provided pensions for superannuated and retired civil servants, and for an increase in pay for soldiers and sailors. We reorganized them on a peace footing and provided for the maintenance of a powerful and efficient navy.

Passed Suffrage Amendment.

The Republican congress established by law a permanent women's bureau in the department of labor. We submitted to the country the constitutional amendment for woman's suffrage, and furnished 29 of the 36 legislatures which ratified it to date.

Legislation for the relief of the consumers of print paper, for the extension of the powers of the government under the food control act, for broadening the scope of the war risk insurance act, better provision for the dwindling number of aged veterans of the Civil war, and for the better support of the maimed and injured of the great war, and for making practical the vocational rehabilitation act that has been enacted by the Republican congress.

We passed an oil leasing and water power bill to unlock for the public good the great pent-up resources of the country; we have sought to check the prodigacy of the administration, to realize upon the assets of the government, and to husband the revenues derived from taxation. The Republicans in congress have been responsible for cuts in the estimates for government expenditure of nearly $8,000,000,000 since the signing of the armistice.

We enacted a national executive budget law; we strengthened the federal reserve act, to permit banks to lend speedy assistance to farmers; we authorized financial corporations to develop export trade, and, finally, amended the rules of the senate and house, which will reform evils in procedure and guarantee more efficient and responsible government.

Agriculture.

A large and contented body of farm proprietors is the backbone of the nation. National greatness and economic independence demand a population distributed between industry and the farm, and sharing on equal terms the prosperity which is wholly dependent on the efforts of both. Neither can prosper at the expense of the other without inviting joint disaster.

The crux of the present agricultural condition lies in price, labor, and credit.

The Republican party believes that this condition can be improved and agricultural production encouraged by the right to form co-operative associations for marketing their products subject to regulation by federal authority; the scientific study of agricultural prices, with a view to reducing the frequency of abnormal fluctuations; the authorization of associations for the extension of personal credit; a national inquiry on the co-ordination of rail, water, and motor transportation with adequate facilities for receiving, handling, and marketing food; the encouragement of our export trade, and the encouragement of the production and importation of fertilizing material and of its extensive use.

The federal farm loan act should be so administered as to facilitate the acquisition of farm land by those desiring to become owners and proprietors, and thus minimise the evils of farm tenantry.

Industrial Relations.

There are two different conceptions of the relations of capital and labor. The one is contractual, and emphasizes the diversity of interests of employer and employee. The other is that copartnership in a common task is due.

We recognise the justice of collective bargaining as a means of promoting good will, establishing closer and more harmonious relations between employers and employees, and assimilating the true ends of industrial justice.

The strike or the lockout, as a means of settling industrial disputes, inflicts such loss and suffering on the community as to justify government initiative to reduce its frequency and limit its consequences.

We deny the right to strike against the government; but the rights and interests of all government employees must be safeguarded by impartial laws and tribunals.

Public Utilities.

In public utilities we favor the establishment of an impartial tribunal to make an investigation of the facts and to render a decision to the end that there may be no organized interruption of service necessary to the lives and health and welfare of the people. The decisions of the tribunals should be morally but not legally binding, and an informed public sentiment be relied to secure their acceptance. The tribunals, however, should refuse to accept jurisdiction except for the purpose of investigation, as long as the public service be interrupted. For public utilities we favor the type of tribunal provided for in the transportation act of 1920.

In private industries we do not advocate the principle of compulsory arbitration, but we favor impartial commissions and better facilities for voluntary mediation, conciliation, and arbitration, supplemented by that full publicity which will enlist the influence of an aroused public opinion. The government should take the initiative in inviting the establishment of tribunals or commissions for the purpose of voluntary arbitration and of investigation of disputed issues.

We demand the exclusion from interstate commerce of the products of convict labor.

National Economy.

A Republican congress reduced the estimates submitted by the administration for the fiscal year 1920 almost five billion dollars, and for the fiscal year 1921 over a billion and a quarter dollars. Greater economies could have been effected had it not been for the stubborn refusal of the administration to co-operate with congress in an economy program. The universal demand for an executive budget is a recognition of the incontrovertible fact that leadership and sincere assistance on the part of the executive department are essential to effective economy and constructive retrenchment.

The Overman act invested the president of the United States with all the authority and power necessary to restore the federal government to a normal peace basis and to reorganize, retrench, and demobilize. The dominant fact is that eighteen months after the armistice the United States government is still on a wartime basis, and the expenditure program of the executive reflects wartime extravagance rather than rigid peace time economy.

Failure to Retrench.

As an example of the failure to retrench which has characterised the post-war policy of the administration, we cite the fact that, not including the war and navy departments, the executive departments and other establishments at Washington actually record an increase subsequent to the armistice of 3,184 employees. The net increase in pay roll costs contained in the 1921 demands submitted by the administration is only 1 per cent under that of 1920. The annual expenses of federal operation can be reduced hundreds of millions of dollars without impairing the efficiency of the public service.

We pledge ourselves to a carefully planned readjustment to a peace-time basis and to a policy of rigid economy, to the better co-ordination of departmental activities, to the elimination of unnecessary officials and employees, and to the raising of the standard of individual efficiency.

An Executive Budget.

We congratulate the Republican congress on the enactment of a law providing for the establishment of an executive budget as a necessary instrument for a sound and business-like administration of the national finances, and we condemn the veto of the president which defeated this great financial reform.

Reorganization of Federal Departments and Bureaus.

We advocate a thorough investigation of the present organization of the federal departments and bureaus, with a view to securing consolidation, a more businesslike distribution of functions, the elimination of duplication, delays, and overlapping of work, and the establishing of an up to date and efficient administrative organization.

War Powers of the President.

The president clings tenaciously to his autocratic war-time powers. His veto of the resolution declaring peace and his refusal to sign the bill repealing war-time legislation, no longer necessary, evidence his determination not to restore to the nation and to the states the form of government provided for by the Constitution. This usurpation is intolerable and deserves the severest condemnation.

Taxation.

The burden of taxation imposed upon the American people is staggering; but in presenting a true statement of the situation we must face the fact that while the character of the taxes can and should be changed, an early reduction of the amount of revenue to be raised is not to be expected. The next Republican administration will inherit from its Democratic predecessor a floating indebtedness of over 24,000,000,000, the prompt liquidation of which is demanded by sound financial considerations.

Reduction in Tax.

Moreover, the whole fiscal policy of the government must be deeply influenced by the necessity of meeting obligations in excess of $5,000,000,000 which mature in 1923. But sound policy equally demands the early accomplishment of that real reduction of the tax burden which may be achieved by substituting simple for complex tax laws and procedure, prompt and certain determination of the tax liability for delay and uncertainty, tax laws which do not for tax laws which do excessively mulct the consumer or needlessly repress enterprise and thrift.

We advocate the issuance of a simplified form of income returns; authorising the treasury department to make changes in regulations effective only from the date of their approval; empowering the commissioner of internal revenue, with the consent of the taxpayer, to make final and conclusive settlements of tax claims and assessments, barring fraud, and the creation of a tax board consisting of at least three representatives of the taxpaying public and the heads of the principal divisions of the bureau of internal revenue to act as a standing committee on the simplification of forms, procedure and law, and to make recommendations to the congress.

Banking and Currency.

The fact is that the war, to a great extent, was financed by a policy of inflation through certificate borrowing from the banks, and bonds issued at artificial rates sustained by the low discount rates established by the federal reserve board. The continuance of this policy since the armistice lays the administration open to severe criticism. Almost up to the present time the practices of the federal reserve board as to credit control have been frankly dominated by the convenience of the treasury.

The results have been a greatly increased war cost, a serious loss to the millions of people who in good faith bought Liberty bonds and Victory notes at par, and extensive post-war speculation, followed today by a restricted credit for legitimate industrial expansion. As a matter of public policy we urge all banks to give credit preference to essential industries.

The federal reserve system should be free from political influence, which is quite as important as its independence of domination by financial combinations.

The High Cost of Living.

The prime cause of the "high cost of living" has been, first and foremost, a 50 per cent depreciation in the purchasing power of the dollar, due to an expansion of our currency and credit. Reduced production, burdensome taxation, swollen profits, and the increased demand for goods arising from a populous but enlarged buying power have been contributing causes to a greater or less degree.

We condemn the unsound fiscal policies of the Democratic administration which have brought these things to pass, and their attempts to impute the consequences to minor and secondary causes. Much of the injury wrought is irreparable. There is no short way out and we decline to deceive the people with vain promises or quack remedies.

But as the political party that throughout its history has stood for honest money and sound finance, we pledge ourselves to earnest and consistent attack upon the high cost of living by vigorous avoidance of further inflation in our government borrowing, by courageous but intelligent deflation of overexpanded credit and currency, by encouragement and heightened production of goods and services, by prevention of unreasonable profits, by exercise of public economy and stimulation of private thrift, and by revision of war imposed taxes unsuited to peacetime economy.

Profiteering.

We condemn the Democratic administration for failure impartially to enforce the anti-profiteering laws enacted by the Republican congress.

Railroads.

We are opposed to government ownership and operation or employee operation of the railroads. In view of the conditions prevailing in this country, the experience of the last two years, and the conclusions which may fairly be drawn from an observation of the transportation systems of other countries, it is clear that adequate transportation service both for the present and future can be furnished more certainly, economically, and efficiently through private ownership and operation under proper regulation and control.

There should be no speculative profit in rendering the service of transportation, but in order to do justice to the capital already invested in railway enterprises, to restore railway credit, to induce future investments at a reasonable rate, and to furnish enlarged facilities to meet the requirements of the constantly increasing development and distribution, a fair return upon actual value of the railway property used in transportation should be made reasonably sure, and at the same time to provide constant employment to those engaged in transportation service, with fair hours and favorable working conditions at wages or compensation at least equal to those prevailing in similar lines of industry. We indorse the transportation act of 1920 enacted by the Republican congress as a most constructive legislative achievement.

Waterways.

We declare it to be our policy to encourage and develop water transportation service and facilities in connection with the commerce of the United States.

Regulation of Industry and Commerce.

We approve in general the existing federal legislation against monopoly and combinations in restraint of trade, but since the known certainty of a law is the safety of all, we advocate such amendments as will provide America business men with better means of determining in advance whether a proposed combination is or is not unlawful. The federal trade commission, under a Democratic administration, has not accomplished the purpose for which it was created. This commission properly organised and its duties efficiently administered should afford protection to the public and legitimate business interests.

International Trade and Tariff.

The uncertain and unsettled condition of international balances, the abnormal economic and trade situation of the world and the impossibility of forecasting accurately even the near future, preclude the formulation of a definite program to meet conditions a year hence. But the Republican party reaffirms its belief in the protective principle and pledges itself to a revision of the tariff as soon as conditions shall make it necessary for the preservation of the home market for American labor, agriculture, and industry.

Merchant Marine.

The national defense and our foreign commerce require a merchant marine of the best type of modern ship flying the American flag and manned by American seamen, owned by private capital, and operated by private energy.

We indorse the sound legislation recently enacted by the Republican congress that will insure the promotion and maintenance of the American merchant marine.

We favor the application of the workmen's compensation acts to the merchant marine.

We recommend that all ships engaged in coastwise trade and all vessels of the American merchant marine shall pass through the Panama canal without payment of tolls.

Immigration.

The standard of living and the standard of citizenship of a nation are its most precious possessions, and the preservation and elevation of those standards is the first duty of our government.

The immigration policy of the United States should be such as to insure that the number of foreigners in the country at any one time shall not exceed that which can be assimilated with reasonable rapidity, and to favor immigrants whose standard are similar to ours.

The selective tests that are at present applied should be improved by requiring a higher physical standard, a more complete exclusion of mental defectives and criminals, and a more effective inspection applied as near the source of immigration as possible, as well as the port of entry. Justice to the foreigner and to ourselves demands provision for the guidance, protection and better economic distribution of our alien population. To facilitate government supervision, all aliens should be required to register annually until they become naturalised.

The existing policy of the United States for the practical exclusion of Asiatic immigrants is sound, and should be maintained.

Naturalization.

There is urgent need of improvement in our naturalization law. No alien should become a citizen until he has become genuinely American, and adequate tests for determining the alien's fitness for American citizenship should be provided for by law.

We advocate, in addition, the independent naturalization of married women. An American woman should not lose her citizenship by marriage to an alien resident in the United States.

Free Speech and Alien Agitation.

We demand that every American citizen shall enjoy the ancient and constitutional right of free speech, free press, and free assembly, and the no less sacred right of the qualified voter to be represented by his duly chosen representatives, but no man may advocate resistance to the law, and no man may advocate violent overthrow of the government.

Aliens within the jurisdiction of the United States are not entitled of right to liberty of agitation directed against the government or American institutions.

Every government has the power to exclude and deport those aliens who constitute a real menace to its peaceful existence. But in view of the large numbers of people affected by the immigration acts and in view of the vicious malpractice of the departments of justice and labor, an adequate public hearing before a competent administrative tribunal should be assured to all.

Lynching.

We urge congress to consider the most effective means to end lynching in this country, which continues to be a terrible blot on our American civilization.

Law and Order.

The equality of all citizens under the law has always been a policy of the Republican party. Without obedience to law and maintenance of order our American institutions must perish. Our laws must be impartially enforced and speedy justice should be secured.

With regard to the sale and manufacture of intoxicating beverages, the Republican party will stand for the enforcement of the constitution of the United States as it shall be declared by the Supreme court.

Public Roads and Highways.

We favor liberal appropriations in co-operation with the states for the construction of highways, which will bring about a reduction of transportation costs, better marketing of farm products, improvement in rural postal delivery, as well as meet the needs of military defense.

In determining the proportion of federal aid for road construction among the states the sums lost in taxation to the respective states by the setting apart of large portions of their area as forest reservations, shall be considered as a controlling factor.

Conservation.

Conservation is a Republican policy. It began with the passage of the reclamation act signed by President Roosevelt. The recent passage of the coal, oil, and phosphate leasing bill by a Republican congress, and the enactment of the water power bill, fashioned in accordance with the same principle, are consistent landmarks in the development of the conservation of our national resources. We denounce the refusal of the president to sign the water power bill passed after ten years of controversy. The Republican party has taken an especially honorable part in saving our national forests and in the effort to establish a national forest policy. Our most pressing conservation question relates to our forests. We are using our forest resources faster than they are being renewed. The result is to raise unduly the cost of forest products to consumers and especially farmers, who use more than half the lumber produced in America, and in the end to create a timber famine. The federal government, the states and private interests must unite in devising means to meet the menace.

The Service Men.

We hold in imperishable remembrance the valor and the patriotism of the soldiers and sailors of America who fought in the great war for human liberty, and we pledge ourselves to discharge to the fullest the obligations which a grateful nation justly should fulfill, in appreciation of the services rendered by its defenders on sea and on land.

Republicans are not ungrateful. Throughout their history they have shown their gratitude toward the men in the nation's defenders on land and sea. Liberal legislation for the care of the disabled and infirm and their dependents has ever marked Republican policy toward the soldier and sailor of all the wars in which our country has participated. The present congress has appropriated generously for the disabled of the world war. The amounts already applied and authorized for the fiscal year 1920-21 for this purpose reached the stupendous sum of $1,120,571,393. This legislation is significant of the party's purpose in generously caring for the maimed and disabled men of the recent war.

Civil Service.

We renew our repeated declaration that the civil service law shall be thoroughly and honestly enforced and extended wherever practicable. The recent action of congress in enacting a comprehensive civil service retirement law and in working out a comprehensive employment and wage policy that will guarantee equal and just treatment to the army of government workers, and in centralising the administration of the new and progressive employment policy in the hands of the civil service commission is worthy of all praise.

Postal Service.

We condemn the present administration for its destruction of the efficiency of the postal service when controlled by the government, and for its failure to properly compensate employees whose expert knowledge is essential to the proper conduct of the affairs of the postal system. We commend the Republican congress for the enactment of legislation increasing the pay of postal employees, who up to that time were the poorest paid in the government service.

Woman Suffrage.

We welcome women into full participation in the affairs of government and the activities of the Republican party. We urge Republican governors whose states have not yet acted upon the suffrage amendment to immediately call special sessions of their legislatures for the purpose of ratifying said amendment, to the end that all of the women of the nation of vpting age may participate in the election which is so important to the welfare of our country.

Social Progress.

The supreme duty of the nation is the conservation of human resources through an enlightened measure of social and industrial justice. Although the federal jurisdiction over social problems is limited, they affect the welfare and interests of the nation as a whole. We pledge the Republican party to the solution of these problems through national and state legislation in accordance with the best progressive thought of the country.

Women in Industry.

Women have special problems of employment which make necessary special study. We commend congress for the permanent establishment of the women's bureau in the United States department of labor to serve as a source of information to the states and to congress.

The principle of equal pay for equal service should be applied throughout all branches of the federal government in which women are employed.

We demand federal legislation to limit the hours of employment of women engaged in intensive industry, the product of which enters into interstate commerce.

The League of Nations.

We favor a liberal and generous foreign policy founded upon definite moral and political principles, characterised by clear understanding of and firm adherence to our rights, and unfailing respect for the rights of others. We should afford full and adequate protection for the life, liberty and property, and all international rights of every American citizen, and should require a proper respect for the American flag; but we should be equally careful to manifest a just regard for the rights of other nations. A scrupulous observance of our international engagements, when lawfully assumed, is essential to our own honor and self-respect and the respect of other nations. Subject to a due regard for international obligations, we should leave our country free to develop its civilization along lines most conducive to the welfare and happiness of its people, and to cast its influence on the side of justice and right should occasion require.

The Republican party stands for agreement among the nations who preserve the peace of the world. We believe that such an international association must be based upon international justice and must provide methods which shall maintain the rule of public right by the development of law and the decision of impartial courts, and which shall secure instant and general international conference whenever peace shall be threatened, so that the nations pledged to do and insist upon what is just and fair may exercise their influence and power for the prevention of war.

We believe that all this can be done without the compromise of national independence, without depriving the people of the United States in advance of the right to determine for themselves what is just and fair when the occasion arises, and without involving them as participants, and not as peacemakers in a multitude of quarrels the merits of which they are unable to judge.

The covenant signed by the president at Paris failed signally to accomplish this great purpose and contains stipulations not only intolerable for independent people but certain to produce the injustice, hostility and controversy among nations which it proposed to prevent.

Praises Senators' Actions.

That covenant repudiated to a degree wholly unnecessary and unjustifiable the time-honored policy so essential for peace declared by Washington and Jefferson and Monroe and pursued by all American administrators for more than a century, and it ignored the universal sentiment of America for generations past in favor of international law and arbitration and it rested the hope of the future upon mere expedients and negotiations.

The unfortunate insistence of the president upon having his own way without any change and without any regard to the opinions of the majority of the senate, which shares with him the treaty-making power, and the president's demand that the treaty should be ratified without any modification, created a situation in which senators were required to vote upon their consciences and their oaths according to their judgment against the treaty as it was presented or submit to the command of a dictator in a matter where the authority and responsibility under the Constitution were theirs and not his.

The senators performed their duties faithfully. We approve their conduct and honor their courage and fidelity, and we pledge the coming Republican administration to such agreement with the other nations of the world as shall meet the full duties of America to civilization and humanity in accordance with American ideals, and without surrendering the right of the American people to exercise its judgment and its power in favor of justice and peace.

Will Reform Taxes.

Pointing to its history and relying on its fundamental principles, we declare the Republican party has the genius, courage, and constructive ability to end executive usurpation and restore constitutional government to full efficiency, meet our obligations without sacrificing our national independence; to raise the national standards of education and general welfare; to re-establish a peace-time administration and to substitute economy and efficiency for extravagance and chaos; to restore and maintain the national credit; to reform unequal and burdensome taxes; to free business from arbitrary and unnecessary official control; to suppress disloyalty without denial of justice; to repeal the arrogant challenge of any class, and to maintain a government of all the people as contrasted with government for some of the people, and finally, to allay unrest, suspicion, and strife and to secure the co-operation and unity of all citizens in the solution of the complex problems of the day, to the end that our country, happy and prosperous, proud of its past, sure of itself and of its institutions, may look forward with confidence to the future.

Frantic With Pain

Doan's However Brought Complete Recovery and Trouble Has Never Returned

"My kidneys were weakened by exposure in Alaska," says Hermann Schrader, 326 Park Ave., Hoboken, N. J., "and my misery at times became so great I thought I would lose my mind. I had terrible pains in my back, and a constant desire to urinate. My back felt as if it were in sections with each crushing against the other. Finally I was taken desperately ill. It seemed as if something were crushing out my life. Before long I passed a gravel stone the size of a pea. If the pain had been any more intense I think I would have died. I was having practically no flushing of the kidneys and my weight had reduced from 178 pounds to 128. The doctor told me I had gravel and small stones filling up the passages of the bladder. After all of this I began to use Doan's Kidney Pills and soon improved. In a short time I was well and my cure has lasted fifteen years. Today I am in perfect health."

Dr. C. S. Johnston and family, of Columbus, Ohio, are now located in the Tustison property on Widney avenue, moving here on last Thursday. The family arrived Wednesday and the goods came Thursday morning, being shipped by motor truck. Dr. Johnston has a position as General Secretary of the Forward Movement of the Methodist Protestant church, with his general office at Pittsburgh, and this necessitates his being away from home considerable. Mrs. Johnston decided that it would be more pleasant to be located nearer her father, consequently St. Joe was the place for them. We welcome them to our city. St. Joe was the first work taken by Dr. Johnston when he began his ministry.

Obituary

Mary Melissa Dean, daughter of Walker and Rebecca Dean, was born August 10, 1857, at Shaynes Crossing, Ohio, and passed into the realms of rest May 31, 1920, aged. 62 years, 9 months, 21 days.

In 1875 she was united in marriage to Joseph Branmiller. This union was blessed with one daughter, Lulu Branmiller. The husband dying in 1879, she and her daughter made their home with her parents until 1881, when she was married to John Whitehurst. To this union were born seven children, one son and six daughters.

Mr. Whitehurst and five children have preceded her in death, Mrs. Lulu Bechtol, the eldest daughter dying in 1899. Mabel, Jessie and an infant in 1902, Mr. Whitehurst in 1915, and Walter in Field Hospital, France, in 1918. Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. Hazel Tustison, of Spencerville, Ind., Mrs. Ines Cramer, who resided with her mother, and Mrs. Lucille Schroyer, of St. Joe, Ind. Also one grand-son, Dean Bechtol, and two grand-daughters, Irma Tustison and Agnes Cramer, besides one sister, Mrs. Jennie Bohls, of Garrett, Ind., and two brothers, Naaman Dean, of Butler, and C. C. Dean, of Newville.

Mrs. Whitehurst was converted to the Christian faith in 1890 under the ministry of Rev. C. R. Oakley, and united with the Newville Christian church. She was active in all branches of church work, being an untiring worker in the Aid Society. She was a good Christian mother, a splendid neighbor and a true friend, ever ready to assist in sickness and distress. But her work is done and He who wastes not the rain-drop, the blade of grass, or the evening's sighing zephyr, but makes them all to carry out His eternal plans, has given Immortality to the Mortal, and gathered to Himself the spirit of this departed one, that she may live in Mansions which are eternal.

"We count that life not lived in vain
With all its sorrow, sickness, pain,
If, when at last the fight is won,
There comes to her the call—Well Done."

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the neighbors for their assistance during our mother's sickness and death, also the Aid Society and Fraternal Orders for their beautiful floral offerings.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

RUSSIANS MISLED BY LENINE

Claim That Bolshevik Government Establishes Equality Palpably False—Despotic Power Put in Office-holders' Hands.

Article XXII.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

The first great hypocrisy of the bolshevik government was its pretense at establishing equality. Caste and class reminded the Russians of suffering. The soviet government, through the people's commissars, issued the following decree:

"All designations, such as merchant, nobleman, burgher, peasant; titles, such as prince, count, etc., and distinctions of civil ranks, privy, state and other councilors, are abolished, and one designation is established for all the population of Russia—Citizen of the Russian Republic.

Article 4 of the constitution makes bare the insincerity of the decree. It does more. It gives evidence of the great felony committed against the freedom of the Russian people by Lenine.

These three classes shall have the right to hold office and to vote. They are made citizens of Russia by the constitution:

First. All Russians that are eighteen years of age and who have acquired the means of living, through labor that is productive and useful to society, and also persons engaged in housekeeping for the former.

Second. Soldiers of the army and navy.

Third. Members of the former two classes, when incapacitated.

But the constitution goes further; it tells who shall not hold office and shall not vote:

First. Persons who employ hired labor in order to obtain profit.

Second. Persons who have an income, such as interest in capital, rents, receipts from property, etc.

Third. Private merchants, trade and commercial brokers.

Fourth. Monks and clergy of all denominations.

Fifth. Employees and agents of the former police, the gendarmery, and the czar's secret service; also members of the former reigning dynasty.

Sixth. The demented or mentally deficient.

Seventh. Persons who have been deprived by a soviet of their rights of citizenship, because of selfishness, or dishonorable offenses, for the period fixed by the sentence.

Makes Officeholders Despots.

Section 7 affords great opportunity for construction; the soviets are given power to disfranchise citizens, because of "selfishness or dishonorable offenses." Who is to say what shall constitute these offenses? The courts? No. The people? No. The political officeholders? Yes. When we remember that the first thing that the bolsheviks did when they came into power was to drive from the soviets every one who disagreed with the bolshevik plan of communism, at once and by force, it is easy to understand the terrible power given in this phrase and the tyrannical use that may be made of it. Every difference of opinion with their methods or plans would be a selfish and dishonorable offense in the eyes of the bolshevik rulers, and the foolhardy dissenter could be stripped of his citizenship, and, no doubt, would be. This section writes the death warrant of freedom of opinion; it gives to the soviets a bludgeon with which to beat a man out of citizenship who ventures an opinion at variance with the imposed order. It makes the citizen the servant, the officeholder the master; it is government upside down.

In a note to Section 64 of Article 4 of the constitution, we learn the local soviets may, with the consent of the people's commissars, "lower the age qualification for voters."

What a splendid opportunity this joker in the constitution offers for political jockeying. If the central power discovers it is about to lose control of a village or rural soviet, it has the power to nip the uprising in the bud. The people's commissars can arrange with the minority in the soviet in question to reduce the age limit and give the vote to young boys and girls. When it is remembered that the constitution directs the people's commissar of education to introduce in all schools and educational institutions of Russia the study and explanation and justification of the bolshevik constitution, it is not hard to understand that young people into whose minds have been driven and drilled a reverence for bolshevism and its methods, could be expected to vote for and support the bolshevik program.

Best Citizens Disfranchised.

Three groups of people classified by their occupations are permitted citizenship. They are the members of the army and navy, the working men and women, and the peasants who do not hire labor. Every one else is made an outcast. The man who has saved a little money, earned in the sweat of his face, and invested it, is not permitted to become a citizen; the man who has a little shop—it may represent the sacrifices and savings of his whole life—comes under the ban, he is unfit for free citizenship in bolshevik Russia; the farmer who hires help, and almost every farmer is compelled to employ help in the harvest time, is a criminal exploiter and he is denied the right to vote or hold an office.

The man who devotes his life to religion, who comforts the poor, visits the sick, the servant of God, is driven from the political house; he is denied the right to vote. It is dangerous to give the thrifty, the industrious, the vote. The fact that they were born in Russia, that their parents and grandparents were natives to the soil for centuries, means nothing. These disfranchised ones speak the Russian language; it is their only tongue. Their blood has had a part in Russian suffering. The bolshevik constitution exiles them. They are natives without a country; and why? Because by honesty and industry they have saved a little; because they have tried to get on. Lenine says such people are filled with dangerous ambition; they are climbing the ladder of capitalism; they are dangerous to the proletariat.

The soldier is not an employer of labor; he cannot be; he is given a vote. The sailor is not an employer of labor; he cannot be; he is given a vote.

The constitutional provision defining citizenship puts a premium on indolence, a penalty on industry; it encourages waste; it punishes economy; it makes the successful an outcast; it makes of the ne'er-do-well a citizen; frugality, thrift and industry are crimes; those who possess these qualities are branded as undesirables; they are denied citizenship.

No Possible Justification.

Lenine tries to justify all of this by saying that in the transition from capitalism to socialism it is necessary to rule with an iron hand. Capitalism must be destroyed. Even so, what right has Lenine, without the consent of the majority, to take citizenship from native Russians? What is his excuse for it? Where is the force of his argument? Even admitting, for the sake of argument, that communism, bolshevism, is a panacea for all the ills of the human race, what right has Lenine and his minority to force it on the people of Russia? Conceding his creed is for the common good, is it not his first duty to make the people see and understand its virtues, and then, by and with the majority consent, put the creed to the test? To assert that his program is economic does not change the fact that his methods are not democratic. The Lenine system of disfranchising the people is bound to demoralize them.

How can a people be free without learning self-reliance, without trying self-government? Proclaiming people free does not make them free. Freedom is action. It is thinking. It is the ability to govern one's self. It comes from experience and exercise in governing one's self. The definition of freedom is self-determination, and the word "self" is an important part of the definition. Admitting for the moment that Lenine is trying to govern the people for their benefit, although he is not giving them a thinking part in the government, does it not follow that his methods incapacitate the people for self-government? How can a child learn to walk except by trying, and even though the child stumbles and falls, is bruised and hurt, these experiences are part of the education in walking.

Real Test of Freedom.

The right to vote is the test of freedom. Rob a free man of his voting right and you make of him something less than a free man. It does not matter whether you treat him well or not, if you rule him without giving him a say in his own government, you destroy his independence. Suppose the constitution of a debating society, a lodge, a farmer's grange, a labor union, declared that some members could hold office and vote, while others were not eligible for office and could not vote. What would be the position in the body of those who were denied all right of participation in its affairs? They would be compelled to obey the rules, do the bidding and bow to the wish of those who had the right to vote. What would be the effect upon the voteless ones? They would be demoralized; they would become nonentities. Those possessing the voting power would grow arrogant, arbitrary and autocratic. The war of the ages, the struggle of all history, has been the fight of men for equality in government. The right to vote is the test.

World in Danger From Plague.

Danger from plague-infected ports in the Mediterranean is pointed out by Doctor Beaumets of the Pasteur institute, who says that reports show a recrudescence of the plague, especially in Syria, Saloniki, Alexandria and Constantinople, where energetic measures are being taken, especially for the protection of allied troops. Doctor Beaumets expresses the opinion that the plague will not become general, but urges strict sanitary measures at French ports.

"Same Insolent Germany"

At the annual public meeting of the French Academy of Science President Guignard told of the part played by science in the victory of the Allies, and explained the inventions produced to oppose the devices used by the enemy.

M. Guignard declared that Germany today was the same as before, with the same insolent scorn for promises made and the same hope for an opportune return of her strength.

Seen and Heard In Indiana

South Bend.—Because of the high price of imported vegetables, a movement has been started here to organize a garden truck company which will also handle hothouse vegetables during the winter. The proposed company will probably be headed by Byron B. Miller, city sealer of weights and measures, who also has charge of the public market in this city. The St. Joseph County Holstein Breeders' association has started a movement for the organization of Holstein calf clubs in St. Joseph and adjoining counties. The association will also conduct public sales of Holstein cattle, the first of which will take place on the Notre Dame farm October 15-20. Between 60 and 100 head will be offered for sale at that time.

Washington.—An organization, to be known as the White River Valley Flood Control association, was perfected at a meeting held here of farmers from Daviess, Knox, Greene, Owen, Pike and Gibson counties. It proposes to straighten White river from Worthington to its mouth near Mount Carmel, Ill., and thereby save the crops on 200,000 acres of southern Indiana river bottom land that are menaced by floods several times every year. Each county is to have four representatives, including the county vice chairman, at district meetings of the association, with one vote for each county.

Peru.—Prof. George DeMuth, a government bee expert, is here for a month taking care of his 200 colonies at his mother's home south of Peru. Professor DeMuth says there is an abundance of honey and that prospects for a good crop during the next few months are excellent. Also the clover crop at present is productive and within a few weeks bees will begin to gather great quantities of honey from the basswood trees which have more bloom on them now than in many years.

Indianapolis.—Five of seventy-eight men indicted on charges of conspiracy to violate the Reed amendment by transportating liquor illegally from Henderson, Ky., to Evansville, were found guilty by a jury in the federal court here. They are Edgar Schmitt, chief of the Evansville police department; Abe and Moses Klyman, wholesale liquor dealers; Andrew Freidle, police captain, and Fred Ossenburg, politician. All are residents of Evansville.

Huntington.—Ervin Franks, formerly of Bluffton, who has been living in Huntington several months, was fined $10 and costs in the city court on a charge of selling impure food. A similar fine was assessed against him on a petit larceny charge, to which was added 30 days in jail. Franks was also ordered to pay back to two grocers the amounts he had obtained through the alleged theft and sale of rotten eggs.

Muncie.—All members of the faculty of the Indiana State Normal school, eastern division, were re-elected for terms of fifteen years, at a meeting of the board of trustees of the school held in Muncie. Professor T. J. Breitwieser was named dean, temporarily, to take the place of Professor W. O. Lynch, who is head of the history department at the school, and who is to be away on leave of absence.

Noblesville.—Claude Johnson and Clyde Overman, farmers of Hamilton county have made assignments for the benefit of their creditors. Clyde Clark has been appointed trustee for Johnson, whose assets are said to be $25,000 and liabilities $40,000. Bailey Hawkins has been appointed trustee for Overman, whose assets are given at $35,000 and liabilities at $30,000.

Evansville.—H. S. Sadler, living in Kentucky south of Evansville, has sold his tobacco crop raised on 20 acres of ground for $7,500. Vanderburg county farmers are having trouble with aphids, commonly known as plant lice. The insects are attacking trees.

Laporte.—Plans are bing made for the expenditure of $50,000 for the improvement of the LaPorte fairground. The Fair association expects to build a new grandstand and an auditorium which will be a memorial building to the soldiers of the world war.

Auburn.—Farmers of DeKalb county will pool their wool rather than take the present price paid for their product. The farmers will sack their own wool, prepare it for shipment and then hold it.

Petersburg.—Raspberries have appeared on the Petersburg market, selling at 35 cents a quart. The crop will be large. The early blackberries are beginning to ripen and the crop will exceed that of last year.

Greencastle.—Dr. George R. Grose, president of DePauw university, at the annual commencement exercises of the university announced gifts to the institution during the year totaling $411,045.

Logansport.—The Cass County Chamber of Commerce sent a request to the state board of health at Indianapolis to send a health officer to Logansport to take charge of the typhoid situation that has developed in Shulstown, a part of this city. Many cases of the disease have been reported within the last few weeks and several deaths have resulted.

Logansport.—Cass county wool growers will ship their wool to a Chicago firm. Bidders for the wool for delivery in Logansport failed to give the price asked by the farmers.

Terre Haute.—More than $2,000,000 in wages was lost in the month of May in 194 mines in the vicinity of Terre Haute. Miners could have earned that amount if the mines had operated steadily, acording to a report made public. Labor trouble, which caused the mines to shut down, was responsible for a loss of $399,013 figured on a basis of $1 a ton. There was a loss of $1,715,181 on account of car shortage. Wages were decreased $81,713 by breakdowns in mining machinery. The total number of tons of coal produced was 1,404,687, while the full time capacity is 3,601,144 tons, or more than twice the amount produced. The percentage of time worked was 43.6. The car shortage was responsible for more than half of the time lost.

Gary.—Frank B. McElroy of Hammond, who was defeated according to election returns at the recent primary for the nomination for state senator from Lake county on the Republican ticket by a margin of twenty votes in favor of C. O. Holmes of Gary, and who contested the election returns, has been declared the winner by a majority of 78 over Holmes in the judicial recount of the ballots. The recount showed McElroy to have received 4,331 votes in the county as against 4,253 votes cast for Holmes. Two entire precincts in the county were thrown out by the commissioners because the election clerks had failed to write their initials on the ballots.

Indianapolis.—Charges aggregating $2,663.38 against seven public officials in Dubois county are contained in reports the state board of accounts has made on the examinations of the offices by field examiners. Two of the reports are based on payments to nuns who taught in the public schools, contrary to law as interpreted by the state legal department. It is the understanding at the statehouse that powerful supporters of the nuns propose to carry the affairs to the courts in hope of establishing that nuns have the right to teach in the Indiana public schools despite the law as now interpreted.

Indianapolis.—The state highway commission has decided that it will advance to contractors building state highways 100 per cent of the contract price a mile on the completion of each mile of road. The advance is not to be regarded as final until the whole is completed. Heretofore the limit was 80 per cent. The change was effected after a conference the commission held with contractors who have been conferring on the subject. The commission declined to lower gravel standards as proposed.

Lafayette. — Tippecanoe county thrasherman at a meeting recently adopted a new price schedule, which is slightly higher than last year's scale. The prices set are as follows: Rye, 10 cents a bushel; wheat, 8 cents; oats, 4 cents and clover seed, $3. Last year's prices were: Rye, 8 cents; wheat, 7 cents; oats, 3 cents, and clover seed, $2.50. The thrashermen say that the crop outlook in the county is poor and that labor employed in the operation of thrashing machines is scarce.

Greenfield.—According to a decision of Hancock wool growers, their wool will be consigned to the National Wool & Warehouse Storage company of Chicago. The company agrees to receive, grade, store, assume all risks, sell and ship the wool to the purchaser at a cost of three cents a pound to the producer, which includes storage for five months if necessary. The wool will be shipped in early July.

Alexandria.—David Harris, a constable who has been connected with justice of peace courts in Alexandria for more than sixty-two years, has handed his resignation to the county clerk. He says his salary is not sufficient to meet the high cost of living demands. Mr. Harris was connected with the first court established in Monroe township. He expects to enter business for himself.

Lafayette.—Four out of every five students at Purdue university, or more than 2,000 of the 2,500 enrolled, are paying part or all of their own expenses, according to data compiled recently after an employment survey by the university Young Men's Christian association, secretary. They are doing it either by working during the school year or summer vacations or both.

Evansville.—Cutting of wheat in Vanderburg county is expected to start in a few days. Many fields are about ready for the binder. The crop looks considerably better than it did a month or six weeks ago. The acreage this year is not much more than one-half what it was last year.

Goshen. — The Sandusky-Portland Cement company at Syracuse, is spending $150,000 to equip the plant for the manufacture of cement from limestone instead of marl. Great quantities of limestone will be shipped to Syracuse from Logansport and other Indiana towns.

Rochester.—The wool clip of Fulton county will be held for better prices. It is said the price of wool has dropped nearly 60 per cent in the last two weeks.

Indianapolis.—Indiana cities which are manufacturing more ice than they need are being called on by Stanley Wyckoff, fair price commissioner for Indiana, to provide ice for cities now facing ice famines. Mr. Wyckoff has announced. He has turned his office into a clearing house to receive reports of shortages and surpluses so that ice manufactured in the state may be distributed as equitably as possible.

Mishawaka.—Mishawaka has a population of 15,195, an increase of 3,509 or 27.8 per cent.

SPOOL HOLDERS.

Every girl who is interested in sewing will want one of the handy spool holders shown in the following illustrations.

The spool holder illustrated in Figs. 1 and 2 is made of a cardboard box in which letter stationery was purchased. Sticks of the right size can be got from a carpenter, or whittled from a piece of straight-grained pine, or bird-cage perches sandpapered to a uniform thickness will do. The sticks support the spools (Fig. 2), and their ends rest in holes punched through the ends of the cardboard box. Care must be taken in locating the holes to get them on a line with one another, and directly opposite. If your stationery box is of the same size as that in the illustration, there will be room upon each stick for four spools. Directly opposite the center of the position for each spool, punch a small hole through the side of the box, as shown, through which to run the end of the thread.

Care must be used in covering the box to put the cretonne on evenly, and to glue down its edges. As a finishing touch, attach a piece of ribbon of the right length to go around the box and tie in a bow.

The spool holder in Fig. 3 is more of a novelty than the one just described. A letter-stationery box or candy box forms a receptacle for spools and a base for the girl and boy figures. By Fig. 4 it will be seen how the head of the figure is fastened upon a stick that slips through the hole in a spool and into the box base, and by Fig. 3 it will be seen that the spool forms the body, and that the legs are painted upon the side of the box.

Figure 5 is a pattern for the head of the girl figure. Use stiff letter-paper for the head. Dimensions are not given, because it is just about as easy to mark out a small figure like this by eye as by measurement. Use a ruler with which to draw the straight lines. Each side of the head may have a face drawn upon it as shown. Figure 6 shows a larger picture of the face and cap. The fingers upon the edge of the strip between the face and back of the head, are provided for bending over and gluing, to hold the parts together. Figure 7 shows how the stick on which the head is mounted runs through holes punched through the cardboard strip. Figure 8 is a pattern for the boy figure. Figure 9 will aid you in marking the features upon the face.

The sticks upon which the heads are mounted are pushed through holes punched in the cover of the cardboard box base. To support them, spools are glued to the inside of the box cover, with their holes directly over the holes in the cover, for sockets for the stick ends.

The top, sides and ends of the box base may be covered with cretonne or colored paper. I would advise colored paper, because it can be used for the clothes of the girl and boy, also.

As they resumed their talk Alice, it seemed, was relating something of moment for Arrowsmith's benefit, referring now and then to Mrs. Farnsworth as though for corroboration. The scene in the box was almost as interesting as any in the play, and the audience watched with deep absorption. Alice, the least self-conscious of mortals, was, I knew, utterly unaware of the curious gaze of the house; whatever she was saying with an occasional gesture of her gloved hand or a shrug of her shoulders possessed her completely. I thought she might be telling Arrowsmith of her adventures at Barton; but the length of her narrative was against this, and Arrowsmith's attitude was more that of a critic appealed to for an opinion than of a polite listener to a story. He nodded his head several times, and finally, as Alice, with a slight dip of the head and an outward movement of her arms, settled back in her chair, he patted his hands approvingly.

In my absorption I had forgotten Montani's existence, but as the third act began I saw that he had gone. Whether I should put myself in Alice's way as she left the theater was still an undetermined question when the play ended. With Montani hanging about I felt a certain obligation to warn her that he had been watching her. I was among the first to leave, and in the foyer I met Forsythe, the house manager, who knew me as a friend of Searles.

"You notice that we're still turning 'em away," he remarked. "We don't have to worry about this piece; everybody who sees it sends his friends the next day. Searles hasn't looked in for some time; hope he's writing a new play?"

"He's West visiting his folks. Don't know when he'll be back," I answered. "I must write him that Sir Cecil Arrowsmith enjoyed 'Who Killed Cock Robin?' just as much as common mortals."

Forsythe had paused at the box-office, and in my uncertainty I stuck to him as the crowd began to surge by.

Arrowsmith's approach was advertised by the peculiar type of tall hat that he affected, and the departing audience made way for him, or hung back to stare. At his left were Alice and Mrs. Farnsworth, and they must pass quite close to me. "Who Killed Cock Robin?" was a satisfying play that sent audiences away with lightened hearts and smiling faces, and the trio were no exception to the rule.

Listening inattentively to Forsythe, I was planning to join Alice when the trio should reach me. She saw me; there was a fleeting flash of recognition in her eyes, and then she turned toward Arrowsmith. She drew nearer; her gaze met mine squarely, but now without a sign to indicate that she had ever seen me before. She passed on, talking with greatest animation to Arrowsmith.

"Well, remember me to Searles if you write him," I heard Forsythe saying. I clutched his arm as he opened the office door.

"Who are those women?" I demanded.

"You may search me! I see you have a good eye. That girl's rather nice to look at!"

Crowding my way to the open, I blocked the path of orderly, sane citizens awaiting their machines until a policeman pushed me aside. Alice I saw for a bewildering instant, framed in the window of a big limousine that rolled away uptown.

I had been snubbed! No snub had ever been delivered more deliberately, with a nicer calculation of effect, than that administered to me by Alice Bashford—a girl with whom, until a moment before, I had believed myself on terms of cordial comradeship. She had cut me; Alice who had asked me at the very beginning of our acquaintance to call her by her first name—Alice had cut me without the quiver of a lash.

I walked to the Thackeray and settled myself in a dark corner of the reading room, thoroughly bruised in spirit. In my resentment I meditated flying to Ohio to join Searles, always my chief resource in trouble. Affairs at Barton might go to the devil. If Alice and her companion wanted to get rid of me, I would not be sorry to be relieved of the responsibility I had assumed in trying to protect them. With rising fury I reflected that by the time they had shaken off Montani and got rid of the prisoner in the tool house they would think better of me.

"Telephone call, sir."

I followed the boy to the booth in a rage that any one should disturb my gloomy reflections.

"Mr. Singleton? Oh! This is Alice speaking—"

I clutched the shelf for support. Not only was it Alice speaking, but in the kindest voice imaginable. My anger passed, but my amazement at Alice and all her ways blinded me. If she had suddenly stepped through the wall, my surprise could not have been greater.

"You told me the Thackeray was your usual refuge in town, so I thought I'd try it. Are you very, very cross? I'm sorry, really I am—Bob!"

The "Bob" was added lingeringly, propitiating. Huddled in the booth, I doubted my senses—wondering indeed whether Alice hadn't a double—even whether I hadn't dreamed everything that had occurred at Barton.

"I wanted to speak to you ever so much at the theater, but I couldn't very well without introducing you to Sir Cecil, and I wasn't ready to do that. It might have caused complications."

If anything could have multiplied the existing complications, I was anxious to know what they were; but her voice was so gentle, so wholly amiable, that I restrained an impulse to demand explanations.

"Are you on earth or are you speaking from paradise?" I asked.

"Oh, we're in a very nice house, Constance and I; and we're just about having a little supper. I wish you were here, but that can't be arranged. No; really it can't! We shall be motoring back to Barton to-morrow and hope you can join us. Let us have luncheon and motor up together."

When I suggested that I call for them she laughed gayly.

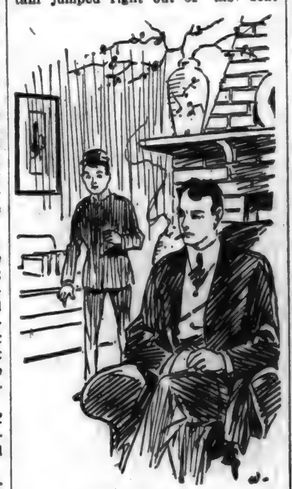
"That would be telling things! And we musn't spoil everything when everything is going so beautifully."

Remembering the man I had locked up in the tool-house and the explanations I should have to make sooner or later to the unimaginative Torrence, I wasn't wholly convinced of the general beauty of the prospect.

"Montani was in the theater," I suggested.

Her laughter rippled merrily over the wire. "Oh, he tried to follow us in a taxi! We had a great time throwing him off in the park. I'm not sure he isn't sitting on the curb right now watching the house ungraciously."

"You have the fan with you; Montani jumped right out of his seat



"Telephone Call, Sir."

when you opened it in the theater."

This she received with more laughter; Montani amused her immensely, she said. She wasn't in the least afraid of him. Returning to the matter of the luncheon, she suggested the Tyringham.

"You know, I want very much to see Mr. Bashford's old home and the place all our veteran retainers came from. At one?—yes. Good night!"

Alice and Mrs. Farnsworth reached the Tyringham on time to the minute. As I had spent the morning on a bench in the park, analyzing my problems, I found their good humor a trifle jarring.

"You don't seem a bit glad to see us," Alice complained as she drew off her gloves. "How can any one be anything but happy after seeing that delicious 'Cock Robin'? It is so deliciously droll."

"I haven't," I remarked with an attempt at severity, "quite your knack of ignoring disagreeable facts. There was Montani right in front of me jumping like a jack-in-the-box every time you flourished your fan. There's that fellow we've got locked up at Barton——"

"Just hear the man, Constance!" she interrupted with her adorable laugh. "We were thinking that he was only beginning to see things our way, the only true way, the jolly way, and here he cometh like a melancholy Jacques! We'll have none of it!"

"We must confess," said Mrs. Farnsworth conciliatingly, "that Mr. Singleton is passing through a severe trial. We precipitated ourselves upon him without warning, and immediately involved him in a mesh of mystery. His imagination must have time to adjust itself."

They were spoiling my appetite; I was perfectly aware of that. I had ordered the best luncheon I knew how to compose, and they were doing full justice to it; but I was acting, I knew, like a resentful boy.

"I love you that way," said Alice as I stared vacantly at my plate. "But you really are not making yourself disagreeable to us—really he is not, Constance!"

Mrs. Farnsworth affirmed this. I knew that I was merely being rude, and the consciousness of this was not uplifting. At the luncheon hour the influx of shoppers gives the Tyringham a cheery tone, and all about us were people apparently conversing sanely and happily. The appearance of Uncle Bash's ghost in the familiar dining room would have been a welcome diversion. I was speculating as to just what he would say about his widow and the whole mess at Barton when Mrs. Farnsworth addressed me pleadingly.

"If you knew that we want you to play with us only a few days longer—three days, shall we say, Alice?—if you knew that then we'll untangle everything, wouldn't you be nice—very nice?"

In spite of myself I couldn't resist this appeal. I was more and more impressed by the fineness, the charm of Mrs. Farnsworth. When she dropped the make-believe foolishness in which she indulged quite as amusingly as Alice, she appeared to be a very sensible person. The humor danced in her eyes now, but her glance was more than an appeal; it was a command.

"If you knew that our troubles are not at all the troubles you're thinking about, but very different—"

"Please pardon me," I muttered humbly, and wished that Alice were not so bewitching in a sailor hat. It may have have been the hat or only Mrs. Farnsworth's pleading tone that brought me to a friendlier attitude toward the universe and its visible inhabitants. The crowd thinned out, but we lingered, talking of all manner of things.

"We must come in again very soon," sand Alice. "And next time we shan't run away, which was very naughty. I suppose when you begin a story you just have to keep it going or it will die on your hands. That's the way with our story, you know. Of course it's unkind to mystify you; but you are in the story just as we are."

My mystification was certainly deep enough without this suggestion that I was a mere character in a tale whose awkward beginning aroused only the gravest apprehensions as to the conclusion. She looked at her watch and continued: "I'm so absurd—really I am, in ever so many ways, that no one would ever put me in a book. Everyone would say no such person ever existed! It's incredible! And so I have to pretend I'm in a story all the time. It's the only way I can keep happy. And so many people are in my story now, not only Montani and the poor fellow locked up at Barton—oh, what if he should escape! Constance, it would be splendid if he should escape!"

"You didn't finish your enumeration of characters," I suggested. "Is my part an important one or am I only a lay figure?"

"My dear boy," cried Mrs. Farnsworth, "you are the hero! You have been the hero from the hour the story began. If you should desert us now, whatever should we do?"

"If I'm the hero," I replied in her own key, "I shall begin making love to Alice at once."

Alice, far from being disturbed by my declaration, nodded her head approvingly.

"Oh, we had expected that! But you needn't be in a hurry. In a story like this one, that runs right on from day to day, we must leave a lot to chance. And there are ever so many chances—"

"Not all on the side of failure, I hope?"

"We must be going." She laughed. I wished she hadn't that characteristic little turn of the head that was so beguiling!

Folly rode with us all the way to Barton. If anything sensible was uttered on the drive, I can't recall it. Our talk, chiefly of knights and ladies, and wild flights from imaginary enemies, had the effect of spurring Flynn to perilous spurts of speed.

Indians and Japanese.

Professor Mena, Mexican scientist, went to Tehuacan in 1908 to investigate a story that in small towns near by Chinese talked in their own tongue to the Indians and were perfectly understood. He found the legend false. Japanese scholars visiting the Mexican museum have been surprised to find articles used by the Indians exactly the same as those used by Japanese peasants.

Filipino Wife's Status.

In the Philippine Islands, when women marry, they go into partnership with their husbands. While the men handle the workers, the women attend to the finance, act as cashiers, pay the workers and oversee much of the business. They also have equality with the men in everything except voting.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

RED-SHOULDERED HAWK.

"I think it is a perfect shame," said the Red-Shouldered Hawk, "that such wrong stories could go around about me, and not only that they could go around about me but that they have gone around about me."

"What wrong stories have gone around about you?" asked the Griffon Vulture.

When the Griffon Vulture had been free and out of the zoo his nest had been high upon a cliff which no creature could reach.

He was a coward as all his family had always been and probably always will be. He wouldn't go after prey which could fight him back such as living prey, but he would feast on things that had been killed.

He had a musky or animal smell which he liked himself!

"What wrong stories have gone around about you and are going around about you?" asked the Griffon Vulture again.

"You see," said the Red-Shouldered Hawk, from his cage, "I lived in Eastern and Northern America before I came to the zoo. I am very much like the red-tailed hawk and he too is very badly treated. The same stories have gone around about him. We look very much alike, Cousin Red-Tailed and I, and our families are very much alike, too.

"You see they have said we were like the hen hawk and that we did the same things as the hen hawk does—stealing chickens and all sorts of things like that.

"Of course we don't. These stories have gone around and it is very hard to stop stories that go around even if they aren't true. We're brown speckled and reddish in color and we're used to wearing these suits and couldn't really change. But we do wish folks would know that we aren't hen hawks."

"Why do you care what they think of you?" asked the Griffon Vulture, his horrible and cruel face turned toward the Red-Shouldered Hawk. "They think horrible things of me," he added.

"Yes," said the Red-Shouldered Hawk, "but they are true. You are a horrible creature, a coward and all sorts of worthless things and you don't mind in the least. You have no desire to be nice."

"Creatures Think We're Hen Hawks."

"That's true enough," said the Griffon Vulture. "I don't see the use in bothering to be nice. It would be such an effort."

"It isn't such an effort for some creatures to be nice. And I do not do the things that the old hen hawk does and neither does my cousin and his family, the Red-Tailed Hawk family.

"We suffer for the sins of the old hen hawk. Creatures think we're hen hawks and persecute us because they think we're bad. Many of our family have been killed because folks thought they belonged to the Hen Hawk family."

"My advice to you," said the Griffon Vulture, "is to be bad and mean and live up to your reputation."

"We couldn't do that for worlds," said the Red-Shouldered Hawk.

"Why not?" asked the Griffon Vulture. "If they think your family behaves in such a way then behave in such a way and get some fun out of your bad reputation."

"We wouldn't disgrace the family name no matter what folks thought of us," said the Red-Shouldered Hawk, "and we're only hoping that one of these days folks will know the truth about us and that we aren't the hen hawks. We hope they will know that there are two kinds of hawks like the hen hawks in looks but not in ways."

"You're queer, all right," said the Griffon Vulture.

"Queer to want to be decent?" asked the Red-Shouldered Hawk. "That is queer to a Griffon Vulture."

"I suppose it is," said the Red-Shouldered Hawk, "but luckily the world isn't made up of Griffon Vultures."

"We wouldn't care to make up the world," the Griffon Vulture ended, "as we like to prey on what other creatures are dead."

"And we want that truth known about us, the truth that we're not bad as they think," ended the Red-Shouldered Hawk.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription.

Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Some people get credit for being patient when in reality they are too cowardly to start something.

THIS isn't one of those fake free treatment offers you have seen so many times. We don't offer to give you something for nothing—but we do guarantee that you can try this wonderful treatment, entirely at our risk, and this guarantee is backed by your local druggist.

This makes the offer one which you can absolutely depend upon, because the druggist with whom you have been trading would not stand behind the guarantee if he did not know it to be an honest and legitimate one.

Hunt's Salve, formerly called Hunt's Cure, has been sold under absolute money back guarantee for more than thirty years. It is especially compounded for the treatment of Eczema, Itch, Ring Worm, Tetter, and other itching skin diseases.

Thousands of letters testify to its curative properties. M. Timerlin, a reputable dry goods dealer in Durant, Oklahoma, says: "I suffered with Eczema for ten years, and spent $1,000.00 for doctors' treatments, without result. One box of Hunt's Cure entirely cured me."

Don't fail to give Hunt's Salve a trial—price 75 cents, from your local druggist, or direct by mail if he does not handle it.

TIME MAKES LITTLE CHANGE

Booth Tarkington Relates Anecdote to Show How Characteristics Prevail to the End.

Novelist Booth Tarkington was talking about the cowardly attack that a gang of Germans had made on a solitary French officer in the restaurant of the Hotel Adlon in Berlin.

"The Germans," he said, "were unspeakable in the beginning, and they will be unspeakable to the end."

He shoook his head thoughtfully.

"People can't change," he said. "Henry Labouchere was born a fearless wit, and a fearless wit he died. A few hours before his death, you know, Labouchere's nephew upset a tiny spirit lamp that was burning by the bedside. The dying man awoke out of a fitful doze and saw the miniature conflagration.

"'Flames?' he said. 'Not yet, I think.'

"And he laughed quizzically and dozed again."

Admiration Goes Out to Him.

We may say a fellow shows bad taste in devoting his life to painting or sculpturing, but at the same time most of us have a sneaking admiration for the one who can naturally do things we can't.

No, Alfred, a girl never suspects a young man's intentions until he asks her whether she can cook.

SHOWED SIGNS OF TIPPLING

Hens' Behavior Caused English Youngster to Be Doubtful of Good Character of Vicinity.

Johnny recently paid his first visit to his aunt's farm in England. The little boy had not been there long before he came running to her in great excitement.

"Aunty," he exclaimed, with the air of one imparting grave news, "I don't think this is a very nice place!"

"Why, what makes you think that, Johnny?" was her amused reply.

"Well, aunty, the public houses (saloons) open very early," was the startling rejoinder. "Nearly all you hens have the hiccoughs already this morning."

The return to favor of ostrich plumes, handsome feather ornaments, and masses of rich flowers, with much elaboration in millinery, places hats for matrons at the apex of spring styles. The three hats shown above include a dress hat with rich ostrich plumes, a smart street hat with a velvet bow, and semi-dress hat in black, with a wonderful feather.

LASHES HIMSELF INTO FURY

Zoologists Explain Why Lion Swishes His Tail When in an Exceptionally Angry Mood.

The one thing which the king of beasts has in common with the tame or garden variety of house cat is his propensity to lash his tail from side to side when he gets very angry, and some zoologists now declare that the end of the lion's tail has a hard and horny skin and that he virtually "lashes himself into a fury" with it. Each time it strikes him it stings and increases his rage, so that he scourges himself as if he were a member of some ancient religious order instead of a mighty hunter.

Placid as the lion looks in the zoo, he can travel swiftly and hunt his prey with skill and courage, though he does not always disdain to devour carrion, despite the stories often told of his fastidious tastes.

When in the zoo he is usually placid and gentle, except at feeding times, but the baby lions are frequently born with cleft palates, so that few of them survive in their homes behind the bars.

The lion is a faithful mate to his wife, but she is fickle and keeps him forever watching her to prevent her sending her whining call out after some prowling Lothario of the forest.

REAL CONTEST.

Representative Walsh of Massachusetts, the "watchdog of the treasury," is about the best domino player in Washington. He recently inveigled "Uncle Joe" Cannon into the game and now they play almost nightly. Walsh also has many hot contests with Representative Scott of Michigan.

"Who would have thought, when I was chucked away in that fishing station up at Woods Hole, Mass., many years ago, that some day I'd be playing this great indoor game with famous ex-speakers and great statesmen," Walsh said the other night.

SUGAR BEET SEED

The estimated production of sugar beet seed grown by beet sugar manufacturers and sugar-beet growers associated with them for 1918 is approximately 6,000,000 pounds. This estimated production is from 6,014 acres reported in the seed survey of July 1, 1918. In addition there are several hundred acres of sugar beet seed grown by independent growers which are not included in this report.

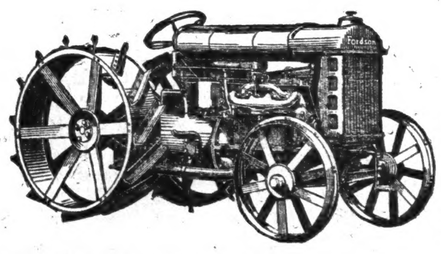
FORDSON FARM Tractor

The Fordson cuts the cost of preparing land almost to half of what it costs with horses. But even more important is the fact that the Fordson saves from thirty to fifty per cent of the farmer's time. And time saved—getting fields in shape to plant in the proper season; getting things done when they should be done—means money to the farmer. Besides it solves the labor problem.

As ever, the machine-way is proving more efficient, faster, easier than the old way. In the factory, the machine increases production, saves labor—produces more at less cost. And that is what the Fordson does on the farm. The Fordson way is the machine way of farming. And it is the least expensive way of machine farming. Besides it solves the labor problem.

The Fordson's first cost is the lowest in the market; and the after—or separating—cost is lowest. It is a compact, easily handled tractor, backed by the greatest tractor service organization in the United States.



The Fordson is made by Henry Ford & Son and sold by

CHIC SEPARATE SKIRTS

Nothing is better accredited for the summer wardrobe than separate skirts and they are made of many different materials. Beginning with such sheer goods as georgette and organdie they progress through satins and heavy silks to fabrics of wool and heavy cottons for utility skirts. They often are narrowed toward the bottom and they all have pockets—real or imitation—designed with a cleverness never equaled. A fine example appears above in a skirt that is ankle length and it may be made of any of the heavier fabrics mentioned, in weaves designed especially for separate skirts or sport suits.

BREAK IN TRAIN'S SCHEDULE

Fair Driver of Auto Had a Hunch, and the Sequel Proved She Was Correct.

Let me recommend a ride in a new car with a woman driver as the best prescription for a thrill that will last a lifetime, writes a correspondent. Mine came when, after reluctantly accepting an invitation to ride from a friend who had just received her new machine, we mounted the incline to a grade crossing in a suburb and started across the tracks. In the exact middle the engine stopped and nothing we could do had the slightest effect on it. While working we were approached by an excited flagman.

"A limited is due here in two minutes," he said, "and it never has stopped at this station."

"It will today," calmly replied my friend. And it did, but not before it had been flagged and the train crew helped boost us from the rails.

Acid Stomach

Makes the Body Sour

Nine Out of Ten People Suffer From It

It sends its harmful acids and gases all over the body, instead of health and strength. Day and night this ceaseless damage goes on. No matter how strong, its victim cannot long withstand the health-destroying effects of an acid stomach.

Good news for millions of sufferers. Chemists have found a sure remedy—one that takes the acid up and carries it out of the body; of course, when the cause is removed, the sufferer gets well.

Bloating, indigestion, sour, acid, gassy stomach miseries all removed. This is proven by over half a million ailing folks who have taken EATONIC with wonderful benefits. It can be obtained from any druggist, who will cheerfully refund its trifling cost if not entirely satisfactory. Everyone should enjoy its benefits. Frequently the first tablet gives relief.

MAN IS AFTER INFORMATION

After Listening to Much Sage Advice, Bill Jones Wants One Matter Cleared Up.

Our friend Bill Jones is a traveling man and needs rest, but unfortunately he doesn't sleep well. He has consulted a number of doctors in the various towns he visits, and being a systematic person has made a sort of digest of the advice he has received. It sums up as follows:

Don't sleep on your left side, as that creates a pressure on the heart.

Don't sleep on your right side, as it interferes with the action of the right lung.

Don't sleep on your back, as that is bad for the nervous system.

Don't sleep on your stomach, as that causes a pressure bad for the digestion.

"Don't sleep in a chair, as the body cannot properly relax.

Bill wants to know if anyone can tell him how to keep from falling over when he sleeps standing up.

Taking After Mother.

Bert just came home from college, and he had a "shadow" on his upper lip. He stopped to say "Hello" to his grandfather.

His grandfather looked him over and said, "Why, son, you look more like your mother every day."

"What makes you think so?" asked Bert.

"Why, because your father had a mustache that came down to his chin. Just look at that one of yours; you must take after your mother."

1735—Oct. 19, John Adams born, Braintree, Mass.
1755—Graduated at Harvard.
1764—Married.
1774-77—In Congress.
1778-85—On Mission to France.
1785-88—Minister to England.

A SCHOOLGIRL complained that American history was so "littered up with Adamses" that she couldn't tell one from the other. Yet this most distinguished family in our national biography lived in America one hundred and fifty years before it broke into fame.

When the engagement was announced of John Adams of Braintree, Mass., to the daughter of Parson Smith of the adjoining town of Weymouth, people were shocked that Abby should marry so beneath her station. Was she not a Quincy and a Norton? And John, the son of a small farmer, was put down to fourteenth place among his twenty-four classmates, when Harvard catalogues were made up according to social rank. After that he taught school in Worcester to get enough money to study law, and the strictest of the Puritans looked on lawyers as ungodly.

Father-in-Law Smith was game, and tradition says that he preached down his gossiping parishioners from this well-chosen text: "John came neither eating bread nor drinking wine, and ye say he hath a devil!"

Abigail Adams.

Although she never went to school, this parson's daughter was by long odds the cleverest in the entire line of our president's wives, her published letters forming a delightfully human document in our too often unhuman history. When John joined the fathers of the republic in the great work of setting up the most masculine government the world ever saw, this mother of the republic had to stay home to rock the cradle, cook and patch for four little Adamses and to tend the farm. Milking and churning, knitting and darning, teaching and praying, toiling and saving, she supported the family, inspired her husband in his progress to the presidency, and reared a son to follow in the father's footsteps.

In the war, it fell to Adams to do picket duty in Europe. Congress sent him to France with a thoughtful warning to put in the bottom of his dispatch bag plenty of lead or stone or other weighty substance to sink his papers. For his own neck no protection was proposed in event of the British capturing a signer of the rebel manifesto of July 4, 1776. Nevertheless, he took with him on the perilous trip his ten-year-old son, John Quincy.

On the next voyage, he carried not only John Quincy, but also his second son, and they were shipwrecked off the coast of Spain.

After five long, anxious years of separation from husband and children, the mother herself sailed to Europe, and the pioneer American woman to appear at the Court of St. James was Abigail, the farmerette of Braintree. Her presentation costume, according to her own description, was white lutestring "covered with white crepe, festooned with lilac ribbon and mock-point lace, over a hoop of enormous extent, and with a narrow train three yards long; also ruffle cuffs, treble lace ruffles and dress cap, with long lace lappets and two white plumes."

"You will be stared at a great deal," the Duke of Dorset kindly warned the Adamses. On the contrary, every back in the court circle was turned upon the Yankee rebels and Queen Charlotte received Abigail with "contempt and scorn."

A man can defend himself always, as Abigail's husband did right manfully when it fell to him to be the first independent American to stand before the throne of England. George III venturing to infer from his supposed dislike of France, a preference for England, his one-time subject frankly corrected the king: "I must avow to your majesty that I have no attachment but to my own country."

AN UNHAPPY PRESIDENT

1788—John Adams elected vice president.
1792—Re-elected vice president.
1796—Elected president.
1797—Inaugurated second president, aged 61.
1800—Concluded peace with France. Defeated for second term by Jefferson.
1820—Member of Massachusetts constitutional convention.
1826—July 4, died, aged 90.

PROBABLY John Adams was the unhappiest man who ever sat in the presidential chair. One of a dozen unwanted presidents, who were taken only because the men that were wanted could not be elected, this humble role embittered all the remaining days of the proudest man in the line of our chief magistrates.

It was hard enough for Adams to be the understudy even of George Washington, while serving as vice president. When he became president it was maddening to his ego that he should be expected to play second fiddle to Alexander Hamilton, the master spirit of the old governing class, left over from colonial times and which controlled the Federalist party.

The president made the fatal mistake of keeping Washington's cabinet, which really had passed under the control of Hamilton, who presumed to direct the new administration, very much as a Tammany boss puts a Tammany mayor through his paces.

Like aristocracies everywhere, the Federalists were thrown into a state of panic by the French revolution and by the rise of the Jeffersonian democracy in our yet aristocratic republic. In their alarm they frantically rushed through congress the alien and sedition acts, which became only millstones about their necks, sinking their party forever. Not satisfied with shutting the revolution out of the New World, many of them were for joining the monarchical coalition against it in the Old World. In an uproarious quarrel with the absurd French directory, the militia was called out and Washington summoned to command it, after which the president astonished the jingoes by suddenly throwing them over and returning to a pacific policy.

As he had been the first minister to England, John Adams was also the first president to take up his residence in Washington. As Mrs. Adams had been the wife of the first American envoy in London she was also the first mistress of the White House, if for only a few months. On the way from Philadelphia she and the president lost their trail in the wilderness until a "straggling black" came to their assistance.

The capitol was yet unfinished, and out of a desolate bog, far off, the unfinished White House rose to view. There was neither a fence nor a tree about the structure, and the president's nearest neighbor dwelt half a mile away. Mrs. Adams had a hard time to get wood enough to keep her family warm in the big, bleak mansion, and she smiles at us still as her letters tell us of how she hung her washing to dry in the great east room.

After sitting at his desk until midnight hastily signing appointments, to forestall his successor, Adams drove out of Washington at the dawning of the day of Jefferson's inauguration. He had no smiles to bestow on the triumph of his rival, and few enough to light his own pathway, through his remaining years.

After his brave, good helpmeet had been taken from him, he lived on eight years more, lived to see what no other ex-president has seen, a son in the White House. At ninety, as he lay dying in the sunset of the fiftieth Fourth of July, we are told that his thoughts turned to the first and most glorious Fourth and that his lips murmured "Thomas Jefferson still survives." The author of the Declaration really had died a few hours before, and in their flight from earth the spirits of the two old patriots of '76 were strangely united again.

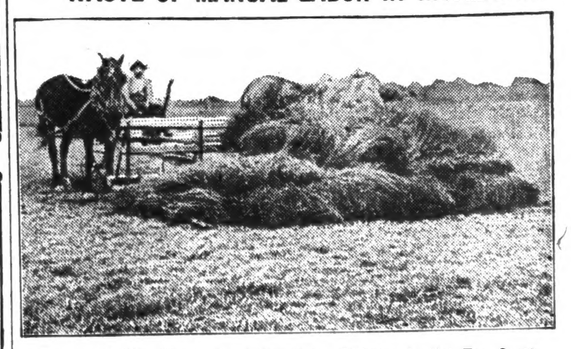
CAREFULLY-MADE PLANS WILL PREVENT WASTE OF MANUAL LABOR IN HAYMAKING



This Is the Best Way to Haul Hay If the Distance Is Not Too Great.

The hay crop, even when the labor supply is normal, causes more worry, anxiety, and disappointment than any other crop. The time for harvesting is comparatively short. Other crops require attention at the same time. And the weather is to be reckoned with. This year, when farm labor all over the country is very scarce, the difficulties of haymaking will be much greater, and larger quantities of hay will be lost than usual—unless labor-saving methods are more generally employed.

A great deal of labor is wasted every year during hay harvest, say specialists of the United States department of agriculture, not because of actual idleness on the part of the workers, but because labor is expended unnecessarily on operations that do not utilize it to the best advantage. If an old method can be superseded by a new one that will enable the same number of men to accomplish more work in the same length of time, or fewer men to accomplish the same work in the same length of time, it will mean more hay saved, more profit to the farmer and a better condition for the country.

Shift Burden From Man to Horse.

Although there is a scarcity of man labor, there are still plenty of horses on most farms, and herein largely lies the solution of the problem. On farms where considerable hay is grown methods must be adopted by which the greater part of the heavy labor is done by horses. This will necessitate the general use of certain types of labor-saving machinery, some of them not so common in the East, which have been thoroughly tested and proved satisfactory in the western part of the United States. The small hay grower, however, need not make a very heavy investment in new haying apparatus, for by rearranging the working of his crew and using a little more horse labor for the hard work he can add considerably to the efficiency of his crew.

Here are some suggestions made by the specialists for avoiding waste of labor in haymaking:

Do not run two or more mowers close together. If the front mower has any trouble that causes it to stop, all of the mowers usually wait while repairs are made on one. There is a tendency, also, for drivers to waste too much time talking when they stop occasionally to let the teams rest. A good practice when two or more machines are used is for each driver to lay off a "land" for himself and work independently, so there will be no interference from other machines.

Side Delivery Rake Is Best.

Do not turn hay by hand. It is too costly. The cheapest and most efficient way of stirring hay in the windrow is with a two-horse tedder. One man will do more work than 12 men stirring with hand forks. It is not even necessary to have a man to run the tedder. A boy big enough to drive a team will do just as much work.

A one-horse rake operated by a man makes raking very costly. A two-horse sulky rake is better, but the side-delivery rake is best. When curing is done in the swath and a hay loader is used, the crew can start taking the hay from the windrow as soon as the side delivery has made one double windrow across the field. If the sulky rake is used, the crew will have to wait until the rake has gone several times across the field. In this matter the extent of the haying operations has to be considered, of course. On very small farms the use of the side-delivery rake might not be economy.

If the weather is clear and the hay is in proper condition, there will be no necessity for hay-caps or for further labor till the hay is thoroughly cured and ready to be hauled. But hay-caps will pay for themselves in one year when the weather is bad. They are more especially needed with clover, alfalfa and pea vines, all of which cure slowly.

If hay is to be bunched, the hand method is too expensive. A two-horse sulky rake can bunch 30 acres or more a day and a boy can drive it just as well as a man. Even more labor can be saved, however, by using the push rake to bunch hay after it has been raked into the windrow. It is a good plan to have two men working together to round up the bunches, since more can be accomplished than when each works alone.

It is a waste of time to pitch hay onto a small hayrack on a high-wheeled wagon. Use a large hayrack on a low-wheeled wagon.

Loading hay with pitchforks is the hardest, slowest and most expensive way. The men are working constantly, but the horses are doing nothing most of the time. If a loader is used, the hardest part of the work is done by the horses and the men can handle about 30 per cent more hay.

Save Labor on the Stack.

The push rake furnishes the most economical method of hauling hay to the stack, barn, or hay press if the distance is not much more than one-fourth of a mile. One man, or a boy, with a good push rake and a team used to the work will handle three times as much hay as two men with a small rack on a high-wheeled wagon.

Stacking hay with a push rake and an overshot stacker mounted on wheels eliminates nearly all of the back-breaking work of the old pitchfork method. With a yield of one to one and a half tons to the acre, two men on the stack can easily handle all the hay brought in by three push rakes, accomplishing a vast saving in labor and hay over the pitchfork method. Another method not so good but still vastly better than the pitchfork method is a stacker equipment with a double harpoon fork. The outfit can be made at home and will cost very little compared with the labor it saves, but harder work is necessary to get the hay on the stack than with the overshot stacker.

When hay is to be baled from the field, one man by working in the afternoon can round up enough hay which has been bunched by push rakes to keep the press going next morning until the dew is gone from the hay in the windrow. When the hay is not thus rounded up the crew will lose two hours or more on mornings when there is a heavy dew.

Carelessness in setting the press may result in loss of labor. When the press is properly set two men can get plenty of hay to it from the stack.

COMMERCIAL ACREAGE OF VEGETABLE CROPS

Compared With Last Year Marked Reduction Is Shown.

Estimates Based on Reports Received From Seed Growers—Increase Is Indicated for Sugar Beet and Garden Peas.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The prospective commercial acreage of vegetable-seed crops for 1920, compared with last year, shows marked reductions in the acreage reported for dwarf snap beans, all beet, carrot, lettuce, onion seed, radish, spinach, sweet corn, and tomato seed, while a slightly increased acreage is reported for garden pole beans, cucumber, muskmelon, watermelon, parsley, pepper, pumpkin, and Swede turnip seed.

These estimates are based on reports received by the bureau of markets, early in April from commercial vegetable-seed growers and are as accurate and complete as it was possible to obtain at that time.

The estimated prospective production for 1920 (computed on the basis of the acreage reported and the average yield per acre for the four-year period 1916-1919), compared with that for 1919, is about 35 per cent less for sweet corn and English turnip; 50 per cent less for dwarf snap beans, celery, parsnip, and squash; 60 per cent less for cabbage and radish; and about 80 per cent less for garden and mangel beet, carrot, onion seed, and spinach; while an increase is indicated of 20 per cent for sugar beet and garden peas and 50 per cent for onion sets.

The estimated acreage and prospective production for 1920 are more comparable with those for 1917, and the reductions in acreage and production as noted should not be taken as an indication that the vegetable-seed growing industry in this country is on the decline from that of prewar years.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Plan your work and work your plan.

The application of acid phosphate has paid well on many alfalfa fields.

• • •

Humus, when decaying, makes available plant food from the store of unavailable plant food in the soil.

• • •

Humus acts as a sponge and increases the water-holding capacity of the soil.

• • •

For extra good melons, plant on hills of rotted manure and thin the vines to not over three plants to the hill.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR JUNE 27

REVIEW: THE NOBLE LIFE OF SAMUEL.

SELECTION FOR READING—I Sam. 12:1-5, 13-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—I will teach you the good and the right way.—I Sam. 12:23.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—I Sam. 1:1-16:23.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Stories About Samuel.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Boy Who Became a Great Man.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Strong Points in Samuel's Character.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Samuel's Service to His People.

The method of review must largely be determined by the teacher and the grade of the class. For the junior and intermediate grades a good way will be to make it biographical, centering in Gideon, Eli, Samuel, Eli's sons, Saul and David. Of course, the outstanding personality is Samuel.

For the older classes the following from Peloubet's Select Notes is an interesting and profitable method:

"This review, suited to older classes only, will deal with difficult questions involved in or suggested by the various lessons of the quarter, questions that you may not have had time to discuss adequately during the quarter. Assign one of these to each student, and divide the time evenly among them. The following list of topics may prove helpful, but it is intended to be only suggestive:

Lesson I. How to put religion into our state and national government.

Lesson II. How to utilize better than we are doing the power of women.

Lesson III. How to bring together and use the righteous and brave minority.

Lesson IV. How to single out and help the deserving poor.

Lesson V. How to develop the religious capacities of children.

Lesson VI. How to open the eyes of parents to their children's faults.

Lesson VII. How to bring to bear upon public questions the decisive power of prayer.

Lesson VIII. How to select the best leaders in church and state.

Lesson IX. How to develop individual initiative without the loss of discipline.

Lesson X. How godly men may influence the progress of affairs.

Lesson XI. How to inspire children with lofty ideals.

Lesson XII. How to make our lives serene and trustful.

A plan which can be adapted to all grades is the gathering of the main facts of each lesson and then stating its leading lesson.

The following are suggestions as to the leading lessons:

Lesson for April 4. As Jesus joined the disciples on the way to Emmaus, so he joins all who are journeying life's way in sorrow and says, "Tell me your troubles and perplexities." He wants us to confide in him.

Lesson for April 11. Deborah's judgeship shows that a woman is capable under God not only of the administration of justice, but of leading a nation forth to victory in time of war.

Lesson for April 18. The secret of Gideon's victory was his faith. The ground of his faith was God's word.

Lesson for April 25. Because Ruth forsook country, friends, and her gods for the true God, she has been accorded a place of honor in the ancestry of Christ.

Lesson for May 2. Because Samuel was given in answer to a mother's prayer and was dedicated by her to the Lord's service, the Lord was able to use him in a large way.

Lesson for May 9. Parental indulgence results in the shame and ruin of both Eli and his sons.

Lesson for May 16. When God's people repent of their sins and turn to him for pardon he will not only forgive, but will fight their battles and give victory.

Lesson for May 23. When the people took their eyes off God, their King, they desired a man as king in conformity to the practice of the heathen round about.

Lesson for May 30. Because Jonathan felt the call of God to deliver his people and waited for God's sign for him, he was able to go forward and win a victory in such a way as to show that God was with him.

Lesson for June 6. Because Saul disobeyed the command of God, judgment from the hand of God fell upon him.

Lesson for June 13. God looketh not on the outward appearance, but on the heart; his choices are not arbitrary.

Lesson for June 20. "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want."

The Supreme Beauty.

Mark well also the splendor of this idea of salvation. It is not merely final "safety," to be forgiven sin, to evade the curse. It is not, vaguely, "to get to heaven." It is to be conformed to the Image of the Son. It is for these poor elements to attain to the supreme beauty.

Seeing and Judging.

Human nature is so constituted that all see, and judge better, in the affairs of other men, than in their own.—Terence.

LIFE'S LITTLE JESTS

Disappointed.

"Ethel, didn't I see that young man in the parlor holding your hand last night?"

"Yes, mother."

"What was he doing that for?"

"I really don't know, mother."

"You don't know?"

"No, mother; I did think he was going to put a ring on my finger, but he didn't."

Well Educated.

Bixon—There is a man who has the distinctive art of learning two wonderful accomplishments.

Dixon—What are they, pray? He looks so common.

Bixon—I know he does, but he can press his pants as perfectly as any tailor and can smoke a 15-cent cigar with the manners of a millionaire.

Just at the Limit.

Her Husband—Do you mean to say, you're actually going to wear that new evening gown? Why, they pinched a vaudeville woman for less than that.

Mrs. La Mode—I should think they would. Less than this would be quite too daring.

In Hock.

"I pity the poor pawnbroker, pa."

"What for?"

"Just think of the watches he has to set back in this daylight saving business."

Mind Readers.

Professor (to students in back of room) Can you all hear me back there?

Chorus From Back Row—No, sir.—Punch Bowl.

The Substitute.

"Chloe, did you put a sufficiency of saccharine substance in the pudding?"

"No, ma'am; I didn't hab none ob dat. I jes' used plain sugar."

BETWEEN GIRLS.

"She says she wishes she could see herself as others see her."

"That's just an excuse for spending a lot of time in front of a mirror."

Of Course.

Of all the queer folks we have met
In our travels roundabout,
The chap who poses questions is
The quarist, without doubt.

The Special Ones.

"Jones' refusal to buy his wife an automobile got on her nerves."

"I suppose it got on her motor nerves."

His Status.

"My doctor tells me he cured a matinee actor's indigestion by the use of a little sweetened water."

"Then the actor is a sugar-cured 'ham.'"

Naturally.

"That man has not a well-furnished mind."

"I suppose that is the reason he has such a vacant expression."

The Near Future.

"They must be very rich people."

"They are. They dress in denim and calico and have potatoes and prunes on their table every day."

The New Shopper.

"Please give me enough money for car fare, dad."

"Surely, but where are you going?"

"Shopping!"—Cartoons.

The Retort Courteous.

"I would like to give you a piece of my mind."

"So generous of you to give of your necessity and not of your abundance."

Big Game.

"Who is the man surrounded by an admiring crowd?"

"A big game hunter."

"Ah! Is he just back from Africa?"

"No; from the mountains of this state. He led a posse that captured 28 moonshiners and nine stills with a total of 1,500 gallons a day."

Unsuitable.

"Look how that table has been set."

"What's the matter with it?"

"The angel cake side by side with the devilled ham."

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.
